Frosh Men Up In Arms: Fight To Abolish ROTC

Writers Head Conference On Varying Topics

March 21, 22, 23, will evidence the opening of the 1962 session of Vermont Conference. For those of you who are not familiar with the nature of the Conference, it is an annual convocation designed to bring the students into contact with individuals who are unique in their chosen fields.

The underlying philosophy of Vermont Conference is a strong belief in the value of examining fresh and varying viewpoints which can extend the boundaries of the often too limited undergraduate perspective.

In accordance with this principle the 1962 Conference is presenting for its program, Oscar Lewis, author of the recent and best selling anthropological study The Children of Sanchez; Selig Harrison, associate editor of The New Republic; Ihab Hassan, critic, and author of Radical Innocence; Jules Feiffer, syndicated cartoonist and social satirist. Mr. Feiffer is the author of Sick, Sick, Sick and Boy, Girl, Boy and is a regular contributor to Playboy, The Village Voice and The New Republic.

Selig Harrison is a graduate of Harvard University and a former president of the Harvard Crimson (1948). From 1951-1954 he was a foreign correspondent for the Associated Press in New Delhi and covered India, Pakistan, Ceylon, Afghanistan and Nepal. He was also a Recipient of the Nieman Fellowship in journalism at Harvard (1954-55) and a Rockefeller Foundation Fellowship as a research associate of the Language and Communication Research Center at Columbia University. In conjunction with the latter fellowship, Mr. Harrison published India: the Most Dangerous Decades (1960), which deals in part with the language policy problems in India. In 1956 he joined The New Republic as associate editor and has been managing editor for the past year. He is also editor of India and the United States (Macmillan, 1961) and has contributed to Foreign Affairs ("The Challenge to Indian Nationalism", July, 1956) and The American Political Science Review ("Caste and the Andhra Communists", July, 1956). Mr. Harrison has also done numerous studies on U.S. policy in South Asia for The New Republic.

Cadets March on Waterman Peaceful Demonstration

On Saturday evening, March 3, approximately fifty freshman men, attired in ROTC uniforms, marched in Waterman Building. The purpose of the march was to protest against a compulsory ROTC program at the University.

At 5:30 these freshmen, headed by their spokesman, Ronald Kessler, gathered in front of the freshman dormitories, aligned themselves in double columns, and proceeded to advance towards Waterman.

At the same time over three hundred undergraduates were eating their evening meal at the Waterman Cafeteria.

The advance was orderly as they passed the football fields, Lafayette, Old Mill and the Science Building. On their lips were slogans like "ROTC Si, Compulsory, No." The group then continued into the administration building and downstairs, where they stood on the dinner line. Accompanied by guitar the "cadets" then burst into song. Remaining in a group they filed through the line and emerged into the cafeteria, itself, where several sympathizers had picked up the words to their songs, at the end of which there was an ovation by about 200 other freshman men. Having gotten trays of food, the group proceeded to their seats, stopping only to chant: "Fe Fi Fo, Compulsory must go."

The cafeteria then quieted somewhat as the demonstrators sat down to eat dinner. In addition to this protest, various posters had been distributed beforehand throughout Waterman. They carried slogans protesting compulsory ROTC.

Leader Speaks

During the past week, signs and posters have been noticed draping building walls around campus. They were put up by students who are united in an effort to help abolish compulsory ROTC at UVM. These students have taken it upon themselves to seek a way to make the election of the course Military Science on a voluntary basis instead of mandatory. The University of Vermont, being a land grant college, is required to offer a course in Military Science to its male undergraduates. The reserve officers produced in such a program are used to supplement those trained by the American Military Academies. The group feels that since the University is not required to make Military Science a compulsory course, they should not be required to partake in it. Protests by the leaders have included an interview on WRUV, signs and posters, and talks with faculty members. They feel assured that faculty support will build up morale to continue campaigning. Spokesman for the students is Ronald Kessler, a freshman from Oceanside, New York. Mr. Kessler is a serious minded student who is convinced of the basis for the group's argument. He commented, "We, protesting against the compulsory ROTC program, feel that our platform, given below, is both justified and imperative. We are aware of the fact that there have been similar attempts to achieve that which we advocate, but feel that due to a lack of organization or enthusiasm (or a combination of the two), the results were negligible."

New Cynic Staff Elected, Bob Bernard Is Editor

Robert Bernard, Editor-in-Chief.

This issue, dated March 8, is the first issue of the Vermont Cynic under the auspices of the new staff. The new Cynic staff is composed of: Editor-in-Chief, Robert Bernard; Assistant Editor, Pat Conwit; Managing Editor, Linda Herzenberg; Co-News Editors, Wayne Mirsky and Harold Gilbar; Business Manager, Ronald Guttman; Sports Editor, Howard Gorney; and Student Advisor, Maureen Zwerling.

Bob Bernard is the new Editor-in-Chief of the Vermont Cynic. Bob is a junior and a Pre-medical student from Burlington, Vermont. For the past year and a half, Bob has worked on the Cynic and has held the positions of Sports Editor and News Editor.

Several new policies have been proposed by the new Editor. He feels that the paper is in a "serious period of expansion" and intends to keep these policies consistent with this view point; a broader attitude towards national collegiate news, more thorough coverage of campus news, and more diverse policy

Bob hopes to add two new columns to the paper, make greater use of editorial cartoons, and increase circulation. He is "hoping for a good year and is looking towards a more responsive student body."

Member Of Class Of '96 Recalls 1st Kake Walk

A Springfield, Vt., alumnus of the UVM who was on hand when the nation's oldest college winter carnival - Kake Walk - got its start, described that first celebration as "a rag-time affair" in which the "chief interest seemed to be rolling out the barrels."

Maitland Lovell, a retired grocer, returned for the 65th edition of Kake Walk this past week end, and was greeted with a rousing ovation as the current student directors of the show awarded him one of the green and gold cakes which go to winners of Kake Walk events.

A member of the Class of '96 at Vermont, Lovell recalled that the first Kake Walk was held during his sophomore year in the winter of 1893-94.

Scene was the drill hall in the Old Mill, and Lovell recalls there were about 150 present.

The walking was fairly impromptu, and more walked singly than in pairs. In contrast to the sleekly colorful uniforms worn by walkers in today's Kake Walk, participants at the inaugural

"just rigged up in as ridiculous rags as they could find. It was really a rag-time affair."

Lovell smilingly recalled that "the chief interest of the event seemed to be rolling out the barrels," and the festivities "lasted as long as there was any foam." Asked what view the University administration of 1893-94 took of the proceedings, Lovell recalled "it wasn't kindly received as I remember it."

This is not Lovell's first return to Kake Walk since he was on hand for the first one, although his last visit came in the 20's. Rumor on the UVM campus over the week end quickly passed the word that the Springfield alumnus had been one of the directors of the first Kake Walk, but he denied any such leading role, saying that the whole thing had begun rather spontaneously, and that he had merely joined the fun.

He took the occasion of his return to praise the progress evident on the UVM campus, and to say that he hoped that the University would mark its building progress with continued emphasis upon the fact that faculty are of first importance.

"We were privileged to meet and know some very great teachers when I was a Vermont student," he said, adding "I hope it will always be so for students at UVM."

Fifty Senators Comprise Student Association Senate

The Student Association Senate is now a new and enlarged group. Through Constitutional changes, there are now 50 Senators (including officers) representing a total of 101 votes. It is felt that by having a representative from each living unit, the students at UVM will have more of a say in their government. The Senators can bring back to their living units for discussion topics pertinent to the entire student body. The Senators can then vote according to the wishes of their living unit.

The weighted votes for each Senator were arrived at by adding all those in living units with less than 50 people and a mean found. This mean of 27 was then divided into the total population of the living unit to determine the number of votes. Tupper will hold the most votes with seven, and each sorority and fraternity will have one vote, with the exceptions of Tau Epsilon Phi and Phi Sigma Delta which have two votes each.

The Senate will meet weekly in the Student Lounge on a day to be decided by the new Senate members. Unexcused absences from meetings will be limited to three, after which the Senator will be dismissed. The SA officers also plan to have regular meetings with President Fey.

The following is a tentative list of the Senators representing the living units on campus:

Representatives have not made known as of this writing from Alpha Gamma Rho, Delta Psi, Kappa Sigma, Phi Mu Delta, Sigma Phi Epsilon, Alpha Delta Pi, Grassmount, Slade, Buckham, Marsh, and Tupper.

At the SA meeting of February 28, Joe Levin, Chief Justice of the Student Court, installed the new SA officers: Paul Chervin, President; Marty Singer, First Vice-President; Janice Cole, Second Vice-President; Sue Chagnon, Secretary; Eileen Mango, Sub-Secretary; Steve Cohn, Treasurer; Steve Singer and Richard Holden, Sub-Treasurers. Dick Paye is the new Parliamentarian, an appointed office, and Sharon Comey is the NSA co-ordinator.

Dean of Men Roland Patzer and Mr. George Piper, manager of the University Bookstore are the advisers to SA.

Lawrence Debaters Record Impressive String Of Victories

"Our win record is impressive. The prospects are good for a successful semester," says Marilyn Van Graber, President of the Lawrence Debate Club. "We are looking forward to get out of the Regionals and into the Nationals at West Point."

The club is proud of its record in competition during the first semester. Eighteen debaters participated in some 128 decision debates in nine collegiate tournaments and four intercollegiate round robins. Vermont won 72 of 128 decisions for a .562 winning average. Three of the four round robins, at Dartmouth, Norwich, and UVM, were victories for the Vermont team. Debaters Toni Appel, Bill Lokowsky, Michael Cronin, and Elaine Zak achieved second place in the New York University Hall of Fame Tournament.

Undeclared teams for the first semester were: Alice Becker and Fredda Ecker at Norwich; Sharon Call and Carmen Wessmer at Dartmouth; Bill Germain and Marilyn Van Graber at the St. Michael's round robin, the Vermont Invitational, and the Vermont round robin; Gill Tournabene and Betsy Lisman at the Vermont round robin; and Toni Appel and Bill Lokowsky, also at the Vermont round robin.

Several debaters achieved outstanding records for the semester. Michael Cronin and Elaine Zak won victories in 12 of 16 matches for a winning average of .750. Bill Germain and Marilyn Van Graber won 14 of 18 matches for a winning average of .777. The over all winning average of the varsity team was .666.

So far this semester the Club has participated in the Harvard Tournament where the team experienced seven wins and two losses. At the Dartmouth Tournament Vermont did not get out of the elimination. Spirits were high, however, when debaters Tournabene, Van Graber, Cronin, and Zak placed second in the Capital Hill Tournament at the University of Maryland. Northwestern University placed first.

On March 9 and 10 Gil Tournabene and Marilyn Van Graber will represent UVM at the Boston University Tournament. March 17 and 18 will see the Vermont team at the Brooklyn College Tournament.

Also in the future are the Regionals (March 22-24), to be held here at UVM, which President Van Graber hopes interested students will attend. The Regional Tournament is preparation for the National Tournament at West Point on April 25-28.

Professor Robert Huber, chairman of the speech department at UVM, along with Norman London and John Travers, both of the speech department, coach the Lawrence Debate Club.

Educational Television

At the February meeting of the Student National Education Association President Nancy Barber introduced four members of the University of Vermont faculty who conducted a panel discussion on "Television as an Educational Medium." The participants were: Dr. William J. Lewis, Associate Professor of Speech, who since 1955 has directed and produced the WCAX-TV program "Living and Learning"; Dr. Betty Boller, Assistant Professor of Education, who lectures weekly on modern mathematics for the elementary grades over WCAX-TV; Dr. Paul Evans, Professor of History, who has a weekly program on the Renaissance over the Burlington station; and Mrs. Isabel Mills, Assistant Professor of Art, who, from September, 1959 to January, 1960, lectured on art for the elementary grades over WCAX-TV.

All the panel members agreed that educational television is a great advantage to remote areas which do not have ready access to museums, etc. They also frankly admitted that a television lecture demands many more hours of preparation than a classroom lecture does. This they accounted for by the fact that a television lecture has a definite time limit and material to be discussed must be fit into that limit as, in most cases, the lecture cannot be continued on the next program. What to include and what to omit is the great question.

Following Professors Boller, Evans, and Mills' discussion on their television experiences, Dr. Lewis, who last year was named director of the Ford Foundation Educational Television Project for Vermont, discussed the Ford Foundation Project. The $21,000 grant to the University of Vermont is for the establishment of an educational television facility for Vermont. A report by the engineering firm of Jansky and Bailey of Washington, D.C., recommends a four channel ultra-high frequency system with transmitters located throughout the state. The report also recommends that the proposed Vermont ETV system be linked in the Eastern Educational Network which would connect Canada, through the CBC, with ETV stations now on the air in Boston, Durham, N.H., Augusta, Me., Philadelphia, and Washington, D.C.

Governor Keyser To Visit UVM

Amidst the political sparks which have already begun flying over next year's state-wide elections, Governor F. Fay Keyser, Jr., is making a visit to the University of Vermont campus.

He will speak before an open meeting of the university Young Republican Club to be held in the Student Lounge this Sunday, March 11, at 7:30 p.m.

Governor Keyser has recently drawn fire from the outstanding Democratic candidate for governor, Philip H. Hoff, who said that he hopes Keyser runs for reelection because he will be "the easiest Republican to beat."

Keyser has not yet replied to Hoff's statements but questions from the audience Sunday may well bring mephatic responses to this and other Democratic charges from the governor.

Governor Keyser, who is Vermont's youngest chief executive, has drawn national attention to himself for his work within the Junior Chamber of Commerce and with conservation projects. He has most recently been embroiled in two highly controversial state issues.

The first centers his handling of alleged irregularities in the State Highway Department; the second involves what has been called one of the hottest labor and public transportation issues in America today -- it concerns the Rutland Railway (which is owned, incidentally, by the National Democratic Committee-man).

Also speaking Sunday will be Fred Hackett, president of the state Young Republicans; Joel Posner, president of the university's Young Republican Club, and, introducing the governor, Raymond Finehout, Republican County Committee chairman.

The evening should prove to be an exciting and newsworthy one, and a large turnout is expected.

Student Center Committee Drafts Purpose, Plans

Chairman of the Temporary Governing For Billings Student Center, Miss Harris, called the Wednesday, January 10, 1962 meeting to order at 4:15 PM.

A discussion then followed concerning the draft of the Constitution and other facts or questions about provisions made for a phone and tape system or records. No constitution was agreed upon.

The committee formed the work on a purpose for the Center presented the following draft of ideas:

In keeping with the University motto, "Studiis at rebus honestis" the Billings Student Center is a "laboratory of learning" which provides:

Opportunities for cultural, social, and creative activity; facility for significant use of leisure time for the individual; a vehicle for campus unity or "community center"

An atmosphere of intellectual growth through the interchange of ideas and the informal associations by all members of the campus community;

Opportunities for the development of social responsibility for the individual and groups of individuals in an academic community and to further commitment to the enduring values of American democracy.

Dr. Moser moved we accept the report of the committee and that individuals consider it and take it back to their groups. It will only be as real and meaningful as we make it.

Applications for this graduate scholarship may be obtained from Dean Braun's office, 107 Waterman Building.

Festival Waxes GREEN SONGS

The Champlain Shakespeare Festival, which won a regional award of the New England Theatre Conference following its inaugural year in 1959, also has charmed its audiences with the Festival Minstrels, who blend their refreshing voices in both melancholy and merry harmony of the true Elizabethan tradition.

So pleasantly received has been the contribution of the Festival Minstrels that they have yielded, after becoming restraint to requests - nay, demands - that their plaintive fare be down for posterity.

Shortly before their graduation in 1961, Carol Demas, Roy Kelley and Chuck Eldred - the Festival Minstrels - Finally recorded part of their repertoire and quickly sold the first edition of their Hi-Fi Long Playing Recording to audiences of the 1961 Summer season.

A limited edition of the album GREEN SONGS, which includes such selections as Black is the Color, Barbara Allen, O, No John, I Know Where I'm Going, Green Sleeves, and Bonny Peg O'Ramsay, is now finally available to the UVM connoisseur of authentic folk music.

GREEN SONGS is sold at the UVM Bookstore and selections from the album may be heard over WRUV-570kc - today (Thursday, March 7) and tomorrow (Friday, March 9) between 10-11 PM.

Editor's Scrapbook

The 79th volume of The Vermont Cynic is now in preparation for binding to take its place with the many other green and gold bound volumes of years passed. It will collect a lot a dust resting high above our storage closet, it will occasionally be referred to, but it will always be remembered by those who worked on it. It is not often that a newspaper is able to praise its workers without having the public vent its wrath for such uncalled for and "unwarranted" conceit. But this is a new administration, and this new administration would like to extend this brief "Thank You" to the past staff. Few people appreciated the hard, cold facts. The staff worked diligently and conscientiously. It devoted many precious hours to bring you, the community of this school, the news and issues it deemed in the best interests of UVM. The past staff worked unselfishly towards this end, with little else as compensation but the conviction that it was working for our school.

The Vermont Cynic has grown and matured in the past several years. It has begun to flex its muscles, weak from long periods of disuse. The paper's expansion has more than kept pace with the expansion program of UVM. We would like to keep up this pace, we would like to see the University continue its policy of expansion.

A word of caution. This is YOUR newspaper. It belongs to the students, the faculty, and the administration. We ask that you cooperate in aiding your paper in this period of expansion. We will cooperate with all individuals and organizations in bringing the news to the public in as much as they cooperate with us, and as long as the editorial policy of The Cynic is not betrayed.

The Professores and Studentes columns will be continued. Step forward and be read. All in a stew? Is The Cynic's "slip" showing? There's going to be a mailbox on the front door of our office very soon. No stamp required.

We hope to add another column to your paper. It is felt that this campus needs occasional stimulation along the "intellectual" line. This barren wasteland (emphasis on the word waste) must be filled in. The shrubbery of columnists is a good place to start building a foundation to trap the silt of intellectualism which sometimes washes our way.

We of The Cynic are looking forward to a good year, and we are hopeful of a year with a "Forward Look."

Letters To The Editor

College Bowl: Pros and Cons

President Fey, Dean Rowell and the Editor of the Cynic:

For the past few weeks this school has been buzzing with excitement over the rumor that UVM had received an invitation to the G.E. College Bowl program. The only other time the student body becomes excited over an event is at Kake Walk or when there is an organized protest over a decision made by the administration. This excitement has always been for a social event or against the administration but never in praise of the school itself. This would have been a chance for the University of Vermont to gain national recognition and not be thought of by its students as a school hidden somewhere in the northern most part of our country isolated for 6 months because of ice and snow.

Suddenly, in the Cynic, it was announced that the University Council had refused the bid because it felt that the program "is a commercial exploitation of the American college and is nothing more than the 1962 version of the early program known as Quiz Kids, which based a premium on memory and which had no relationship on trained intelligence which is the true objective of American Education."

By rejecting this offer we believe, that the council shows its limited knowledge of the program and its goals. During the course of each program the host states specifically that this program does not measure the intelligence of the students but relies entirely on his ability to recall facts. We are in agreement with you that this is a "Quiz Kid" program, but we do not feel that this is in anyway detrimental to the program, the students, or the university. In fact, the program is beneficial because scholarships are awarded to both winners and losers and it also gives the participating university far-reaching recognition which would certainly do UVM no harm.

The college student is called upon to be a "Quiz Kid" innumerable times during his college career through taking hour tests and final exams under pressure of time. This too utilizes the ability of recall of facts already learned. An exam proves much less beneficial to the school than would a chance to appear on the television program G.E. College Bowl.

UVM has many outstanding courses, fine professors, and students of higher intellectual calibre. WHY HIDE IT?

Why do you refuse to acknowledge these facts? Is there something at UVM that YOU are ashamed of? Why shouldn't the students have a chance to show the rest of the country that THEY'RE NOT ashamed of their school? Aren't you also insulting OUR professors by refusing THEIR students the opportunity to display the knowledge gained in THEIR classrooms? Or don't you think our professors are capable of spreading intellectual stimulation?

You can't impress the perspective or present student body with new buildings alone. The students need to be proud of the ideals for which the college stands, both nationwide and throughout the campus. If you can not encourage us to believe that we are as good or better than the other universities represented on G.E. College Bowl, WHY SHOULD WE COME HERE? The editorial in Thursday's Burlington Free Press stated, "UVM continues to build its reputation as one of the state's greatest assets, and all Vermonters take pride in its growth." If Vermonters can be proud of this institute of higher learning, why can't we show New Yorkers, Pennsylvanians, Californians, and the rest of the country that WE are proud of our school too? After graduation, one should be able to look upon his alma mater with some kind of respect, emotion, and pride. You could have helped us to gain these feelings. Now, we begin to wonder if, after graduation from UVM, we'll be able to think back to our college days and say with pride, "THIS IS MY ALMA MATER: UVM."

To the Editor,

Perhaps, since I was involved in the effort to have UVM represented on the College Bowl program, I should give my reasons for differing with the University Council as to the desirability of taking part in the College Bowl contest. I write, not to squabble over a decision which has already been made, but to invite all members of the University to re-examine their definitions of education. It is no defense of the pro-College Bowl position to say only, as some students did in last week's Cynic, that many tests at UVM require quick recall of specific facts. A thing may be bad, and the mere fact that it is prevalent does not make it less bad. But I believe that what the College Bowl is doing is not bad; I believe that it is good. Here are my reasons:

President Fey was quoted by the Cynic as saying that the College Bowl program is a "commercial exploitation of the American college." It is obvious that if General Electric and CBS did not find this program popular, they would not back it. There is, however, a difference between use and exploitation. When Miss Shirley Lavine, associate producer of College Bowl, telephoned me from New York, the first thing she said was, "If your students would have to cram in preparation for their appearance, don't accept our invitation. You can't learn this stuff overnight. In our experience, cramming teams have done badly." This statement sounds to me like a sensible one made by a responsible person, interested in the general welfare of college students as well as in promotion of her program. Incidentally, it was only after I became convinced that we now have on campus a substantial number of people who could acquirthemselves creditably on College Bowl without any great amount of special preparation that I actively backed the attempt to get an invitation to the College Bowl.

Now for what seems to me the main point. Much of the argument presented by administrative officers in last week's Cynic suggests an either-or way of thinking about the mental process: either you remember facts, or you think. I am sure that no member of the Council wishes to imply belief in any such either-or division; but the arguments as presented can easily be interpreted in this way, and will be by numbers of aggrieved sophomores who say to English teachers, "Oh, I didn't know you wanted facts. I thought you wanted us to think." Surely it should not be necessary for any member of a university to be reminded that one has to have something to think with, and about.

As I see it, College Bowl emphasizes wide, accurate reading and good memory -- two very useful tools in the educated man's kit. The program seems to be to be a modern college-level version of the old Spelling Bee, a very useful learning device which emphasized good spelling and ability to handle oneself well in a contest. It is unlikely that the most doting parent thought his son the brightest boy in school just because he won the spelling bee. The probability is strong, however, that the winner wasn't the dumbest boy in school, either. Surely the modern TV audience can understand what it hears when the College Bowl director says, "Quick recall of specific facts is by no means the full measure of an education."

It would, of course, be Utopian if we could have an interesting television program that emphasized all sides of the thinking process; but many parts of the thinking process do not lend themselves to contests, to games. Certainly the slow, subtle, fragile process that is involved in creating a poem, or a formula for atomic fission, does not. Reasoning does, as is evidenced by the success of debate as a contest. Disciplined debating, however, requires a somewhat homogeneous and trained audience. It is unlikely that such an activity would appeal to the heterogeneous television audience; and it is certain that one could not get a clearcut decision at the end of the contest, as one can in the College Bowl contest. The College Bowl has, I think

Although it has been apparent for quite some time that President Kennedy never at any time intended not to resume atmospheric testing, despite all the hot air he expended saying otherwise, and any moral reservations he may somehow have certainly notwithstanding, the first official announcement by the President himself came on March 2 of this year. In honor of the event I have put new words to a very old Hebrew Passover song called "One Kid."

And the blast came that was the Bomb the President dropped on Christmas Island. One Bomb, one Bomb.

And the cloud came and replaced the blast that was the Bomb the President dropped on Christmas Island. One Bomb, one Bomb.

And the wind came and dispersed the cloud that replaced the blast that was the Bomb the President dropped on Christmas Island. One Bomb, one Bomb.

And the fallout came and was carried by the wind that dispersed the cloud that replaced the blast that was the Bomb the President dropped on Christmas Island. One Bomb, one Bomb.

And the rain came and settled the fallout that was carried by the wind that dispersed the cloud that replaced the blast that was the Bomb the President dropped on Christmas Island. One Bomb, one Bomb.

And the grass came and grew on the rain that settled the fallout that was carried by the wind that dispersed the cloud that replaced the blast that was the Bomb the President dropped on Christmas Island. One Bomb, one Bomb.

And the cow came and ate the grass that grew on the rain that settled the fallout that was carried by the wind that dispersed the cloud that replaced the blast that was the Bomb the President dropped on Christmas Island. One Bomb, one Bomb.

And the milk came and was taken from the cow that ate the grass that grew on the rain that settled the fallout that was carried by the wind that dispersed the cloud that replaced the blast that was the Bomb the President dropped on Christmas Island. One Bomb, one Bomb.

And the couple came and drank the milk that came from the cow that ate the grass that grew on the rain that settled the fallout that was carried by the wind that dispersed the cloud that replaced the blast that was the Bomb the President dropped on Christmas Island. One Bomb, one Bomb.

And the child came and was born to the couple who drank the milk that came from the cow that ate the grass that grew on the rain that settled the fallout that was carried by the wind that dispersed the cloud that replaced the blast that was the Bomb the President dropped on Christmas Island. One Bomb, one Bomb.

And the blue and green hair came and grew on the two heads that were on the child that was born to the couple who drank the milk that came from the cow that ate the grass that grew on the rain that settled the fallout that was carried by the wind that dispersed the cloud that replaced the blast that was the Bomb the President dropped on Christmas Island. One Bomb, one Bomb.

Has anyone else noticed the apocalyptic hypocrisy in the President's plan to use Christmas Island as a test site? After all, just what does the name signify? (In these days it means Hail to Mammon All powerful, for Sell we Must! But I meant the name's theoretical significance.) Isn't Christmas the birthday of mankind's supposed Saviour? And here we are, right on the island named with Christ's birthday, testing and perfecting the most colossal instruments we have ever dreamed of to destroy and mangle man and his works. And not only do we indulge in this monstrous hypocrisy, but practically nobody even realizes it. Certainly President Kennedy, and, for that matter, everyone connected with Bomb tests, doesn't. Either that, or he's got enough of a sense of humor to play the most stupendous joke on mankind since time immemorial. And I seriously doubt it.

"Vermont History" Features UVM's In Recent Issue

U.S. Senator Justin Smith Morrill of Vermont, father of the Land-Grant College Act, is given his due directly and with acknowledged purpose in the January issue of "Vermont History," issued by the Vermont Historical Society. This year is the centennial of the passage of the Act which Morrill "fathered."

Tribute is indirectly paid by the Historical Society's quarterly to the state's own Land-Grant College, the University of Vermont, through a table of contents page nearly filled with UVM-connected authors.

Dr. T.D. Seymour Bassett, UVM's Wilbur Librarian and an associate professor of history there, is the author of the lead article, "Nature's Nobleman: Justin Morrill, a Victorian Politician." Dr. John Huden, professor of education, contributes "The Admiral of Lake Champlain," an article on Joseph Payant.

Marcus A. McCorison who took his Master of Arts degree at UVM in 1951 writes of "Colonial Defense of the Upper Connecticut Valley." He is librarian of the American Antiquarian Society.

Glenn B. Skillin, UVM, '59, a librarian at Bennington College, edits a 1779 letter from John Adams to Hon. Elbridge Gerry of Braintree on "The Vermont-Massachusetts Boundary."

The second prize entry in the Edmunds Essay contest is printed here -- "The Man from the People: Calvin Coolidge," by Kerena Gladstone, a freshman at UVM and the daughter of Dr. Arthur A. Gladstone, UVM, '28 and '31.

The name of David S. Webster, UVM '32, appears in this section as co-author with William Kehoe of "Decoys at the Shelburne Museum."

Senator Morrill "remains a model democratic politician, one who plays the game to win but according to the rules, who studies the temper of his people and tries to fit the laws to their diverse opinions and capacities," Dr. Bassett concluded.

A small-town Vermont businessman, Morrill drew upon his general store experience in satisfying "his diverse customers" as a background for political skill, plus a natural ability. Dr. Bassett noted, "to apply the seat of the pants to the seat of the committeeman's chair, or the seat of the vehicle taking you to a party caucus or convention."

Morrill's ability to weather storms in the sometimes heavy Congressional weather stood him in good stead -- resulting in the eventual passage in 1862 of the Land-Grant College Act which was signed by President Lincoln.

"It's passage," Dr. Bassett noted, "was his top legislative accomplishment at the peak of his career, but the idea was not his. Neither he nor anyone else acquainted with the long history of the movement to expand higher education beyond the classical curriculum of the church-related college ever claimed it was. But he did direct the campaign that made the bill a law embodying the idea."

Morrill believed that "public property was a public trust," not to be squandered. He disliked "bad farming practices," and saw a possible salvation in education in better ways of handling the nation's soil and resources. He was aware of his own difficulties in obtaining higher education.

One thing perhaps is certain: things are as they are. Yesterday they were as they were; tomorrow they will be as they will be. There seems to be no provision in the order of events for things to be otherwise. Consequently, if we try to read history as if it were manifesting any kind of Will, we have to acknowledge that Will to be inseparably bound up with a total compulsion. That Will may be therefore transcendent (and possibly used up) or content to identify itself with things as they are (and therefore irresponsible).

This essay is intended to be not a study in the higher metaphysics but a bull-session about "freedom of the will" and "liberal education." Refraining from such intellectual balloon-flights as that represented in the first paragraph, we can be content to consider that paradox of will and compulsion which is found in education as we know it. I refer to a certain incompatibility between the urge to know how things are why they are that way, and the urge to imagine, even to believe, that they might be otherwise. I am going to argue that these two urges are supplemental and should be cooperative; to place them in opposition is to hamstring them, but it is too often done.

For example, when the urge to know how things are (and why they are that way) begins to attain a measure of success, it often strives to dissociate itself from the imagination, which it decries as mere wishful thinking. The classic fate of the man who "knows all about it" and therefore knows why something cannot be done is that people forget him and remember the man who went ahead and did it because he was ignorant of its impossibility. Admittedly, the example is stereotyped and not always applicable; it is impossible to square the circle with ruler and compass. The point is that knowing why-and-how-things-are-as-they-are is not, has not been, and cannot be the only goal of human intellect.

The danger on the other side is just as real. No man will enhance the rôle of imagination in education by trying to sever from it the urge to know things as they are. For example, literature cannot be broached as a self-sufficient subject; the reason is that no language can be that private. Finnegan's Wake is a dream, but a public dream that turns out to be a chart of history. Even the cry of "Art for Art's sake" as it developed was associated in the minds of its proponents with some quite complicated ethical notions.

The urge to know things as they are proceeds by the elimination of alternatives. Its final victory is to arrive at the last logical corner where "It's either A or B; it cannot be A; therefore it is B." The imagination on the other hand proceeds by the addition of alternatives. In this it resembles its mother, the memory. Just as one keeps alive the dead and returns the absent so the other peoples the earth twice over again with imaginary beings, even though it might seem that the living alone could exhaust the varieties of form. Not content with this feat the imagination creates new worlds and new histories -- new scenes of peace and of horror in which the peace if not the horror seems not only unattained but unattainable in history as we know it.

That the two urges are supplemental to each other is seen first of all in the rôle which imagination plays in science. One does not attain the stage where "It's either A or B" without the imagination to assert these alternatives. But -- and this is more important though less commonly recognized -- the rôle of the imagination is not merely a matter of suggesting alternatives to be tested against something untouched by imagination called reality. The important thing to remember (and it is the only "freedom of the will" we shall ever have) is that imagined alternatives influence behavior. Imagined alternatives cannot prevent things-as-they-are from being as they are, but things-as-they-will-be will be different because of the way imagination influences behavior. An ideally perfected science of history could still not foretell the future without getting into an infinite regression of foretelling while allowing for the impact of the foretelling while allowing for the impact of the impact of the foretelling of the foretelling . . .

A liberal education offers freedom not as a gift but as an opportunity. Freedom is not a thing-in-itself but the use of distinctive human characteristics in an unhampered way. Knowledge without imagination chains the intellect in a dungeon of mere fact and causes the creative spirit to atrophy. Imagination without knowledge grants only an illusory freedom, like that offered to the air from a burst balloon.

I conclude by offering a pragmatic test by which I suggest an individual might evaluate the balance of knowledge and imagination in himself. The test is: "How content am I to live alone with myself for a period longer than, say, two hours?" For the self is not a thing-in-itself but, like its freedom, an opportunity for the exercise of characteristics which are uniquely human.

American Poetry Annual Invites College Contributions

The American College Poetry Society is pleased to announce that its fifth semesterly anthology of outstanding college poetry is now being compiled for publication in May, 1962.

Contributions must be the original work of the student (who shall retain literary rights to the material), submitted to the undersigned, care of the Society, with the entrant's name, address, and school on each page. Poems, which may reflect any subject, should not exceed 48 lines, nor may any individual submit more than five poems. Entries that are not accepted for publication will be returned if accompanied by a self-addressed, stamped envelope. The Society this year, will offer Recognition Awards of Five Dollars each, to the five outstanding college poets. The poems cannot be otherwise acknowledged, nor can the Society compensate students for the work that is published. All entries must be postmarked not later than Thursday, April 12, 1962, to be considered; decisions of the Society judges are, of necessity, final.

NOVAK TO SPEAK ON "MAN IN THE COLLEGE"

Dr. Michael Novak, educator and writer, is greatly interested in the education of today.
(Credit: Kelley)

On Thursday, March 15, 1962 at 7:30 p.m. in the Student Lounge, Mr. Michael Novak, author and Philosophy Fellow at Harvard University will speak on the subject "Man in the Colleges".

Mr. Novak is well qualified on this subject, being not only an educator, but having devoted a considerable proportion of his efforts in literature to questions facing education today. A frequent contributor to such magazines as

The Nation, Harper's, American Commonwealth, and others, he has gained nationwide recognition as an interpreter and analyst of the problem in education common to our day.

Mr. Novak's recent book, The Tiber Was Silver (Doubleday, 1961) has received widespread acclaim, adding to his already impressive literary laurels. He has also received wide attention on his argument for the primacy of the common good during the recent federal-aid-to-education controversy.

The appearance of Michael Novak at the University of Vermont is sponsored by the Newman Club.

Faculty Grants

Ten University of Vermont professors, George Little, Andrew Nuquist, Lubomir Dellin, George Dykhuizen, Jene Davison, Brady Dilleland, Ralph Orth, Robert Hall, Herbert McArthur, and Thomas Philbrick, working under 1962 Faculty Summer Research Fellowships, will conduct projects this year which cover a remarkably wide range of interests. The $1,000 fellowships were announced Saturday by the UVM Board of Trustees.

The projects include these: The legal principles of border settlement by China; the years go; "Hegel's Critique of Kant's Theory of Morality and Moral Action"; "Italic Grave Groups from Narce in the Chicago Museum of Natural History;" and Recent Trends in the Energy-Resource-Policy of Communist Eastern Europe."

These projects are a reflection of UVM's commitment to academic freedom and curiosity. The University's academic climate obviously is not restricted;

Lane Chamber Series Presents Doktor, Puyana

Doktor and Puyana perform for Chamber Arts Series.

(Credit: D. Hill S.P.S.)

by Don E. Kerr

On Thursday evening, March 1, Paul Doktor, viola, and Rafael Puyana, harpsichord, appeared in a Lane Chamber Arts Series presentation. The program included compositions by French and Italian masters of the 17th and 18th centuries, the Bach Sonata in D for gamba and harpsichord, and the Busch Sonata in A Minor for solo viola. It was wonderful indeed to hear the works of some of these lesser-known composers, especially Marin Marais, Louis Couperin, Jean Baptiste Besard, and Louis de Caix D'Hervy, all of whom are representatives of one of the finest periods in French music. Not all great music involves a 65-piece orchestra, and the Doktor-Puyana concert certainly proved this.

Doktor is a scholarly and sensitive musician. He plays the old music well, and was outstanding in the Busch sonata. One could have wished, however, that he had used a viola d'amour or viola da gamba in those works which originally called for such instruments. It seemed difficult to achieve proper balance between viola and harpsichord in the Bach sonata; had a gamba been used there would have been no such problem. All in all, though, the two instruments sounded well together.

Puyana handled very well his beautiful two-manual Pleyel harpsichord. His ornamentation was tasteful up to a point, but, as is usual with the French school of harpsichord playing, somewhat overdone. Especially fine was his playing of the two works by the great Louis Couperin.

It was a delightful evening, and everyone seemed to be having a good time, including the soloists. Puyana played with an exceedingly worried look on his face, but his playing certainly indicated that he had nothing whatsoever to worry about. The Lane Chamber Series provides an excellent opportunity for concerts such as this one, and it is hoped that we will hear more of them in the future.

Martin And Chaplin Discuss "Operation Abolition"

Ira Allen Chapel was the scene Monday at 7:30 p.m. of a SCOPE presentation entitled "Operation Abolition." The program included a film of that title made by the House Un-American Activities Committee and a panel discussion. Norman London of the Speech Department acted as moderator for Dr. James Chaplin of the Psychology Department and Stuart Martin, president of WCAX.

The film is controversial, having been labeled propaganda by many groups, and people thus question its validity as a document. "Operation Abolition" presents the actions of a mass demonstration against the Un-American Activities Committee. The pictures were taken outside of the San Francisco City Hall while the Committee was in session. The makers of the film claim that this was the work of Communist agitators in an attempt to turn students to their cause. Whether the film is stanted or not remains a question.

During the discussion that followed, Martin seemed to take the pro side, while Chaplin spoke against the reliability of the information in the visual document. Each was backed up by research and authoritative sources. Although strong points were brought out both for and against the film, the audience of about 200 seemed to sympathize with the students pictured as participating in an Un-American activity. The program ended around 9:30

French Club To Meet

How much do you know about the Algerian situation? Do you understand what FLN or OAS means? What actually is the problem? Where does DeGaulle stand, or does he? What's in store for France?

May we suggest that if you know absolutely nothing, very little, or quite a bit about the problem that you plan to attend the next meeting of the Cercle Francais.

The club's advisor, Mr. Peter Heller, will act as moderator. And, of course, the discussion will be conducted completely en francais.

The meeting in the form of a round-table discussion will be held at 7:30 P.M. in the lounge of the Fleming Museum. Coffee will be served.

Out of an interest to know more about this controversial subject, we hope that our French students will take advantage of this opportunity.

Vote on WSGA Mass Meeting To Be Held

by Toni R. Appel

To be or not to be, that is the question - The question is adulthood; are UVM's women ready for it. In less than two weeks, UVM's women are faced with the choice of whether or not to abolish compulsory mass meetings.

Last October a group of students submitted a petition to WSGA Council calling for the abolition of these mass "listening" sessions. It seems that no one but WSGA Council could find a USE or SIGNIFICANT PURPOSE in mass meetings. To paraphrase Shakespeare -

They are but a walking shadow, a poor player, That struts and frets his hour upon the stage And then is heard no more.

THAT WAS LAST OCTOBER. This is now. WSGA Council, under the able leadership of Pat Bishop, has been working since October to make WSGA and mass meetings something interesting and worthwhile. Last October we listened to a panel on honor - and the feeling of most people upon leaving the meeting appeared to be "SO WHAT!" In two weeks we shall be discussing a complete rules revision - affecting every woman student at the university. Shall we or shall we not abolish peach cards? Should 1:30 permissions be granted to other than seniors? These things are important, and they are being brought up at a mass meeting.

It is interesting to note that aside from mass meetings, the women students at UVM have very little direct contact with the decisions of WSGA Council - in other words, they have very little to say about the things which affect them. What happens if mass meetings are abolished and the rules are debated solely by the elected officers and judiciary? Will there be more or less "griping" than there is now?

As for this column - I turn to Shakespeare again -

It is a tale told by an idiot, Full of sound and fury, Signifying nothing.

ONLY YOU, UVM'S WOMEN CAN SIGNIFY BY YOUR VOTES

AT THE NEXT MASS MEETING WHETHER THREE HOURS A YEAR IS TOO MUCH TIME TO DEVOTE TO EFFECTIVE SELF GOVERNMENT OR WHETHER THESE THREE HOURS A YEAR ARE WASTED BECAUSE THEY DO NOT EFFECT EFFECTIVE SELF GOVERNMENT.

THE GRASS IS ALWAYS GOLDER

The academic world, as we all know, is loaded with dignity and ethics, with lofty means and exalted ends, with truth and beauty. In such a world a heinous thing like faculty raiding—colleges enticing teachers away from other colleges—is not even thinkable.

However, if the dean of one college happens—purely by chance, mind you—to run into a professor from another college, and the professor happens to remark—just in passing, mind you—that he is discontented with his present position, why, what's wrong with the dean making the professor an offer? Like the other afternoon, for instance, Dean Sigafos of Granamire Polytech, finding himself in need of a refreshing cup of oolong, dropped in quite by chance at the Discontented Professors Exchange where he discovered Professor Stuneros from the English Department of Kroveny A and M sitting over a pot of lapaeng soochong and shrieking "I Hate Kroveny A and M!" Surely there was nothing improper in the dean saying to the professor, "Leander, perhaps you'd like to come over to us. I think you'll find our shop A-OK."

(It should be noted here that all English professors are named Leander, just as all psychics professors are named Fred. All sociology professors are, of course, named Myron, all veterinary medicine professors are named Rover, and all German professors are named Hansel and Gretel. All deans, are, of course, named Attila.)

But I digress. Leander, the professor, has just been offered a job by Attila, the dean, and he replies, "Thank you, but I don't think so."

"And I don't blame you," says Attila, stoutly. "I understand Kroveny has a fine little library."

"Well, it's not too bad," says Leander. "We have 28 volumes in all, including a mint copy of Nancy Drew, Girl Detective."

"Very impressive," says Attila. "Us now, we have 36 million volumes, including all of Shakespeare's first folios and the Dead Sea Scrolls."

"Golly whiskers," says Leander.

"But of course," says Attila, "you don't want to leave Kroveny where, I am told, working conditions are tickety-boo."

"Oh, they're not too bad," says Leander. "I teach 18 hours of English, 11 hours of optometry, 6 hours of forestry, coach the fencing team, and walk Prexy's cat twice a day."

"A full, rich life," says Attila. "At our school you'd be somewhat less active. You'd teach one class a week, limited to four A students. As to salary, you'd start at $50,000 a year, with retirement at full pay upon reaching age 29."

"Sir," says Leander, "your offer is most fair but you must understand that I owe a certain loyalty to Kroveny."

"I not only understand, I applaud," says Attila. "But before you make a final decision, let me tell you one thing more. We supply Marlboro cigarettes to our faculty—all you want at all times."

"Gloryokey!" cries Leander, bounding to his feet. "You mean Marlboro, the filter cigarette with the unfiltered taste—Marlboro, the cigarette with better makin's—Marlboro that comes to you in pack or box—Marlboro that gives you such a lot to like?"

"Yep," says Attila, "that's the Marlboro I mean."

"I am yours," cries Leander, wringing the Dean's hand. "Where do I sign?"

"At the quarry," replies Attila. "Frankly, we don't trust paper contracts any more. We chisel them in marble."

Frosh Against ROTC Program

We believe that we are morally and dutifully right in our actions; we are neither left-wing iconoclasts nor undisciplined, pampered, diaper-boys.

We have had the opportunity to delve into a labyrinth of legal documents, both federal and state, and feel confident of our action.

We feel that a compulsory ROTC program ought to be disbanded and are of the opinion that:

1) Those uninterested in a four-year program in Military Science (not only premedical and pre dental students) reap no substantial gains from a two-year course.

2) Those desiring to pursue an advanced program will be willing to devote more time and enthusiasm to the program, resulting in better qualified officers.

3) These two years of compulsory Military Science, consisting of eight credits which are not counted towards graduation in a Liberal Arts Curriculum (yet for some reason count in the semester average), might be put to better use.

4) We are here for an education which may enable us to be informed and conscientious citizens of America — not to play soldier.

5) A pressed green uniform, spit-shined shoes, and dazzling brass, in combination with an M1 rifle which we cannot completely handle, does not teach us discipline, nor does it enable us to defend America, or indeed offer even one iota of actual national security.

We are of the opinion that this protest will be taken up by the upperclassmen and by any of us in no way concerned with the protest. It is time to realize that the abolishment of a compulsory ROTC program concerns all of us!

These arguments led fifty cadets to appear in a protest march last Saturday night in Waterman Cafeteria. It was intended to rally the support of hesitant and questioning students who will follow if enough enthusiasm is shown. It is expected that there will be talks with the Military Science Department and those of the University who are concerned during the next week. These talks will determine the extent of the students' demonstrations in the future. If they are refuted by University Spokesmen, the group, (and all male students), will have to continue with the existing policy of a two-year course in Military Science. However, if there is enough support by the students and faculty members involved, a complete reverse in University procedure may take place.

Grants To Aid Schools In Scholarship And Building

HR 8900, introduced by Rep. Edith Green (D-Ore), authorizes $90,000,000 in grants and $600,000,000 in loans for the construction of classrooms, laboratories, libraries, and other academic facilities. Outlays would be made over a five-year period at the rate of $300,000,000 a year.

Construction aid would be available to both two-year junior colleges offering courses leading to a bachelor's degree and four-year colleges and universities.

Grants under the bill would be limited to one-third of the total cost of a construction project. Loans would be granted to schools which were able to raise a minimum of one-quarter of the cost of buildings by other means. The loans would be repayable over a period of not more than 50 years. Interest rates would be set one-fourth of one per cent higher than the government's own cost of borrowing the money.

The bills sponsors estimate the bill would generate as much as $3,500,000,000 in private and public outlays to help meet the expected increase of 30 per cent in college enrollments over the next five years. They said a rise of more than 1,000,000 is expected over the 1960-61 enrollment of approximately 3,600,000.

Both the grants and loans would be available to private and church-related schools, as well as to public institutions. However, facilities for sectarian instruction or religious worship would not be eligible for aid.

S. 1241 has similar provisions for loans and grants, but the bill, introduced by Senator Lister Hill (D-Ala.) also provides for scholarships.

Under this bill, $17,500,000 would be appropriated in fiscal 1962 for 25,000 four-year scholarships. Each year thereafter, the appropriation would increase until every year from 1964 on $35,000,000 would be appropriated for 50,000 scholarships.

These scholarships would provide a maximum of $1,000 a year toward completion of the requirements for a bachelor's degree. Recipients would be required to maintain a satisfactory grade point average to keep the scholarships.

Distribution of scholarships would be determined by state commissions. Students could attend any school of their choice, and a "cost of education" allowance of $350 a year would be paid to colleges and universities accepting students with such scholarships. This allowance would help off-set the increased enrollment made possible by the costs of scholarships.

These scholarships are not intended to cover the entire cost of obtaining a college education. Instead, they are intended to serve as aids and incentives. They would assist the student who has some funds, or who earns money during summer vacations, to make up the difference between what he is able to get on his own and the actual cost of education.

The scholarships would also act as incentives for those students who feel they must or should drop out of school either for a few years or forever because they cannot meet the cost.

Letters To The Editor

Justifiably, selected one aspect of the thought process which lends itself to a game; and it has made clear to its audience that it is doing.

If the philosopher Huizinga is even partially right in considering the sense of play as a root-cause of civilization, then surely we should not neglect the spirit of play in academic pursuits.

With relation to the administration's reluctance to have UVM appear on College Bowl -- never have so few taken so many words to say -- "We're afraid ... to lose!"

To the Editor:

It seems to me that the University Council has made a mountain out of a mole-hill in their treatment of UVM's bid to the College Bowl. It is upon the summit of this philosophical peak that I now place my soapbox.

I agree whole-heartedly with the contention that the program is not a fair representation of the quality and implications of the learning experience. Undoubtedly, the sponsor, General Electric, and those people associated with the show, also are aware of this point, for they conclude each program by saying that rapid recall of specific fact is by no means a measure of the intelligence of the young people who participate.

Yet, undeniably, the mastery of factual information is a necessary part of learning. I feel that it is useless to condemn the program because it makes use of this particular facet of education.

In regard to the statement that the show is strictly for itself, and does not help the American college, I think that someone must have overlooked the $1,500 scholarship grant given to the winning team, and the $500 award that goes to the other participating school. Sure, it's good advertising policy --- General Electric benefits --- but so does the student who can go to school because of the scholarship. I can anticipate the objection to this point. Someone is bound to say we are compromising the educational ideal by participating in such commercialism to secure scholarship funds. BUT, is it any less commercial for the University to pay tutors to keep our athletically inclined students in school, thereby eliciting the interest of alumni in the new gym, etc.

There are plenty of bugs in the educational system, as there are in any system, but why has UVM suddenly waxed philosophic and pounced upon the issue of G.E. College Bowl as a vehicle for voicing its idealism?

I think it would have been jolly good fun, and having been steeped in the democratic ideals propounded by this University, I am rather disappointed that I didn't have the chance to vote on the matter.

Sincerely,
Nancy M. Streit, '62

To the Editor:

After reading last week's Cynic, we feel there was no obvious omission in your coverage of Kake Walk activities. In this issue we found no mention of the Joseph F. Lechnyr Memorial Award. Upon reviewing Kake Walk history, one realizes Mr. Lechnyr's contribution to Kake Walk. Without his great service, "Cotton Babes" would be long forgotten.

In 1960, the Lechnyr Award became a part of Kake Walk tradition honoring the fraternity "which most nearly approaches the spirit and devotion of Kake Walk, exemplified by Joe Lechnyr." This award would seem to be the most creditable presented to a fraternity. Certainly a fraternity who meets these standards deserves recognition. However, your issue failed to fulfill this obligation.

Expecting this error to be corrected, we are,

To the Editor:

The well known cliché, children must play shone in blazing lights across Burlington a fortnight ago when our less mature students returned briefly to their second childhood.

The time, effort, and energy wasted on stupendous snow sculptures hardly pays tribute to intellectual creativity. Nor does the Cynic help matters by its tendency to paly up Merp Week, student gripes, and other such follies of low caliber, educational value. Why not emphasize and reiterate such important functions as visiting speakers, debate tournaments, faculty advise, and criticism or the Vermont conference?

The author still recalls the shameful protests of selfish students against our modern constructed new mens' dormitories. These immature young men not only went against the god of the majority, but also proved one premise by sleeping on the green: they did not have sense enough to come in out of the rain.

Another point to consider is the lack of desire or ability of most of our students to walk great distances. We have all heard the old query: are there more cows or people in Vermont? We might rephrase our question and ask: are there more cars or students at Vermont? Our fine university has become a car campus due to a combination of excessive use of cars added to laziness.

Our erring students are of good potential, but have gone astray failing to realize that they are not babes in toyland but students at a state university.

Four flushed co-eds, victims of automation, joined the growing line of their classmates in the corridors outside the registrar's office last week.

On the other side of the campus, ROTC instructors glanced disbelievingly at their class rosters.

The cause of frustration among both the co-eds and the instructors was an innocent looking IBM machine. The machine, who's task it was to assign courses and instructors to registrars apparently felt it was time to end inequality and raise the female status to one of complete acceptance.

The Eastern Intercollegiate Ski Association meet, sponsored by Norwich University's Outing Club was won by Dartmouth, in a close battle with Middlebury College. The final point score was 581.4 for the Indians from New Hampshire and 572.2 for the Panthers.

Nine other teams were entered in the event. In the order of their place: Hew Hampshire, Norwich, Harvard, St. Lawrence, MIT, Williams, Maine, VERMONT and Yale.

The Saturday morning slalom was taken by Pat Terenzini, with runs of 50.5 and 50.8. Representing Dartmouth, he and his teammate, Jim Jacobson, helped put the Indians into the lead. This did not last for long however as the Middlebury squad took the afternoon jumping and dropped the leaders into fourth position. The top jumper was Ben Aasnaes, a soph from MIT, and native of Norway. His best effort carried 120 feet.

The slalom was run in the Lybrand ski area. A tricky 62 gate course was set by Pepi Gabl of Stowe. The course itself was fairly frozen. The slalom was a real test, as there was a 300 foot descent in the quarter mile run.

Despite setbacks, the Dartmouth team was simply too powerful for the Middlebury squad and in later events came through to overtake and ultimately win the event.

Meet The Catamounts

by Chuck Grutman

This week, six of UVM's varsity basketball squad were interviewed and invited to present their views. The six are Dick Lawson, Chuck Glick, Bill Rundle, Ed Gallagher, Karl Kieslich, and Pete Brem.

Dick Lawson, a 6'2" forward, comes to Vermont from Rumford, R.I. A member of Sigma Nu fraternity, Dick is a zoology major in the College of Arts and Sciences, and plans a career in medicine. After playing both football and basketball at East Providence High, Dick decided to concentrate on basketball. A serious minded student, he finds little time for other interests.

Sophomore Chuck Glick, a 6'1" guard, hails from Far Rockaway, N.Y. He is an accounting major in the College of Technology, and is interested in becoming a C.P.A. Now a member of Phi Sigma Delta, Chuck played basketball and baseball for his high school, and was named to the All Queens basketball team. Asked to comment on UVM spirit, he replied that it is "typical for a college crowd - well appreciated if we're winning, much less if we're loosing."

Another sophomore in the College of Technology, Bill Rundle comes to UVM from Durham, Conn. A four letter man at Durham High, Bill was elected to the All State basketball team. Bill plans to enter industrial management after graduation. A 5'10" guard, he feels that "all we lack is height - given a boy 6'6" or taller, we'd definitely win more."

Ed Gallagher, a 6'4" forward from Burlington, is a Pre-Dental major in the College of Arts and Sciences. A member of Delta Psi, Ed takes his studies quite seriously. Having played both golf and basketball in high school, Ed plays both sports now for UVM. He felt that team spirit was good, "considering we didn't have a winning season," and that next season, perhaps "more home games will help - a team always plays better when playing to a home crowd."

Karl Kieslich, a 6'1" Junior in the College of Technology, from St. Albans. At Bellows Free Academy, Karl played baseball, football and basketball, making the First Team All State in football. Karl plans to enter the field of industrial management, after graduation. A forward on the court, Karl maintains that the "record doesn't show the true potential" of the team, and that much more can be expected.

Pete Brem is a Junior from Worcester, Mass. and a member of Phi Sigma Delta. Pete is a zoology major in the College of Arts and Sciences and plans someday to be called Dr. In high school, he played tennis, football and basketball, and plays in the backcourt for UVM. Last year he was a member of Gold Key Society, and was Scholarship Chairman of his fraternity. Pete says that the team "started with a lot of spirit but trailed off at the end with the loosing streak." He feels that the "new gym will definitely help."

Basketball

Coach Evans then emptied his bench as he had done in the first half. The game was a rough physical battle for both sides and almost resulted in a melee. Shabel led Vermont in the point total with 17 followed by Becton who showed some of his old form by netting 16 and snaring 19 rebounds. Stahler scored 12 and grabbed a dozen rebounds.

Top Clarkson 77-61

Vermont closed out the 1962 season by beating Clarkson 77-61. This was UVM's last home game to be played at Memorial Auditorium for next year all home games will be played at the new gym. The Catamounts have used the Auditorium as its home stomping ground since 1938. During that time Vermont has collected 137 wins and only 70 defeats. Coach John Fuzzy Evans has coached the Cats 19 out of their 22 seasons at Memorial Auditorium. This year UVM compiled a 12-3 record, placing fifth in the Yankee Conference and second in the Vermont State Series.

jumped to a 6-2 lead, then the Catamounts moved ahead 8-6 and dominated the action for the remainder of the evening. This was accomplished by employing a fastbreak that worked to perfection. Jack Shabel and Dick Ader led the scoring on the tail end of the numerous fastbreaks in the first half. These two guards could not have been scoring so freely if it were not for the rebounding of Benny Becton, John Stahler and Dave Strassburg.

Early in the second half, Vermont moved to a 41-28 advantage. Clarkson tried to rally but was halted at 42-37 when the fastbreak broke their bid for the lead and raised the score to 49-37. UVM's biggest lead came with 4:09 left in the season finale when the shooting of Stahler and Shabel upped the score, 71-51.

SPORTING OPINIONS

By HOWIE GORNEY

Roger Maris hits 61 home runs, Wilt Chamberlain scores 100 points, Bobby Hull nets the hat trick. All these glorious achievements receive attention, and rightly so. However, there are glorious achievements happening here at home which deserve the cognizance of the UVM student body, but, alas, do not get such notice.

Oh, I could chastise the Catamount populace for their negligence, but my efforts would be, for the most part, unfounded, for a college student has more important things on his mind than to worry about the condition of the athletics and physical fitness program at his school. So, his apathy is, I assume, excusable. Therefore, for those who have not ceased to read this treatise as yet, and have gone on to something better to read, I will merely list and comment upon the new look in UVM's sports program.

Most important of all, naturally, is the construction of the new gym - a subject that has been dissected, diced, mashed, and mutilated beyond repair. Therefore, I will not tell the reader that when this edifice is completed in the fall, it will eliminate the need for the Cozen's test, make it possible for a greater number of people to see the basketball team in action, and introduce to the Vermont campus certain sports reputedly never before seen in Burlington, such as hockey.

To my mind, the most important facet of the new gym and the expanded athletic program is too often ignored by the student body. Yet, it, too, is another first. Now, Vermont will have the drawing power which it has always wanted, and needed, but perennially lacked. An athlete about to graduate from high school will come to Burlington and see the most modern gym in New England -- an open invitation for him to display his prowess at UVM, and don't think that he won't be tempted to accept it.

This leads me to the next first on my list. The Cats are at last going big time in football as they will play a full Yankee Conference schedule this season. Too few football fans grasp the significance of this step from unimportance to the limelight of a recognized NCAA Conference. Moreover, under the leadership of a new football coach, rumored to be the kind of stern disciplinarian which the Cats have needed for a month of Sundays, let no one underestimate the boys behind the pigskin in 1962 and the years to come.

Yes, the University of Vermont is taking the big leap. Yet, it is lamentable that this progress is retarded by a general coaching staff of relative incompetence. Oh, I am fully aware that mine is purely the opinion of an amateur, and that a goodly portion of our physical education department was dribbling a basketball, throwing a football, or holing out a putt before I was even conceived. However, the foundation of my argument comes from my continual disgust and heartache when watching our teams on the field.

Clifford To Coach Football In '62

by Raymond B. Bello

There will be a new Clifford at UVM this year. He is Robert E. Clifford who has been appointed head football coach by the Board of Trustees. He replaces J. Edward Donnelly who will devote full time to the coordination of the facilities of Vermont's soon-to-be completed 2.7 million dollar gymnasium and physical education complex. Clifford has been head coach at Colby College for the last six years where his teams have compiled a 23-19 record.

Clifford assumes the coaching reins in the midst of a dynamic expansion in UVM's athletic program. With a full Yankee Conference schedule this coming fall, Vermont hopes to establish itself as a solid contender for the Conference title. Last year's varsity squad only lost seven men through graduation and with an undefeated freshmen team coming up to challenge last year's sophomores, the Catamounts have the material to be molded into a powerful football machine.

COACHING EXPERIENCE

Clifford brings to Vermont an 18-year record in high school and college coaching. From 1947 to 1954 he served as varsity line coach and chief scout at Northwestern University. In 1954 he shifted to the New England sports scene, assuming the post of varsity line coach and assistant golf coach at Williams College. From 1956 to the present time he has been at Colby. While compiling a 23-19 record, Colby won the Maine State Series twice, and was co-champion once. His teams have averaged better than 26

For example, I have observed our basketball team playing hot and cold all season. At times they could win the Yankee Conference championship; on other occasions, the Cats could not beat Orleans High School. I don't feel that this could be wholly the fault of the players. When this situation exists, there is something definitely amiss in the hoopster guidance department.

Turning to football, people are still asking what happened in the Norwich game? Or, was Middlebury really that good. Of course no team can be perfect, but one must remember, even the smartest squad cannot run itself - it needs strong discipline and leadership. A great many of our most husky footballers bit the dust during the past campaign. Were they outsmarted or ill coached? I think one can agree that the former is the result of the latter.

Next year the athletic department moves out of an ancient building into new, modern, sunlit offices. However, one must never forget that it is the same staff moving in. The chain of the athletic department is only as strong as its weakest link. The weak link is the coaching methods employed by the men guiding the University's athletes. I believe that the mentors of our athletic teams will keep the remains of the old gym alive in their archaic methods of instruction. Will some one of them please prove me wrong!

points a game by employing a wide-open offense. Informed sources say that Clifford will use a T-formation with split ends. Whatever offense he uses, it will be exciting to watch and this year's Cats can possibly be one of Vermont's greatest football teams ever.

COACH CLIFFORD, THE MAN

Clifford was born in East Orange, N.J., and was educated at Western State College of Colorado. He was a Navy P.T. boat commander in the Pacific during World War II. Clifford is 44 years old and is married to the former Virginia A. Lindsay of New York City. The Cliffords have three sons, Robert, Jr., 19, Peter, 15, and Lindsay, 10. Clifford is a member of the American Football and Basketball Coaches Association, the N.C.A.A. Small College Selection Committee, the National Exchange Club, and other athletic Associations.

Clifford will have the rank of assistant professor of physical education. Colby's President R.E.L. Strider praised Clifford as "a splendid teacher who has earned the respect and confidence of his players and of our community. We shall miss him and his family very much and he takes with him our warm wishes for his continuing success." Dr. Fey said that he was "delighted" to give his own endorsement to the recommendation of Clifford. His appointment commences officially July 1, 1962.

Kittens End With Win

By Richard Rappaport

The UVM freshman basketball team avenged a previous one point defeat at the hands of the Middlebury, by registering an impressive triumph over them, last week in the final game of the season by the score of 79-68. In this encounter Vermont was led by its high-scoring duo of Ralph D'Altilla who scored 21 points, and Jim Brennan who added 19. Also outstanding, although in a reserve role, was Dick Whittier whose fine play enabled coach Ralph Lapointe to give some of his starters a well earned rest.

As a result of this victory the frosh team concluded its campaign one game over the 500 mark with a record of 7-6. Even though this record may appear unimpressive it is quite good taking into consideration the immense lack of depth on the squad. Of the twenty-one players who were originally on the team fifteen of these left during the season due to injuries, personal reasons, or scholastic difficulties, leaving only six players to play the last few games of the campaign themselves.

Even with this important disadvantage the season had its highlights such as the one-sided victories over Union, Castleton.

Jules Feiffer, Ihab Hassan To Highlight Vermont Conference Of Leading Literary Figures

Jules Feiffer - leading cartoonist and author will be a part of Vermont Conference next week.

JULES FEIFFER

A cartoonist who is best known for his captions, a satirist whose strong point is tenderness and pity, a humorist whose subjects include such mordant topics as atomic destruction - all these are various aspects of Jules Feiffer.

In October 1956, Feiffer took some of his cartoons to the Village Voice, a weekly newspaper published in New York's Greenwich Village. There, his simply drawn panels, accompanied by captions in the form of a soliloquy or dialogue, were an immediate hit. In April 1958 Feiffer's cartoons were published in a book, Sick, Sick, Sick, subtitled A Guide to Non-Confident Living. Feiffer's character of Munro - the four year old boy who was drafted, by mistake, in the army - appeared in his second best-selling collection, Passionella. In April, 1961, Munro - an animated version of these adventures by Rembrandt Films - was awarded the Oscar of the Academy of Motion Pictures as the best short subject cartoon of the year. Hall Syndicate distributes a weekly Feiffer cartoon to some forty American newspapers, including the New York Post as well as to the Paris edition of the New York Herald Tribune, the London Observer, and papers in Rome and Stockholm. He also draws a cartoon each month for Playboy magazine and draws occasionally for other publications: Sports Illustrated, and others. His work still appears weekly in the Village Voice.

Feiffer is also the creator of such collections as The Explainers (1960) and Boy, Girl, Girl, Boy. He illustrated My Mind Went All To Pieces by psychiatrist Robert Mines and a children's book, The Phantom Tollbooth by Norman Juster. A one-act play of Feiffer's Crawling Arnold, had its premiere at Gian-Carlo Menotti's Festival of Two Worlds in Solito, Italy on June 27, 1961. The play deals with typical Feiffer subjects such as air-raid shelters, sibling rivalry, social workers, and Negro Nationalists.

Last Blue Lane Series To Host Broadway Hit, "The Miracle Worker"

Eleven year-old Donna Zimmermann as young Helen Keller is taught her first sign language by Eileen Brennon as Annie Sullivan.

Memorial Auditorium will host the last of this year's Blue Lane Series on Wednesday, March 21 at 8:30 with the presentation of William Gibson's powerful drama, "The Miracle Worker." Having enjoyed a successful two-year run of over seven hundred performances on Broadway at the Playhouse Theatre, the prize-winning play is in the midst of a long cross-country tour.

The drama is concerned primarily with the rehabilitation of Helen Keller, the renowned, remarkable woman who, shortly after birth, was stricken by a disease which subsequently left her without the senses of sight and hearing. Set in Alabama during 1887 when Helen is nine years old, the play reveals the efforts of Helen's nurse, Anne Sullivan, in breaking through to the obstinate mind of the girl who must be taught how to communicate with others.

One of the most celebrated scenes in the play is aptly dubbed "table manners." For twelve minutes, during which not one word is spoken, Annie pits her strength and persistence against the "savage" Helen in an actual

Recent Congolese Visitors Air Opinions At Meetings

Students Gather At Campus House

The impression and opinion expressed within these interviews are solely those of the interviewers. Editor by Wayne Mirsky

The month of January saw UVM entertaining students from a foreign country. The gentlemen in reference are six Congolese students here for the purpose of learning American taxation, finance, and business administration principles. At an exclusive interview, at the Alpha Tau Omega house, I found two of these students, Mr. Alex Buna, and Mr. Joachim Misiku to be thoroughly exciting, humorous, and extremely well versed in the French language. This last characteristic made conversation rather difficult. Profound impressions usually encountered when interviewing a foreign student, were rather superficial.

The reader must take for granted that any foreign student visiting the United States cannot and will not say anything harmful against his native government, no matter what his personal views are on a subject. I realize that many people upon reading the last sentence will say, "Of course that's true, why did he have to even mention it?" Well, in order to fully appreciate the significance of the Congolese responses that follow I feel that it is important to understand the statement above.

Mr. Buna, to whom most of my questions were directed, was very impressed with our campus here at UVM, especially the new library, Lafayette Hall, and had a great deal of respect for the Vermont coeds he met. A rather interesting point made by Mr. Buna was that he was a little disappointed with the apparent apathy of the American people. However he explained that this viewpoint was arrived at mainly because there was a great language barrier between himself, and the students he met who only spoke English. I don't know how many of the readers realize that Americans as a whole are regarded as initially cold people by foreigners. Again we must realize that we are inside looking out and can't believe what is said. However, these foreigners are outside looking in, and get a better perspective of the situation than we do.

Mr. Buna and Mr. Misiku were quite animated when talking about UVM but were a bit reticent when I approached them on questions concerning national politics. However, they offered their opinions on pertinent African and Congolese questions. The Congolese as represented by these two gentlemen are very much for a United Africa. They feel that a United Africa would give the peoples of Africa a great feeling of force and power. It would raise the living standards, and help to initiate a drive to wipe out poverty, something that Africa sorely needs. With this elimination of poverty, the interior of Africa would begin to develop. I think Mr. Misiku answered this entire question, when he said,

"Separation is the result of egoism, a country united leans heavily on itself for existence."

Although as these Congolese were excited about a United Africa, they were more enthusiastic with respect to a United Congo. Many of you have read of the Congo recently in the papers, and have read names such as Kasavubu, Gizenga, Lumumba, and Tshombe, but few students I'm sure do not really understand what is happening. The Congo is divided into six provinces, one of which is Katanga. Katanga province is headed by Moise Tshombe, and is extremely rich in natural resources. When granted its independence by the Belgians, the Congo immediately took steps to achieve a unified country. However, Mr. Tshombe felt that his Katanga province should set up its own government, and become a sovereign state. While this political secession was taking place, there was struggle for power in the remainder of the Congo between Patrice Lumumba operating out of Stanleyville, and Joseph Kasavubu, whose headquarters were in Leopoldville. This struggle resulted in the assassination of Lumumba, who in turn was succeeded by Antoine Gizenga. Mr. Gizenga is believed to have Communist tendencies, and it is because of this belief that a successful unification of the Congo, with Mr. Kasavubu, is being retarded.

The two students from the Congo as mentioned before were somewhat unresponsive about their political fortunes. However, they spoke on the topic, they finally decided to speak freely about it, they were entirely against the policies of Antoine Gizenga. They claim that he changes his ideas so often that the people can't follow him. Also, the promises that he does make, are usually not held nor kept. As far as Mr. Tshombe is concerned, being pro-unified Congo, they initially renounced his secessionist policy. Now however, because Tshombe has come out publicly for a unified Congo, they are supporting him. In fact both Mr. Buna and Mr. Misiku feel that Moise Tshombe is one of the ablest leaders to be found on the face of the globe.

Tshombe Aid Speaks Out

by Pat Conwit

Last Thursday I was able to get an exclusive interview with Mr. Michel Struelens, a Belgian and Head of Katanga Information Services, during an informal gathering at the home of Architect Charles Hubbard, born in Northern Rhodesia, prompted the meeting through his interest in Africa, and the vital issues presently plaguing the continent.

As Moise Tshombe's personal representative in the United States, the volatile Struelens was well equipped to answer even the most controversial questions directed at him. His main concern at present is with the political pressure in Katanga. Struelens did not hesitate to launch right into the Congo problem, especially concerning those facts which he felt were misinterpreted. Thus, he began with a brief account of the major events leading up to the situation.

There are certain areas that he emphasized. First is the question of Katanga's secession from the Congo; those who want a unified Congo accuse Tshombe of backing down after making an agreement to support Adoula. Struelens claims that this situation has been completely misconstrued. As he states, the province of Katanga was given independence at the same time as the rest of the Belgian Congo. This was July 1, 1960, when the area was in a state of turmoil. Tshombe, seeing an opportunity to create a strong, effective government, called in Belgian troops to quell the rebellion and within eleven days established a Katanga Government with its own parliament, constitution, army, and economy. While separate factions in the Congo followed the lead of Patrice Lumumba in protesting the new-found independence Tshombe saw his chance and acted upon it. Within several months, as Struelens continued, Katanga was recognized as a separate independent state.

In March, 1961 a closed session conference was held at Madagascar. With non-intervention of major world powers Kasavubu and Tshombe were able to come to an agreement, and created a confederation of the African states in the Congo area. By this agreement, Katanga still remained (continued on page nine)

IFC Elects New Officers

Election of officers for the coming year were held at last week's Inter-Fraternity Council meeting. The new officers, all members of the Class of '63, are as follows: President, Lauriston Cone; Vice-President, Joel Bauer; Secretary, Peter Franz; Treasurer, Neil Fink.

Lauriston Cone, from Bennington, Vermont, is a member of Lambda Iota Fraternity and a History Major in the College of Arts and Sciences. His credits include Delegate to the National Inter-Fraternity Council Conference and Activities Director of the IFC. In looking forward to a successful year, Laurie stated: "Along with the new officers, I feel that this year's problems will be solved in a way that will not hinder next year's IFC."

Joel Bauer is a premedical student from Brooklyn, New York and belongs to Phi Sigma Delta Fraternity. He is a Dean's List scholar in the College of Arts and Sciences with a major in Zoology. Among Joel's extracurricular activities are President, Class of '63, Chairman of Greek Week, Key and Serpent Honorary Society, and Delegate to the National Inter-Fraternity Council Convention. Joel is emphatically for a more integrated IFC. "I hope that the new Inter-Fraternity Council will make decisions and policies which will stem from an interest in the Council as a whole and not from specific desires of Council members for their respective houses."

Peter Franz is from Montreal, Quebec and enrolled in the College of Technology's Chemistry Curriculum. He has been a junior and senior representative to IFC from Acacia Fraternity. When asked for what type of improvements he will strive, Peter said, "In the next year, I would like to see more inter-fraternity activities."

Neil Fink is a pre-law student with a major in Political Science

Neil is Vice-Chancellor of Tau Epsilon Phi fraternity, TEP's junior representative to IFC, and has been associated with Freshmen Orientation for the past two years. Neil commented, "I hope that the new officers, along with the new and old Council members, will strengthen the IFC and help it operate to its highest degree of effectiveness."

Leaving his one year position as President of the Inter-Fraternity Council, Jerry Emery has favorable hopes for succeeding years. "I think that our major problem through the year was the fact that we designed the policy of no contact between freshmen and fraternity men last year during Greek Week. I would anticipate that the rule will be modified and that there will not be a policy of this kind next year. I think that there has been headway made in bringing the houses together. We were fortunate in having six houses represented at the past National Inter-Fraternity Council Convention. We are in the progress of setting up a scholarship program with the help of the Alumni IFC. It has been a good year. Despite adverse publicity, things worked out well."

Drinking

Reprinted from Newman Bulletin.

Does it take drinking to make a man? Is this a test of masculinity and sophistication? Does an educated person need to drink?

The problems with drinking probably rate next to sex as a moral problem on our campuses. In some ways it is a more serious problem because often it is considered to be outside the context of morality. Solitary drunkenness is seen by some as an experience which is harmless because no otherwise immoral actions are performed.

Drunkenness or excessive drinking or even inebriation which causes immoral activities or destruction of property should be considered morally wrong. Many students must experience the sad facts of life for themselves, before they will recognize the dangers involved. It is a sad realization when a student wonders what happened during a blank period the previous evening. On the morning after, the realization of the helplessness caused by alcohol becomes all too clear but often it is too late.

One wonders how many second guessers there are the morning after a party or dance where drinking stimulated strange activities. How many students wonder on Sunday morning just how they could have done the things they remember of Saturday night? Some wonder what they really did the night before.

We do not question that social drinking is acceptable. It is stated that young men and women old enough to go to college are old enough to use alcohol. Yet among many students there seems to be no norm for control. For some, drinking seems to become an end in itself. To have "blacked out," or become "smashed," is to have experienced real living. This is not "social" drinking. It is, rather, anti-social!

It is not social drinking if, after the girls have gone home from a party, the fellows get together to consume all the remaining whiskey and get "stoned" in the process.

All this is involved with morality. It is proper that the faculties of mind and will should be in control of man's physical activities. It is precisely through the activities of his mind and will that he acts in the image of God.

By deliberately depriving himself of the use of his mind and will he deprives himself of what

Northern Student Movement Wants Your Support

Students interested in the promotion of civil rights have been meeting together to discuss problems of discrimination and makes him act as a man. Without the use of his mind and will he acts as an animal. To deliberately deprive oneself of consciousness, or of the proper functioning of mind and will, is therefore immoral, even if no extraneous actions involving sex, or anger, or destruction of property may occur.

Even when a person has not deprived himself of the complete use of mind and will, but when he has sufficiently lowered his resistance to improper stimulation, his drinking is excessive and immoral. The lessening of inhibitions and the lowering of proper moral standards through the use of alcoholic drink are sinful in themselves when they are the cause of other sins. The simple conclusion is that it is seriously sinful to get drunk, "smashed," "stoned," "bombed" or whatever you want to call it. It is likewise morally wrong to drink so that proper moral standards are lowered.

This is not to say that social drinking or controlled drinking which stimulates conversation or properly livens up the party is morally wrong. Alcohol may be taken as a stimulant for health or to stimulate conversation. As such, it is being used as a legitimate means for a proper end. Students should learn early that if they are going to use alcohol, they must recognize the need to control its use before it controls them. The use of alcohol is permissible when it is controlled by the person involved, when the purpose is good and when used in moderation.

segregation and the individual's role in coping with them. One of the approaches discussed has been that of the Northern Student Movement Coordinating Committee.

NSM was created as an organ of the Student Non-violent Coordinating Committee, which is active in student moves against racial discrimination in the South, to which it gives moral, physical and financial support. (For a more detailed explanation of the purpose, structure and program of NSM see its Statement of Purpose in the Kake Walk Cynic, page 17). The program of NSM, aimed at civil rights, deals with problems of discrimination in housing, education, employment and voting procedures. The main concern of SNCC is the voter registration project. It is felt that to enable the Negroes to obtain their vote, a more direct contact between white and Negro communities must be maintained. In order to effectively carry out such a program, funds are needed to meet administration expenses of SNCC, pay salaries, secure educational tools, and meet bails for arrests frequently incurred by SNCC members.

Indirectly, NSM aids SNCC through pressure in the North by bringing news of the Negroes' situation to light. (Note the bulletin board in Lower Waterman, near the student lounge, where current news on discrimination is posted weekly.) But more directly, the whole of the UVM student body can aid SNCC by supporting the forthcoming button drive. Those interested should get a button, wear it, and explain to people why it is being worn.

The following people may be contacted for information about NSM and for buttons: Dr. Daniel Scheans, Benny Beeton, Mike Bonneau, Craig Brodie, Emilie Gruppe, Fred Holland, Howard King, Dave Koff, Jerry Kolker, Mike Levy, Carol Mable, Bill Pinkham, Sue Roussin, Emily Stelljes, and Jules Older.

THINKING OUT LOUD

by Kim Boriskin

H. L. Mencken - Part I

The other day I happened to mention to someone that I was currently reading H.L. Mencken. A blank look crossed his face: "Who is H.L. Mencken?" he asked. I was quite surprised to learn that he had never even heard the name. Since then I have come to know better. In the last few weeks I have talked to 63 people, with these results. Of 30 Vermonters, only three have even heard the name H.L. Mencken, although none of the three know anything about him, except that he wrote. Of 4 New Hampshireites, 3 were totally ignorant of Mencken; the other happened to be a bit of a fan of his. Contrasted to that, out of 29 from New York, New Jersey, Conn., and Mass., only one person has never heard of Mencken. Seven more know only the name, but very little more; 18 have heard enough to know a little about him, and some have even read scattered pieces by him; the last three have all read at least one book or collection of Mencken.

If Mencken had been one of the ordinary windbags that infested the country, and especially national politics, from the end of W.W.I to the early thirties, it would be understandable, although I suspect that if this were the case the statistics would be reversed. But out of the handful that weren't completely absurd during Normalcy, Mencken was the only one who really seemed to know what he was talking about, and was also generally honest. Mencken could take almost any subject and give it an unforgettable going over. And if the subject were contemporary social behavior or politics, the targets of his essays were made to look so absurd -- except when he was pointing out concrete virtues -- that one began to wonder why he ever even gave them a serious thought.

Update this quote by changing Coolidge to Eisenhower, and change the population figure, and you have the best definition of democracy you could ever hope for:

Democracy is that system of government under which the people, having 35,717,342 native-born adult whites to choose from, including thousands who are handsome and many who are wise, pick out a Coolidge to be head of the State. It is as if a hungry man, set before a banquet prepared by master cooks and covering a table an acre in area, should turn his back upon the feast and stay his stomach by catching and eating flies.

(from Prejudices: Fifth Series, if anyone is interested.)

Mencken's barbs were almost always aimed at top men in politics -- Presidents, jobholders, Senators -- and at the powers behind them, such as the Anti-Saloon League during Prohibition. He was especially fond of covering Presidential campaigns, and generally followed each administration. Student pursued.

This, and the fact that Mencken was swinging away at his best in the twenties, which was Republican dominated from the word go, seems to explain the almost complete ignorance of Mencken. Since the top politicians in the twenties were Republican, Mencken's invectives were naturally aimed at them, just as they were aimed at Wilson and FDR, when they had to be aimed, during their terms in office. Naturally, since Vermont is a Republican state, most good patriotic Vermonters apparently took HLM's criticism as being against Republicans, rather than against political charlatans in general.

Too, Mencken often wrote against the farmer as he was (and still is) in the U.S. of his era. Vermont is still a rural state, and was much more so then. Also, Vermont was just about as dry as the Bible Belt, and Mencken was anything but dry.

These three things combined to cause much animosity to be felt towards HLM, despite the facts that Prohibition was insane, that most of Mencken's arguments against farmers were based on empirical evidence and a study of history, and that he couldn't have been less interested in Vermont's Republicanism per se. So all good Vermonters just dismissed him as a clown or traitor, and ignored him. As a result, he has probably never been heard of in Vermont since the twenties.

Well, so what? I'll answer that next time, or at least I'll attempt to answer it, but it won't be easy. I could give a small biography, but that's almost useless. Instead, let me suggest this: make use of UVM's library and read any of his six Prejudices series, or A Carnival of Buncombe, A Mencken Chrestomathy, Damn; A Book of Calumny, and Minority Report, which are his notebooks, published posthumously. The only way to know Mencken is to read him. Very few people are ever disappointed.

At the initial meeting of the Student Association Senate, the following budget for the present semester was approved.

Several chairmanships were elected from the fifty person representative body. Those elected were: Bob Bell, Activities; Kathy Allenby, Pep Committee; Don Noble, Social Committee; Harold Gilbar, Constitution Committee; Al Mintz, Elections Committee and Jim Flashman, Freshmen Orientation Committee.

Three sub-chairmanships to be appointed by the NSA representative, Sharon Comey, were established. They are, Campus Travel Director; Peace Corps Representative; and a World University Service Representative.

At this meeting, the Senate authorized the Chess Club to officially use the name "UVM Chess Club."

A blood drive sponsored by Key and Serpent will be held April 6 in the Student Lounge.

Gibson Speaks On Peace Corps

by Kae Gleason

On March 1, 1961 President Kennedy, in a Special Message to Congress stated, "I recommend... the establishment of a permanent Peace Corps -- a pool of trained American men and women sent overseas... to help foreign countries meet their urgent needs for skilled manpower." Today, only one year later, there are approximately 1,000 Peace Corps Members working in over 15 underprivileged countries throughout the world. The Corps has grown in leaps and bounds since it was first mentioned by Senator Kennedy in a speech at the University of Michigan during his 1960 presidential campaign.

At 4:30, March 7th, in the Student Lounge, James Gibson of the office of public affairs, agricultural division of the Peace Corps told the interested students just how and why the Corps has grown thus. Mr. Gibson, in outlining the essence of this organization, and in stating its aims, clarified many hazy preconceived notions that the public has about the Corps.

Any American citizen over 18 may apply; even married couples without dependent children can be accepted if both can do needed jobs. Because tasks will be performed under arduous living conditions, most volunteers will be from 21 to 45 years old. Volunteers might function as teachers, sanitation engineers, mechanics, nurses, surveyors, social workers, and in a variety of other occupations.

Peace Corps workers will go only where they are needed and are wanted, and here they can help raise the standards of living or improve educational and social levels. Although they will receive no regular salary, the volunteer will receive allowances to cover clothing, housing, food, and incidental expenses so that he may live at the level of his counterparts in the host country. Upon termination of service, which ranges from 2 to 3 years, the volunteer will receive approximately $75 a month for his service. The effective volunteer will find other more important rewards in his work: He will be enriched by the experience of knowing people of another culture, he will gain a deeper understanding of the world, and his horizons will be extended. He will have made a direct contribution to the world.

Living conditions will be markedly different than those in the volunteer's home environment, for he will live on a standard similar to that of his host country. The standards of course, will vary; but the food may be strange, water may need purification, tropical diseases maybe prevalent, and travel maybe by foot. The volunteer must be prepared to live a pioneer life.

the Senate, we can expect that the decisions made by the Senate will be more representative" of the opinions of the student body. However, this can only be so if each student "takes advantage of the representative from his living unit."

The first class meeting of the Class of 1965 was conducted Thursday, March 8, in the Waterman Student Lounge. President of the class, Skip Laufer, opened the meeting with the introduction of the officers: Harvey Demmler, Vice-President; Phil Wilcox, Treasurer; Judy Godbout, Secretary.

Upon the officers's recommendation, a majority of those present elected Dean Carl Eycke, Assistant Dean of Men, to serve as the classes Advisor.

Janet Koch, Diane Gallo, Scott Severance, and Greg Eaton were elected to comprise, along with the officers, the Executive Board, the governing body of the class. "All matters of policy pertaining to the activities of the class shall be considered by the Executive Board..."

President Laufer defined the three standing committees of the Class of 1965. The purpose of the Finance Committee is to "assist the treasurer in the handling of the finances of the class." The Activities Committee "plans and organizes all class activities." The Publicity Committee will "work with the other committees and make known to all the members of the class all coming events sponsored by the class."

Thursday evening, March 8, the Executive Board of the class held a meeting and assigned the committee-members from a list of those who volunteered for such work at the class meeting.

Fraternities, sororities: organize. Make your plans and telephone calls early this year. Be well prepared in advance. Spring is on its way. This season brings Greek Week. IFC sing, and Spring Formals to mind, as well as another annual phenomenon. It's just about that time of year again to hold "open elections" for Freshman Orientation committee chairmen. Certainly you all remember just how this is supposed to work. If not, a quick review is in order.

According to the precedent set these past few years, voting blocks are formed of groups of two or three sororities and/or fraternities. At the meeting in the Waterman Lounge nominations are taken from the floor and a vote, according to a show of hands (democratic procedure), is taken for each office. But it really doesn't matter. The whole thing has been taken care of the night before. Looking back.....

The voting begins. My, My, isn't everything running smoothly? The balloting for each and every position seems to run fairly consistently: 122 votes to 45 votes almost every time.

But of course this is understandable. Why shouldn't the two or three houses which are fortunate enough to have banded together carry every single office? Why shouldn't the smaller fraternities, or those with less representation, be left out in the cold even though they too have just as strong a desire to work.

This is not supposed to be a sorority-fraternity affair. It is supposedly an open election. But let's look at this thing realistically and for what it is. Sure, the work gets done. But this is not the point. The present system is undemocratic and discriminatory. If IFC were to ever change its rules concerning first semester open rushing, such off-balance representation during Freshman Orientation would be disastrous.

There is, unfortunately no panacea. Closed ballot elections, similar to those used in electing officers of the Student Association would, however, be far more effective. It would make it difficult for fraternities to form "voting blocks" to such an extent, and would at least encourage independents to run. Certainly this system would be more democratic. Such a system would encourage the smaller fraternities to participate, and would at least help neutralize the hypocrisy which pervades the present "election" system.

The Cynic will append the telephone numbers of all sorority and fraternity houses to the "Editor's Scrapbook" in an appropriate edition. Then all you conscientious go-getters will have your work made a little easier when it's time to organize the voting blocks.

New writers are needed in the Cynic staff for an adequate coverage of campus features and stories. The Editorial Staff offers positions for students interested in research and fact-finding. Positions are also open on the Re-Write Staff.

Those students interested in News Coverage, Rewriting, or researching for articles and editorials, can place a letter of application in the Editor's Box in the Cynic Office in Lower Waterman. Please state your particular interest (Rewrite, News, Editorial) and experience.

Letters To The Editor

Counterfeit

To the Editor:

The letter printed in last week's Cynic and attributed to me is a forgery. I did not write it. That ungrammatical diatribe against the students could not even be classed as a poor parody of my intellectual or stylistic efforts.

Sincerely,
Robert B. Huber, Chm.
Department of Speech

Editor's comment:

The Cynic offers its sincere apologies for this unfortunate occurrence. Obviously this is a case of out and out forgery. Due to the immaturity and irresponsibility of a few individuals the Cynic is now forced to employ a check system it was reluctant to use. From now on, all letters submitted for publication must be signed and must include the writer's telephone number. In this way future misrepresentations will be prevented.

Further, the opinions expressed in the article supposedly signed by Dr. Huber were not his own. We hope that this "retraction" will help clear up the situation, and make our readers cognizant of the twisted values of a vast minority of contributors to this newspaper, who must resort to forgery to be acknowledged.

All "Letters to the Editor" must be signed. They must also contain the telephone number or address of the contributor. No letters will be printed unless these requirements are met.

One Bomb!

To the Editor:

Last week there appeared in this column an article by Kim Boriskin in which he expressed his alarm over President Kennedy's decision to resume nuclear testing in the atmosphere. I am greatly concerned about the thinking of Mr. Boriskin and the others like him who propose to stop nuclear testing at all costs. Perhaps, it is the feeling of these people that we should just lie down and roll over while waiting for Premier Khrushchev to come. This, I can not believe to be the case, but what other reason is there to oppose a situation as necessary as this?

Mr. Boriskin stated in his column that he feared two-headed monsters would come into being as a result of our tests. He says this despite the fact that the President has said that we will test no super-bomb as did the Russians and that the total fallout from our tests would be about 1% of the radiation now in the atmosphere due to natural causes. Our scientists have stated time and time again this amount of radiation will not be harmful.

Since this is the only argument brought forth by Mr. Boriskin and since he must know this to be erroneous, what other reason could he have for opposing our resumption in testing, when our future as a nation may depend on the information we obtain from these tests.

That the President considers our resumption of atmospheric testing a necessity under present conditions is obvious. For in his March 2 speech to the nation concerning his decision to resume testing in the atmosphere President Kennedy said, "In the absence of any major shift in Soviet policies, no American President . . . could in good faith make any other decision."

It is indeed obvious that the President put much time and thought into making this decision, which under the circumstances was the only one he could make if he was to uphold the oath which he took upon taking office.

Why was such a decision necessary? It was necessary because our scientists have determined that Russia made substantial gains in their recent test series, and if we are to maintain our lead over them we must test also, as our own scientists still have a lot they can learn from additional testing.

Some people claim that this nuclear race we are engaged in will lead to the eventual destruction of the entire human race. I maintain that if we do not compete in this nuclear race it will lead to the end of the entire free world. The only way we can be assured of peace is by being the strongest nation in the world, and the only way we can be the strongest is by being the leader in the field of nuclear weapons. For as long as we have the power to destroy any potential enemy no one will be able to dictate to us. Only by letting the Soviet Union know that we could subdue her, can we maintain peace - for the strength of the United States and her allies is the greatest deterrent to war.

With this in mind, I don't know how Mr. Boriskin or any other patriotic American can differ with President Kennedy's decision to resume nuclear testing in the atmosphere.

Sincerely,
Lewis Wiener

G.E. Bowl

March 11, 1962

To the Editor:

The following item appeared in today's New York Times (Sunday, March 11). "About two weeks ago John Cleary, producer of College Bowl was told that the Vermont team would not be able to compete on the program April 29 as scheduled." We will be replaced by a team from Muskingum College of New Concord, Ohio.

Now the nation will know that we were afraid.

Sincerely,

G.E. Bowl

To the Editor:

The refusal of our administration to accept the invitation to appear on General Electric's College Bowl only strengthened my already strong feelings that UVM is not as good as our administration claims it to be. Our "concerned" directorship feels that instantaneous recall is not a true measure of the goals and objectives of American education and especially our program here at UVM. However, is it not true that every week on hour exams and on finals we are obligated to parrot back information previously given us?

President Fay said, "I feel that this is a false picture of American education . . . It is a waste of student and staff time . . ." I do not mean to degrade our traditional and wonderful Kake Walk holiday by any means,

STUDENTES

Is it a crime to open the door for young, rosy coeds trying to enter the sacred portals of Lafayette, Science Hall, Waterman or any of the other campus buildings at UVM? Is it a crime to help a sorority girl across the street, her arms loaded with books, and posters hanging from her mouth? Is it a crime to politely let a lovely young freshman in front of you in the coffee shop line? Is it a crime to pick up a load of papers a blushing young maiden has dropped on the floor in history class?

YES, it is a crime! Countless are the times that I, a gallant, well-mannered, polite, respectful and well-bred gentleman, have performed these little acts of civility. And yet, alas, few are the times that I have even gotten a smile or a polite thank you in reply. My shoulders are broad and I can suffer through these indignities, yet it is painful for me to think that the majority of coeds here are so impolite as to merely walk away, head in the air, smirk on their scarlet lips, and wiggle in their cushioned behinds. Oh, those behinds, how I would love to press the heel of my shoe against them. My Lord, these girls seem to think it is some sort of odious and dreadful act to show the least bit of courtesy towards them. I get the feeling that these females would just as soon slit my throat for transgressing against their precious persons as to offer a mere thanks for a favor rendered. I tell you, these girls are an awfully sweet and charming lot.

I propose that the required courses in science or English be dropped, to be replaced by courses in etiquette for the female side of the UVM population. After all, if the male segment of the population is required to take ROTC, to aid in the development of "becoming a man", why can't the women take a course to help them to become a "lady", instead of the mere animals many of them are now.

Male students of UVM unite! The tyranny and downright poor breeding of the female part of the population has become too much. Slam the doors in their snotty faces, butt in on them in line, laugh as they try to cross the street balancing the UVM boulder on one arm and a complete Encyclopedia Britannica on the other, and grin wickedly as their 50 page term paper goes flying away in the midst of Hurricane Esmeralda.

IT IS A CRIME TO BE POLITE. Treat a girl with courtesy and she'll treat you to a display of behavior that one only thinks as normally appearing in a female dog.

UVM'S ANSWER TO EMILY POST...

The Circular File

by Mike Grossman •

Like most girls her age, Mary Jane was having a tough time deciding if she should go to college. Finally, persuaded by her parents who felt that Jane lacked the worldliness and social grace one gains at college, Jane agreed that she should go. So when autumn arrived Jane, a little naive, but eager to learn, set out for college.

When Jane returned home at Christmas, her change delighted and surprised the whole neighborhood. Little Jane, the pigtailed, freckled-faced kid who got in everyone's way but whom everybody liked, had grown up. She no longer believed that the world consisted of the small backyard at the corner of Elm Street and Grant. Jane had learned about people too. People were no longer the Williams twins with whom she used to go sledding or Teddy, that stupid kid who never could balance the rickety green teeter-totter in her backyard. Jane had learned to type people.

She had learned that Vermonters all have draws, raised cows, prefer chores to dating, and speak of Burlington as "the city". Jane learned that Willie, the skinny kid that used to sit at the desk in front of her in Mrs. Ray Jones's class was different. She learned that Willie was a negro and that one is always polite to negroes, overly polite in fact, and that one does not invite them home to dinner. Jane learned that all New Yorkers are obnoxious, loud and wear metallic orange sweaters with checkered pants. Jane met engineering students whom she learned to spot by their slide rules, and "agriculture" students whom she learned are never interested in anything but the latest news from the grange.

Shortly after Christmas Jane joined a sorority and was very happy. "The kids in GBA are my kind of people," she wrote home to her parents. "We like a lot of the same things and I really feel

Writer Offers World Solution

Reprinted from New York Times, Friday, March 2, by James Reston

Washington, March 1—Miss Sunshine, please take a letter to President Kennedy and Chairman Khrushchev. Gentlemen: I have been thinking about your annual argument over summit meetings and test explosions and have come up with what can only be described as a jim-dandy idea.

The present situation, as I understand it, is as follows: You, Mr. President, want to make up for past Soviet tests by trying out some new hydrogen bombs, and you, Mr. Khrushchev, are against it. Right? At the same time you, Mr. Khrushchev, want a summit meeting with Mr. Kennedy, but the President is against that. In other words, everything is normal.

Now, I have read all sixty-three of your communications on this dilemma (by the way, who writes these tiresome documents?) and, since you are obviously getting nowhere, I venture to suggest the following compromise:

Why not have a summit meeting at the test-site on Christmas Island? This would give you both what you want. The President could set off his hydrogen bombs, and then you could both sit down and have a little talk.

So far as I know, neither of you has ever seen a nuclear explosion. This seems odd. Seeing something you are responsible for cannot possibly be much of a handicap, and nothing makes a man think more than watching a hydrogen bomb go off. It's not the kind of thing you easily ignore, and maybe after observing twenty or thirty of these, who knows? — you might both be in better equipped to reflect on the future of the human race.

THE ARRANGEMENTS

If you think well of this idea, of course, it might be prudent to give some thought to the arrangements. For example, you would probably have to be a little careful about how the wind is blowing, and since Christmas Island belongs to the British, who are a little short of territory these days, you would probably want to do your best to avoid blowing it up.

Ideally, your meeting should take place, not on a summit but in a bombproof, underground bunker, suitably stocked with essential foods and lubricants. Each session should start with an atmospheric test, preferably at dawn, to be followed by a hearty breakfast, and then some quiet conversation.

Maybe in the afternoon you could fish, if there are any fish left in the Pacific by then, or take a ride in a Polaris submarine, or wipe out neighboring islands with atomic bullets. Then in the evening: chess or a philosophic seminar on "Whither China?"

If you, Mr. Khrushchev, wanted to test some of your hydrogen bombs too, that might have some advantage, even though you broke the test-ban and forced the President into this position. You could blast off on even days and the President on odd days, and maybe some of your obsolete warships could serve as targets for our bombs and our old battleships could be used as targets for yours. This, of course, would be subject to negotiation in accordance with the principle of nuclear reciprocity.

The selection of those permitted to join the two of you in the Christmas Island bunker would, I think, be important. First priority should go to all influential atomic warriors who believe in unconditional surrender in the cold war.

PROFESSORES

When I arrived here, after a storm-tossed bus-ride on the day of hurricane Danna, I felt that something was different. It was not the thin cluster of lights which was Main Street, or the strange trees, or the unfamiliar sounds of a foreign country. It was still quite vague when I walked up the hill, but when I walked across the Green and saw the residence-halls behind the blistered rust colored walls of a low-squatting building — then I suddenly knew. I saw the drab facades, heard the noise pouring from the windows and I knew.

I have lived in many places during my studies. There was the very disreputable cell-like hole in the basement of a tenement-house, in a part of the town which was definitely on the other side of the tracks. There was a draughty chamber in an attic, where the cooing of the pigeons around the sooty chimney woke me up. There was a glass-roofed studio of a painter who had gone to Sicily and who needed a caretaker. There was the bucolic solitude of a summer-house in the vineyards and the untidy room in the house of a professor. But all these places had one thing in common: nobody controlled my coming or going. Only the professor did, but he was a very lonely old man constantly in need of a partner to play cards, or a comrade in arms against his gragon of a housekeeper. It was a hopeless battle, anyway.

Strange company I had sometimes, and we used to sit up all night, talking, arguing or listening. There was one friend who wrote long epics of ghoulish obscurity, and there was the girl who used to read her term-papers, and I really can't recall who was funnier in the serious-if unsuccessful attempt to grasp a straw of reality. I also never shall be able to recall the outcome of the extensive argument between a law student and a biochemist into which they eventually drew the pharmacist and a student of psychology. They discussed the problem of divine providence, I remember that, and that the infuriated housekeeper threw me out on the following morning.

On that day when I arrived here, I also saw the parents, taking their sons and daughters to college, obviously worried about their future, so far from home. And I remembered how we arrived. Sure enough, we were not much older. But we arrived alone and stayed alone. For a month, maybe more, maybe all the time because there was no compulsory company of the class of (?) or of a residence hall. Somehow one managed to find a room (see above) and settled down. The fact that most students in Liberal Arts were away from home showed in the beards that sprouted like Ulysses' during the time of his absence. Of course they were shaved off as soon as the girl from the neighbouring desk in the library was not a stranger any more. But what remained was the "artist" activity. There were the uninhibited soul, exuding poetry anytime in the interplay of the shadows in the lecture-hall which became intricate enough; there were, of course, also the collectors of empty bottles, obscenities and assorted pieces of female garb. And there was the very matter-of-fact looking girl whom I met on a walk. Perched on a park-bench she painted a terribly sweet and accurate aquarell of the green-house with its glittering panes.

And then, the tepid summer-evening, of course we had been cutting the evening-session of the seminar, when we sat on the bumpy embankment over the oily river and watched the black thunderhead creep up, now and then outlined by lightning. The first heavy drops sent us running for cover under the railroad-bridge and... But, maybe, all this doesn't belong here.

We would and could meet at all hours, in my place or somebody else's. In class, nobody thought of taking attendance. It was impossible anyway. The lecture-halls were crowded enough to give fits to any building-in-spector. For two semesters I followed the main lecture on "German Literature in the 20th Century" sitting on a windowsill, 7 feet over solid ground, which I shared with two more students — if I chose to go there at all. But in spite of all, there were the serious attempts. Scraps of reality were fused into images, sentence after sentence was linked together and the whole paper, or the story, or the poem were re-written again and again. In the end, maybe, we had five pages, or only five lines.

But all of us lived alone, independently. Not that we liked it all the time, especially when thoughts of responsibility crept up on us. We did our own cooking — oh the terrible dishes! — and entertained our friends whenever we wanted. How much was accomplished by these chats, that so often became fierce arguments. This new perspectives and ideas opened up and we would devour them. But if we didn't feel like it, we could shut ourselves off, and we didn't have to put up with the flood of transistor-swelled human babble. We didn't always like silence, but if we wanted it we found it in the refuge of our rooms, shabby as they often were. The belching and burping of the prehistorical heating plant, or the cooing of the pigeons did not disturb: it was as much a part of the surroundings as the gentle swell of the noise of the city. The places were free from intrusions and so had the kind of quiet we needed to do some work. This crossed my mind as I stood there on the Green, looking at the residence halls.

I had almost forgotten this first impression when, some weeks ago, a student came up to me and said:

"Sir, I couldn't study the assignment for today. You see, I'm living in Hall (and I forgot the name) and the fellow on the floor above is some kind of an athlete."

"So what?"

"Well, did you ever try to study, when every 45 seconds a pair of heavy dumbbells crashes on the concrete floor directly over your head?"

No, I didn't. I never had a roommate either, except... But that's another matter...

"Threepenny Opera" Is Currently Rehearsing

The Players are now hard at work rehearsing for "Threepenny Opera".
(Credit: A. Ojanen, S.P.S.)

Rehearsals are in full swing for the forthcoming "Threepenny Opera". Mr. Edward Feidner and Dr. Frank Lidral are enthusiastic about producing the show. One reason for this is that UVM will be the first college ever to perform it in drama form, although Brandeis University gave the show in concert form in 1952.

The setting for the opera originally was London in the 1800's; however, there are only a few references to it in the script, so that it could just as easily have been Berlin or New York in the 1920's.

Brecht and Weill, the writers of the opera, were both voices of their times. They were not completely accepted, and had a difficult time finding some one to produce their new opera in 1928. The characters, plot, cynicism and honky tonk music were too extreme to gamble on. Finally however, they found a backer and the Threepenny Opera opened in the Theater Schiffbauerdamm in Berlin on August 28, 1928. When the audience recovered from the shock, they loved it, and the show was a success running for nearly five years.

A unique feature of the opera is the musical accompanying group. There is a cabaret band of eight pieces, which in this production, will be headed by Professor Herbert Schultz of the Music Department. Other members of the group are Ira Adelman, Frank Coderre, Danny Calevro, Jerry Conklin, and Jim Beams.

Wu To Lecture On Oriental Art

A specialist on Oriental Art, Nelson I. Wu, assistant professor of Art at Yale University and Visiting Lecturer in the UVM Non-Western Studies Seminar, will speak on "The Position of Man in relation to his universe: The Chinese City of Man and the Indian Mountain of God," at the Fleming Museum, Sunday evening, March 18, at 8 P.M. Dr. Wu's lecture will open a Wilbur Room exhibit of Oriental Art from the Olsen, Matusdaira and Fleming Museum collections. A reception will follow. Students and faculty are invited to attend.

Two hundred and eighty five students at the University of Vermont, including 162 Vermonters, have been named to the Dean's List for the first semester of the 1961-62 academic year.

Students named to the list maintained an 85 or above average during the first semester and are in the four undergraduate colleges of the University and the two-year School of Dental Hygiene. The undergraduate enrollment for the fall semester was around 3,000.

Women students continued to enjoy their domination of the men in the "battle of the books."

The total women's average for the semester was 78.04 to 74.06 for the men. The overall University average was 75.50. By classes (women listed first) the averages were: senior - 82.60 to 78.06; junior - 79.78 to 76.24; sophomore - 76.73 to 73.49; and freshmen - 75.81 to 71.09.

The overall sorority average was 80.52 while the fraternity average was 75.26. Top sorority was Alpha Epsilon Phi with an 82.15 mark while the leading fraternity was Phi Sigma Delta at 78.01.

Nota Bene

The Speech Department of the University of Vermont cordially invites you to attend a Readers' Theatre performance in the Arena Theatre on Sunday evening, March 18, 1962, at 8 o'clock.

A program from the writings of George Bernard Shaw will be presented by two guest performers, Mrs. Barbara Phillips and Mr. William Peppin, and by the following UVM students: Miss Carol Cohen, Miss Elizabeth Soule, Miss Lynn Baier, Mr. Philip Tarro, Mr. John Sulton, Mr. Bryant Reynolds, and Mr. William Lewis.

Concert lovers have been asked to note a date change for the performance scheduled by UVM's University Orchestra.

Originally set for March 8, the concert has been re-scheduled to April 8 as part of UVM's Festival of Fine Arts.

Prof. Ippocrates Pappoutsakis of the University's department of music, who will conduct, said a number of people have called to ask about the concert date. "It is now April 8, not March 8," he said.

The UVM Orchestra concert, originally scheduled for early March, has been re-scheduled to April 8 as part of UVM's Festival of Fine Arts, and will be combined with the concert for high school audition winners. Prof. Ippocrates Pappoutsakis of the UVM Music Department conducts the orchestra.

Dr. Al Sadler, professor of Religion at the University of Vermont, will speak on his recent trip to the Far East at a fireside gathering at Hillel House on Sunday, March 18th at 8 P.M.

His talk will be entitled "Letters To My Wife". Everyone is welcome to attend.

A limited number of locked and unlocked carrels are available to Graduate students and to students enrolled in Honors Programs on a first come, first served basis. Carrels will be assigned according to the need for library research projects and not for general or course reading. Please, see David Stoller, Circulation Librarian, at the library for further information.

Hamilton Hall is having an open house on March 17, 1962, from two to four p.m. There will be dancing, and refreshments will be served. All are invited to attend.

Ash trays have finally arrived and smoking is now permitted in study areas throughout the library with the following exceptions:

The Special Collections Reading Room on the ground floor, the study area west of the Circulation Desk and the Reference area on the first floor, the Juvenile Collection area on the second floor and the Microfilm section on the third floor. Since ash trays have been provided in reading areas, smoking is prohibited in the stairwells of the building. This will help to keep the building clean and eliminate the distractions caused by conversations on the landings in the stairwells.

Woodrow Wilson Fellowship Awarded Edward Whalen

A University of Vermont senior has been awarded a Woodrow Wilson National Fellowship for graduate study.

Edward R. Whalen of Winooski, a senior in the College of Arts and Sciences, is one of 117 scholars to receive Fellowships in Region I (Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Quebec, New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island, Nova Scotia, and Newfoundland).

This year's award marks the second straight year that UVM has had a Fellowship recipient. Last year, James Battersby of Burlington, an education major, was named a Woodrow Wilson Fellow. A June graduate, Battersby is now doing graduate study at Cornell University.

A total of 1,058 awards were granted by the Foundation from its Princeton, New Jersey headquarters.

Each Fellowship covers a full year's tuition and fees at a graduate school of the Fellow's choice and a living allowance of $1,500. This year's winners were elected by 15 regional committees from 9,975 candidates nominated from 965 colleges and universities.

Three other University of Vermont students received honorable mention. They are Jerol R. Harrington of Woodstock, a history major; and Lois M. Lorand of Rutley, N.J., and Paul R. Schimelpennig of Burlington, both German majors.

Charles E. Braun, Dean of the Graduate College of Vermont, said that he felt certain that the majority of those students who received honorable mention would receive graduate awards from other sources because of their outstanding records.

Whalen is the son of Mrs. Leona J. Whalen of 230 Main St., Winooski. An English major, he is considering doing graduate work at Harvard, Columbia, or the University of California (Berkeley). A graduate of Cathedral High (now Rice Memorial), Whalen is a Dean's List student at UVM, is a member of the John Dewey Club, and is art editor of Centaur, student literary magazine. He plans to teach English at the college level.

The Woodrow Wilson Fellowship foundation was started in 1957 by a grant of $24,500,000 from the Ford Foundation for the purpose of helping launch young men and women into prospective college teaching careers. With the new awards, some 5,000 college graduates will have started on careers leading to teaching. Of those previously appointed, 80 per cent are either teaching at the college or secondary level or are continuing in graduate

Although the Fellowships cover only the first year of graduate study, the Foundation also encourages graduate schools in their support of students after one year of study by granting additional funds to each school where a Woodrow Wilson Fellow is enrolled.

Winners in this year's competition came from 46 states and from eight provinces in Canada.

EDUCATIONAL TV: ITS CAUSE AND CURE

A great deal of nonsense has been written about educational television. Following is my contribution:

It has been said that television allots no desirable viewing hours to educational and intellectual programs. This is simply not so. For instance, you can see "The Kant and Hegel Hour" every day at 4 a.m. This excellent show is followed at 5 a.m. by "Kierkegaard Can Be Fun." For such lazy scamps as lie abed beyond that hour, there is a splendid program on Sunday mornings at 7:15 called "Birds of Minnesota, Except Duluth."

So much for the myth that TV gives no prime time to educational programs. Now let us deflate another canard: that TV is not eager to inject intellectual content in all its programs.

If you have sat, as I have sat, with a television planning board, you would know that the opposite is true. I was privileged recently to witness a meeting of two of TV's topmost program developers—both named Binkie Tattersall.

"Binkie," said Binkie to Binkie, "if there is one thing I am bound and determined, it's that we're going to have intellectual content in next season's programs."

"Right!" replied Binkie. "So let us put on our thinking caps and go to work."

"I forgot my thinking cap in Westport," said Binkie, "but I have a better notion: let us light a Marlboro."

"But of course!" cried Binkie. "Because the best way to think is to settle back and get comfortable, and what is the cigarette that lets you settle back and get comfortable?"

"I said Marlboro," answered Binkie. "Weren't you listening?"

"A full-flavored smoke is Marlboro," declared Binkie. "Rich tobacco, pure white filter, a choice of pack or box. What is better than a Marlboro?"

"A Marlboro and a match," replied Binkie. "Got one?"

Binkie had, and so they lit their good Marlboros and settled back and got comfortable and proceeded to cerebration.

"First of all," said Binkie, "we are going to avoid all the old clichés. We will have no domestic comedies, no westerns, no private eyes, no deep-sea divers, no doctors, and no lawyers."

"Right!" said Binkie. "Something offbeat."

"That's the word—offbeat," said Binkie.

They smoked and cerebrated.

"You know," said Binkie, "there has never been a series about the Coast and Geodetic Survey."

"Or about glass blowers," said Binkie.

They fell into a long, torpid silence.

"You know," said Binkie, "there's really nothing wrong with a cliché situation—provided, of course, it's offbeat."

A cowboy, a deep sea diver with a law degree plus an M.D.

"Right!" said Binkie. "So let's say we do a series about a guy who's a family man with a whole bunch of lovable kids who play merry pranks on him."

"Yeah, and he's also a cowboy," said Binkie.

"And a deep sea diver," said Binkie.

"With a law degree," said Binkie.

"Plus an M.D.," said Binkie.

"And he runs a detective agency," said Binkie.

"Binkie," said Binkie to Binkie, "we've done it again!"

They shook hands silently, not trusting themselves to speak, and lit Marlboros and settled back to relax, for Marlboro is a cigarette not only for cerebration, but for settling back with—in fact, for all occasions and conditions, all times and climes, all seasons and reasons, all men and women.

IHAB HASSAN

Ihab Hassan was born in Cairo, Egypt and graduated from Cairo University with high honors in Electrical Engineering. In 1946 he attended the University of Pennsylvania from which he received an M.S. in Engineering and a M.A. and Ph.D. in English.

In 1958 Prof. Hassan received a Guggenheim Fellowship to complete a study of contemporary American fiction. He has also published in modern American literature extensively in various periodicals, such as, the American Scholar, American Quarterly, The Nation, Western Humanities Review and Modern Fiction Studies.

Presently Mr. Hassan is a Professor of English at Wesleyan University and the author of Radical Innocence: Studies in the Contemporary American Novel (Princeton University Press, 1961). In the near future a collection of Prof. Hassan's essays will be published by Lettres Modernes in Paris.

March 21, 22, 23, will evidence the opening of the 1962 session of Vermont Conference. For those of you who are not familiar with the nature of the Conference, it is an annual convocation designed to bring the students into contact with individuals who are unique in their chosen fields.

The underlying philosophy of Vermont Conference is a strong belief in the value of examining fresh and varying viewpoints which can extend the boundaries of the often too limited undergraduate perspective.

Med. Self-Help Program Offered

The Evening Division of the University of Vermont will offer an on-campus course in medical self-help, starting next week.

Staged in cooperation with the Civil Defense Committees of the State Department of Health and the Chittenden County Medical Society, the course will provide the basic information a person needs in order to preserve life and health in times of a national emergency when doctor's services might not be readily available.

Dr. M. Alfred Haynes, director of the Family Care Unit and assistant professor of preventive medicine at UVM, will teach the course. The course is non-credit and there are no fees. Registration will be held during the first class at 7 p.m. on Tuesday (March 13) in room 239 of the Waterman Building.

For further information, interested persons should contact the Civil Defense Director in their town or the Evening Division Office at UVM.

CONGOLESE VISITORS

golese students. When I asked them what they thought of the segregation problem that is found in the South today, they replied that the only southern city that they visited was Washington, D.C., and when they got there, there was so much snow falling that they didn't believe that segregation really existed.

What are the plans for these students now that they have left UVM? Well, first off is a short stay in Puerto Rico, then a return visit to Washington to see President Kennedy, and then back to the troubled Congo. A famous U.S. statesman stated recently, "Until the United States can solve its own segregation problems let it keep out of African Affairs." I believe that this is an excellent way to end this article, as I think that the preceding statement is self-explanatory and if more Americans adopted this policy maybe we wouldn't be experiencing the terror and fright that we are now.

separate, but was loosely bound to the other provinces through a central organization of which Casavubu was president. However, the intervention of the United Nations and the United States, in an attempt to bring about a unity among the people of the Congo, began to discourage this confederation and planted suspicion in the minds of both Lumumba and Tshombe. When another conference was held in Leopoldville to discuss the constitution of the Congo confederation, Tshombe walked out, feeling the agreement had already been final. Struelens the . . . by Tshombe's suspicion evoked by outside forces. These "advisors" in the form of the State Department and the U.N. seemed to have started the trouble in a previously harmonious atmosphere.

Here Mr. Struelens brought in another important area that is a part of the Congo situation. When Tshombe was held in jail at Leopoldville for refusing to return to the conference, none of the so-called "advisors" bothered to help him. Instead, he remained in Leopoldville until he agreed that Katanga would help in the unification of the entire Congo. Tshombe allowed U.N. troops to come into Katanga territory under one condition; that Indian troops would not be included. Two days later over two thousand Indian soldiers arrived in the Congo. Struelens explained the significance of a seemingly minor incident. For years Africa has been receiving the overflow of heavily populated India. These immigrants have been able to monopolize much of the business in Africa. By their control of a good part of the economy they have brought about a great deal of friction with the Negro population, causing a strong rivalry between the two groups. By bringing Indian troops to fight in the Congo, this produced a greater antagonism and showed, as Struelens pointed out, a lack of true comprehension of African problems by outsiders. It is intervention like this which is the root of much of the conflict in the Congo.

Struelens even attacked the major American papers whose coverage neglected Tshombe's side. These gave a slanted view of the Katanga cause and turned public opinion one way without presenting the other side of the controversy. In a way Struelens attributes this to a lack of gaining the true perspective. Because Africa is behind the United States in many respects, it does not mean to say that they are not capable of governing themselves intelligently. "Don't compare your standard of living with Africa," warned Struelens, for the United States was once an undeveloped nation, too. Understanding this basic fact is important in understanding Congolese attitudes. Mr. Struelens added, though, that he realized this was not a fault of all Americans, but only a small minority of newsmen and representatives of the State Department who have adopted the ideal of a unified Congo without examining either their motives or the end result. It is the same as saying since the United States is completely unified and our system of government is the best, then the best possible solution for the Congo would be unification. But, ideal solutions aren't always ideal in different situations. There are too many diverse cultures existing in the Congo for true unification. The Congolese "must be discussing freely . . . what will be their future," added Struelens. This emphasized the wish that outsiders would stay outside and let the people of the Congo decide their own fate.

A third topic Mr. Struelens discussed concerns political parties in the U.S. He brought out examples of Katanga being used by several factions here as a tool against other groups. One recent example is that of the Young Americans for Freedom rally in New York on the day of this interview. Tshombe had been asked to attend in order to receive an award, but the Katangese leader declined so as not to become attached to any extreme movement, as this organization seems to be. Naturally, the conflict enters into major politics since G. Mennen Williams, a Democrat, is the official who is representing the United States in Africa. Struelens just doesn't want to get entangled in the complex maze of American politics, for he believes this could do more harm than good for the country he represents.

Getting into the actual interview, Mr. Struelens was questioned more specifically. An evasive answer followed the question of whether or not Tshombe believes in the sincerity of the United States. Struelens explained that although Tshombe does not think we are dishonest, still he questions our motives; the method of U.S. intervention strikes a sour note in Katanga.

Communism is a suspected threat in Africa now that independence has come to such a great portion of the people. Asked if the Congo would resist Communism after U.N. withdrawal, Struelens replied that nothing would actually change. At present there is Communist infiltration, but no great revolution is imminent. The threat is not as major as the United States sees it.

On whether friendly relations would be renewed between Katanga and the intervening countries, Struelens answers that it would take time, for the Katangese strongly resent the foreign interference that has brought about much of the crisis.

The final impression that I received is one of a man who sincerely wants to make a good impression for his country. Struelens is trying to turn public opinion in the United States against the actions of the minority that is intervening in the Congo. There is hypocrisy, he added later, in a country who is fighting for the cause of freedom for Negroes in a foreign land, when it can't insure certain rights for its own Negro citizens. If it were up to this engaging Belgian, the Congolese would soon be able to decide their own future. Unfortunately, though, there just aren't enough Michel Struelens to go around.

A Fable

Burlington Free Press

ONCE UPON A TIME THERE WERE TWO brothers - farmers both - named Elmer and Rockwell. Elmer was a hard worker who spent fourteen hours a day improving his land, and healthy livestock. Rockwell as a bum, who let his fences fall down. His livestock roamed away and his barn burned down.

One day a man with a pocket full of gold came from Washington to buy land. He admired Elmer's beautiful farm, but he bought Rockwell's dilapidated layout because the government was seeking worthless land for a rocket-launching site.

Rockwell took the cash and bought a villa at Monte Carlo where he has a high old time luxuriating in the sun. Elmer still slaves fourteen hours a day on his magnificent farm. He writes to Rockwell faithfully, but Rockwell is too lazy to answer, END OF FABLE.

at home." Jane's education continued and she learned discrimination. She had found her kind of people and began to hang around with them pretty exclusively. Once she had wanted to go out with Wayne, the shy, quiet boy; the one whose smile she had liked. But she was told that he was an "aggy" so they probably wouldn't have had very much in common. She thanked him but told him so. He wasn't really her type of person anyway, but still... he did have such a nice smile.

The black graduation robe draped solemnly over Jane's shoulder. Unlike the rest of the column of girls who, draped also in black, stood awaiting the presentation of their diplomas, Jane was not nervous. She had been fidgety, but now her fingers relaxed and a smile appeared through the powder on her face. She was thinking of the time she had thrown a water bomb at Eddy who had chased her around the block trying desperately to hold on to her pigtail. Suddenly she "snapped to" as the long awaited scroll was placed into her hands. "Congratulations, Mary Jane," said the speaker.... "congratulations."

It appears to me that our peers feel that our university is not on a par with the other schools throughout the country and have, for this reason, refused a good opportunity to give the public at large a clearer picture of our goals here at UVM.

rough and tumble all-out fight involving tossed and broken plates and chairs. The exciting climax of the scene and of the play is certain to evoke the like response of audiences everywhere - thunderous applause.

In one of the two principle roles, Eileen Brennan portrays the Irish hot-tempered but resolute Annie Sullivan, who, in real life at the age of twenty, was hired as seven year old Helen Keller's nurse for twenty five dollars a week. Having already established a name for herself in the theatre, the versatile Miss Brennan is the recipient of the Newspaper Guild Award, the Theatre World Award, and the Obie Award, all three presented to her for a starring role in the musical comedy, "Little Mary Sunshine." At Georgetown University where she worked days and attended classes and drama workshop at night, the drama director recognized her talent and urged Miss Brennan to apply to the American Academy of Dramatic Arts in New York City. She was promptly accepted and roles to follow included "Brigadoon," "A Tree Grows in Brooklyn," and "Plain and Fancy," as well as numerous appearances on television.

Although she's a newcomer to show business, Donna Zimmerman, a sensitive eleven year old admirably handles the role of the young rebellious Helen Keller. Of hundreds of children auditioning for the difficult part, she immediately drew the attention of producer Martin Tahse, director Arthur Penn and author William Gibson. As Mr. Tahse, himself, commended: "Donna's first reading of the part showed such depth and feeling that we all suspected we had witnessed the winner at work." No doubt her excellent performance in "The Miracle Worker" is just the beginning of a prolific career in the theatre for this talented youngster.

Fubini To Speak

The deputy director of the Office of Defense Research and Engineering, Department of Defense, will speak at the University of Vermont on Friday.

Dr. Eugene Fubini will speak on the subject, "Relations Between Thinking and Computers," at 8 p.m. in the Student Lounge of Waterman.

Prior to becoming deputy director, Fubini spent 16 years with the research and systems engineering department of Airborne Instruments Laboratory, a division of Cutler-Hammer, New York.

A native of Italy, Dr. Fubini was a research associate in the Harvard University Radio Research Laboratory during World War II. In this capacity, he participated in the establishment of electronic reconnaissance and jamming capabilities for the invasion of Italy and Southern France. Later, he was in England with the U.S. Eighth Air Force and was in charge of electronic reconnaissance and countermeasures.

In addition to being a former lecturer at Harvard, Fubini is a Fellow of the Institute of Research Engineers.

Catamount Of The Week

The Cynic will spotlight the Catamount of the Week as a regular feature throughout the spring sports campaign. This week the spotlight falls on freshman athlete Jim Brennan. Jim is from Teaneck, N.J. where he was a four-letter performer at St. Cecilia High School. Last year Brennan was an outstanding athlete at Kimball Union Academy in New Hampshire.

At UVM, Brennan has limited himself to only three sports, football, basketball and baseball. He was the undefeated Frosh Football team's passing quarterback and elusive runner extraordinaire. This past basketball season Jim averaged over 16 points per game and was a constant incentive to his teammates with his hustling, hard-driving play. Preparing for the upcoming baseball season right now, he plans to pitch but can play any position on the field well.

Jim is in the College of Technology and is studying to become a CPA. Remember his name for he is sure to be one of the finest all-around athletes Vermont ever produced. Jim can't wait for the new gym to be completed; he would like to try his hand at the new sports instituted by the gym's varied facilities.

Yankee Conference News

KINGSTON... Despite a 36-point spree by Tom "Skip" Chappelle of the University of Maine in the final Yankee Conference appearance of his career, Charlie Lee of the University of Rhode Island hung on to capture the Conference scoring title for the past season, it was announced by the conference publicity office today.

Lee, the deadly side court sniper for the Rams, finished the campaign with 179 points to 177 for Chappelle. The latter, the conference scoring champion for the past two years, missed one game because of an ankle injury, which cost him the chance to become the first player in the history of the conference to win three years in a row. He did post the best average with a percentage of 19.6 points per game as compared with Lee's 17.9.

Rodger Twitchell of the champions from the University of Massachusetts finished third with 169 points, two better than Dave Ricereto of Rhode Island. Bob Bron of New Hampshire and Benny Becton of Vermont tied for fifth with 150 each.

Baseball Team Eyes Title

Labelled Dark Horse

Yankee Conference

Coach Lapointe shouts advice during workout in Cage.

As the snow is slowly melting in Vermont, UVM's baseball forces are preparing to emerge from "the cage" and tear up the turf at Centennial Field to officially welcome spring and the 1962 baseball season. The Cata-mounts began indoor practice three weeks ago under the masterful guidance of Coach Ralph Lapointe. Vermont's game schedule gets underway April 18 with Long Island University as the first game of the famous Southern trip. This year's team was picked as the dark horse contenders for the Yankee Conference title by "Collegiate Baseball". Optimistic Coach Lapointe agrees and says that this year's team should improve on last year's 15-10-1 record. With a well balanced squad that sports speed, versatility, and spirit, this year's squad could be the spoilers in the Conference play, considering that Coach Lapointe has never produced a losing season record in his 11 years at UVM. Chances look very promising in '62.

Among the returning lettermen from last year's team are this year's captain Levi Brown, right-handed fast baller Dick (Dutch) Cassani, and catcher-shortstop Maynard (Duke) Ducatte. All figure prominently in the Cata-mount's plans for a winning year. To add strength to last year's regulars is sophomore Dick Boutillier, to break in at second base; Bob Johnson in the outfield and Bill Rundle or Charlie French behind the plate.

A rundown of the team by positions may give some indication of UVM's versatility. Possibly the strongest spot in number and in talent is the pitching staff. Dick Cassani from Barre will be the leading candidate to see the most action on the mound, because he is one of the best all-around pitchers in New England. His most effective pitch is a blazing fastball that gets by the best batters. Included in his bag of tricks is breaking stuff that really breaks, plus pinpoint control. Cassani is a prime prospect for the major leagues and has already been offered bonuses but declined in favor of continuing his studies. Besides his 6 and 2 record on the mound last season he was the team's only .300 hitter. Next in line for action as a starting pitcher will be Dick DeNicola of Hamden, Conn., who was one of last year's mainstays.

DeNicola, a shifty lefty, really works hard on the mound. He chalked up a 3 and 1 record last season. Sophomores John Babcock of Bayside, N.Y. and Pete Sarno of Peekskill, N.Y. are two excellent prospects up from last year's frosh who figure to take up the slack in the pitching staff left by departed Harry Zingg and Bob Hobbie. Babcock is coming around and should help the team with his sharp breaking stuff. Sarno is not only a fine pitcher but can catch and handle infield positions very aptly. A trio of hurlers from Cheshire, Conn., seniors Ted Jones, Gordon Miller, and Junior Wally Schile, compose a substantial block of pitching talent. To complete the battery, Lapointe has a fine duet of backstops to fill in for last year's catcher, Maynard Ducatte, who may be put at shortstop, Bill Rundle of Durham, Conn., and Charlie French of the Canal Zone.

The first base spot is a battle between two Mikes, Mike Yendrzski of Burlington and Mike Benway of Richmond. Both men are capable fielders and good batters but Yendrzski has had a year's varsity experience while Benway is only a sophomore. Dick Boutillier from Windsor has the keystone sack pretty well wrapped up but the versatility in the field may necessitate some changes. The shortstop position will probably go to Ducatte who is a fine glove man, a fine batter and a smart base runner. But watch for hustling Wayne Van Ham of East Falmouth, Mass., who is only a soph to show his prowess at short. Third base is in the able hands of last year's regular, Joe Pare. Pare of St. Albans, covers the hot corner with the skill of the N.Y. Yankee's Cletis Boyer. The outfield positions are not definitely set yet but as of this writing it looks like Soph Bob Johnson of Barre in right, Bob Sheriff of Needham, Mass. in left, and the team's captain Levi Brown from Stamford, N.Y. in center. Brown is the team's best long ball hitter and a great centerfielder. He covers a lot of ground in the outfield and has a strong arm. At bat he is a constant homerun threat and like Cassani he too is Major League material.

By HOWIE GORNEY

Well, it seems as though a few eyebrows were raised and some hairs stood on end as a result of my little dissertation last week. To speak frankly, I'm glad. Criticism is healthy, especially if constructive. Moreover, I welcome any criticism of my writing -- I use the term loosely. I expected a few fists to be clenched. Last week's article expressed the popular, unwritten, unspoken consensus of opinion which has been floating around the university for many a moon.

Some more things have cropped up. For instance, it seems to me that the Burlington populace has not come of age as of yet. Where I come from, and I assume in the habitats of most other UVM students, high school athletics has always taken a back seat to college sports. In Vermont, however, the situation, as far as basketball is concerned, is just the reverse. Believe me, people, I'm the first to admit that our basketball team is far from the best, but as any UVM student can tell you, it still far outclasses any high school squad in any league. Our ball players are among the best from their respective high schools, and they have been polished by at least a year of varsity competition. Moreover, even if the Burlington fan does not want to see, Becton, Shabel, or Ader, it is strange that he would not want to watch such fine quintets as Maine, Connecticut, or Brandeis opposing our boys. Yet, such is the case.

This unhappy and strange situation is compounded by the fact that UVM does not receive the publicity it deserves. Why, for instance, the day we played Brandeis over Kake Walk, did EVERY radio station in Burlington ignore the contest and broadcast a high school game? Why do the local newspapers give the high schools the bold type and Vermont the corner of the page, I can not answer these questions. Who can?

I fail to comprehend why the basketball enthusiasts around town look a gift horse in the mouth. They pass by some of the best basketball to be seen in New England to watch their neighbor's son miss a wild jump shot and lose the game, 38-36.

Netmen Prep For Rugged Season

After most sportsmen have left the gym for the day, the sky has darkened, and most students have started their studies for the night, the tennis team arrives at the gym for their nightly workout. Hard at work for the past three weeks, the team hopes to better its last year's record of three wins and three losses.

This year's team is coached by Prof. Fred Marston, and captained by returning letterman Bob Katz, class of '62. With six other returning varsity players, two seniors - Joel Efrein and Bernie Lamm, and four juniors - Steve Krintzman, Pete Jellinek, Terry Safford, and Jerry McGee, the team feels confident that they'll again take the Yankee Conference crown for the third straight year.

Bolstered by Steve Ratner and Harry Dickerson from last year's Frosh, the squad has "quality in depth." Last season, captain Ray Kelsey led his team to a fifth place All New England standing. Captain Katz predicts that his "high spirited" club will again take top honors. Playing an eleven match schedule, he hopes to help "maintain the high standard of tennis at UVM."

The Frosh team, as in past years, shows a lot of potential. Led by Jim Freedman and Ron Kessler, and also coached by Prof. Marston, the Frosh are working out with the varsity and are exhibiting a high degree of proficiency. As in season's past, the Frosh should fare very well.

Volleyball Competition Gets Hot

As the initial week of the intramural volleyball season concluded last Thursday, it was clearly visible that there was an almost perfect balance among the participating teams in each league. This even balance has led to intense competition in the games engaged in thus far in the campaign, as the eight teams in each of the three leagues battle each other for the coveted first place position in their own respective divisions. This fierce competition is evidenced by the fact that after only two games of league play only one-third of the teams remain undefeated.

In the fraternity league "A" there is a fierce struggle for the top position between the unbeaten squads of Delta Psi, Theta Chi, and Alpha Epsilon Pi, who all possess identical records of 2-0. However, only one game behind, and still very much in contention are Phi Delta Theta and Acacia, who have split their two games this season. In last place in the division are Kappa Sigma, and Phi Mu Delta with identical ledgers of 0-2.

In the other fraternity league, league "B", first place is shared by the undefeated teams of Phi Sigma Delta and Sigma Phi with records of 2-0. Right behind them are TER, SAE, Sig Ep, and ATO who are 1-1 in the season. In the bottom of this division are located the quintets of AGR and Lambda Iota who have lost both of their contests.

'62 Fine Arts Festival To Sponsor Selections Of Cultural Interest

Ivan Picelj's, "Composition," will be on view during the Fine Arts Festival. (Credit: Bundy Gallery)

The fifth annual UVM Fine Arts Festival will begin on Wednesday, March 28, with the opening of an exhibition on loan from the Bundy Art Gallery which opens this June in Waitsfield, Vt. Asst. Professor Richard H. Janson, Director of the Fleming Museum and Chairman of the Fine Arts Festival Committee described the exhibit as "a top international collection of contemporary abstract painting and sculpture." Among the works represented will be those of Joan Joseph Tharrats (Spanish), Afro Basaldella (Italian), Georges Mathieu (French), and Louise Nevelson (American).

The opening speaker for the exhibition will be Dr. Richard K.B. McLanason, who will speak on "American Art in Moscow." Dr. McLanason is a Harvard Fellow and was curator of the Gallery for American Art at the American National Exhibit in Moscow. The speech will be presented jointly by the Fine Arts Festival and the University Lecture Series at 8:00 P.M. at the Fleming Museum. A reception will follow the talk.

The second event of the festival will be a presentation of the "Threepenny Opera" March 29 through April 1 in the UVM Arena Theater. On Thursday, April 5 at 8:00 P.M. in the museum the Student Association, Scope, will present Mr. Norris Haughton, noted author and lecturer, as well as producer and director of New York's famous Phoenix Theater. Mr. Haughton, who has travelled extensively in Europe and Russia, will speak on "The Theater in Soviet Russia."

The University Orchestra, conducted by Prof. Ippocrates Pappoutsakis, will present a concert for the festival in the Ira Allen Chapel, Sunday, April 8. Featured soloist will be Norma Holmes Auchter, well known concert pianist, now a member of the UVM faculty. The last festival event will be a Scope presentation of three foreign films, on Tuesday, April 10 at 8:00 P.M. Two distinguished films by Oscar Fischinger, "Allegratto" and "Motion Painting Number 10" will be shown. The main feature will be a Russian film of 1928, "Ten Days that Shook the World," the story of the October Revolution of 1917.

Prof. Janson said the purpose of the UVM Fine Arts Festival was, "to encourage an interest in the fine arts on the part of the campus." This year the festival program is shorter with fewer events than in previous years, the idea being to present a more compact and effective program. Although there will be no student art show as usual, there will be one later in the Spring that will last through commencement. Admission to all festival activities, except the "Threepenny Opera," will be free.

Colby, Vermont To Join Music

The bands of the University of Vermont and Colby College will join together for a joint band concert in Ira Allen Chapel on March 24.

Herbert L. Schultz, director of the UVM band, said that this is the first time such a concert has been held at Vermont. He said that in the future he hopes that the UVM band may be able to take part in similar ventures.

The Colby band, under the direction of Kenneth Steward, will arrive on Friday (March 23) and the two bands will rehearse on Saturday morning and afternoon.

The concert is open to the public at no cost and Schultz has invited any Colby alumni in the area to attend.

Vermont Conference Views 'Myopic Man'

Diverse Cultures

This year's Vermont Conference is designed as a study in the limitations of communication. In keeping with this purpose, each of the four speakers will be dealing with some aspect or phase of a modern culture other than his own.

On Wednesday evening Mr. Ihab Hassan presented a lecture entitled "The Face Within: Images of the New Hero in American Literature". This afternoon at 4:10 Jules Feiffer will deliver a talk on "Life and Times in The Funny Papers". After Mr. Oscar Lewis' lecture on "The Culture of Poverty" at 8:00 p.m. this evening, there will be a panel discussion, including all four speakers, held in the Waterman coffee shop. On Friday at 8:00 p.m., Mr. Selig Harrison will speak on "Private Enterprise and the American Image", which will also be followed by a panel discussion.

Moderators for the discussion are Mr. Robert Cochran of the English Department, Mr. Frederick Maher of the Sociology Department, and Mr. William Steele of the Political Science Department.

Members

The officers of the 1962 Conference Committee are: Chairman, Sally Greene, Vice-chairman, Ann Van Gilder; Publicity, Pam Middleton; Secretary, Susan Black; Treasurer, Mark Michelman; Arrangements, Linda Green and Hostess, Juliet Bergan. Faculty advisors are Mr. Paul Aschenbach of the Art Department, Mr. Jim Weaver of the English Department, Mr. Daniel Scheans of the Sociology Department and Mr. Milton Nadworny of the Economics Department.

Debaters Place At Boston U., Seek Regionals

The week-end of March 10th culminated a successful debate year for Marilyn Van Graber and Gil Tornabene. There were teams representing 38 colleges at Boston University for this final debate before the Regionals; UVM placed in the top eight which put them in the quarter finals on to be pushed out of the race by Eastern Nazarene.

A quick review of the 1961-62 season will show just why this is the team to represent UVM this week end at the Regionals. Their busy year began with late registration due to an important debate at Harvard where 102 teams debated in an attempt for first place. In this opening bout, Marilyn and Gil placed among the top 16, losing to Cornell in the octifinals. Two weeks later, after catching their

New Association of Student Guides Acquaints Visitors With Campus

The strength and quality of a good university does not necessarily evolve from the overt power organizations of the campus. There is a base for this strength and quality. Recently a new organization has been born; it has not been publicized and is little known, but forms part of the base that is so important to our University. This is The Student Guide Association.

The organizers and supervisors of The Student Guide Association are Sally Hall, Beverly Hume, and Ronny Guttman, Miss Hall and Miss Hume, both juniors at UVM, unofficially organized a group of their friends to show prospective UVMers around our campus when they came up for interviews. Ronny Guttman, a sophomore and fraternity member of Phi Sigma Delta, took the initiative to make it an official university organization. After much consultation with the Dean of Admissions, the groups' Constitution was finally ratified in late December. The group finally started functioning officially this semester, and so far has had excellent results with a minimum of complications, despite the newness and comparative inexperience of the group as a whole. The main function of the organization, as stated explicitly in the Constitution, and implicitly in the attitude of the group itself, is to guide students around our campus on the day of their interview or at other times, showing them the highlights, the new structures, and other points of interest on our campus. This is to be done with the utmost sincerity and intelligence. The guide is also expected to be able to answer any general questions about the campus or campus life.

The purpose of the tour is to help high school students become more acquainted with our campus, so that if accepted, he will more easily accept us. This is the implicit reason. The explicit reason is, of course, quite obvious. Our campus is quite large, and it is possible for a prospective student to feel very lonely and lost when looking around. But with a guide, this possibility is eliminated, and the student actually feels that he is part of the University.

The tour covers Waterman Building, Science Hall, Lafayette Hall, a Freshman Dorm (the dorm visited being decided according to the sex of the visiting student), and other main structures throughout the University campus. The guide also points out the new Student Center, the expanding Medical School, and other overt expansion programs. If time allows, the prospective UVMer may have the chance to sit in on a university lecture or discussion. The guide spends as much time as possible with the student (between one half and two hours), making him feel as at home as possible, and at the same time always emphasizing the many UVM assets.

The Student Guide Association is an expanding organization. It

Frosh Organize Entire Week End

May 18th and 19th are the days chosen for the Freshmen Week end. Harvey G. Demmler, Vice-President of the Class and Sherman Murphy, '65 commented, "No other class has ever planned an entire week end of this magnitude and, consequently, we shall need the cooperation and support of the other classes in addition to the help from our class. So far we have received enthusiastic responses from the Panhellenic Council, the Buildings and Grounds Department, and the Student Association. We certainly appreciate their worthy suggestions. Carl O. Eycke, Assistant Dean of Men, has already put in a great deal of work in his capacity as advisor to the class." At a joint meeting on March 15th, the Executive Board and Activities Committee of the Class of '65 decided upon the three phases of the week end. There will be a picnic on Friday night, May 18th, behind Lafayette Hall followed by a jazz concert. On

Kinderleinstube Provides "Play" For Youngest Set

by Betty Bergman

Pancakes are made for making as well as for the eating. At least that's what any of UVM's ten youngest students will tell you. On the first floor of Terrill Hall a brightly lit room, equipped with a model kitchen, phonograph, piano, and high heel shoes, is the "Kinderleinstube" of the department of Home Economics. Here ten three-year olds come every week-day morning, and fifteen four year olds in the afternoon for two and a half hours. The Kinderleinstube under the directorship of Mrs. Julie Lepecshkin and the assistance of Mrs. Stephanie Cook is a school for pre-schoolers where "play is a type learning." Here the children of the faculty as well as people of the community are given the opportunity to implement the activities of the home. When this reporter visited the experimental classroom the three-year olds were engaged in making pancakes that they later ate instead of their ordinary juice and cracker break.

According to Dr. Anthony Samenfink, professor of Family Relations and Human Development, the program is "family-centered". "We do not look at the child as if he were in a vacuum." The work is done directly with the family. By giving the child learning experiences that are outside the home, it is hoped that he will be able to play a vital and important role in his home by bringing new experiences to his family.

Each week, one big topic is chosen for examination and experiments as well as trips and stories. The day begins with an orientation period when the children are allowed to choose their own activities and line of play. Chalk, paint, books and blocks are a few of the materials available to them.

The children are also given direction and stimuli in the areas of numbers and words, as well as special concepts. There is no pressure put on the child to learn and develop any faster than he is growing.

In an article that appeared in the Journal of Home Economics, Dr. Samenfink and Mrs. Ruth Kranzler outlined the general purposes of a laboratory pre-

UVM Arena To Host "Threepenny Opera"

Sue Elwood holds the poster she designed for "Threepenny Opera." (Credit: Parks, S.P.S.)

The Threepenny Opera opens in the UVM Arena Theater on Thursday, March 29, and will run through Sunday, April 1st. The designer of our poster is Sue Elwood, a senior in Arts and Sciences.

The first scene of the opera takes place in J.J. Peachum's Beggars Shop. J.J. has organized all the beggars in the city, so that no one can practice the art of begging in the streets without first obtaining a license from him. Before long, however, Mr. Peachum has more to think and worry about than his thriving business; he learns that his daughter, Polly, has eloped with the notorious Mack the Knife. Mack is the leader of a band of criminals, and not at all suitable for the daughter of J.J. Peachum. J.J.'s devious mind devises a plan whereby Jenny, a past girlfriend of Mack's, is induced to betray his hiding place to the police. During the following scenes the plot takes many turns until all is finally resolved in the final scene.

"What is truth?" said one.

Then a few gifted students came to visit him. They were a prepossessing lot—the boys with corduroy jackets and long, shaggy beards; the girls also with corduroy jackets but with beards neatly braided.

"What is truth?" said one. "What is beauty?" said another. "Should a writer live first and write later or should he write and do a little living in his spare time?" said another.

"How do you find happiness—and having found it, how do you get rid of it?" said another.

"Whither are we drifting?" said another.

"I don't know whither you are drifting," said Mr. Sigafos, "but as for me, I am drifting back to Sandusky to pose for the hydrant sculptor."

And back he went, alas, leaving only a fragment of his Youngtown-Akron Turnpike epic to rank with other such uncompleted masterpieces as Schubert's Unfinished Symphony, the Venus de Milo, and Singer's Midgets.

UVM does not need a new student center. UVM does not need a new gymnasium. UVM does not even need the coffee shop. The new library serves all these purposes, and serves them well. It just is not necessary to spend all that extra money to duplicate the excellent facilities we have so recently acquired.

Aren't the beautiful new couches and lounge chairs (so carefully arranged) there, for the purpose of allowing people to congregate to discuss matters of vital importance? Aren't they there to encourage our budding young intellectuals to explore new horizons?

Wasn't the layout planned with those impressive, wide-open spaces for the future installation of basketball courts, volleyball courts, and squash courts? Weren't they? Weren't the shelves left half empty so students could conveniently rest their coffee cups upon them? By the way, why in the world did they ever even bother putting books on those shelves?

This new complex is something we should all be proud of, so why duplicate it? Perhaps, if the new gym really is in our future, as well as a new student center, we could easily convert the "library" to serve a more important function. A giant, glittering, vulgar marquee could always be added; then a doorman, dressed in green and gold, with a statue of Ethan Allen atop his head; next, a turnstile and UVM is in business. Perhaps this great building could be converted into a night spot, one of the greatest night clubs this side of the Winoski River. Or why not blow the massive ornament up? There's a copy of the Cynic in the cornerstone we are interested in recovering.

As this noble institution now exists, it is a worthless, purposeless conglomeration of marble, brick, and concrete. The wind echoes as it hurtles past its sharp corners, and the hollow laughter within resounds among the shallow shelves and reverberates across the expanses of tile.

Students congregate in masses throughout the building; they make any attempt at serious study impossible. There are not enough ashtrays; cigarettes are already being ground into the floor and onto the very precious tables. Slovenly individuals relax while studying, legs crossed upon the tables, shoes off, waving their big toes in the breeze. And someone is wearing the same pair of sock for the sixteenth day running. Possibly, a record of some kind.

Of course it is the students' lack of responsibility which has caused the library to enter such a premature phase of deterioration. Unfortunately, the UVM student thinks of only two things in reference to the library: himself and the present situation. Bearing these two considerations in mind, it is no wonder there is such flagrant abuse of a building we should all be proud to possess. If the present situation remains, within ten years the place will be in shambles, and the administration

Dr. Bond To Visit Science Institute

A University of Vermont zoology professor has been invited to participate in a Summer Institute in Comparative Anatomy at Harvard University.

Dr. Charles F. Bond will attend the institute from July 2 to Aug. 10. It is sponsored by the National Science Foundation in cooperation with the American Society of Zoologists.

Forty teachers of comparative anatomy have been invited to the institute and will be registered as Visiting Scholars. The course is designed to inform the participants of the latest aspects of vertebrate morphology and places special emphasis on paleontology, functional anatomy, and neurology. The faculty of the institute includes some of the foremost men in this field in the United States.

Dr. Bond says that the program will assist him in preparing an advanced course in comparative anatomy which will be offered to advanced undergraduate and graduate students at UVM during the spring term of the 1962-63 academic year.

Dr. Thomas S. Parsons of the University of Toronto is the director of the Summer Institute.

NOTA BENE

Dr. M. Alfred Haynes, director of the Family Care Unit and assistant professor of preventive medicine at UVM, is teaching a UVM Evening Division course in medical self-help, in cooperation with Civil Defense, Health and Medical organizations.

Vermont maple syrup and pancakes will be featured at the University Club meeting on Saturday evening, March 24, at the Waterman Building, UVM, with arrangements by W.A. "Dick" Dodge of the Department of Animal and Dairy Science. Associate Prof. of English Littleton Long will be in charge of the program -- readings of Vermont poetry.

On Friday, March 16, nine members of the Junior Class were honored by initiation into the Ethan Allan Rifles, UVM's Military Honorary Society. These new members are Craig Brodie, Stanley Zielinski, Robert Walsh, Richard Lennón, Paul Naski, Frank Bolden, Frank Amato, John Sakler, and Peter Carr. These new members were selected on the basis of their outstanding military, academic, and university achievements and their ability to uphold the high standards of the society.

Roll up your sleeves and DONATE your blood. The AMERICAN RED CROSS blood drawing will be held in Waterman Student Lounge FRIDAY, APRIL 6.

1) Our goal this year will be 250 pints.
2) Do you know that ALL students in a Vermont University are able to obtain BLOOD free of charge, anywhere in the United States from the Vermont Chapter of the American Red Cross? The Red Cross considers you its responsibility, and you should consider the Red Cross your responsibility. All it wants is a pint of your blood.

The actual drawing of your blood will take just a few minutes, so sign up for an appointment, at a time that is convenient for you. A representative of your living unit, or a Key and Serpent Honorary Society member will be visiting each living unit to sign up donors.

Live up to your RESPONSIBILITY and let us reach and surpass our goal of 250 pints.

The Circular File

by Mike Grossman

I guess everyone has a favorite author; somebody whose works they read and reread and whose every word is savored as a pearl of wisdom. As for me, I consider Jerome David Salinger little lower than the angels. If he didn't create heaven and earth, you can bet your boots he was sent down to supervise... or so I think. Anyway, the republication of one of Salinger's earliest works, Franny and Zooey, has been the top seller for over a month now according to Time magazine. Though Franny and Zooey is not Salinger's best work by any means, it does make good reading and after all... it was written by Salinger. But to get to the point, there is one scene in Franny and Zooey in which Zooey, the protagonist, goes into his dead brother's room in which he finds a bulletin board filled, in no congruous order, with the favorite quotes of his deceased brother. Salinger describes the event like this: "No attempt whatever had been made to assign quotations or authors to categories or groups of any kind. So that to read the quotations from top to bottom, column by column, was rather like walking through an emergency station set up in a flood area, where, for example, Pascal had been unribaldly bedded down with Emily Dickinson, and where, so to speak, Baudelaire's and Thomas a Kempis's toothbrushes were hanging side by side."

For years I too have kept a list of my favorite quotes which I would like to share with you this week. Most of them were collected during my high school years, and are, I'll admit, worthy of a starry-eyed "high school idealist." Now that I'm in college I'm supposed to look back at these quotes with the knowing, condescending, smile of a cynic hardened by years of experience and wordly wisdom. But I can't because some of these quotes are really good and also, because I suppose I'm still a "high school idealist" at heart.

The first quote, one from Thoreau, I dedicate to all "high school idealists":

"If a man does not keep pace with his companions, perhaps it is because he hears a different drummer. Let him step to the music which he hears, however measured or far away."

Next, for all permanent inhabitants of the coffee shop:

"How can one kill time without injuring eternity." (I can't remember who said this.)

And for the ROTC dept.:

"Any fool can make a rule, and every fool will mind it."

On the more serious side are two quotes from the bible, the first one by Christ:

"As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he." and: "If a man is evil to himself, to whom will he be good?"

Or the following from Shakespeare and with a similar theme:

"And this above all, to thine own self be true and it shall follow as the night the day, thou can'st not then be false to any man."

Lastly, I suppose a quote from Salinger himself is in order, and the quote is a favorite among my favorites:

"The mark of the immature man is that he wants to die nobly for a cause, while the mark of the mature man is that he wants to live humbly for one."

The Patriots would rather be dead than Red; the internationalists the reverse. Each group blithely suggests that we bargain away one of our most precious possessions - the first writes off our lives, the second, our freedom - and we as a people have, intellectually at least, hopped on either of two sacrificial blocks.

I shall speak, this week, of these blocks with a personal knowledge - one that I share with all of you -- but I will, hopefully, discuss them with a disinterest (as later I will offer an alternate solution to either of these with, ideally, a high degree of impartiality).

The first is the one which the "patriots" and militarists offer us; on it, if things continue as they have been, shall lie the corpse of humanity, slain with a nuclear axe -- an axe which can deal a blow not fully comprehended by most. In World War II, an estimated nine million people -- soldiers and civilians -- were killed in Eastern Europe. It was a slaughter of catastrophic proportions, a slaughter which staggers one's imagination, paralyzes one's ability to care; it was a slaughter which no one wishes to see repeated, it was a slaughter which pales in the face of one which constantly confronts us. Recently, Herman Kahn, working for the Rand Corporation, published the results of a study which he conducted on the possibility of America's survival of a nuclear war. Mr. Kahn's book spoke of the number of Americans killed by the direct effects of an all-out nuclear attack on this country in terms of one to two hundred millions. It is a number so great that it becomes unreal, a number so great that you, dear reader, as you hear of it now, cannot be aroused to its horror.

You cannot be aroused to its horror any more than you can react fully to the alternative offered us by the second group, the "internationalists" and pacifists. You cannot react to their alternative because you -- if you are like me -- cannot fully imagine it. You cannot imagine the results of an American surrender to a Communist Dictatorship; the crushing of the human spirit which would occur when a small power group controls your wages, plans your every expenditure, assigns to you your living quarters. Who in this land where human rights are taken for granted can really envision a suspension of Law's Due Process, of right of private property, of freedom of expression and thought? Who can picture the rape of Berlin repeated in Chicago, New York, and Los Angeles? I, for one, cannot.

But I do realize that -- like it or not -- we in America are the strongest defenders of a young idea, an idea which I would not like to see die; it is the idea that people have, inherently tied to them as Human Beings, certain rights and dignities which may not be taken from them; the idea which forbids that human life be sacrificed at the whim of a Sumerian priest or human dignity be suspended by a feudal lord on his serf's wedding night; it is an idea that we must protect as a legacy for future generations and one that the second group would toss to the winds; and it is, finally, an idea whose loss we cannot fully appreciate for we have come to take it for granted.

Yes, I think that we Americans are being asked a riddle with no answer by the "Red or Dead" people, a question that thinking men would do well to turn their backs on. But, I would never imply that no such questions are valid, that no basic cold war decisions can be made. I simply feel that to consider seriously the choice that I have been talking about is to already have made a decision -- and a wrong one. For, to embrace to any degree the question of whether it is better to be Red or to be Dead, is to commit ourselves to the fighting of a losing battle, to the stopgap type of struggle which has been proving itself so ineffectual.

If, rather than do this, we were to realize that what is needed is an active constructive policy -- this opposed to a reactive static cold war "battle plan" -- we would be far better off.

To devise this policy, we must first realize that the world is riding the crest of a revolutionary wave started many years ago. (It began in England, in 1215, with the idea that all men of noble

Study Under Ford Grant Completed

The engineering study completed by the consulting firm of Jansky & Bailey of Washington, D.C., under a Ford Foundation grant to the University of Vermont, forms the basis for the University's petition to the Federal Communications Commission seeking reservation of three UHF TV channels for the use of a state-wide educational television network for Vermont.

The petition, approved by the University's Trustees at their February meeting, was filed with the FCC by another consulting firm retained by UVM under the $21,000 developmental grant from the Ford Foundation, the Washington, D.C., law firm of Covington & Burling.

Specifically, the University's petition to the FCC requests the Commission to institute rule-making proceedings looking toward reservation for educational use of presently assigned channels in Rutland and St. Johnsbury, Vt. It also requests the reassignment of two additional channels to be located at Mt. Mansfield and Mt. Ascutney to provide the four UHF channels recommended by the engineering report made by Jansky and Bailey, the engineering firm which also undertook the engineering study for the ETV system recently approved for the State of Maine by the Maine Legislature.

The use of two high power UHF transmitters, two low power transmitters, and the use of some translators will give "reasonable expectation for coverage of 97 percent of Vermont's population," according to the Jansky and Bailey study.

The petition filed with the FCC notes that "the prospect of developing a statewide system of educational television in Vermont has long been of interest to, and has received support from the various education institutions in the state," including the State Department of Education, Middlebury, St. Michael's, Norwich, Castleton, Johnson and Lyndon Colleges, Bennington College, Goddard, Green Mountain College, Vermont College, and the State University College of Education at Plattsburgh, N.Y.

The petition also notes that the Vermont Legislature "has also demonstrated its marked interest in educational television and has established and provided financial support for the Vermont Commission on Educational Television to study this matter, to make recommendations, and to assist in the planning for the establishment of educational television in the state."

"The active interest in and support for educational television in Vermont has arisen," the petition states, "in recognition of the fact that the establishment of a statewide educational service in Vermont is more than a unique opportunity for educational improvement -- that it is a critical necessity in the advancement of educational progress in the state both now and in years to come."

The petition notes "difficulties inherent in the geographical and other characteristics of the state," including Vermont's sparse population with fewer than 41 persons per square mile, and the resulting "decentralized school system" which sees the largest high school in the state with only 939 students (grade 10, 11 and 12) while the smallest enrolls only 17. Median number is 94.

With so many smaller schools and their correspondingly small faculties, it has not proved to be feasible to provide comparable

Thinking Out -- LOUD

by Kim Boriskin

H.L. Mencken - Part II

Turn, now, to politics. Consider, for example, a campaign for the Presidency. Would it be possible to imagine anything more uproariously idiotic -- a deafening, nerve-wracking battle to the death between Tweedledum and Tweedledee, Harlequin and Sganarelle, Gobbó and Dr. Cook -- the unspeakable, with fearful snorts, gradually swallowing the inconceivable? I defy anyone to match it elsewhere on this earth. In other lands, at worse, there are at least intelligible issues, coherent ideas, salient personalities. Somebody says something, and somebody replies. But what did Harding say in 1920? and what did Cox reply? Who was Harding, anyhow, and who was Cox? Here, having a perfected democracy, we lift the whole combat to symbolism, to transcendentalism, to metaphysics. Here we load a pair of palpably tin canons with blank cartridges charged with talcum powder, and so let fly. Here one may howl over the show without any reminder that it is serious, and that some one may be hurt. I hold that this elevation of politics to the plane of undiluted comedy is peculiarly American; that nowhere else on this disreputable ball has the art of the sham-battle been developed to such fineness... Here politics is purged of all menace, all sinister quality, all genuine significance, and stuffed with such gorgeous humors, such inordinate farce that one comes to the end of a campaign with one's ribs loose, and ready for "King Lear," or a hanging, or a course of medical journals. (From Prejudices: Third Series)

Did Tocqueville ever describe a Presidential campaign any better, or even nearly as well? Could Margaret Mead do it? Certainly no politician could. Why, all you have to do is change Harding to Nixon and Cox to Kennedy and you have 1960, except that in 1960 the Democrats won.

Which is just why Mencken stands out of the crowd from Prohibition like Glumdalclifch would have had she ever been in Lilliput. The great masses of people were either getting drunk or tirading against liquor, politicians were busy embezzling or just plain stealing from the Government, and H.L. Mencken was having fun. The populace got very indignant and righteous when the Teapot Dome and all of Harding's other scandals were discovered, but Mencken just laughed merrily away, and with good reason.

What is politics, after all, but capital buffoonery. And politicians are nothing but clowns, unless they happen to be just plain thieves, that is. One of Mencken's pet theories was that this was what was wrong, not with politics, but with what the masses thought of politics. He maintained that if people were only kept constantly aware of the fact that all politicians, except for the occasional rare LaFollette or Grover Cleveland, were charlatans, out to live off the people, we wouldn't get nearly so disillusioned as we do get when scandals were disclosed. It is our credulity that makes us go Republican one year, and Democratic the next; we want a change, and naively believe that the other party has reformed since it was last in power. We soon learn that it hasn't, but maybe the other one has, and the rest is obvious.

He's right, to a large extent. We never will, in all likelihood, get an honest man, a first rate man, in politics on any large scale. People would never vote for him, since an honest man would generally speak the truth about our government, and about the imbeciles that elect it, and that the electorate couldn't take. It is possible to get a topflight, sane, rational, and intelligent man into office on the local, and even State level, if only by force of personality. Mencken maintained that it was impossible to do it that way nationally, but he was wrong (No, I don't consider him infallible, nor did he). He had never heard of television, and couldn't have predicted it, when he stated that it was impossible to use personality on the national level. But what have the last two Presidential campaigns been, and even the one in 1952, if not personality battles? Were there any real issues in 1960 that the candidates didn't agree fairly closely on? Were there any real issues at all, for that matter? All it was, was Senator Jack, young, handsome, dynamic, versus the New Nixon, the poor-little-boy-eating-humble-origins-pie, and Pat For First Lady. And after the election we were all playing a new game: Mandate, Mandate, Who's Got The Mandate? It was, truly, the most "uproariously idiotic" spectacle on earth. But I digress.

So we're stuck with a spectator sport for a government. There was no better commentator on that sport than H.L. Mencken. He made more sense out of the apparent nonsense of Washington than any "Washington Correspondent" ever could. And he possessed a sense that no one else in politics has had for a many a year; Mencken had a beautiful wit. Many have had senses of humor, but few, if any, have had any wit, but Mencken had enough for all of them. No one has ever commented on the nature of American politics, or the America of Prohibition, like H.L.M. Reading him, keeping always in mind the period when he wrote, and one or two shortcomings, is almost like a revelation. It is sometimes astounding what he can say about a subject to full of hot air as politics, and how he can say it in so few words.

A statewide ETV system could do a great deal to alleviate and to remedy many present handicaps, according to the petition.

Referring to the time given for educational purposes, by Vermont's only television station, WCAX-TV, the petition acknowledges that "a good start has been made in the development of educational television in Vermont."

To carry on the broadened work recommended for ETV in Vermont, the petition asks that Vermont be given a second television facility - the four channel UHF system recommended by the engineering firm of Jansky & Bailey.

Prof. William J. Lewis, director of the ETV project for Vermont, said he could not predict when the FCC might be expected to take action on the Vermont petition, but said that "everyone connected with or interested in educational television has been most encouraged by the strong endorsement given for ETV by FCC chairman Newton Minow."

ate it. However, make sure that you don't exert yourself in this way when the other team is scoring.

If you don't like that idea, try this one. Instead of organizing fraternity-sorority blocs for freshman orientation committee (Cf. Editor's Scrapbook, Cynic, March 15, 1962), why not form blocs for attendance of baseball games? For instance, Tuesday's game would be attended by Bloc number 1, Thursday's contest, would go to Bloc number 2, and Friday and Saturday's week end series would be seen by Bloc number 3. Each bloc would be about 300 students, adequate for the support of our team.

While these plans go into effect, I will be hard at work with the administration setting up a new course: School Spirit 1 and 2, taught by Charlie Catamount and the cheerleaders. For those who are wondering, it will be a dash course, so sign up as soon as you can. In the meantime, put a little fun in your life--try a baseball game.

I am the brother of a girl in the hospital with lacerations and Santa suit poisoning; and the son of a woman up on a hit-and-run charge, and a man in a World War I PFC's uniform. You seem to help so many others, perhaps you can tell me how I can cope with a family like this?

wind, they were off again, but this journey was to Hanover. Here they again displayed their abilities by winning five out of eight debates.

Their "highest" achievement of the year took place on Capitol Hill in Washington, D.C., where they missed top honors by a single place; but the mere fact that the finals were held in the Senate Caucus Room with Congressmen judging helped ease the pain.

Boston University was the site of their next match; but this week end marks the annual Regional debates, to be held this season in Burlington. The country is divided into eight sections, from which only five teams from each will qualify for the National Debates at West Point. This region consists of twenty-five colleges from New England and New York State.

Last year Marilyn Van Graber and Charlie Tierney placed fifth in the Regionals, going on to place ninth in the Nation. With one veteran and two experienced debaters, we may exceed a former record in 1962.

LESSON 4 - Why men watch girls

Men watch girls for various reasons. Personally, we need no better reason than the reason men climb mountains. They are there. We have heard old men say they watch girls because it makes them feel younger and young men because it makes them feel older (see above). While investigating the reasons why men watch girls we picked up a clue from, of all things, a bird watcher. He told us that he formerly had been a flower watcher. Then one day a Speckle-Breasted Jackdaw happened to land in his garden as he was watching a calla lily and he noticed that the bird moved. He switched to birds on the spot. Girl watchers have discovered that girls enjoy this same advantage (movement) over calla lilies. (Speaking of advantages, how about Pall Mall's natural mildness?)

Saturday afternoon the unique feature of the entire week end will take place. This will be a carnival to be held in the men's gym. It will be set up in this fashion:

Each of the seven sorority pledge classes will work on a booth with seven of the sixteen fraternities. The nine fraternities not drawn will pair off among themselves and with the independent groups. In this way, approximately twelve booths will be created. Tickets sold by the freshmen class will be honored at all the booths and will cost a maximum of ten cents. Two thirds of the proceeds of each booth will be assumed by the class. The rest will go to those running the booth. In addition, a prize will be awarded to the booth with the highest monetary sum in terms of its tickets at the close of the carnival.

Saturday night there will be an informal dance on the girls' tennis courts behind Southwick Gymnasium. The men will be allowed to wear burmudas and sneakers with their jackets and ties.

The Freshmen Week-end will need two over-all co-chairmen, (one boy and one girl) and co-chairmen (also a boy and a girl) for each of the three activities of the week end. There will be a class meeting at four o'clock on Friday, March 23rd in the Student Lounge of Waterman for the purpose of explaining the duties of these chairmen and of answering any questions which students may have concerning the week end. On the following Saturday at one o'clock, interviews will be held to determine the chairmen for the affair. These interviews will be conducted by the Executive Board.

If the students cannot undertake the responsibility of using the library correctly, then sadly, but realistically, it becomes the duty of the staff to keep order, silence, and neatness foremost in the students' minds.

A little sign like "No Talking" will work wonders. A short walk through the library by a librarian will quiet a few noisy souls and send the misguided slob back to their books. It is a sad fact, but a true one, that action should, and must be taken by the library staff to compensate for the immaturity of the students.

blood are born equal, and its end is not in sight). We must ride this wave, aid this desirable revolution.

There are, of course, many obstacles in our way, and the plans we must adopt are many and complex. But if you will forgive my grave oversimplification, I will point out a few concrete steps that could be taken in this direction.

These would include such things as Kennedy's Alliance for Progress — which seems to be aimed at aiding responsible revolutionary governments; as Americans making the sophisticated realization that helping the poorer nations to set up the socialist economies that many of them need can be done without abandoning the ideals of free enterprise; as our aiding true revolutions wherever possible even at the expense of such allies as Strossner of Paraguay and Salazar of Portugal; and as our having the courage to thwart such perversions of the true revolution as the one that has occurred in Cuba under Castro.

In short, we must abandon the irresponsible and simple solutions of those who would ignore the new world completely as well as of those who would have us fighting a lost cold war, and — corny as it sounds — we must accept the, perhaps unwanted, responsibilities which face us as a leader in a present, and thrilling, new age. An age which is moving forward whether we consent to join it or not.

"As I look back, graduating from college in the depth of the depression was a blessing in disguise. It was difficult to get a job, and even more difficult to hold it. It proved to me early in life that to succeed in business requires constant struggle.

"I found that the truly successful individual never stops learning, that a formal college education is the foundation on which we continue to build the knowledge and experience required to get ahead.

"Even in today's age of specialization, a man eventually reaches a point where breadth of knowledge is necessary. The engineer must understand accounting and marketing. The marketing man must know his product. The financial man must be sympathetic to engineering development and sales programs. Management must have a working knowledge of all phases of the complex and highly competitive business world.

"Therefore, even though specializing, a student should make his college curriculum as broad as possible, and diversify his outside activities. Authoritative surveys have shown that only a small percentage of individuals end up in the field in which they specialized in college.

"Widen your world. Broaden your interests right now. Since graduation from college I've discovered that those who are really succeeding today are the ones who do more and keep on learning from what they do. The broader your college interests are now — the steadier your ladder of success tomorrow!"

UVM Skier Aims For NCAA Crown

Bob Lutz To Compete At Squaw Valley

Robert D. Lutz, captain of the UVM ski team, will represent Vermont at the NCAA National Ski Championships currently being held at Squaw Valley, California. Lutz earned the right to compete with the nation's best skiers by winning the one mile downhill race at Norwich during the U.S. Eastern Intercollegiate Ski Meet. He was timed in 1:19.1, four-tenths of a second faster than Dartmouth's Bob Hiller. Robert Stewart, assistant coach of the ski team, accompanied Lutz to Squaw Valley when they left last week by jet.

Lutz is 5-9, weighs 149 pounds, and hails from High Point, N.C. Although he now calls North Carolina his home, he was born in Manistee, Michigan, where his skiing career began. Bob chose the University of Vermont expressly for the excellent ski areas found in the Green Mountain State.

Planning to compete in the downhill and slalom races, Bob has spent the past week conditioning himself for the two events and getting accustomed to the courses in the West, which are generally longer than those in the East.

Bob has improved steadily this season. In his first outing he finished in sixteenth place at the Dartmouth Winter Carnival. At the Middlebury Carnival, he placed fifth. Then, at Norwich, he streaked home first out of a field of nearly 30 top skiers from the college ranks. Vermont as a team was third in the Eastern Championship meet, which was won by a strong Dartmouth club. Dartmouth was selected to represent the East at Squaw Valley.

Bob is hoping to finish in the top ten. A good showing will not only help him gather points toward his Class "A" rating (he is currently a Class "B" skier), but also give Vermont the national prominence which it badly needs to gain the status of being one of the best skiing colleges in the country. Lutz will be in a field of approximately 100 of the top intercollegiate skiers in the NCAA.

SPORTING OPINIONS

By HOWIE GORNEY

One bright spring day in my freshman year, I decided to attend a UVM baseball game and wended my way toward Centennial Field. Naturally, being a lowly freshman, newly arrived at the crossroads of higher education, I lost my bearings and stopped to ask directions of a rather elderly gentleman who was sitting motionless in front of his house basking in the warm rays of the sun. In typical "Down East" fashion, he said, "well, sonny, as the crow flies, it's about 300 yards past Murphy's barn right after you pass Miler's haystack." Hopelessly confused, I let my sense of direction lead me over hill and dale until I saw in the distance the pavillion of the field.

As I approached the stands, my heart sank. I knew the game was well under way; therefore, the silence from the fans could only mean that we were losing by at least seven runs. However, when I reached the stands, I realized the reason for the lack of noise. A cricket in a thunder shower could have made more clamor than the people at that game for I could have counted the attendance on my fingers and toes.

Will such be the case this year? It escapes me why you students shun UVM's version of our national pastime. Is it because our baseball team doesn't win ball games? I think not, for the Vermont nine hasn't had a losing season since Julius Caesar was a Cub Scout. Is it because they are ill-coached? Again I say nay. The coaching prowess of Ralph Lapointe, mentor of the Catamounts, is something to behold. A coach must realize that the men under his authority are not machines while he assumes the roles of part-time psychologist, psychiatrist, and firm handed ruler. Ralph excels at each and every one of these tasks.

By the process of elimination, the reader has probably deduced that the only reason the attendance at baseball games is as sparse as hen's teeth is downright lack of interest on the part of the student body. Moreover, he undoubtedly thinks that this will be just another barrel of garbage reprimanding the UVM family for its lack of support.

But wait, dear reader, I do not plan to scold. Realizing the burden placed upon you if you wish to support our teams, I have conjured up some suggestions which can make attending a Vermont baseball game pleasurable—even fun! For example, when you plan to soak up the sun, what better place is there to do it (besides North Beach) than Centennial Field? You can just lie there in the bleachers and take in the gamma rays. Occasionally, it might be nice to give out with a "yeah," a "rah," or, if you feel overly enthusiastic, a "go, Vermont." I'm sure that Ralph and his men will appreciate

Bob Katz Is Catamount Of The Week

This issue of the Cynic salutes Bob Katz, Catamount of the Week. Bob is from Easton, Conn., and attended Tilton Prep, Tilton, N.H. At prep school, he participated in basketball, soccer and tennis. In soccer, he was an All-New England goalie and in tennis was Lake's Region singles and doubles champion. At college, Bob has continued his fine work in tennis.

As captain of the team, Katz has helped it to become the most successful squad in intercollegiate competition at UVM. Playing a steady, defensive game, with a blazing serve and a variety of placement shots, Bob waits for his opponent to falter and then moves in for the kill. His adversaries literally are worn down by unrelenting pressure and superior play.

The team as a whole is rated a strong candidate for Yankee Conference honors. Bob holds out much hope for the crown as the team was fifth in all of New England last season. With the new Gym, Katz feels, the team should really grow in stature and perhaps qualify for "Ivy-League" competition. New courts with automatic "ball-boys" will prove of great help to the squad.

Bob, a senior, is a brother of Alpha Epsilon Pi Fraternity and is enrolled in the College of Arts and Sciences. A psychology major, he hopes to attend graduate school for a doctorate in clinical psychology. Just recently engaged, Bob plans to be married sometime in December of this year.

Prof. Fred Marston, coach of the team, the other members of the squad and all UVM are relying on their ace netman to bring in the needed victories for the Conference title.

Football Notice

All candidates for the 1962 Football Team will meet with Coach Clifford on April 3rd at 7:00 PM.

The meeting will be held in Room 104 Old Mill. At that time Coach Clifford will outline his plans for the Spring drills.

Early plans call for 6:30 sessions in the Cage. Later, weather permitting, the drills will be conducted at Centennial Field.

All-Yankon Team Picked

Ader Makes Second Squad

KINGSTON, March 19 --- Tom "Skip" Chappelle of the University of Maine has become the fourth player in Yankee Conference history to be named to the league's first team three years in a row. It was announced when the conference team as selected by a vote of the coaches was released today. Two players from Massachusetts and Connecticut also were selected.

The classy sharpshooter from Old Town joins Fred Congleton, (Rhode Island, 1951-53); Art Quimby, (Connecticut, 1953-55), and Clyde Lord, (Vermont, 1957-59). In the group selected for three successive years.

Probably the greatest player to wear the spangles of the Black Bears from Orono, Chappelle led the conference in scoring during his sophomore and junior years, but failed by two points to repeat this season. An ankle injury forced him to miss one league encounter and thus the scoring title, although he did post the best average for the third time.

Gary Koenig, the hard-working captain and pivot man of the University of Rhode Island, was the only other repeater from last year's team. Koenig, a 6-5 senior from Paramus, N.J., is the only selectee who could be classified as a non-scorer but the blond rebounder was a demon off the boards and his overall play was invaluable to the Rams. Usually forced to give away height to opposing centers, Koenig set a new school record for rebounding this year.

Rodger Twitchell, a 6-5 sophomore, who paced the University of Massachusetts to its first conference championship; Lenny Carlson, scrappy backcourt man from Connecticut, and Charlie Lee, Rhode Island junior and leading scorer in the conference, were other first team selections.

MSGA Forms; Dictates Men

We, the men students of the University of the great and glorious State of Vermont hereby promise to do each daily deed with honor

Thus begins the honor promise of the proposed MSGA (use your imagination on this one). In its final approved form the MSGA will have the authority to keep our men students out of trouble, thus protecting them from the grave evils which now exist. No longer will Johnny Freshman have to go home after a week of school because he is physically exhausted from watching the windows at the girls dorms every night; no longer will the Vermont male be in danger of intoxication which keeps him from doing his best work. No, at last a savior has come to UVM.

Despite the cries of paternalism which go up at the mention of the new organization, it is evident that this is the best innovation since prohibition of liquor on campus. After all, what better way to follow the "straight and narrow" than to have your own governing body do your thinking for you. It won't be necessary to have your own morals for as you move into the new men's residence halls you will acquire a ready-made set. And think of the justice which will prevail. Supposing some tough guy smashes in your door. Under the old rule you would go smash his door, but now you just have him report himself to the floor president and justice will be done. Or perhaps there is some girl who has been desperately trying to call you for a date. (They don't have curfews anymore. They have achieved freedom.) Perhaps this girl does call you. With the new system you can't miss the call because the men will have to be in before the time that the phones go off. Think how your social life will fare! Take another example. If you want to go away overnight or if you should go skiing, think of the peace of mind you can have knowing that your whereabouts are known because you signed out on a nectarine card. If you don't return and something has gone awry, the University will then know where you are and can help in any unfortunate situation.

These are just a few of the good points in the new MSGA system. But, many are its wonders.

Fey Loses Tooth

Pandemonium broke loose in the hallowed halls of UVM last Sunday when students heard a rumor confirmed that "Smiling Jack" Fey, their unaccustomed - to - public - speaking president had lost a tooth in a minor skiing accident. The Public Relations office immediately put a clamp on all publicity to hush the incident for fear that enrollment would decline, but they were unable to control the hysterical co-eds on the Toll House Slope at Stowe where the accident occurred. Many of the admiring girls attempted to grab the tooth as a souvenir.

"I thought it would make a lovely addition to my charm bracelet, if ya know what I mean," said Harriet Colleg, a husbandry major from Forest Hills, New York.

The accident happened at approximately 4:00 as the beloved Fey was traversing the slope on his way down. At that moment a ski patrolman was wending his way uphill, snowplowing at a rate of 35 mph. Blinded momentarily by the ill-fated tooth he lost control and headed straight into the President. Fortunately the tooth is a minor bicuspid, and although the good Doctor's smile will not be as wide, it will no doubt be as warm as ever.

On his return to Burlington, well-wishers lined the streets in the largest reception Fey has had since his return during last year's "Stop and Go" campaign.

New West Hall To Grace UVM Campus, Adds To Vermont's Expansion Program

Good news for all youse undergrads. Boy, this year our expansion program is really expanding. You know, like, the med school and the new library. Well, at present, there is still another great building appearing over the skyline at UVM. It is to be called West Hall and is a sequel to the ever popular East Hall which was demolished last week when some ROTC guy gave the wrong command and 200 wide-eyed Freshmen marched over this landmark of our almer mater. Anyhow, the administration, wanting to please everybody, just started to build this neat edifice and marvel of modern architecture.

The exact purpose of the new building is not known but since we are ever expanding it's pretty sure that some use can be found. Some people have been suggesting a Bailey to West move, whereby every student will grab a book off the shelves at Bailey and see who can get to West Hall first, and in the least chronological order. It certainly promises to be fun. Perhaps this annual building moving will become a part of UVM and each Spring the students can choose a different building to move to the next one. But, not to digress, this new West Hall is tops. Just wait you lucky undergrads. No more pre-enrollment; there'll be sectioning, and you will be able to buy rheals at a small cafeteria provided for your comfort. For those who expect to take a long time in registering there will be meal contracts which run on a weekly basis. Amidst all this luxury, don't you kids forget about the educational possibilities of West Hall. The Arts and Crafts classes can take it apart and put it together as a project; the course in architecture can use this as a living example of contemporary American colonial reject style. But many and wondrous are its uses. Just remember, progress is our most important product ... Not students, just progress.

Coolidge Hall Girls Battle It Out In Game

On Wednesday night the ferocious volleyball team from Coolidge played an exciting game. From the first serve, the spectators, all three of them, knew that the game was not to be a usual one. As the first server struck the ball, one of the opponents yelled, "Foot fault!" A scuffle under the net ensued. The case was referred to the referee, but as there was none, one black eye and two bloody noses decided the issue. Coolidge retained the ball and went on to score five straight points. The serve was lost when the ball miraculously sailed over the net onto the opponent's side of the court.

Three serves later, each one hitting the ceiling and rebounding back into the server's hands; Coolidge again captured the ball by one of its members running over to the other side of the court and catching the ball before the other team could shout, "Line fault!" One player forgot that it was volleyball, and not football, and tried to tackle her. Unfortunately she had three front teeth knocked out by a misplaced heel.

The Coolidge girls never gave up the serve again. They went on to win fifteen to nothing as they refused to recognize the three points scored by the other team.

This game was not recorded officially with W.R.A., so one of the hardest fought battles will not be preserved for posterity. The reason why it was not recorded is because the opponents were the other half of the Coolidge team. The real opponents never showed up.

About This Cover

Isn't it great to look outside on a world of falling snow and be able to smile - even though the guy on the morning news has just told you that each tiny delicate flake of whiteness contains thirty-two times the radioactivity of its 1960 forerunner!

Isn't it great that we, the Vermont Cynic, can take time out from the usual depressingly dull news to laugh at everyone - and laugh and laugh and laugh! Isn't it wonderful?

And why not laugh. This is America. This should be the land of laughter. Why let every little world problem bother us. We're out of danger. There are no armed rebels shooting up the highways and byways from Route 66 to the Sunset Strip; no plague has reached our old cotton fields at home. We see the solution to world harmony in laughter! Let us all join hands as we fall down hysterically into our prefabricated, duplex air-raid shelters. No enemy bombers will ever penetrate our invisible shield of laughter. And if the rest of the world sees what a sense of humor we have, they'll just leave us alone and perhaps, in time, forget about any kind of antagonism.

So why bother to read news in newspapers. Let's censor serious topics as we now censor French movies. Don't let the new generations realize what's going on in the world. They might want to do something about it, and this could only lead to their being called communists. No, let's laugh. It's easier than taking on responsibility. And in time other papers will follow the president of the Cynic.

Last Red Lane Series To Feature Violinist Nathan Milstein

As a splendid finish this year, the Red Lane Series will present the world-renown violinist, Nathan Milstein, on Tuesday, April 3, 1962 at 8:30 P.M. in Memorial Auditorium. A truly great artist, Mr. Milstein will be the third distinguished violinist to appear in the UVM Lane Series; his predecessors were the equally incomparable Isaac Stern and Zino Francescotti. Mr. Milstein's appearance in Burlington will be one of the fifty in the thirty North American cities he has been touring during 1961-62 under the auspices of S. Hurok.

Beginning his career at nineteen in his native Russia, Nathan Milstein toured extensively, with another young musician also fated for fame, the pianist Vladimir Horowitz. In 1925, Mr. Milstein found immediate and decisive triumph in Paris, Spain, and other European music centers. By the time he arrived in the United States in 1929 his European reputation had already been established. Curtain Rises Tonight On Fine Arts Festival

Tonight at 8:30 p.m. the Arena Theater will be transformed into nineteenth century London when the University of Vermont Departments of Music and Drama present "Threepenny Opera." This production, part of the University of Vermont's Fine Arts Festival, will run March 29 through April 1. The admission price is $1.50.

The UVM performance of the opera is the first to be given in drama form by a college. The show recently completed a record eight-year engagement in New York City. "Threepenny Opera" was adapted from "The Beggar's Opera", a popular comedy written in 1728 by John Gay, by Bert Brecht and Kurt Weill for the Berlin Theatre during the 1920's. The English translation, used in this performance, was made by Marc Blitzstein.

For the past month the participants have been rehearsing under the direction of Mr. Edward Fiedner of the Drama Department and Dr. Frank Lidral of the Music Department. At recent rehearsals there has been an air of excitement as opening night draws nearer. Everyone is actively perfecting their parts. Actors are rehearsing their speeches and songs; the band is playing the lively, catchy tunes of the show; props are carried on and off the stage while various lighting effects are being tried. At first glance all this activity might seem (to the outsider) to lead to confusion. However, it doesn't. At the start of the rehearsal of a particular scene all noise ceases. Props are placed on the stage; the actors in the scene take their entrance positions. The scene begins. The lines are acted out, and the songs sung. The only interruptions in the action of the play are instructions made by the directors.

The stage for this production of "Threepenny Opera" is constructed of platforms of various heights placed in the center of the arena stage. One section of seats has been omitted to allow for a ramp leading from the stage to the backstage area.

Mr. Bob Ackley of the Speech Department supervises the scenery. Lighting is under the direction of Helen Lytle, '63 of Thomaston, Conn. Grace Waldo, '63 of Randolph Center, is in charge of costumes. Stage Manager is Judith Pillsbury, '63; assistant stage manager is Joan Chicoine, '62. Jacquelyn Prouty, '62 of St. Albans, is business manager, and Elizabeth Soule, '62 of Burlington, is assistant business manager.

If the hard work, conscientiousness, and enthusiasm which are evident at the rehearsals are any indication of a successful performance, the presentation of Brecht and Weill's "Threepenny Opera" by the UVM Department of Music and Drama, is bound to be a "hit" with University playgoers this coming weekend.

Julliard String Quartet Spotlighted On Chamber Series

It is with great pride that the Lane, Chamber Arts Series will present the Julliard String Quartet Friday, March 30th at 8:30 P.M. in the Ira Allen Chapel. Having previously performed in Burlington, the Quartet appeared with the Pearl Lang Dance Company on March 7, 1956 -- the first Lane Series.

Ample proof of the formidable quality of the Julliard Quartet may be easily seen. Not restricting itself to any particular composers, period or style, the versatile group has mastered a comparatively large and diversified repertoire including the works of the classical composers, the twentieth century European masters as well as noted American composers. Two distinctive honors have recently enhanced the Quartet's reputation. In October, 1961, as the very first American string quartet, the Julliard performed in various Russian cities, and enjoyed a "spectacular success." In addition, just a short while ago, the group was chosen to succeed the Budapest Quartet as ensemble-in-residence at the Library of Congress. A permanent position, the appointment involves the playing of the priceless Stradivarius instruments of the Gertrude Clarke

Whittall collection in numerous concerts.

The Quartet, itself, is comprised of Robert Mann and Isidore Cohen, violinists; Raphael Hillyer, violist; and Claus Adam, cellist. For the program this Friday evening they will entertain us with the following compositions: Mozart's Quartet in C major, K. 465 ("Dissonant"); Bartok's Fifth Quartet (1934); and Beethoven's Quartet in E minor, Opus 59, No. 2.

Priced at $1.50, tickets are as yet available in Bailey's Music Room, 142 Waterman and at the door.

Key And Serpent Amends Constitution

Key and Serpent, the Junior Men's Honorary announces a change in its constitution regarding selection of members. At a meeting held earlier this month the following change in the Society's constitution concerning selection was adopted: Article 3, Section 5, "Prospective members must submit in letter form, their qualifications and reasons for desiring membership in the society." Sections 3 and 4 of Article 3 read as follows: "Selection of members should take into account the following qualifications: At least 75 average (previous semester or cumulative), creative initiative and ability for college betterment, attitude toward school, general feeling toward others, sincerity, and willingness to assume responsibilities."

In this manner each Sophomore man, seeking membership, will submit a letter stating his qualifications. We feel that this system of selection will be fair to both the applicant and the present members. Letters should be sent to Paul Chervin, President, Key and Serpent c/o COSA office, Room 46 Waterman and must be received by April 3rd.

Dr. Daniels Participates In Discussion On Communism

A University of Vermont history professor is one of nine writers to discuss the apparent conflict between Communist China and Russia for a special symposium in the current issue of "The New Leader," a bi-weekly magazine of news and opinion.

Dr. Robert Daniels who has written several books on Communism, his latest being The Nature of Communism which has received rave reviews, discusses some of the behind-the-scenes changes that have taken place in the past decade between Russia and Communist China, causing strained relations between the two.

Daniels says that as long as Stalin lived, there was no substantial Chinese challenge to his political doctrines but upon his death in 1953 and the delayed execution of his ghost in 1956 the system of traditional ideological discipline on which Soviet hegemony had been based was shattered. In addition, Daniels says, the image of Soviet control over all foreign Communist parties was also severely shaken.

Foreign policy differences and the rivalry between Moscow and Peking for influence elsewhere in the Communist bloc only hastened the trend toward mutual doctrinal repudiation. Bipolarity of power has created a permanent division of doctrinal authority, according to Daniels, and he says that no foreseeable change in either country can alter this fact. He points to the Albanian dispute as an example of this conflict.

Two questions yet to be answered, says Daniels, are what degree of cooperation the Soviets and Chinese will maintain and the amount of influence that Russia will have over lesser Communist countries and non-ruling Communist parties.

"If the Soviets are to avoid a complete doctrinal and political break with the Chinese that is, the splitting of the Communist movement into two antithetical and mutually exclusive kinds of Communism -- they will have to admit the validity of various national interpretations of doctrine," says Daniels. "They will have to acknowledge, in fact, that Marxist-Leninist doctrine is not a definitive absolute truth, but only a starting point subject to varying emendations, none of which is binding on the whole movement."

He goes on to say that if the Russians admit this, they will abandon the basic doctrinal discipline which has always distinguished the movement, and that it will prove increasingly difficult to keep the East European satellites and the non-ruling Communist parties in line either ideologically or tactically.

Further, the sacrifice of doctrinal absolutism would open Pandora's Box of individual rights to question and interpret doctrine, possibly even within the Soviet Union itself.

"The alternative," says Daniels, "which is much more in character, is the reassertion of Soviet infallibility over all the Communist parties which will recognize it, and the repudiation of the Chinese and any others as heretics."

Opinions Please

by Betty Bergman

A question under discussion for the last couple of weeks has been concerned with library fees.

The following question was asked: UVM students are now required to pay $30 per year for year of the library. Do you feel that this is justifiable considering that people outside the university may use the same facilities without an imposed fee? If not, what proposals would you make?

Dr. Betty Bandel, professor of English - "No, I do not feel that it is justifiable. In principle, every user of the library should share the costs. I hope, however, that faculty members and visiting scholars would justify receiving free access to the library collections by the scholarship which should result from their research. I would think that any workable plan for sharing costs would have to be devised by the library staff which is familiar with all the problems involved."

Ann Josselyn, '63 - "Each non-UVM student should have a membership card of no less than $5 a semester. If any book needed by a UVM student has been taken

What Does Pan Hel Do?

What does Panhellenic Council do? Why is it on campus? Where is it operating? Because these are questions that float by occasionally, here is one concrete answer. Every year the Council takes on some local philanthropic project, be it helping the Red Cross blood bank, the Girl Scout Troops, or the WMCA. In this way the sororities, through the Council, can give something of value to the people of Burlington.

This year, after hearing of the numerous facilities needed by the New School for Mentally Retarded Children, the girls decided to use their efforts in that worthy direction. Although the section of the school for educable children is state supported, the classroom for trainable youngsters -- being the only one of its kind in Vermont -- is maintained through private donations. Consequently, this class runs on the bare essentials. New toys, new books, or new flash cards would make it much easier for these children to learn about the world around them.

It is felt that it would be most useful to collect the funds letting the school spend the money where they saw fit. Council raised their donation through a collection at the Kake Walk basketball game and a homemade cookie sale in Waterman. This being the last project or contribution of the old Council; the new Council would like to take this opportunity to thank them for all their work.

Thinking Out -- LOUD

by Kim Boriakki

THE GRAND INQUISITOR - PART I

About a month ago the film "Operation Abolition" was shown here. From all the conversations I overheard, one would think that at least three-fourths of the student body was going to be there. Typically enough, there were not more than 250 people there. If that many. But this is irrelevant, except that those who didn't see the film missed a good lesson in concentrated propaganda.

You could tell immediately what the rest of the film was going to be like. The narrator was Fulton Lewis, Jr. (Fulton Lewis, Sr., is the only person in modern times that I can think of who has apparently founded a dynasty. It's a dynasty we could just as well do without, but a dynasty nonetheless.) Sure enough, there came Representative Francis E. Walter, Professional Patriot, and chairman of the House Commission on Un-American Activities. He looked and spoke like an acute dyspeptic. Next was Congressman Willis, the man who presided over the hearings of HUAC in San Francisco. He sounded angry at someone, and as if he was after someone's scalp. The final speaker's name I forget, but the impression he made upon me still holds. At first glance, the man's face looked a little like Napoleon's, Napoleon being the dictator in Animal Farm. I soon revised my impression, though; the Congressman had a moustache. Anyhow, it all added up to great public relations.

President Martin of WCAX was the man who defended the film, although Dr. Chaplin had no trouble disposing of Mr. Martin's rather feeble arguments. One of the big points made about the film was that the events shown were out of order, that the first day's events were reported as happening on the third day, and so forth. Mr. Martin contended that this was irrelevant, because the film recorded events that did happen at one time or another during the hearings. His position is untenable, but nobody seemed to be able to formulate any coherent argument showing why.

Let us first assume that the film was intentionally edited out of order. Then, being in the Congressional Record as evidence and testimony presented to the House, every one in the House who subscribes to the validity of the film is guilty of perjury, as it is doubly - HUAC, since it was HUAC that presented it as testimony. Any evidence or testimony presented to Congress or a court of "law" that is intentionally falsified is perjury, by definition. Almost every one of your elected Representatives, readers, is a perjurer. Comforting thought to know who makes your laws, isn't it?

Well, let's give Congress a bit more credit than that, and assume that the film was not intentionally faked. Then there was obviously a lousy editing job done by the film company responsible for the movie. And that is such a simple job for a decent film editor these days that a company that can't do it right is obviously grossly incompetent. And I submit that such incompetent evidence should not be used as testimony before Congress, or anywhere, for that matter. Any Congressman who believes that the film is valid evidence is either stupid, or himself incompetent. The film is false, and has no business in the House as evidence. And anyone who knows that the film is a fake, though by incompetence, not by plot, and still does not disregard it as testimony, is accomplice to perjury, if not a liar himself. Perjurer, ignoramus, incompetent, take your pick. They're all heart-warming.

All this is assuming that the events are actually are out of order. Mr. Martin sort of tried a tentative denial, but changed his mind and gave tacit agreement to the statement that the film was a fake, in the chronological sense, at least. And he was to defend the film. Oh, there have been denials of the film's falsity - Fulton Lewis, Jr., Fulton III, Congressman Walter, and a few others. All these men were in some way connected with the film, except maybe Fulton III. Everyone who vouched for the film's accuracy is part of the same vested interest that made that propaganda in the first place. Yet any number of bystanders at the demonstrations have viewed the film, some six or seven times, and then sworn affidavits as to the film's

Science Hall Keeps Pace With Growing Chemistry Department

When Williams Science Hall was built in 1896 at a cost of $160,000 - the gift of Dr. and Mrs. Edward H. Williams of Philadelphia - it was the first completely fire-proofed college building in the country.

Sixty-five years later, when much of the interior space and equipment was inadequate for the teaching and research needs of the departments using the building, the building remained so sound that renovation seemed both practical and desirable.

The project, which has seen a "stem to stern" renovation of chemistry department facilities, and the first modest beginnings of renovation of zoology department facilities, was begun in the summer of 1960. Work has since been carried on around the clock on a schedule carefully devised so as to permit lectures and laboratory periods to be held with a minimum of interruption.

Future plans for departments now making use of Williams Science Hall have been additionally spurred by the University's Trustees who recently authorized planning for classroom-laboratory construction for sciences.

Cost to date for the Williams Science Hall renovation project amounts to about $440,000, but the investment has provided bright new student facilities, more than doubled the area available for chemistry research, and made possible the initiation of doctoral program in chemistry.

The biggest teaching advantage gained in the renovation, according to Prof. Clinton D. Cook, chairman of the department of chemistry at Vermont, results from the installation of individual laboratory lockers which allow better, more advanced level work.

New benches, new glass plumbing, stainless steel ventilation ducts, relocation of stock rooms, and the introduction of semi-automatic balances which give student chemists a means of more rapid and modern techniques, were all cited by Dr. Cook as advantages gained with completion of the renovation project.

Enrollment in the department of chemistry has continued to grow, according to Cook, from 834 students enrolled in chemistry courses in the fall of 1959 to 1052 students this past fall.

The number of majors is increasing, too, he adds, as is graduate work in chemistry.

The University of Vermont has had an above average record in terms of the number of its chemistry majors going on to receive the Ph.D. in the field, and UVM's own new Ph.D. program has at-

CRAM COURSE NO. 1: MODERN EUROPEAN HISTORY

The school year draws rapidly to a close, and it's been a fun year, what with learning the twist, attending public executions, and walking our cheetahs—but are we ready for final exams? Some of us, I fear, are not. Therefore, in these few remaining columns, I propose to forego levity and instead offer a series of cram courses so that we may all be prepared at exam time.

We will start with Modern European History. Strictly defined, Modern European History covers the history of Europe from January 1, 1962, to the present. However, in order to provide employment for more teachers, the course has been moved back to the Age of Pericles, or the Renaissance, as it is jocularly called.

The single most important fact to remember about Modern European History is the emergence of Prussia. As we all know, Prussia was originally called Russia. The "P" was purchased from Persia in 1874 for $24 and Manhattan Island. This later became known as Guy Fawkes Day.

Persia, without a "P" was, of course, called Ersia. This so embarrassed the natives that they changed the name of the country to Iran. This led to a rash of name changing. Mesopotamia became Iraq, Schleswig-Holstein became Saxe-Coburg, Bosnia-Herzegovina became Cleveland. There was even talk in stable old England about changing the name of the country, but it was forgotten when the little princes escaped from the Tower and set fire to Pitt, the Elder.

Meanwhile Johannes Gutenberg was quietly inventing the printing press, for which we may all be grateful, believe you me! Why grateful? I'll tell you why grateful. Because without Gutenberg's invention, there would be no printing on cigarette packs. You would not know when you bought cigarettes whether you were getting good Marlboros or some horrid imitation. You could never be sure that you were buying a full-flavored smoke with a pure white filter, a cigarette that lets you settle back and get comfortable—in short, a Marlboro. It is a prospect to chill the bones and turn the blood to sorghum—so if you are ever in Frankfurt am Main, drop in and say thanks to Mr. Gutenberg. He is elderly—408 years old last birthday—but still quite active in his laboratory. In fact, only last Tuesday he invented the German short-haired pointer.

But I digress. Back to Modern European History. Let us turn now to that ever popular favorite, France.

France, as we all know, is divided into several departments.

Outing Club To Sponsor Sloppy Slalom

Once again the UVM Outing Club is sponsoring a Spring Sloppy Slalom Day. The annual event will be held this year on April 1 at the Smuggler's Notch Ski Area. The Giant Slalom will begin at 11 A.M., while the new three-legged combined snowshoe and ski race will begin at 3 p.m., after the slalom is completed.

Teams of four skiers may represent a fraternity, sorority, dorm or other living unit or club. Anyone in the University family, except those who skied for the University this year and certified instructors, may participate. Faculty members as well as students are urged to compete for the rotating trophy which is awarded to the best women's and best men's teams. If it is impossible to go, get a team together, come and compete for the permanent best men's or best women's individual trophy. The slalom course is not difficult so don't hesitate to join in on the fun and of course any-

COLLEGE STUDENTS IN THE VACATION RIOTS

What touches off the vicious vacation riots in resort towns from coast to coast? What madness causes the drunkenness, open immorality, violent battles with police? What sudden-mob impulse can motivate a crowd of 30,000 educated young men and women into a rampage of destruction? Perhaps it's a new way to "let off steam" . . . a savage kind of self-expression. But why are so many college students—presumably the nation's most "adult" and sophisticated young people—involved? Why do they knowingly risk their futures, even their lives for a few hours of wild abandon? In the new April McCall's, don't miss the unbelievable, yet true, report on the spread of this insane activity . . . the terrible price you may have to pay if you're involved . . . and how you can help stop the insanity.

There is the Police Department, the Fire Department, the Gas and Water Department, and the Bureau of Weights and Measures. There is also Madame Pompadour, but that need not concern us because it is a dirty story and is only taught to graduate students.

Finally, let us take up Italy—the newest European nation. Italy did not become a unified state until 1848 when Garibaldi, Cavour, and Victor Emmanuel threw three coins in the Trevi Fountain. This lovely gesture so enchanted all of Europe that William of Orange married Mary Stuart and caused a potato famine in Ireland. This, in turn, resulted in Pitt, the Younger.

All of this may seem a bit complicated, but be of good cheer. Everything was happily resolved at the Congress of Vienna where Metternich traded Parma to Talleyrand for Mad Ludwig of Bavaria. Then everybody waltzed till dawn and then, tired but content, they started the Thirty Years' War. © 1962 Max Shulman

Today you can buy Marlboros all over Europe, but you might have to pay a premium. In all 50 of these United States, however, you get that fine Marlboro flavor, that excellent Marlboro filter, in flip-top box or soft pack at regulation popular prices.

I'M DREAMING OF AN A-MINUS

(ACP) - In honor of finals, Judy King of Seattle University penned this variation on an old theme in THE SPECTATOR:

*'Twas the night before finals and all through the dorm, Stumbled zombie-eyed students, groggy and worn.
Their books were flung all over the chairs,
In the hope that the contents would diffuse in the air.
The profs were snuggled all warm in their beds,
While visions of test questions danced in their heads.
When out on the mall there arose such a clatter,
That students in their stupor asked: "What was the matter?"*

*And who to their blood-shot eyes should appear,
But a white Cadillac with three extra gears.
A huge semi-trailer was attached to the back,
Piled high with papers, rack upon rack.
An elderly man leaped out of the Cad,
With shining white armor and a copy of Mad.
"Do you still believe," questioned he, "No spoof?"
"We do," they shouted and stamped in proof.
He smiled and he bowed a right jolly old chap,
And handed out papers from his Caddy's rack.
They look at the papers and there wasn't a sound,
Then someone sighed, and fell to the ground.
For there on each paper, in black and in white,
Were the answers to the test . . . and each one was right!*

*A great cheer arose and covered the mall,
And in the midst he cried . . . "Good Finals to All."
But his name is unknown to this very day,
For in the confusion, he slipped away.
Yes, Gertrude. There is a Great White Cadillac.*

Although the preceding poem concerns itself with some very fanciful never-come-true thoughts about final examinations, it is strikingly appropriate at this time. A great majority of UVM students are now completing or have recently completed a concentrated brutal round of examinations. These exams have been crowded into the space of one week, or perhaps, in some more fortunate instances, into the space of ten days. Four, five, or even six exams within a five day period is not an unusual event.

Professors must have mid-semester grades into the office by a given date. Until about two weeks before this set date there simply is not enough information upon which a teacher can base a truly comprehensive examination. No matter how many courses the student is taking and no matter what his daily schedule might be, professors, with absolutely no knowledge of the dates set for examinations by other professors, announce the date they have set for their exam. The woes and groans are loud and long. The complaints are many. Actions to alleviate this situation are nonexistent.

On top of this, Lane Series, The Vermont Conference, and The Fine Arts Festival occur within this same general period. These are all wonderful cultural events. They are anticipated with great enthusiasm; they are an integral part of a student's education. But what comes first - a grade on an examination or an evening's education? Sorry - the grade comes first, particularly if it is on a mid-semester exam. And not just a single exam, but a week or so filled with these hour-long tests of a student's cramming ability.

Prepare in advance? Sure. Too bad, though. Many teachers don't announce the exam date until about a week or so before it is time to give it. Besides, they bear a great resemblance to final examinations, as far as being a concentrated effort goes, and just how easy is it to study for final exams while classes are still in session?

There are several ways in which the situation may be alleviated. The date which the administration has now set for grades to be received by the office could be moved up a week or two. This would certainly give the professors a little more leeway for giving tests. A general, tentative testing schedule might be arranged from a departmental standpoint. At least this way the student would be forewarned when he signs up for courses at the beginning of each semester. Then, of course, a system similar to that used during finals might be employed--no classes. Students with so many tests to study for don't bother to keep up their daily assignments anyway.

In any event, the students writhing in their seats as "Doc" announces the exam is certainly indicative of

Disarmament

To the Editor:

On Wednesday, March 14, the representatives of seventeen nations met at Geneva. The issue - disarmament. The conference is still in session, but it has been reduced to a chit-chat of protocol. Why can't three intelligent, experienced world leaders as Dean Rusk, Lord Home, and Andrei Gromyko, achieve their aims?

The United States has proposed controlled disarmament. We are eager to allow Russia scrutinization of our efforts. All we ask in return is a concession of the same respect. The Soviet Union, on the other hand, must be brazen and aloof. She ridicules our peaceful aspirations by proposing uncontrolled, "national" disarmament. She shows her seriousness in attempting to reach an accord by harassing allied aircraft in the Berlin corridor.

The United States is mature enough to hold off nuclear testing until next month. President Kennedy is of the opinion that if Russia does not "get down to business" by this time, possibilities are slight that she ever will.

We have acted gentlemanly in the face of condescending, disrespectful scorn. It is sad that the whole world must bear the brunt of communist irresponsibility, but nuclear testing, on our part, is a necessary evil. We can no longer pass bomb shelter legislation, sit back, and wait for the inevitable. Now is the time to deter. Increasing Soviet gains in Southeast Asia, and Latin America, obviate a need for mature action.

It has been a long time since the United States of America has humbled herself to the position of "turning the other cheek." King George tried to scare us but failed. Such was the case with Santa Anna, Mussolini, and Hitler. As of late, however, an aura of wariness has crept over the most powerful nation in the world.

It is evident that some Americans must be reminded not of Russia's strength, but of their own. We have the facilities, resources, and intelligence to deter war. Let our enemies see Yankee power, and subsequently treat us and our friends with a little more respect.

Sincerely,
Peter Low, '63

Library Talk

To the Editor:

Cheers for the Editor's Scrapbook in deploring the abuse of the new library and the noisiness and noisomeness of some of its patrons. However, as one of the public service librarians, I feel obliged to disagree with your conclusion, tongue in cheek though it may be, that the library staff should, or could keep order.

I have yet to hear any instantaneous diminution in the decibels of noise when I have walked through the library. Even when I have upon occasion felt compelled to try to shut some of the louder mouths, I haven't noticed that requests to be quieter for the benefit of those who wished to study had much effect.

This brings me to another point. All too frequently, students say to me, "I can't study in the dorm or fraternity house; it's too noisy." Now these seem to me pretty sad commentaries on the inability of the UVM students to police themselves. You cry loudly that you want to be consulted about administrative decisions, you want less supervision, more responsibility, etc., etc. Yet you admit that you are too immature to keep order among yourselves. I have attended several institutions of higher learning, and in all of them the students kept quiet hours in the dorms and actually governed themselves.

I often wonder, too, what does your library mean to you? I have the impression that to the majority of you it is only a study hall, not a place to expand your intellectual horizons beyond the class textbook. If this is so, the University might better have built a study hall as such. It would have cost considerably less than $2,100,000; and it could have been equipped with rugged, practically indestructible accoutrements, i.e. floors suitable for grinding out cigarettes and chairs impervious to ink and graphite. They could probably even have afforded to hire a few mature adults to keep the place quiet.

To the Editor:

The Editor's Scrapbook, has expressed concern about remedying certain uses, or abuses, of UVM's new Bailey Library. This is welcome and to the point because the source of the concern suggests the source of the remedy, i.e., the student body. The Scrapbook's comment that regulation by the staff is not a satisfactory and proper approach is,

I feel, correct. This is not standard practice in university libraries. It is ineffective, time-consuming, and costly. Sensible, considerate use of Bailey Library ought to be a matter of individual responsibility supported by a sense of tradition.

Traditions that govern attire for certain occasions, that prohibit underclassmen from sitting on the "Senior Bench", or that require everyone using a certain campus walk to greet, pleasantly, anyone he meets, (a "Hello Walk") are established on many campuses. These pertain often to the library. In order to consider establishing traditions of proper use for Bailey, I have been working with Dave Maichuk, chairman of the Student Association Ad Hoc Library Committee. We hope to formulate a few general rules, interest students in them, and work toward establishing them as traditions supported by general consent in their necessity and propriety.

Comments and suggestions are certainly welcome. That library use could not be regulated in this manner would be surprising considering the outstanding spirit of cooperation devoted last fall to moving the university's books to the new building. We have but to continue more of same.

It is not often that we are led to question authority and sources of factual information which we read in the daily newspapers or magazines. Even more challenging is the task of authenticating this material to a Russian student living across the hall from you. During the week I spent at the McGill Conference on World Affairs these and other problems faced me being one of twenty-five Americans among Canadians and Russians, while listening to and being addressed to the theme of "Russia and the West—Challenge and Response." This was the fifth annual session of the Canadian sponsored Conference which in the past has discussed Canadian-Am relations, Democracy in a Changing World, and the newly emerging Afro-Asian nations. We were, on the 18th day, addressed by Prof. Alfred Meyer of Michigan State who spoke on "The Theory and Practice of Communism". He pointed out to the audience that Marxism and Communism are not the same in practice and that many conflicts have been held between Marxists and Communists. Dr. Meyer gave a brief historical resume of the growth of Communism from its beginnings to the present time and attempted to explain what he believed the reasons behind much of the past Soviet strategy had been. Following this keynote speech Dr. Meyer entertained questions from delegates and from the public. We were divided into six discussion groups of about fifteen people and we met before and after each major address to discuss its ramifications and other pertinent national issues, such as possible avenues of discussion to the Berlin problem and what we, as students, could and should do in an attempt to better cement world communications and awareness. Other noted speakers included Prof. William Elliott of Harvard who told us "Communism presents the West with an ideological and economic challenge which it will eventually have to meet." One point which Prof. Elliott stressed is that "our struggle is not with the Russian people themselves, but with their political leaders. The Russian peasant wants peace and prosperity and is in this respect no different from the American worker. Americans seek security in employment as well as higher standards of living. It is the duty of the American government to meet their people's demands." Communism, as Elliott sees it "can never fulfill this demand." "Natural forces and human motivation are disregarded in a state capitalistic country, such as the USSR." He further stated, emphasizing his position as advisor on Soviet Affairs to the Eisenhower administration, "that only major powers should represent mankind in a world assembly." "If underdeveloped countries are allowed into the UN, then why should the Rock of Gibraltar not be granted membership?" Prof. Elliott continued speaking on the Nature of the Communist challenge by maintaining that one can be both "red and dead" which suggests that a deterrent will prevent war. Prof. Elliott also outlined the military and economic aspects of the challenge. It was most interesting to discuss some of these ideas informally with the Russian students who spoke English very well and said they were not under any restriction of escort. Both Sacha Txhoubarin, a student in Soviet government and International Relations, and Boris Pankin, a PG Journalism student said that they had received no instructions from Khrushchev on what to talk about and what not to mention. "In Russia there are more important things to be done than checking up on every student who goes abroad." It did not take long before both the Russians and other delegates realized that little would be accomplished by one side being represented as the righteous one and the other censored. We quickly saw that little meaningful discussion would take place unless both groups admitted mistakes and talked along the same veins instead of engaging in a battle of "one-upmanship". The Russian students criticized Elliott's speech as being not conducive to the establishment of understanding of the two ideologies which the conference was supposed to be trying to establish. Mr. Txhoubarin attacked Elliott's statement that the Russians are soon to be freed from Communist slavery and hoped that after the conference he would engage in some self-criticism. Pankin examined "better red than dead" in relation to the US's banishing or taking over all Communists. This, he said was a case of "either being red or in prison". Many of their beliefs, they stated, came from information they had read regarding such agencies as HUAC. When asked how they could believe most of the information they read in Russia, we were asked why we thought the N.Y. Times was any better in reporting both sides of the story.

The Soviet Ambassador to Canada, Amasap Aroutunian emphasized the fact that peaceful coexistence implies a renunciation of war as a means of settling international disputes. He reiterated the fact that neither the Russians nor the Americans want war. He said that "no one will deny that there are differences between nations especially in the field of ideologies. We believe in the final triumph of Communism; many people do not agree with us. Historical development will decide who is right and who is wrong." The final keynote speech was delivered by Mr. Harry Schwartz, New York Times expert on Soviet Affairs. Mr. Schwartz is noted for his dynamic speaking ability and his frank approach to his subject regardless of the audience. He did not disappoint us. Just prior to his address, the Russian ambassador escorted the Russian students out of Redpath Hall. Schwartz demonstrated that some of the difficulties facing the world today had just been exhibited to us by the Russian Students attending the conference. The Russians did not attend his lecture because they claimed they knew what he had to say. Schwartz said that this attitude typified the Russian policy of airing or restricting others. He summarized this attitude by saying "What's mine is mine and what's yours is negotiable." Schwartz referred to Ambassador Aroutunian's speech saying that it was common for Russians to bring up untruths when they spoke. He spoke about the point made by the Ambassador that the socialist state was not interested in war. "These are very pretty words," Schwartz said, "but how can they be related to Soviet actions in Finland, Estonia, Latvia, Lithuania, Korea,

Education

New Book

American education of the future "will have television, the electronic tape, and the practice machine" and "the teacher who is master of these instruments."

That is one of many conclusions in a book on "Fundamentals of Teaching in Secondary Schools" by a University of Vermont associate professor of education. Frank L. Steeves, whose book published by the Odyssey Press Inc., of New York was five years in progress, says of his work that "it takes the conservative approach," although he agrees that the book "takes some sharp stands on controversial issues."

The 458-page volume is primarily intended to serve as a text for college courses in secondary education methods or teaching procedures, although Steeves feels it would "pose no serious obstacles" for the interested lay reader.

Touching on the question of "methods" courses versus preparation in the subject matter the teacher is to teach, Steeves declares "no educator in his right mind would defend . . . the idea that a human being could teach others what he does not know himself," but he adds "it becomes erroneous . . . to state that teachers do not need to know and understand the nature of learners in order to perform effectively."

The fact that there is "so much discussion" in professional books, the press, lay journals about educational method, he suggests, "is sufficient evidence that this is a living area."

In a chapter dealing with "Electronics, Machines and The Teacher," Steeves raises, and answers, the question: Will Teachers Be Displaced?

"It is highly unlikely," he asserts, "that school administrators will ever recommend substituting machines for teachers. The more likely possibility is that technical devices, particularly television, will be used to add offerings which were not formerly available to pupils. Thus, when a school system announces that three teachers plus television can accomplish what would have taken thirty teachers under traditional conditions, it is not saying that twenty-seven teachers have been displaced. It is saying that twenty-seven teachers were not available for the purpose and that three teachers under ideal conditions using mass technical methods are able to reach pupils with materials that would have been otherwise unavailable."

"The end result will not be to displace teachers but to restore them to a position of responsible and creative leadership in the school program. Obviously, many of the routine chores which are now required of teachers will be done in the future by automation. These chores should not have been confused with 'teaching' in the first place."

"The poor teacher . . . will be removed from the educational picture . . . because he has no contribution to make that cannot be made at either the mechanical or at the mass level. But persons recognized and paid as 'teachers' will be teachers and not clerks, baby sitters, or guards as is too often the case today."

In the end, Steeves concludes, "no cheap substitute for the good teacher will satisfy the American people for very long . . . the final cost will become the good teacher plus the machine, not the machine minus the teacher."

thermodynamics. At the moment, I should like to make a few comments about the subject of deans, particularly academic deans. It would perhaps be more colorful if my remarks had been inspired by some irritating action by one of the UVM deans, but my present train of thought stems from an article entitled "To the Damnation of Deans (a Prejudice)" by John Ciardi which appeared in the Saturday Review. This external inspiration is not to be construed as a blanket endorsement on my part of everything the local team says and does, but on the whole we seem to have a group of deans completely devoted to the best interests of UVM, at least according to their own lights.

According to Mr. Ciardi, the increase of university administration in general and of deans in particular has resulted in the transfer of the responsibility and privilege of decision and policy making from the faculty (where they belong) to the deans. Deans (according to the article) should exist as sort of super clerks whose only functions are to keep the records, smile at parents and perhaps make inspiring, and probably meaningless, addresses to the Lions Club.

Since I have been a college or university faculty member, but not a dean, for a dozen years or so, I tend to have a certain sympathy with the views of Mr. Ciardi. The faculty should have the responsibility and privilege of making educational policy. Part of the responsibility of a dean is to execute the policies of the faculty. But I disagree with Mr. Ciardi that this is the sole business of a dean, particularly of an academic dean. The function of a dean are involved and volumes certainly could be, and probably have been, written on the subject. Mr. Ciardi's remarks, however, jarred me into realizing that my conception of a dean, especially with respect to his relationship to the faculty, is that he should be far more complex than a clerk. He should be stimulating the faculty into a continual self evaluation and providing leadership in the formulation of educational policy. I do not mean that the dean should make the policy, but rather that he should be one who assists and sometimes guides, and then challenges his departments to justify their curriculum and research programs in the light of college and university policy. In short the dean of a college in a university should be a sort of academic president of his college. Such a man would be a far cry from Mr. Ciardi's mindless clerk who could perhaps best be approximated by a card sorting machine. It seems to me that a dean is one who should be ready and able to assume the intellectual leadership of creative scholars.

The Circular File

by Mike Grossman

The topic for the Vermont Conference this year was "Myopic Man"; a study in the limitations of communication by four experts at limited conversation. The conference, which started off like one of America's first satellites, i.e., phhhht, was introduced by Ihab Hassan whose topic, labeled "The Face of America", turned out to be a discussion on modern literary trends and the transition of the American literary hero from the representative of society's virtues to the modern critic of its values; the "anti-hero". Mr. Hassan was generally well received and must be credited with trying the hardest to bring some unity and controversy to a series of lectures whose subjects ranged from Moby Dick to steel mills in southern Mongolia. His sentiments were laudable but his efforts, futile. Of the four speakers the second, Mr. Feiffer, must be considered the holder of the only flashlight in a darkened room in which madam has lost her glove. His lecture, and lecture is too stiff a word for his delightful talk, was witty, illuminating, and blessedly unpedantic. However, and I think Mr. Feiffer would agree, the conference is best summed up by a cartoon of his very own, the one which appeared two weeks ago in the Cynic.

Oscar Lewis, the anthropologist, spoke on the "Culture of Poverty." (Let me see now. We have American heroes, comic strips, a culture of poverty and this is supposed to have something to do with communication and myopic man—n.) It was worth wading through Lewis's speech to hear him read, without expression, excerpts from his book "The Children of Sanchez". I use the word "wading" because after listening to Mr. Lewis's lecture, one had the feeling that Mr. Lewis would answer a simple question like, "Hey mister, where's the bathroom?" by proceeding to expound on the socio-economic significance of latrines from the days of the cave men to modern times. But in all fairness to Mr. Lewis, his talk, though irrelevant to the conference topic, was interesting and the sacrifices which he has made to pursue his study of the culture of poverty are impressive and truly laudable.

The tail end, and fittingly so, of the conference was brought up by Mr. Harrison who I'd stake can out do anyone in the inability to answer a simple question simply. Mr. Harrison, whose topic was supposed to be "The American Image", did a much better job than I could have summing up his own lecture when afterwards he said: "I can find real ambiguity in my thinking . . ." and also, "what we have here is pretty generally a hopeless picture." Mr. Feiffer I think best reflected the sentiments of the audience when, during one of Mr. Harrison's fifteen minute evasions of a simple question, he

Does Kissing Follow Public Opinion

(Credit: Newman Club)

Women's fashions are set in Paris. A designer decides that skirts should go up an inch and a half and women rush for their scissors. Someone decided that the "sack" was the thing and women's clothes around the world appeared shapeless and unkempt. When the fashions change we hear women say, and we see in ads, "Everyone is wearing it." Many scurry to keep up with "fashion," to keep up with what they think to be "public opinion."

COLLEGE OPINION

Fashion extends beyond the wearing of clothes on the modern college campus. It is true that collegians are fashion conscious and wish to be "up-to-date" in what they wear - and in what they do as well. We have examined some of these fashions or statements of so-called public opinion with a group of college students, mostly Catholics.

Concerning the question of kissing on the first date, the publicly expressed opinion was, "Everyone does it," or "the fellows expect it," or "there is nothing wrong with it." This was taken to be the general consensus of opinion as expressed publicly by college students. It is the kind of easy statement which would indicate that "you are a square if you do not conform."

REAL VS. APPARENT

In the group discussion, the very opposite developed to be true. Some of the young men said they felt the girls expected it. Yet they considered a kiss to be too important to be freely given. Some of the girls expressed the feeling that the fellows expected it. They considered a kiss to be more than a means of saying "I have had a good time tonight."

The girls in the group seemed surprised to learn that the young men had a high regard and respect for the girls who were not easy to kiss. The young men called some girls a "good time" because they are easy to kiss. Others they called "good girls" who would make good wives and mothers.

One conclusion of the discussion was that "public opinion" is not always public opinion. It was felt that a few express themselves in terms of behavior on dates. People tend to follow without thinking. They perhaps presume that others are more worldly-wise than they are. They do not wish to be out of step, out of fashion. As a consequence, those who arrive at college, having listened to the popular conception of public opinion, are inclined to follow. Actually, by their following they encourage and strengthen so-called "public opinion."

The conclusion of this particular discussion was that real public opinion was on the side of a conservative approach to kissing. It was considered that kissing is important and almost sacred. It is something more than a harmless and normal means of saying "thank you." Further, it was the opinion that more than a "fast" girl was looked for as a prospective wife.

WHO SETS OPINIONS?

Apart from the obvious conclusion about kissing, the conclusions about public opinion were most important. In fact a series of such discussions indicated the same conclusion time and time again. We live in an age when advertising media tend to tell the public what is necessary. We wonder also if we do not live in an age when we have quit thinking for ourselves. We perhaps wonder too much what "people are doing" and use this as a guide to our actions.

Students should recognize that individuals set public opinion -- for good or evil. When students can get together and find their own opinions at variance with the apparent public consensus, then they can feel that they have been fooled.

Then comes the obvious conclusion that Catholics, or any good Christians can have just as much power to set standards and to set public opinion in a positive and virtuous fashion as do those without moral standards but a truculent ability to be outspoken.

Coming back to the question of kissing on the first date, we can conclude that real public opinion indicates that it is not necessary or proper. People really respect the traditional moral code. Further, it can be stated that a kiss is still considered as a symbol of love and affection. Therefore, it should not be given nor asked indiscriminately. The girl who does not give a kiss on the first date may have a few less dates, but she probably will find a better husband.

Daniels concludes by saying that while the Russians may be more in immediate conflict of interest with the Chinese than with the West, we should not assume that we are with Russian and against the Chinese. "Rather, a vast, uncharted area is opening up for Western diplomacy, with complex choices of pressure or concession regarding Russia, China, and the Communist bloc as a whole."

Others taking part in the symposium were Elie Abel, State Department correspondent for NBC News; Hans J. Morgenthau, director of the Center for the Study of American Foreign and Military Policy at the University of Chicago; authors Robert Conquest and Geroge Lichtheim, both of whom have written about Russia; Mark Mancall of Harvard's East Asian Center; Karl A. Wittfogel, director of the Chinese History project at the University of Washington; Benjamin Schwartz, professor of history and government at Harvard; and Roger Swearingen, director of Soviet-Asian studies at the University of Southern California.

Marty Singer, '63 - "I do not think that it is justifiable. Each student should be issued a library card at registration. Those who do not go to UVM may purchase a library card for a nominal fee. In this way, everyone could help share the burden of the library expenses."

Barbara Campbell, '65 - "Yes, I think that it's justifiable. For the amount of the time that non-university people use the library, it would be unnecessary work and bookkeeping to make them pay for the use of the facilities."

Mrs. Helen Oustinoff, Assistant Director of Bailey Library - "The Library Staff is aware of the problems involved, however, the ultimate decision as to the solution must be made by the administration."

Vermont Conference In Review

Hassan

The ninth annual UVM Vermont Conference began on Wednesday, March 21, at 8:00 in the Ira Allen Chapel. Miss Sally M. Greene, chairman of the conference, entitled "Myopic Man: A Study in the Limitations of Communications," officially opened it and introduced the opening speaker, John T. Fey, President of the University.

President Fey spoke on communications in the modern world. He was especially interested in communications and their relation to international relations and education. About the limitation of communications he said, "All problems of mankind could be described as problems in communications."

The main speaker for the evening was Ihab Hassan, a graduate of the University of Cairo and the University of Pennsylvania, who is presently Professor of English at Wesleyan University. Mr. Hassan's speech was entitled "The Face Within: Images of the New Hero in American Literature." He expressed his concern over Americans' great preoccupation with the image we as a nation present to others rather than the face we present to ourselves. Having made extensive studies of contemporary American writers and literature, he attempted to trace the metamorphosis of the American literary hero and to analyze the new hero in American literature.

Following Mr. Hassan's speech, an informal panel discussion was held in the Waterman Cafeteria, where coffee was served. On the panel Mr. Hassan was joined by Jules Feiffer, another Conference speaker, and Mr. Robert Cochran of the English Department, who acted as moderator. Such topics as student movements, the beats, myths and image, and the "lost generation" were discussed by the panel and an eager audience.

Harrison

by Sandy Flaster

The fourth guest lecturer at the Vermont Conference was Selig S. Harrison. Speaking on Friday, March 23 at 8:00 p.m., Mr. Harrison eloquently outlined his views on foreign and domestic policies. In his lecture entitled "Public Enterprise and the American Image," Mr. Harrison brought into focus an axiom for a sound foreign policy. He stated it in this manner, "We must get to know other people better and, also, people must get to know us. It will only be when this is accomplished that no problems will exist." Mr. Harrison cited India's mixed culture problem. Because of the existing cultures brought in by the English, and Moslems, there is a prevailing language and communication problem in India today. Another problem is divided Pakistan. Here the marked difference in geographical locations keeps the country divided.

Mr. Harrison stressed a flaw in our foreign policy by showing the way in which financial aid is distributed to underdeveloped countries. "We give money to these countries but, invariably, some of this money is siphoned off by the noble and ruling class. A stronger control over which we can supervise the distribution of this aid is greatly needed."

Mr. Harrison, a graduate of Harvard University, has been foreign correspondent for India, Pakistan, Ceylon, Afghanistan, and Nepal. In 1955-56 Mr. Harrison held a Rockefeller Foundation Fellowship as a research associate of the Language and Communications Research Center at Columbia University. In conjunction with this fellowship Mr. Harrison published in India:

The Most Dangerous Decade. Mr. Harrison is currently Associate Editor of The New Republic and has made numerous studies of United States policy in South Asia for that publication.

Feiffer

by Robert Silverstein

On Thursday afternoon, March 22, 1962, at ten minutes past four, the second quarter of Vermont Conference commenced. The speaker was Mr. Jules Feiffer, internationally syndicated cartoonist, whose work appears in such diverse newspapers as The Village Voice, The New York Herald Tribune, The London Observer, and papers in Rome and Stockholm. He is also the author of two plays, and several collections of his pieces have appeared in book form: The Explainers; Boy, Girl, Girl, Boy, Sick, Sick, Sick; and Passionella. Excellent cartoons have also appeared in the ever-popular College magazine, Playboy.

in cartooning since he was a child. He pictured himself having some sort of daily adventure cartoon, similar to Terry and The Pirates and others like it. But as he matured, and especially from his Army experience, a different sort of attitude and outlook of life emerged. One may call it a sort of cynicism or skepticism, or just a deep introspection into the soul and conscience of America.

Mr. Feiffer became a satirist.

"Graphic Portrayal" Of Miracle Worker Closes Blue Series

by Frederick LaBelle

The University has seen its final, and perhaps its best, Blue Lane Series presentation of the year. William Gibson's The Miracle Worker—the story of stubborn Annie Sullivan's struggle to communicate with the deaf and blind Helen Keller as a child—is a plainly written play of simple dialogue and unadorned humor. It has the roughness of a back-of-the-hand in the face. Poorly produced, it would have been as rude as that characteristic American cliché, the mythical Irish temper. In a play about character types influenced by geography, environment, and events, caricature and stereotype would have been the easiest way to portray the setting and the nature of Helen's own environment. Being from "nowhere" and having no significant memories of normal life the child Helen Keller is the only character in the play free of normal personality reactions. Even Helen could have been portrayed unimaginatively as a conventional blind and deaf child with no individual behavior. But there was no caricature, no stereotype, no ordinary or careless direction in the production presented by the bus and truck company on March 21. The performance was sincere, controlled, powerful, and vital with dramatic intensity.

Director Arthur Penn has created a startling set and a graphic portrayal to achieve high artistic truth with a play of no more than ordinary potential. There is a meaning in every position of the actors, and information in every detail of the well-conceived and well executed settings. Going from parts to the whole the organic sense of the production becomes more evident still. There is unity in the flexible single set the show employs; the background heightens the feeling of forces in conflict created by the characters in their drama.

Eileen Brennan, a warm, bright-eyed beauty backstage, assumes the role of Annie Sullivan with the total control of a master. She plays the simple, stubborn, plain-as-dirt, and broadly Irish teacher of Helen Keller. Annie Sullivan, nearly blind herself, went to the Keller home at 20 from the Perkins Institute for the Blind, in Boston. Annie was the victim of childhood tragedy; she and her brother, as wards of the state, were confined in a mental institution during the latter part of the 19th Century. Miss Brennan, star of the two year Broadway run "Little Mary Sunshine", is a professional on the way up. This summer she and Donna Zimmerman will do "The Miracle Worker" in stock in Washington, D.C. The University has not seen any professional actress with her acting ability in a long while.

Donna Zimmerman, the child Helen Keller, is a bright and friendly child, open and at ease with strangers backstage. Miss Zimmerman is a child actress with an intuition for behavior and reaction on stage which is moving to see. She is sensitive, reserved, and always expressive. She acts with a dynamic force held under good control but waiting to erupt into the physical expression of Helen Keller. When she explodes she takes the audience with her into the emotion she portrays; when, in the final scene, Annie breaks through to Helen and the deaf-blind girl recognizes water for the first time the emotion rushes like a strong breeze through the audience, caught up in the climax of the drama so well portrayed by Miss Zimmerman. She is a sensitive and creative actress with strong imagination.

The supporting cast, C.M. Gambel, Laurinda Barrett, and Thomas Connolly are good in their portrayals of Southern post-Civil War weak-kneed aristocracy. The remainder of the cast is inspired as well and the backing given Miss Brennan and Miss Zimmerman by their supporting cast lifts the play from the ordinary realm to the world of dramatic conviction.

Frosh Weekend Committees Named

On March 23 the second meeting of the Freshman Class was held in the Student Lounge. The meeting was opened by Skip Lauffer, President, at 4:15 o'clock. The ideas of the Freshman Weekend to be held on May 18-19 were presented and discussed. There was a question and answer period during which several pertinent points were brought up. Also, it was mentioned that the interviews for chairmanships of the necessary committees would be held the following day at 1:00 in the Student Council Room.

On March 24 interviews were conducted by Harvey G. Demmler, Vice-President, "to determine their ability to organize and coordinate, and also their desire to work with people. It is felt that the results from these individual interviews were impressive and illustrated a satisfactory cross-section of the Freshman Class."

The following people were chosen as co-chairmen of the Freshman Weekend: Sharon Dunne and Sherman Murphy, Overall Co-chairmen; Maren Jepson and Peter Spectre, Regina Robinson and Dan Newcomb Co-chairmen of Friday evening's Picnic and Jazz Concert respectively; Priscilla Perry and Ralph Roberts, Co-chairmen of Saturday afternoon's Carnival; Audrey Scofield, Carol Souther, and Harvey G. Demmler, Co-chairmen of Saturday evening's Dance.

Winning Squad Named In ROTC Competition

Cadet Staff Sergeant Frederic Weisberg has been chosen as the leader of the winning squad in the recent ROTC competition. The purpose of this program is to provide tangible evidence of recognition for the attainment of a high degree of skill, proficiency, and excellence in the performance of duties. Awards for squad competition promote "esprit de corps" and provide an incentive to greater effort.

One Cadet and his squad were chosen in each of the 12 Companies (comprised of 9 squads) as the winning squad. This field was then narrowed down to the Cadet leader of the best squad in each of the 3 Battalions (4 Companies) with Fred and his squad chosen as the winner in the Brigade (composed of 12 Companies).

Spencer; Company L - Cadet Staff Sergeant Harold Gilbar; and Company M - Cadet Staff Sergeant Barry Freeman.

The winning squads in each Battalion and their leaders are as follows: First Battalion - Cadet Staff Sergeant Frederic Weisberg (Company D); Second Battalion - Cadet Staff Sergeant William Farber (Company H); and Third Battalion - Cadet Staff Sergeant Alan Montague (Company I).

Cadet Staff Sergeant Fred Weisberg and his squad were selected as the winning squad and leader in the brigade. Fred's squad includes Sten Fersing, Chesley Horton, Art Allen, Daniel Mculliffe, Jeff Kotkin, and Barry Bloom.

Each member of the winning squad will receive a ribbon to be presented in the near future. In addition, merits will be awarded, one to the winning company, two to the winning Battalion, and five to the Brigade.

Cosmopolitan Club Plans Forthcoming Year

(Credit: Sulton, S.P.S.)

by Ralph Roberts

During recent years the Cosmopolitan Club has experienced periods of success and failure due to the inconsistent ability of its officers to organize and publicize the club's activities.

It is the hope of this year's officers to set the club on the pedestal to which it is rightfully heir.

The purpose of the Cosmopolitan Club is to provide opportunities for foreign students and American students alike, to become better acquainted with each other's customs, ideas, and ideals.

This end is hoped to be achieved by regular social events, including the presentation of cultural interest programs.

Lectureship Expanded

A program which could be of interest to UVM in 1963 is The Sperry and Hutchinson Company Lectures.

An unrestricted grant from the company financed visits to Beloit College by Dr. Fritz Machlup in 1958 and Dr. Clarence Randall in 1959. Recognizing the potential benefits to higher education from the Beloit experience, the company formulated its Lectureship Program, which was put into effect in the academic year 1960-61. In the first year of planned activity the Grants Committee made nine awards. In the second year the program was expanded, with grants to twenty-two colleges and universities.

The objectives of the program are to bring outstanding experts in these fields into direct and informal contact with faculties and students, and to strengthen the influence of the sponsoring colleges -- through their own members and nearby communities -- by the presentation of the distinguished visitors in public lectures.

The Lectureship Program has been expanded again for the 1962-63 academic year. Approximately 30 grants, to a maximum of $2,000 each, will be awarded. Every written proposal received not later than May 15, 1962, will be given full and serious consideration. No application form is supplied; only one copy of a proposal is required. Awards will be announced by the Grants Committee by June 30, 1962. This early award date will be of advantage to colleges in their talks of arranging for speakers and detailing their programs. Funds for important lectures by visitors have been much-needed by most institutions of higher learning in the U.S., which are generally hard-pressed to accommodate larger enrollments, higher teaching salaries, and expansion of higher programs.

brilliance has 58 faces

One of the most popular diamond designs is the "brilliant cut," 58 precision cut facets. But cutting is just one of our four "C's"; we consider all sides of a diamond's nature: clarity, color, and carat-weight. Years of experience and precision instruments are our tools. What Gives?

A funny thing happened to me at the theater the other night (no, that sounds too cliché-like). Perhaps I had better start out by saying: You run into the strangest people at the theater (no, that also sounds too familiar). Oh well, enough for polite formalities.

I am a stage manager for a theater company, not a bad one either, if I do say so myself. Anyhow, the other day we were just getting down to business, rehearsing for this play (the name of the play doesn't matter), when the oddest little group of people forced their way in the stage door, and went barging right up to our director. Boy, did those people talk crazy. They made us all listen while they explained how they weren't really people, but unfinished characters in a play that wasn't completed. Of all the fool things they actually wanted our director to finish writing their play. (Our director is a nice guy, and all that, but he just ain't no George B. Shaw).

Then this old lady, she was one of them, goes into a dead faint. Of course we all helped her to a chair, and this old man, he was her husband and either her husband, and either the father or step-father of the other four, kept telling this wierd story of his. He explained something about how he liked to experiment, so he sent his wife off with another man, and sent his son off to live in the country.

This girl, she must have been about twenty or so, kept interrupting him all the time. It seems as though she was his step-daughter and had been forced to work in one of those places (you know, the type of place that isn't mentioned in nice college papers), and that her step-father (actually he was her mother's husband when she was born, but I had best not go into that), was one of the customers. And he kept interrupting her and insisting that he was only "almost" one of the customers, and the whole thing really got awfully confusing.

Anyhow, it turns out that our director has all sorts of trouble making heads or tails of this thing, and really can't do a very good job of writing a play anyhow. Then the son, the one that was sent to the country, had a gun, and they all started getting violent, and any of them that weren't already crazy (I thought they were a bunch of nuts to start with) were soon thoroughly insane. Boy did they make a spectacular exit, but I guess I would be telling too much of the story if I went into all that. But, at any rate, we need an author bad. I mean, we can't tell when these characters will come charging in and break up another of our rehearsals. This is just a hunch, but I suspect that these very interesting characters will be back on May third, fourth, and fifth. So be sure to mark those dates right now for SIX CHARACTERS IN SEARCH OF AN AUTHOR.

The play was written by Luigi Pirandello, and is directed by B.G. Ackley. The cast, which has just been posted, includes: Sally Buermann (the daughter), Ed Kritzier (her father), J.A. (Gus) Linney (the son with a gun), and Sheila Rosen (the mother). The director is played by Steve Lemberg, and other members of the cast are: Elizabeth Soule, Nancy Streit, Heidi Mócek, Dick Burgess, Larry Yarkin, Bob Stein, Dan Hall, Robin Rogers, Diane Gallo, Gretchen Giroux, Scott Astle, Bill Haugen, Erik Anderson, Samuel Seward, and Carol Oxley.

Colloquium Held By Yale

On the weekend of April 13-15, 2000 students will gather at Yale University for a colloquium on "The Challenge of the Crisis State". Sponsored by Challenge, the colloquium will explore the effect the prolonged Cold War has had on American society - its economy, political processes, military establishment and individual psychology. Speakers at the colloquium will include Max Lerner, Senator E.L. Bartlett, professors Kenneth Boulding and Samuel Huntington, and a debate between Norman Thomas and Fulton Lewis, III. The program will also feature a number of coffee seminars at which students will discuss their own views on various aspects of the colloquium topic.

Challenge is a non-partisan student organization at Yale University, existing in the belief that the American college student has an obligation to understand and contribute to his society. Challenge would like to invite students from all colleges to attend the colloquium. Registration blanks and further information can be obtained by writing to Challenge at Dwight Hall, Yale University, New Haven, Connecticut. All arrangements for the weekend will be made by Challenge.

URI Considers Voluntary ROTC

The Board of Trustees of State Colleges voted out a proposal by the University of Rhode Island Faculty Senate to have voluntary ROTC on the advice of URI president, Dr. Francis H. Horn. Dr. Horn thought it was too early to consider the change especially since certain changes in the compulsory ROTC program were being considered by the Defense Department in Washington.

Dr. Horn then reported that the Army and the Defense Department should have some radically new proposals to submit to the universities. He thought a decision should be given concerning these if they are presented in time to be put in effect by September, 1963.

But new exceptions to the ROTC program have been granted by the Board and will apply to the freshmen next September:

A student may be exempt from ROTC if he is a conscientious objector and can give his dean "satisfactory evidence of his position."

Also excused is the student who will not receive his baccalaureate degree before his 28th birthday.

Aliens will be exempt "if they so elect but they may take basic ROTC courses provided they satisfy certain Army provisions."

If a transfer student enters the school for his sophomore year he will be required to take one year of ROTC. If he enters in his junior or senior year he will be completely excused.

The faculty will study any new proposals from the Defense Department for a ROTC program and will give suggestions to the University president for consideration by trustees.

Need For Off-Campus Housing Seen In Future

The University of Vermont expects to have a continuing need for off-campus housing for some of its men students as well as for graduate students and married students.

This expectation was noted by UVM Dean of Men Roland Patzer, in a letter going this week to Burlington area householders who currently provide, or have provided recently, housing for UVM men students.

While Dean Patzer noted that the opening of new UVM residence halls has brought about 400 young men onto campus, he said "the University has and will continue to have in the foreseeable future, a continuing need for off-campus housing in the Greater Burlington area."

"The University will continue to rely and depend upon the support and cooperation of householders who, for so many years and with patience, understanding, and good-will, have made a positive contribution to the morale and welfare of UVM students," his letter stated.

He estimated that approximately 200 single men undergraduate students will need off-campus housing in the coming year, and indicated that the University would seek to find "approved" housing for them. His letter to householders was accompanied by a statement indicating standards established for University approved housing. "Essentially," Dean Patzer said, "these standards will be based on the Minimum Standards Ordinance of the City of Burlington as well as the health and fire prevention laws and regulations of the State of Vermont."

His letter also noted that "as the University of Vermont accepts students without regard as to race, color, or creed, we would expect, therefore, that householders would follow this same practice."

The letter said the University "has no intention of establishing rental ceilings, interfering directly in student-householder relations, or serving as a rent collection agency in any way. Essentially our method will be to establish an approved housing list and make this available to students."

Dean Patzer invited householders interested in assisting the University by providing housing for men students to contact his office.

UConn Holds Mock Legislature

The Connecticut Student Legislature held its fiftieth annual convention of a mock legislature at which the UConn delegation proposed two bills, one of which was passed and the other defeated in the Senate.

The bill that was passed by both the Senate and the House of this mock legislature was stated as "requiring the licensing of operating engineers."

The other bill proposed by the UConn students, asking for "the establishment of horse racing in Connecticut with parimutual wagering" was passed in the Senate but vetoed in the House. After much discussion, the bill was defeated.

The CISL also had a debate about a bill attempting to lower the state's drinking age to eighteen. This bill was originally passed by the Senate, but when Governor John H. Dempsey made a plea to have the bill defeated, it was voted out 98 to 72 in the House. The bill was originally proposed by a student from Yale.

Attending this mock legislature were over two hundred students from fourteen different Connecticut colleges and universities.

In all, the student Senate and House voted on sixteen bills, passing twelve and defeating three. The defeated bills are those which tried to reduce the drinking age to eighteen, to provide for state ownership of the New Haven Railroad, and to introduce a State-wide course on communism.

The accepted bills were those to repeal the Fair-Trade Act to provide a compulsory investigation before a strike or lock-out, end diversion of funds planned for education, set up a state commission for the mentally retarded, and make the re-examination and re-certification of nurses mandatory.

The bills which the students approve are sent to Governor Dempsey for his information.

one is good enough to be in the three-legged race. An entrance fee of $1.00 must be submitted with the registration of each slalom team or 25¢ for the individual. All registrations must be in the COSA office by March 31.

To end a perfect day, only 75¢ will buy a delicious supper cooked over an open fire not far from the ski area on land owned by the Outing Club.

Two buses will run to the area. One will stay for supper, the price of which will be included in the bus ticket ($1.95). The other bus will return after the trophies are awarded and will cost the regular $1.20. Supper tickets may be bought separately in advance. The buses will leave early enough to give everyone time to warm up and get in some good Spring skiing.

Registration blanks may be picked up in the COSA office. For any further information call Pete Sammis in Austin Hall.

Last year the UVM Outing Club and Pi Beta Phi won the Sloppy Slalom races. A total of 42 University students and one faculty member vied for honors. Bob Penningman of the Outing Club was named the best male skier and Sally Herscude, a sophomore, the best female skier. The Scrannzing Delts of Delta Psi Fraternity finished second in the men's division followed by the Delta Daggers of Delta Psi. Fourth place went to the Botany department. The Women's Outing Club took second in its division.

Dellin To Contribute To Encyclopedia

A University of Vermont economist and political scientist has been asked to contribute an article to his native Bulgaria for a new young people's encyclopedia.

Dr. Lubomir A.D. Dellin, who was born and educated in Sofia, Bulgaria, will write a 4,000-word article dealing with the history, political, social and economic developments of the country.

The encyclopedia will be published by the Crowell-Collier Publishing Co. and is intended for readers at the junior and senior high school level.

Dellin is the author of the book "Bulgaria" published in this country and Great Britain in 1957 and has also written several book chapters and articles on developments in the Soviet-bloc countries.

He also is a contributor to the revised adult edition of Collier's Encyclopedia that is about to be released.

Kirk And Goudey Win Bowling Tournament

In the Mens' Doubles Bowling Championships held last March 16th and 17th in Lower Waterman, the team of Chuck Goudey John Kirk finished first with a combined three-string total of 673. A close second was the duo of Joe Bottiggi and Alen Wilcox with 668. High three-string totals were scored by Bottiggi with 370, and Carl Center who rolled 350. These same bowlers also had the high single strings; Bottiggi had 139, and Center totalled a 132. The Bowling Committee wishes to thank Pete Parks, Benny Becton, and Mr. Gordon Piper for their help in coordinating this tournament.

something amiss. The rash of blurry-eyed souls and unshaven faces during a two week period hints at something "not quite in order."

This is an acute problem, and it is one which is of major concern to every student who is at all serious about his studies. It is unfortunate that the administration has not been able to resolve this problem to date. Spring vacation three weeks away is little incentive to struggle through a week of "all night" cram falsity, especially the rearrangement of the events shown (yes, there were other places in the film, and other allegations made in the film, that were pure fabrication). Not more than one or two per cent of the people who saw both the demonstrations and the films would even say that they believed the film to be correct in every way, or even mostly correct, with no gross errors, but only small ones (e.g., misquoting the time by a half-hour or so, and such like things); even fewer, much fewer, would swear an affidavit, or say categorically, and allow themselves to be quoted, that they thought the film was correct.

So who is right? The bystanders or the vested interests? You can guess who I believe is correct. If you wish to believe the perjurers-incompetents-morons, that's your choice. Folly is the privilege of all.

was seen starring wistfully at his plane ticket for home. I'm still wondering if the polite and mild applause Harrison received at the conclusion of his oration was, as mine was, a restrained expression of the wild elation felt when at last that man had ended.

Friday night, at the conclusion of the last informal discussion, the moderator made a feeble attempt to tie up the speakers' unrelated subjects and opinions by asking them to relate their respective topics. The conclusion which they reached was unanimous: that there is no sense trying to serve strawberry short cake when all that is left in the cupboard is blueberries and spinach.

My objections to this year's Vermont Conference is threefold: 1) There was no unity of subject matter and to relate comic strips, steel mills, and tortillas to each other and to the topic of 'Myopic Man' takes a pretty wild imagination. 2) Because the topics were not related there were no real differences of opinions except a few limp ones that were obviously created in a futile attempt to give the conference the shot in the arm it needed so badly. 3) The speakers, particularly Mr. Lewis, refused to generalize for the sake of answering a simple question simply and in less than in twenty minutes. Too much attention was paid to tedious detail.

It is my hope that either the choice of speakers and topic be considered with these criticisms in mind or that pillows be furnished along with last year's programs as we enter the auditorium.

NOTA BENE

On March 25, 1961 the Alpha Gamma Club became the Alpha Rho Chapter of Alpha Gamma Rho with 33 members. At present they have over 60.

You and your friends are cordially invited to join the Alpha Rho Chapter of Alpha Gamma Rho in celebrating their First Anniversary on Sunday, April 1, 1962 from 1:00-4:00 p.m. HOPE TO SEE YOU THERE!

On March 29, 1962, Mr. Robert Davison, State Extension Director, will speak to the American Society of Agricultural Engineers at the Agricultural Engineering Building.

Students now in residence who wish to apply for financial aid for the college year 1962-63 should file their applications with the Dean of Men or the Dean of Women by April 16.

Loans, whether from university loan funds or under the National Defense Education Act, are not normally granted to students whose average for the last preceding semester is less than 72. To qualify for scholarship grants students are expected to have an average of 75 or higher for the last preceding semester. (Spring semester, 1962 for those students now in attendance).

All applicants for financial assistance, whether scholarship or loan, must file parents' confidential statement each year. This form, as well as the application, may be obtained in the office of the Dean of Men or the Dean of Women.

phony, Mr. Milstein attained rave notices for both his superb skill and perceptive interpretation. He has met with similar acclaim in Latin America and Mexico as well as in Egypt, Israel, and Palestine. As one of the great musical figures of the twentieth century, he is truly an international celebrity. France recently paid him due tribute by presenting him with the title Chevalier in the Legion of Honor.

As a composer, Mr. Milstein has made permanent contributions to violin literature. For instance, he has written his own cadenzas for the Brahms Concerto and the Beethoven Violin Concerto, the latter differing from all other cadenzas in that it is based upon Beethoven's original material for this concerto as originally conceived for the Piano.

His interests are varied and even fascinating. Besides possessing a deep appreciation and critical spirit in painting, politics, philosophy and literature, Mr. Milstein can fluently read and speak many languages, including French, German, Spanish, Italian, English, and of course his native Russian. For hobbies, he delights in purchasing and collecting books, paintings and rare old violin bows.

Among the selections for his April 3rd performance are Bach's Chaconne, Beethoven's Sonata in F Major, Opus 24, "Spring," and Chopin's Nocturne in C Sharp Minor. As expected, tickets are sold out; there is no doubt that the audience will share a tick and rewarding musical experience as Mr. Milstein portrays his typical "combination of technical perfection with emotional freshness and resilience, deep musical understanding with brilliance and ease and a flawless 'classical' taste with warmth and vigor."

and Eastern Europe?" How are we to believe them? Do they think we are morons?" He stated that the situation between the two most powerful countries in the world is too serious for such "jejune lies". He also advised that "we should explore more fully those things which unite us rather than labor those which divide us."

Near the end of the conference the Russian students mentioned they were pleased at the opportunity given to them to express their views and wished that more students from both countries could meet to exchange ideas in areas other than just government policy over which we have so little control. It was interesting to learn that the thoughts and aspirations of Russian Youth seemed to parallel to those which we seek despite the different avenues of approach. The de-Stalinization now in progress seemed to have been interpreted by the Russian students as a means of letting their own people as well as the rest of the world know that "we do not claim to be perfect."

The conference, if measured in terms of live discussion, was a success. On leaving, Boris mentioned to one of the American students "Perhaps we shall meet again when you become president." "Not president" was the reply. "Well, then, maybe vice-president."

tracted five candidates in its first year. Over 50% of the Department's graduates go on either to medical school or to graduate work in chemistry.

The UVM program is particularly oriented toward those who wish to develop academic careers, according to Cook, who points out that every graduate student in chemistry at Vermont is given some teaching role in advance level courses within the department.

The program also offers special challenges to undergraduates. The Chemistry department at Vermont required undergraduate research as early as 1901. Though research participation is not presently required of all chemistry undergraduates, the opportunity to actively participate is available and is considered by the Department to be a most important part of the educational process for most students. Formal recognition of the role of undergraduate research in chemistry at Vermont has just been received in the form of a $7015 National Science Foundation grant which will permit a selected group of junior or senior chemistry majors to work on research during the summer months.

are funny, genuinely funny. But they are not satirists. To be a satirist the humor must hit home base; must hit an issue and hit it hard. Mr. Feiffer departs from the attitude of being funny for the sake of being funny. There is a purpose in humor. It can cause a disturbance, an awakening, a re-evaluation of the self—if used properly. Mr. Feiffer does just this.

Conformity isn't bad when it is just a by-product of the original act. It is all right to buy the same car as your next-door neighbor, but do it because the car is of good quality, because it is economical, not because your neighbor has it. Reflective thinking should be applied to all issues. Everyone knows that nonconformity for the sake of nonconformity is a lot of childishness. People who are in this category want attention. Mr. Feiffer takes this concept for granted. The important point to be analyzed on the topic of conformity is, What are conforming to? Most of us conform completely to the totally regimented life. If I may use the analogy of Dr. Abelman's situation in The Last Angry Man—no one gets mad just for the sake of getting mad any more. Dr. Abelman was annoyed at all the petty, dirty, cheap little things in life. He could have joined, adapted to the situation, stopped looking in mirrors, and lived happily ever after—like everybody else. But he didn't; he fought the whole damned mess. He was the last angry man.

Again, this doesn't mean be a nonconformist just for the hell of it. What Mr. Feiffer is saying, is don't accept without wanting to accept. To resign yourself to the fate of your society because it is more comfortable to do so is deadly. Mr. Feiffer is especially critical of the provincial types of city dwellers; the middle class urban white collar worker, who looks forward to his two week vacation fifty weeks a year; who looks forward to five o'clock, so he can leave the office and go home to his family; of course the right type of family, with the right kind of house, the right amount of kids, the right type of car, the right music playing, in the ideal community, with all the comforts of conformist living. Mr. Feiffer doesn't blame this on the people or the society. He is just annoyed, and wants people to awaken to their situation, and be aware of the rut they have gotten themselves into.

People seem afraid to state their views. They are afraid that if they do, they will be ostracized, lose their jobs, or even be called, Zeus forbid, a—"Communist." The country is asleep. Wake up, America. There are millions of people who are waiting to silence you; there is no reason to do the job yourself. Speak up for what you believe in. Take a chance in life, and you may even find it's worth while.

Mr. Feiffer is happy about the change that is taking place in America today. There is a rejuvenation in the blood-stream of our country. People are stating their views, aloud again. The silence caused by the "witch-hunts" for Communists in the fifties is broken. We now have "Freedom-Riders", "SANE" nuclear policy protestors, and other organizations of dissenters throughout the country. America is starting to think reflectively again. They are initiating a new set of values; they are testing and feeling out for the right goals; it is the rebirth of American consciousness and vitality.

Mr. Feiffer brought out some other very important points. He pointed out the very political "non-political" cartoons; using as an example Terry and The Pirates. It seems that Terry and the boys were catching Nazis during World War II and are now in the midst of tracking down some very naughty Communist spies. Of course the transition is purely coincidental.

Another very important point brought out by Mr. Feiffer, is coordination with Mr. Hassan's "The Face Within: Images of the New Hero in American Literature," is the discussion of our image abroad, and what it should reflect of ourselves. The men both agree that we should worry more about our internal image than our external one. It was even suggested that the best way to sell America to the rest of the world is to stop trying to sell it. This a point well taken, and shared by many listeners.

Mr. Feiffer was very pleased with the turnout and participation of UVMers at the symposiums during Vermont Conference. He said that the questions brought out by the students were reflective, intelligent and serious.

Most students agree that the Conference this year was excellent, and the contributions by Mr. Feiffer invaluable in adding to the success of the Conference.

Simpson Named Catamount Of The Week

Tim Simpson, captain of the UVM track team, is Catamount of the Week in this issue. A native of Lyndonville, Vermont, Tim attended Lyndon Institute where he was a three letter man. He was captain of the football and basketball teams and a member of the track team.

Tim is a junior and is among the few that are elected captain of the Postmen while still an underclassman. Tim was also captain of the cross-country squad last semester.

Competing in the quarter and half mile, the broad jump, and the javelin throw, Simpson poses as a formidable opponent. Last year, he clocked a 4:30 mile at the Yankee Conference championships. He can broad jump over 20 feet and throws the javelin on an average of 190 feet per toss.

A member of Acacia fraternity, Simpson is an excellent student; he has made Dean's List consistently. He is in the College of Agriculture and hopes to attend graduate school.

Coach Archie Post says Tim has great promise and is hoping for an outstanding performance and many victories from his captain.

SPORTING OPINIONS

By HOWIE GORNEY

Last year, before I found enough strength to pass the Cozen's test, I had the dubious pleasure of taking gym. Before the first class, my anticipation grew, for I had expected the comprehensive program which I had in high school (at which I was not too successful). Little did I realize that the last time I would exercise on a parallel bar or a high bar would be the day on which I took the Cozen's test. Least of all did I expect to be herded into a class of 50 or 60 for ten minutes of calisthenics and ten, or if we were lucky, fifteen more minutes of completely chaotic football, basketball, volleyball or softball. Is this the way towards a complete physical fitness program for UVM? I doubt it.

It seems to me that those students who fail to pass the Cozen's test (myself included) are the ones who could stand the most physical improvement. Instead, they are subjected to a few sit ups, push ups, or jumping jacks, which most of the students fake their way through, and then they make a complete joke out of competition in any of the four sports which I previously mentioned.

However, don't be so quick to blame the Athletic Department. They are all good physical education instructors and seem like a dedicated lot. The blame is not entirely theirs. This problem is caused in great part by the serious lack of personnel inhabiting our gym. A class of 50, or, at times, even 80 boys is given one instructor—all the athletic department can afford. How can this teacher hope to do the kind of job he wants to do against such odds? Another cause is the apathy of the students (here I go again). Too many of those taking gym consider it a big joke. They fail to realize the importance of physical development. Oh, well, President Kennedy has already touched upon this subject; so anything I say about it will surely be nothing but repetition.

Suggestions? I have plenty, but most of them require money which the trustees are unwilling to give. For example, we could always double our athletic staff; this would allow more supervision and leave more time for the teachers to teach, the coaches to coach, etc. We could remember that the parallel bars, the horses, and the high bars are not just for the Cozen's test or the Kake Walkers. Of course, the new gym will help, but until the athletic program acquires a little organization, and students start caring about their physical condition, I foresee UVM turning out a senior class each year permeated with underdeveloped bookworms.

Track Team Sees Improvement

Squad Bolstered By Sophs

Up and over. Soph Terry Finkel shows good form as he works for a berth on this year's track squad.

(Credit: Sulton, S.P.S.)

With the outdoor cinder season only a few short weeks away, the UVM track team is busily preparing for the upcoming campaign. This year's fine track squad, even though it is heavily laden with inexperienced sophomores, appears to be vastly improved over the team Vermont fielded last year. According to UVM track coach Archie Post, "on paper we look better than ever. We have exceptional, yet unaccustomed, depth and great potential, but these factors will only be to our advantage if our boys are out there working hard and putting everything into it."

In discussing the strong points, Post stated that captain Tim Simpson would be running the 1/4 and 1/2 mile races this year instead of the mile run, an event that he competed in last year. Taking his place will be sensational Bill Perkins, who ran a fine 4:19 mile in the New England meet last year, and could do even better this year with his added experience. For longer distance events Coach Post can rely on a fine trio of Gary Karch, last year's undefeated freshman cross-country star, Harold Billings, and Steve Russel.

Gary Greene and Pete Weiss will perform double duty for the track team by running in both the high and low hurdles. Adding strength to these events are Terry Finkel, holder of the school freshman record in the low hurdles, and Owen Mathewson, former high school state champion in the high hurdles.

One of the weaknesses of the team, according to Mr. Post are the 100 and 200 yard dashes. Post's concern is caused by his having to start two good, but green sophomores in those events, Alan Brown, and Ken Burton, both halfbacks on the varsity football team. However, the coach also feels that the ingredients are there, and that a year of work will help them immeasurably.

Pole vaulting is a field event which requires both strength and agility. Coach Post is quite pleased with his lineup for this event which includes Dick Gomez, Bob Donahue, and Steve Bernstein. This fine group of vaulters should add quite a few points to UVM's score in the many upcoming meets.

One of Vermont's strongest events this season is the high jump since it has three excellent performers, Owen Mathewson, Pete Voytek, and outstanding sophomore Lee Pantas are all capable of clearing six feet. Thus the opposition will have a tough time defeating this trio, as it will in the broad jump where Chuck Grutman, Simpson and Brown will hold forth.

The shot put will be thrown this year by football lineman Dave Sequist, John Fyfe, Ron Oliver, and a promising newcomer Elliot Chartrand. The large group of eight discus men include Dave Strassburg, Voytek, Bill Thurber, Sequist, Oliver, Steve Crandall, and Fyfe. Another field event, the hammer, will be thrown by Carleton Eck, Sequist, Chartrand, Strassburg, Tom Whittaker, and Thurber, who is a sophomore transfer student from the University of New Hampshire. In this year's competition the javelin will be tossed by Burton, Simpson and, Les Cohen.

Golf Team Eyes Good Season

In less than one month, UVM's golf team will hit the links for their first match. Coach Ed Donnelly predicts, that, as in past years, the squad should prove to be tough competition in the New England circuit.

Donnelly expressed the hope that the team will better last year's record of four wins and four defeats that enabled Vermont to finish tenth out of 34 New England colleges, and this year the team shows potential for passing this record. In fall competition, John Donnelly and Ed Gallagher beat the number one and two men on Sir George Williams University team from Canada, the winners of the Canadian Walker Cup.

Acting captain is returning letterman Steve Walner. Playing a consistently good game, Steve is expected to lead his team to victories in the absence of Jack Olger, this year's captain elect. Jack, was forced to transfer to Babson Institute in Boston. Although the team will feel the loss, it is expected that the combination of juniors, Charley Bently and Steve Reiter, and sophomores Ed Gallagher, Gary Pearson, Dick Melrowitz, and John Donnelly, will pull the team through.

According to Coach Donnelly, the biggest problem the team has is its late start. Colleges in warmer climates fare much better in early matches because of the advantage of early practice on the greens. The earliest that the UVM squad can start its workouts is Spring Recess. With the completion of the new gym and its driving range, the team's record will stand to improve greatly.

The schedule for Spring Varsity Golf is as follows:

April 25, Mass. and W.P.I. at Amherst; May 2, Middlebury; May 5, R.P.I. in Saratoga; May 8, Clarkson and St. Lawrence; May 9, Vermont State Championships; May 11, 12, New England and Yankee Conference Championships.

Assistant Grid Coach Picked

John Coons will be assistant to Robert Clifford this coming football season. His appointment will be recommended to the Board of Trustees at their April meeting. Coons is currently a high school coach at East Longmeadow, Massachusetts.

A 1950 graduate of Springfield College, Coons will become an instructor in the department of physical education. At East Longmeadow High School, Coons is director of athletics and coaches football and hockey.

He spent two years as an assistant football coach at Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute before returning to Springfield to receive his master's degree in 1955. Clifford and Coons are not strangers. In 1956 Coons served as Coach Clifford's assistant at Colby College for two years before moving to East Longmeadow, where he has been since 1959.

Third Annual Greek Week Spotlights Brand, Krupa

The Intrafraternity Council of the University of Vermont is once again busy working on the spring festival - Greek Week. Plans for Chariot Races, IFC Sing, Discussion Groups, Teas, and Jazz Concert are being speedily and efficiently developed.

The highlight of this year's Greek Week is the Jazz Concert, with Oscar Brand and Gene Krupa. Both artists are leaders in the field of music.

Gene Krupa started his drumming career as a boy of 13 with a rather unimpressive band called the "Frivoleans", a dime-dance grind group at Wisconsin Beach. He played off and on around his home - Chicago - with various small units, then entered St. Joseph's College in Rensselaer, Indiana, to study for the priesthood. The drums won out over the books. However, after a year's study, Gene went to work as a regular skin beater.

Gene Krupa's Quartet plays by what is known in the trade as "head arrangements". The boys memorize them, no notes on paper being used at all. They are "swinging and great".

Oscar Brand can be heard on his 78 RPM series for Young People's Records, "The American Almanac". Brand's excellent album "Bawdy Songs and Ballroom Ballads" has received wonderful reviews. Oscar Brand's fine voice, high sense of humor, fresh work, pert, earthy, and alive personality have made him one of America's best folk singers and balladeers.

Tickets for the Jazz Concert are on sale at the University store. The Jazz Concert will be Friday night from 8:00 PM until 10:30 and the price of admission will be $2.00 apiece.

A preview of the remainder of the week shows an interesting chain of events. Tuesday, April 10, there will be an IFC Banquet with Richard Fletcher, National President of Sigma Nu as guest speaker. Wednesday April 10, there will be a series of fraternity and sorority exchange dinners. Thursday, April 12, there will be one large discussion group in the student lounge. National officers from three large National Fraternities have been sighted as guest speakers on "The faults of UVM's Rushing System". A survey of over 100 campus rushing systems has just been completed by IFC. The new ideas from this survey and the ideas from the National officers will make this year's discussion group one of the best in many years.

Friday April 13, the annual Chariot Race will be held at Redstone Campus. Delta Psi fraternity won this event last year and will be fighting to hold their crown. Panhellenic Council will present a little surprise called "Mock Olympics" immediately following the race. Saturday April 14, Greek Week will end with the annual IFC Sing. Competition will prove to be keen this year and without a doubt will promote some fine singing on behalf of the fraternities and sororities.

Ceylon National Dancers To Present "Varied" Program In Lane Chamber Finale

Ceylon National Dancers will perform one of the royal and sacred dances which were sponsored by the Kandyan Kings in centuries long gone. Each of the above dancers is a member of the "dancing clan" ordained by the Kandy Kings. All come from a dancers' village called Nittiwala for the clan.

For its final presentation, the Lane Chamber Arts Series will host the fascinating and unique Ceylon National Dancers on April 7, at 8:30 P.M. Never before in any Lane Series has there been an opportunity to witness a folk dance group although both modern dance and ballet groups have appeared. The Ceylon National Dancer's performance will consist of a splendid combination of theatrical mimicry, traditional music and interpretational dance.

The company is comprised of nine men and women, highly skilled artists, who are accompanied by two drummers. The dances, themselves are ritual, mask and fire, each one celebrating a particular festival, portraying a certain sound or animal, or relating an historic tale. For instance, among the seventeen colorful dances on the program there is the Guhaka Vahhama -- the sound of Conch. An extraordinary characteristic of the Singalese, as shown in this dance, is that they possess the extraordinary ability to translate a sound into movements. Through artful mimicry involving pace, gesture, facial and body expression and attitude, they recreate the significance of the blowing of the shell (or Conch summoning all to worship and to other communal gatherings.) The dancers impart to the audience the authority of that sound and the emotional reactions to it.

Another rather interesting aspect of the group is the nature of their costumes. Both unusual and spectacular, these native costumes are truly among the most elaborate and beautiful in the world. They include resplendent headdresses, magnificent harnesses of silver jewelry, skirts of voluminous pure white cloth, fine-fashioned embroidery and frightful masks.

The Ceylon National Dancers will perform on Saturday, April 7 at 8:30 P.M. Since the presentation is in Southwick Auditorium, the seating capacity is limited to only two hundred. Tickets may be purchased for $1.50 at Bailey's Music Rooms, at 142 Waterman, and at the door.

UVM Frosh Win Varsity Debate Tournament

Freshman Debaters are happy as they bring home the Daniel Webster Trophy.

Last weekend marked the 11th annual Invitational Varsity Debate Tournament at LaMoyn College, Syracuse, at which fifteen eastern colleges were represented. The news-making factor of this event was that four freshmen from Vermont defeated the fourteen other upperclass teams to place first in the debate. The affirmative stand was taken by Dan Newcomb and Ruth Baldwin who downed Siena, Misericordia, U. of Buffalo, and St. John Fisher, losing only to the U. of Rochester. Above and beyond the team victory, Dan took two First Speaker ratings, while

by Dick Carlson

The Class Honoraries at the University of Vermont are now in the process of selecting next year's members. The six honoraries are: Sophomore Aides (Sophomore Women), Staff and Sandal (Junior Women), Mortar Board (Senior Women), Gold Key (Sophomore Men), Key and Serpent (Junior Men), and Boulder Society (Senior Men).

Sophomore Aides, composed of 21 sophomore women, may accept up to 10 per cent of all freshmen women for women. All freshmen women participate in the first part of the selection process, each voting for 25 nominees. After the results are tallied, the names of the freshmen girls who have received the minimum number of votes are sent to the Dean of Women who checks the girls' scholastic averages.

The names of those girls who have maintained an average equal to or above the necessary average are sent back to Sophomore Aides. With the aid of the Assistant Dean of Women and their advisers, the women in the honorary candidates. The approximately 24 girls who enter each year must be elected unanimously by the present membership. Criteria for prospective members include: scholastic ability, leadership ability and potential, character, and outside interests.

As a service organization, Sophomore Aides prepares "Dear Susie", a pamphlet which is sent to all entering freshmen women in the summer. The society also conducts the Big-Little Sister Sing in the Fall, as well as serving in various capacities at Homecoming, the Fine Arts Festival, and at teas.

Staff and Sandal, the Junior Women's Honorary, has the sophomore women ballot for the girls to be considered for membership. Like Sophomore Aides, the present members draw information on the candidates from members of the administration and faculty. The present members make the final selection for new members.

This honorary serves in the Homecoming Weekend activities as well as performing other jobs when called upon, such as guiding visitors around the campus.

Mortar Board, the Senior Women's Honorary, selects its members from nominations offered by the members of the faculty and administration. Members are selected on the basis of their leadership qualities, scholastic achievement, and service to the University.

There is no set minimum number of members which the society must accept. At present there are ten members.

The "Mum Sale" at Homecoming is one of this honorary's activities. With the other societies it assists during Freshman Orientation Week. Throughout the year it has been conducting an investigation of honor systems with the hope that an honor system may be established at UVM sometime in the future.

Men in the Freshman Class who are recommended by one of eleven sources (including heads of departments, organizations, and fraternities, deans, coaches, and members of the administration) are considered for membership by the Gold Key Honor Society. Candidates' scholarship, character, and leadership qualities as shown by participation in undergraduate activities and loyalty to the ideals of the University, are considered in the nominations. From these nominations the present members of the society will elect approximately 15 new members. The society is presently discussing an amendment to change the method of final voting.

"Gold Key is more than an organization to honor students who have achieved academic distinction. It is basically a service organization," says Harry Dickerson, president of Gold Key. "Members must combine good grades with their outside activities and leadership ability."

One of the most important services that Gold Key performs is the compilation and organization of material for the University of Vermont Directory. It also conducts guided tours on State Day, counts and sorts ballots during the S.A. elections, participates in Homecoming activities, and performs other services when asked.

Gold Key holds monthly meetings at which future activities are planned and the role of the honorary discussed. Recently, Gold Key members met with members of Sophomore Aides to discuss ways of selecting members for the honorary society.

Key and Serpent, the Junior Men's Honorary, has recently announced a change in its process of selecting new members. Prospective members now submit, in letter form, their qualifications and reasons for desiring membership in the society. The following qualifications are taken into account: a 75 average at least, creative initiative, ability for college betterment, attitude toward school, general feeling toward others, sincerity, and willingness to assume responsibilities.

As a service organization, Key and Serpent participates in Homecoming Weekend and in various other activities. Paul Chervin is the president of Key and Serpent. Faculty adviser is Mr. Raymond L. Finehout, Alumni Field Secretary. The blood drive to be held tomorrow, April 6, is also a project of Key and Serpent Honorary Society.

Above average academic standing, leadership qualities, character, and outside activities are also the qualifications for membership in the Boulder Society. The society solicits administrative personnel, the Deans, faculty members, and organization heads for nominations. From these references the seven present members will select the new members.

The philosophy behind this honorary is that it is not just a service organization. "Its purpose is to recognize what students have done in the past, not to look for special projects," says Jerry Emery, president.

The names of the class honoraries' new members will be submitted to the University Council for approval. On Honors Day, May 1, the names will be publicly announced.

Sorority Representatives Elect Pan Hel Officers

The Panhellenic Council of the University of Vermont have announced its new officers for the year 1962-1963. President of the new council is Meezie Guyer. Vice-President is Betsy Lisman, Secretary Kathy Uttendorfer, Treasurer Kae Gleason, and Publicity Chairman is Rickie Means.

Meezie Guyer, a native of St. Johnsbury, Vermont, is a member of Alpha Chi Omega Sorority. She is a junior in the College of Technology and is majoring in Medical Technology. In addition to her work with Panhellenic Council, Meezie has been vice-president of Coolidge second, vice-president of Interdorm council, Alpha Chi's junior representative to Panhellenic Council, and has served on the Student Association Social Committee. When not busy with University activities, Meezie is either working at the Medical Alumni Building where she assists in research or partakes of her favorite past-times, skiing and listening to jazz.

Vice-President of the new council, Betsy Lisman, is a Burlingtonian. Betsy, a member of Alpha Epsilon Phi Sorority, is a junior in the College of Arts and Sciences and is majoring in Political Science. Although Betsy claims she leads a quiet life, she is active in Staff and Sandal, International Relations Club—she's vice-president and moderator of this group—Student Court, and Panhellenic Council. In addition to this, Betsy is a varsity debater and a member of the national inter-collegiate speech honorary, Tau Kappa Alpha. In her spare time, the new Panhellenic Council vice-president coaches debate at Burlington High School and is a member of the Vermont State Discussion Program.

The new secretary of Panhellenic Council, Kathy Uttendorfer, lives in West Hempstead, New York. She is a sophomore in the College of Education and is majoring in History and English. Kathy is a member of Gamma Phi Beta Sorority and is a member of their executive council. She was on the WSGA Rules and Regulations Evaluation Committee, is treasurer of her house committee, and is volleyball chairman of the Women's Recreation Association. In addition to this, Miss Uttendorfer is on the executive council of the Newman Club, is a member of SNEA and has served on the Panhellenic Council. The new secretary's outside activities are concentrated in working at the New School, the only school for men-

Kae Gleason, the new treasurer of Panhellenic Council is no stranger to elected offices. Just this past week, the women students at the University of Vermont elected Kae as the new Vice-President of WSGA. A member of Pi Beta Phi Sorority, Kae is a junior in the College of Education and Nursing, where she is majoring in English and French. A native Vermonter, Kae is Scholarship Chairman and Panhellenic Council delegate for Pi Beta Phi. In addition to this, she is a member of Women's Recreation Guide Association and the Cynic Staff and served on this year's Freshman Orientation Banquet Committee. Kae also does volunteer work at the New School and works at the Mary Fletcher Hospital Gift Shop.

The new publicity chairman for Panhellenic Council, Rickie Means, is a junior in the College of Arts and Sciences and is majoring in English.

Rickie, a Vermonter, is a member of the Ariel's feature staff, is junior representative of Delta Delta Delta Sorority to Panhellenic Council and is chairman of one of the Greek Week Committees. In addition to this, Rickie is Rush Chairman of Delta Delta Sorority and on the executive committee of the Canterbury Club. In her spare time, Rickie is a member of the Bailey Library staff.

The new Panhellenic Council announced their activities for the coming year. First on their list was a deep interest in arranging for the sponsorship of a foreign exchange undergraduate to study at the University of Vermont for one year. The money for this project will come from the Mary Jean Simpson Fund.

The second project on the agenda for this enthusiastic Council, is revising the system of Panhellenic Dorm Representatives and finally, the new Panhellenic Council is working towards more participation for Sororities in the annual Greek Week.

CRAM COURSE NO. 2: BIOLOGY

The grisly shadow of final exams looms over us, so today in this column instead of merry quips and homely saws, you will find hard facts—quick cram courses to help you through the ordeal ahead.

Last week I gave you a rapid survey of Modern European History. Now let us turn to Biology.

Biology is divided into several phyla, or classes. First is the protozoa, or one-celled animal. All life stems from the one-celled animal. Over a space of millions of years, life slowly evolved until today we have animals with as many as 12 cells. Some larger mammals claim they have 14 to 16 cells, but you know how larger mammals lie.

The second class of animals is the periphera—a shadowy category that borders often on the vegetable. Take, for example, the sponge. The sponge is definitely an animal. The washcloth, on the other hand, is definitely not.

Next we come to the arthropoda, or insects. Most people, of course, find insects fairly repulsive—and yet, if one will but look, there is exquisite beauty in the insect world. Who does not remember the lovely insect poems of William Cullen Sigafoos—such enchanting lyrics as Tumbling Along with the Tumbling Tumblebug, Fly Gently, Sweet Aphid, and Gnats My Mother Taught Me. Mr. Sigafoos has been inactive since the invention of DDT.

Our next category is the mollusca—lobsters, shrimp, and the like. Lobsters are generally found under rocky projections on the ocean bottom. Shrimp are generally found in a circle around a small bowl containing cocktail sauce. Marlboro Cigarettes are generally found at any tobacco counter or vending machine.

What have Marlboro Cigarettes got to do with biology? Well, actually, not very much. It must be remembered, however, that the makers of Marlboro pay me for writing this column, and they are inclined to get surly if I fail to mention their product.

Mind you, I enjoy singing the praises of Marlboro—and so will you once you try that flavorful tobacco; that fine filter which lets the flavor come through undiminished. It is a great pleasure to smoke Marlboros and a great pleasure to write about them, but sometimes, I must confess, I find it a bit difficult to work the commercial into the column. Some years ago, for example, I did a piece about Alexander the Great, and, believe you me, it took a heap of stretching to drop in a plug for Marlboro. The way I finally managed it was to have Alexander go to the Oracle at Delphi and say, "Oracle, I have conquered the world and tasted all its pleasures, but somehow I am not content. I know that somewhere there must be a joy I have not yet experienced." To which the Oracle replied,

There is no great difficulty distinguishing the two

"Yes, Alexander, there is such a joy, but, alas, the time is not yet. I refer to Marlboro Cigarettes which will not be invented for another 2500 years." Whereupon Alexander fell into a sulk from which he never recovered. . . Well sir, there is no question I sold a lot of cigarettes with this ingenious commercial, but the gang down at the American Academy of Arts and Letters gave me a mighty good razzing, you may be sure.

But I digress. Back to biology, and the most advanced phylum of all—the chordata, or vertebrates. There are two kinds of vertebrates—those whose backbones run horizontally and those whose backbones run vertically. Generally, there is no great difficulty in distinguishing the two varieties. A fish, for instance, has a horizontal backbone, and a man has a vertical backbone. Occasionally, however, you run into a problem—like a fish who swims upright and a man who spends most of his time in the sack. How, in such a case, do you tell one from another? Science struggled with this sticky question for centuries, but finally Sigafoos of M.I.T. came up with a brilliantly simple answer. Offer the creature a Marlboro. If it is a fish, it will refuse. If it is Homo sapiens, it will accept. In fact, the more sapient, the quicker the acceptance.

© 1962 Max Shulman

The makers of Marlboro, upright vertebrates all, remind you that their fine cigarettes are available in pack or box wherever cigarettes are sold in any of the 50 states.

Editor's Scrapbook

It is not often that an epitaph is written in memory of the passing of a season. However, we at UVM, and Vermonters in general, should bow their heads in fond remembrance of the briefest of Vermont's seasons. Yes, Spring has come and gone.

One morning about ten days ago, the sun broke through the cold mist of Winter, the clouds drifted into thousands of snowy tufts of cotton, and the snow was almost gone. Each and every student would have testified: Spring had surely come to UVM.

Barely one foot was slid into a pair of Bermuda shorts, hardly a single pair of white ducks pulled from the deepest depths of the storage trunk, and hardly a single bottle of iodine and baby oil mixed to form suntan lotion, andthe sun was gone again.

Seventy-five degree weather. Gone.

Perhaps Spring was just not meant to come like that. Maybe Mother Nature just wanted to whet our appetites, or just temporarily break the dull monotony of white, to keep us at our books, plugging away a little harder with the realization that Spring is just around the corner.

Many Freshman have never experienced Spring at UVM, or have only gotten a brief glimpse of it. It is quite a phenomenon. It was never meant to be a sudden, unnatural occurrence. It is a pleasurable, unhurried affair, in the best New England tradition. The sun shines a little brighter each day, the dull gray cocoon gradually loosens its grip on the baby blue azure beneath and the snow really does melt from sight.

Then the girls.....bless the girls. Their shorts get shorter every year, their smiles seem brighter, and pray tell, what can fill a bathing suit quite like a co-ed?

Convertible tops go down and bottles (of suntan lotion) are reverently slid into the glove compartment. Caravans are hastily assembled, and it's off to the beach.

Reminiscing, yes. But when will the golden rays pierce the silver armor of the skies and once again sparkle on the cool sands of the nearby beaches and glisten in the smile of a pretty co-ed?

The Circular File

by Mike Grossman

At the risk of becoming another Reader's Digest and never printing an original article, I would like to reprint a parable from a short story of J.D. Salinger entitled Raise High the Roof Beam, Carpenters. The parable is of particular significance to college students who, like myself, often ponder on the question, "What good am I getting out of college?" It should also hit home to those students who will continually bow to the almighty grade during their years at UVM.

Duke Mu of Chin said to Po Lo: "You are now advanced in years. Is there any member of your family whom I could employ to look for horses in your stead?" Po Lo replied: "A good horse can be picked out by its general build and appearance. But the superlative horse -- one that raises no dust and leaves no tracks -- is something evanescent and fleeting, elusive as thin air. The talents of my sons lie on a lower plane altogether; they can tell a good horse when they see one, but they cannot tell a superlative horse. I have a friend, however, one Chiu-fang Kao, a hawker of fuel and vegetables, who in things appertaining to horses is nowise my inferior. Pray see him."

Duke Mu did so, and subsequently dispatched him on the quest for a steed. Three months later, he returned with the news that he had found one. "It is now in Schach'lu," he added. "What kind of a horse is it?", asked the Duke. "Oh, it is a dun-colored mare," was the reply. However, someone being sent to fetch it, the animal turned out to be a coal-black stallion! Much displeased, the Duke sent for Po Lo. "That friend of yours," he said, "whom I commissioned to look for a horse, has made a fine mess of it. Why he cannot even distinguish a beast's color or sex! What on earth can he know about horses?" Po Lo heaved a sigh of satisfaction. "Has he really got as far as that?" he cried. "Ah, then he is worth ten thousand of me put together. There is no comparison between us. What Kao keeps in view is the spiritual mechanism, in making sure of the essential, he forgets the homely details; intent on the inward qualities, he loses sight of the external. He sees what he want to see, and not what he does not want to see. He looks at the things he ought to look at, and neglects those that need not be looked at. So clever a judge of horses is Kao, that he has it in him to judge something better than horses."

When the horse arrived, it turned out indeed to be a superlative animal.

Letters To The Editor

Block Voting

To the Editor:

As individual members of Alpha Delta Pi Sorority we are concerned with the method of selection of Freshman Week Committee Chairmen. We deem it necessary that some student group take action on this problem since at present the University has no co-ordinator of Student Activities in their employ.

In the past, the meeting at which elections took place was not sufficiently publicized so as to attract a representative and interested group of students. The nominations for chairmen were not comprehensive and many qualified and interested students were omitted because of ignorance of the meeting, or a feeling of frustration due to the procedures involved. The voting itself was carried out in such a manner that one or two persons decided the choice of a bloc of voters. There were not enough independent voters present to outvote the blocs, and this again eliminated qualified candidates. In totality, the method of election of the Freshman Week Chairmen was entirely unsatisfactory to many interested students in attendance.

We would recommend that the enlarged and representative Student Association Council take definite action in this area. We take this opportunity to suggest that S.A. Council investigate and remedy this cause of concern. Perhaps interested students could submit letters to a Student Association Committee. This committee would in turn prepare a slate of co-chairmen which would be submitted to the student body for a representative vote. Other persons interested would then be placed on the committees of their choice.

We, as members representing Alpha Delta Pi Sorority, take this opportunity to convey our concern because the success of Freshman Week greatly influences the members of the incoming Freshman Class and also marks

Five Students Elected To Phi Beta Kappa

Five University of Vermont students were initiated into Phi Beta Kappa in ceremonies conducted by the UVM chapter on Thursday.

The five are Wendell Carr and Sally Camp of Burlington; Edward Whalen of Winooski; Lois Lorand of Nutley, N.J.; and Marlene Aldo of Bridgeport, Conn.

Miss Mary Jean Simpson, former Dean of Women at Vermont, presented the keys to the new members.

Carr is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Wendell I. Carr of 32 Wilson St. He is a senior in the College of Technology and is a mathematics major.

Miss Camp is a senior in the College of Education and Nursing, majoring in secondary education. Her parents are Mr. and Mrs. Eli Camp of East Randolph.

Whalen recently was the recipient of a Woodrow Wilson Fellowship for graduate study at the college of his choice. An English major in the College of Arts and Sciences, Whalen is a senior and is the son of Mrs. Leona J. Whalen of 230 Main St., Winooski.

Miss Aldo is combining her final year of undergraduate study with her first year in the College of Medicine under a special program. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Aldo.

Miss Lorand, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lorand, is a senior in the College of Arts and Sciences where she is a German major.

Thank you very much for your consideration and action on this matter.

HUAC

To the Editor:

I would like to take this opportunity to differ with the opinions expressed last week by Mr. Boriskin in his very perceptive column concerning the film "Operation Abolition".

Unlike Mr. Boriskin, I cannot vouch either for or against the authenticity of the film, as I was not in San Francisco at the time of the hearings in question. I would however, have to disagree vehemently with Mr. Boriskin's contention that "Dr. Chaplin had no trouble disposing of Mr. Martin's rather feeble arguments." My own opinion is that Mr. Martin's arguments defending the film were not feeble and the ensuing discussing between the two men was a standoff, as both had much documented evidence supporting their respective contentions, as myself has no way of knowing whose evidence was valid and until this can be determined no argument can be conclusive. Perhaps Mr. Boriskin was in San Francisco for the hearings and could thusly dismiss Mr. Martin's arguments as false. Or perhaps he is taking Psychology I with Dr. Chaplin and expects that he might pick up a few brownie points by agreeing with Dr. Chaplin's inconclusive contentions. If the latter is the case, I wish Mr. Boriskin good luck with the brownie points, but I doubt that he will get them.

Concerning the film itself, "Operation Abolition" implied that all those opposed to the House Un-American Activities Committee are either Communists or are dupes of the Communists. I do not subscribe to the theory that anything the Communists are for we must be against, so I therefore cannot agree with the contention that only Communists and their dupes oppose the HUAC, since it has been an extremely controversial committee.

I personally am in favour of the HUAC since I feel it is doing a necessary job despite the fact a few innocent persons may have been hurt by its activities. Until I see figures to the contrary, I would have to say that the good far outweighs the bad and that the HUAC should be continued.

I would like to make one comment concerning Mr. Boriskin's closing paragraph calling the Congressmen who voted to submit "Operation Abolition" as a valid document in the U.S. Congress a bunch of "perjurers-incompetents-morons." Judging from Mr. Boriskin's columns in the Cynic and his personal letters to me, I would have to say that his comment is similar to that of the pot calling the kettle black.

Sincerely,
Lew Wiener, '63

It is a matter of record that some few years ago a certain business institute encountered difficulty in convincing students that English Composition was a course which belonged in a business curriculum. (Hard as it may be for you to credit such a report, Gentle Reader, I beg that you suspend your disbelief, however unwillingly.) To make a sweet story short, let it simply be announced that the institute's problem was solved by a specialist in semantics, who deftly plucked to the heart of the matter and changed the students' attitude by the clever expedient of changing the course name to "Communications Skills."

This academic adjustment to the realities of our society once seemed harmless enough, if not indeed amusing; but, as with many an apparently harmless beginning, things progressed from innocuous to worse. Therefore, let us begin again and diagnose what must be regarded as an infectious disease, studying its inception and incubation through until we gain a vision of the broader malaise which this particular sickness reflects.

Once upon a time, there was a young man named Prospective Tycoon. Upon graduation from high school, our impatient young hero was accepted as a candidate for vocational training by an institution of higher learning. He might have chosen one of a number of other institutions, but his community and its values had long since given him free choice all the earmarks of foreordination. With the blessings, then, of his spiritual parents, young PT set forth to seek his fortune (s).

But imagine his consternation when upon matriculation young PT was introduced to a fair young damsel of the curriculum, the blushing Miss English Composition! "A strange bedfellow for an enterprising youth," cried PT. "I must see that she is made an honest woman." (This was nobly spoken, according to his lights.) Never ones to block the path of a young man with drive, the institute's authorities bowed to PT's wishes and sent Miss E.C. to the famed verbal cosmetologist and window-dresser Semanticist the Great. The Great Hiss, as he was affectionately called (unrelated to Alger of the same surname, although a close relative of Horatio Alger, Jr.), succeeded in transforming our fair maiden so completely that it was necessary to change her very handle, as they say in the selling game. "No longer the product of a traditional lack of imagination," exulted the Great Hiss, "you shall henceforth be known as Communications Skills."

"Ah," exclaimed the authorities, "Once plain and unvarnished, the captivating creature now before us will surely stir the heart of the promising PT." And indeed promising he became: Made over in the image of Success, the Bitch Goddess, little E.C. now appeared so voluptuous that as CS she elicited from PT the most extravagant of promises.

Yea, PT promised her everything -- everything, that is, except her heart's desire. He promised her everything; but what he in fact gave her was an imitation rattlesnake suitcase as a wedding present. And so, with his prize now in his possession (young and ole, PT was always one to prize his possessions), the ambitious PT left behind the College Green and set out (well-bent, some will say) in pursuit of the Long Green.

"We are penniless now, my Dear," he said, "but if you will but lend me the aid and succor of my wedding gift to you, that I may use it as my sample case, I have no doubt that I shall soon have made my mark(s)." So saying, PT embarked on one long sales pitch which carried him from one spell-binding sale to another. Behind him he left a love without a suitcase, that very suitcase containing the marvelous cosmetics which the Great Hiss had been at such pains to teach her to apply to herself. After a day or two without makeup, the attractiveness of this business widow began to fade that the gentlemen of the neighborhood who had anticipated her husband's departure with such relish saw the error of their ways and returned in spirit as well as flesh to the embrace of those whom society indulgently considers their licit lives.

At length, PT returned, for the sample case he had carried was becoming threadbare (even trite phrases and clichés wear out, and the fashion was turning from "in terms of" and "wise" to "image." Indeed so time-worn had become his bag of verbal tricks that PT had resorted more and more frequently to the basic word "communications" itself, in a desperate effort to win friends and influence people -- to sell himself and thereby whatever product he might be vending (at the moment).

Imagine PT's astonishment when, upon reaching all that he should ever know of home, he found three young whelps crawling and pulling on the floor of his valued existing-room (who calls that "living"?). In a gesture of exasperation, he began to push the little monsters aside, whereupon a sweet voice he could scarcely recognize murmured, "No, no, PT. They are the children of your Joins."

Disgusting as they had looked to him but a moment before, the three little shavers now appeared to PT in a new light. "There's a sucker born every minute, boys," quoth PT from the depths of the unconscious of his race. "Don't just crawl there; be up and doing. Live off the fat-heads of the land." Grabbing up and emptying a wagon full of blocks, he gave his offspring one final piece of fatherly advice: "Here! Hitch this to a star!"

So saying, PT turned to greet his Communications Skills; but instead he viewed a reincarnation of the guileless English Composition, hopelessly unadorned, with just a trace of beauty yearning for appreciation and development, but with none of the expensive accoutrements that had once made PT the envy of all red-blooded competitors. Where was the painted woman with the cheek-stretching smile, the counterfeit good cheer, the come-hither, well-met glance, the honeyed voice? Whither had fled that very symbol of other-directed self-assurance from whom he had drawn his strength?

"Did you not pledge yourself to love me, for better or for worse?" pled the pale English Composition, sensing that things were now taking their turn for the worse.

"No," began PT, searching for words with which to communicate.

Writer's Fellowships

The New York City Writers Conference, held annually on the campus of Wagner College, Staten Island, N.Y., has announced that 12 fellowships are available for this year's session, to be held July 10-20.

Willard Maas, conference director, said that the fellowships would be for the workshops in fiction, drama and poetry.

Among those establishing financial aid for the 1962 conference are Victor Weybright, chairman of the board and editor in chief of The New American Library of World Literature and Storer B. Lunt, chairman of the board of W.W. Norton and Company and president of the American Book Publishers Council.

A fellowship of particular interest to college students is the Adele Crabtree Memorial. It includes fees which will permit the winner to earn two academic credits in English on either the graduate or undergraduate level.

A special prize of $100 for the best avant-garde poem writer at the conference has been established by Miss Frances Steloff of the Gotham Book Mart.

The conference also gives the $500 Stanley Award in Drama to "an outstanding new playwright" for a work that has never been produced professionally. The award also carries a full fellowship to the conference.

Judges for this year's Stanley Award competition will be playwright Edward Albee, producer David Susskind, actresses Kim Stanley and Geraldine Page, and Dr. John Hruby, director of theatre at Wagner.

Further information on the scholarships and the conference can be gotten by writing the Administrative Secretary - New York City Writers Conference, Wagner College, Grymes Hill, Staten Island 1, New York.

Vt Graduate Heads AASA

A 1925 University of Vermont graduate is president-elect of the American Association of School Administrators for 1962-63.

Natt B. Burbank, superintendent of the Boulder (Col.) Valley School District, will take over his new office next month. He is currently vice president of the group. Burbank becomes president in March of 1963.

Burbank was superintendent of schools in Boulder from 1949 until last year when he was named superintendent of the reorganized Boulder School District.

Following his graduation from UVM, Burbank taught in the Burlington school system for several years. He then did graduate work at Columbia University and Stanford University, receiving his Ph. D. in 1932, and was named superintendent of schools of the Caledonia South Central Union. He held similar positions in New Hampshire and Massachusetts prior to going to Colorado in 1949.

During World War II, Burbank served as education officer and was commandant of the European branch of the Armed Forces Institute. Later, he was responsible for setting up courses for soldiers in the European Theatre waiting to be returned to the United States.

In 1956, Burbank was one of four members from throughout the United States to be elected to the executive committee of the American Association of School Administrators.

He is married to the former Vivian E. Hubbard of Middletown Springs. Mrs. Burbank is also a graduate of UVM.

Thinking Out -- LOUD

by Kim Boriskin

THE GRAND INQUISITOR - PART II

William F. Buckley, Jr., has just put out a book entitled The Committee and Its Critics: A Calm Review of the House Committee on Un-American Activities. Thus, it is instantly obvious that HUAC has just had another piece of highly slanted favorable propaganda published. Buckley is one of the few people in the country who have the honor of preaching even more nonsense than Senator Barry Goldwater. What Buckley means by "A Calm Review" is simply "my views, sound and rational, vs. 'their' views, emotional and absurd." What a more rational person will see in those words would be something like: "Buckley's prejudices, preposterous and slanted, vs. the great bulk of evidence, and cooler and sounder arguments than his own."

One of the quotes praising the book in last Sunday's (March 25) Times book review came from the Grand Inquisitor himself, Francis E. Walter, Chairman of HUAC. Another reason why the book is obviously propaganda.

To quote Congressman Thomas L. Ashley's review of the book, which was compiled from articles from the National Review, Buckley's magazine of 18th century politics, in that same Times book review: "All of the authors (the magazine's editors) take a pass at the Committee's critics, but William F. Rickenbacker performs the noblest service to the cause. He has a shiny new label for every category of dissenter and to all but a tiny band of the opposition (the 'Purist Minority') he ascribes, as Buckley did to the enemies of McCarthy, distortion and falsehood having their origin in the Communist party."

Someone had to label the opposition. It is the infallible identifying mark of a small mind, unable to discern even the most basic and obvious truths, or to comprehend these truths when pointed out, to have to think in labels. Besides, Buckley's gang almost had to label everyone else, since they've had a label for years. They're known as the "Lunatic Fringe."

I don't know who gave Mr. Martin the job defending "Operation Abolition," but whoever it was made a mistake. Mr. Martin is either a fool or a moron, and I would not want such a man to defend my case.

Case in point: the police methods used in combatting the student -- excuse me, I believe the official term is Communist Dupe -- demonstrations in San Francisco. There were, and are, claims of brutality, these allegations being, as usual, confirmed by almost everyone who saw the proceedings, except the ever present vested interests, such as Lowell Thomas, Jr., and the San Francisco Chief of Police. Mr. Martin called the Chief, who maintained that his wards behaved like perfect gentlemen until forced to soil their dainty manners by the rioters, the meanies. He then used this remark by the Police Chief as sufficient evidence to refute all claims of police violence. Dr. Chaplin said that a Police Chief could hardly be expected to say otherwise, to which Mr. Martin replied that his was a Police Chief, after all, and they just don't go around lying just like that.

Mr. Martin, I'm afraid, has never seen New York, or Chicago, or Denver, or San Francisco, for that matter. If he has seen any of these cities, he has been singularly naive, blind or stupid. Only a fool or an imbecile could not see what goes on these cities, or believe a Police Chief. For instance, in New York City while ago, a cop came along, saw a Negro man sitting on a park bench, which was there to be sat on, and ordered the man to move. The man asked why, and the cop just said to move. The man did so, but apparently the man's docility was too much, and the cop started beating him. The man already had two handicaps -- the first was his skin color -- since he was lame from a Korean War wound. Then, while the cop was getting his thrills, a second cop joined in the fun. Then the man was arrested for "disturbing the peace."

Some 50 people witnessed all or part of the beating, and brought suit against the policemen. The trial was more of a parody of justice than the Scopes Trial. The two cops had all sorts of testimony from Police Lieutenants and Inspectors -- none of whom had been present at the beating -- all of which was sheer lying, on their side, as against 50 witnesses for the Negro, who had been hospitalized. The Negro's witnesses and attorney were all harassed and threatened by the Police until the trial was over, and even after in a few cases, and a few even brought suit against the N.Y. Police because of that. The righteous Stephen Kennedy, the Police Commissioner, never said a word. By the time the trial ended several witnesses had been held in Contempt of Court (for no apparent reason), the charges against the cops dismissed, and the Negro charged with some other thing, similar to the overall "disturbing the peace."

Undoubtedly, if a Police Inspector deliberately shot the Mayor, in front of a crowd and on television, the whole Police Force would testify that he was innocent, even though 150,000 witnesses said otherwise, and he would probably be acquitted, and the 150,000 witnesses convicted of perjury.

Yes, Mr. Martin; above all, Honor and Integrity, and the Chief of Police.

And then, turning toward the wall in desperate inarticulateness, he completed his statement by reading from a sampler which he had never seen before: "That is not what I meant at all. That is not it at all."

Reversing the sampler on the wall so that once more it suited PT's taste, reading as it now again did "Home, Sweet Home," English Composition bolted through the door. Once outside, her spirits rose; she was a woman unburdened of her suitcase of sins. She was free to roam in search of a seat of liberal learning (alas, they are all too few), where she might find a true lover -- that rarest of all young men, that rare bird, that odd egg, that off horse who prefers T.S. Eliot to marketable platitudes. Together they might build not a sweet little nest somewhere in the West, but a hard shell against the soft shell.

What began as a fable for our times has been concluded on a somewhat hopeful note, albeit with dissonant chords in the background. There are those cynics who will argue that the fable is, after all, more fairy tale than parable; and in view of so nearly happy an ending, one must aver that mayhap they are right.

Review Of String Quartet

by Janet Hill

The Lane Chamber Arts Series of the University of Vermont presented the Juilliard String Quartet in a concert of Mozart, Bartok, and Beethoven, Friday evening March 30, in Ira Allen Chapel.

Robert Mann, first violinist, and Raphael Hillyer, violist are both members of the original group which was founded seventeen years ago as the quartet in residence at the Juilliard School of Music in New York City. Claus Adam has been with the group for seven years, and Isidore Cohen, second violinist joined the quartet in 1958. Since its inception the group has become one of the leading string quartets. The evening was especially distinguished by the performance of the Fifth Quartet (1934) of Bela Bartok, the excellence of which was no surprise since the Juilliard Quartet helped considerably to introduce and popularize the six Bartok quartets by performing them all over the country and recording them in the late forties.

In this work the performance was particularly laudable for a thorough fusion of tone which included vividness of color and a realization of vigor with musical sonority.

The Mozart Quartet in D Major, K. 465 ("Dissonant"), which opened the program was given a fine interpretation - warm, but not overly romantic, extremely accurate in individual performance, flawless intonation, and an insight into the excellent rapport of the group.

After intermission the quartet played Beethoven's Quartet No. 8 in E Minor, Op. 59, No. 2, the second of three quartets dedicated to Count Rasoumovsky in 1805.

The first movement was energetically played while the Adagio movement received a lucid and sympathetic interpretation. The Allegretto movement was particularly sensitive and the ensuing section based on a Russian Folk Tune which leads into a brilliant finale proved a fitting climax to an exciting concert.

Feidner Achieves "Triumph of Direction" With "Threepenny Opera" Presentations

by Joel Posner

For the past year, the Drama Department of UVM has been haunted by a lingering ghost: the ghost of the very capable Greg Falls, erstwhile professor of drama here at the university. It is now my pleasant duty to inform you that the apparition is gone. It left last weekend when the production of Kurt Weill's "Threepenny Opera" demonstrated the undisputable talent of Ed Feidner, the play's director. For, it seems to me that the great appeal of the players' production of The Opera lay, above all else, in its skillful weaving of an effect, an effect so compelling that the audience found itself irresistibly drawn into the play's center, and much of the credit for this should go to Mr. Feidner.

The power of this overall effect can be seen clearly by two facts: First, though the production of the play did have very real weaknesses, these somehow went almost unnoticed, much as a few slight flaws in the weaving of a Persian rug are overlooked. Secondly, the strengths of the performance were so numerous and well scattered that it becomes almost impossible to single out a few individuals for mention.

Perhaps the best illustration of what I mean is found in the performance of Don Kerr who played Mr. Peachum, "the Beggar's Big Brother." Don showed two lacks this weekend. He can, first of all, definitely not sing. He also had trouble with that all-important quality of the funny delivery - timing. Too often, the real humor in his lines was lost, or swallowed, by his inability to milk every nuance of meaning out of what he was saying with the use of proper emphasis and timing.

But somehow, these flaws were more than compensated for by acting, expression, and manner. Kerr was able, all the way, to be the cynical sour old conniver that he was supposed to portray.

And, as it is almost pointless to discuss individual weaknesses, it is almost impossible to single out individual strengths. Perhaps a few, though, are deserving of mention.

One of these is Jeanine Cloutier, who played a moving and skillful Jenny Diver. With a quality of voice and personality which was notable indeed, she delivered her two, show-stopping songs.

Also worthy of mention: Alice Zalon whose consistently fine voice and effective delivery were a real asset to the show and who -- with Barbara Unger (Polly Peachum) -- sang the delightful jealousy duet; Phil Tarro, one of my personal favorites, who with rolling eyes, boyish charm, and an effective sense of timing, played a thoroughly sparkling Tiger Brown; and Bryant Reynolds, who turned an essentially minor role into one of the funniest in the play and who ended the performance with a bang as Victoria's incongruous messenger.

One final performance which seems to me most worthy of mention was delivered by Barbara Rifkin as Mrs. Peachum. She, despite an unfortunate loss of voice as the weekend progressed, bordered on perfection. Her sour facial expressions, bodily movements, and skillful use of the atonal voice qualities made her portrayal one of the best I have seen in the Arena.

To me, however, the real strength of the play -- the one which set it, in some ways, above the Off-Broadway production which I saw some years ago -- lay not in individual performances but in overall effect.

"The Threepenny Opera", to be most effective, should be played in the midst of an audience which has been carried into a shabby, imperfect, atonal world; those of us who sat in the Arena last weekend were sitting within such a world.

But, in the final analysis, it was Feidner's use of the backdrop -- atmosphere and setting -- which made "The Threepenny Opera" perhaps the best production done here in some time. For, it was Feidner who drew the best from each extra, who manipulated each entrance, each spontaneous aside to create a magnetic whole.

Yes, the play was individuals; it was Dr. Lidral and his fine orchestra and their entrances which were so effective in making the audience a part of the performance; it was the gang, the prostitutes, and the beggars -- each so perfectly in character; the two policemen -- George Adams and Howie King -- who were both the perfect English Keystone cops.

But, above all else, it was a blending of all these in a single atonal symphonic effect, and as such, it was a triumph of direction.

LESSON 5 - The importance of head control

We are told that bird watchers, who always take notes while they watch, are able to keep one eye on the bird and one eye on the notebook. Eye dexterity of this type is also a great asset to the girl watcher. It enables him to watch two girls at the same time, even when the girls are sitting on opposite sides of a classroom. The beginner, who must watch the girls one at a time in a situation of this type, must learn to restrict his movements to the eye-balls. The girl watcher never moves his head. Undue head-turning, particularly if it is accompanied by shouts or whistles, is the sign of the amateur. (If you want something to shout about, try a Pall Mall!)

Frosh Debate Tournament

Ruth took one.

The negative was defended by Sharon Call and Carmen Wessner who paralled the affirmative in beating four colleges: RIT, Syracuse School of Forestry, Misericordia, and U. of Rochester. Their single loss was to St. Andrews.

This team also took top honors with Carmen receiving three First Speaker ratings and Sharon four Second Speaker ratings.

When the judges compiled the points from the two sides of the argument, Vermont had won with eight victories - two losses, U. of Buffalo had placed second with seven out of ten wins, and U. of Rochester, third with an equal number of points.

Carrying a three foot bronze statue of Daniel Webster, the UVM group marched proudly home to the tune of "Don't underestimate the power of a Frosh!"

Levi Brown Selected Catamount Of The Week

Baseball Captain Raises Team Hopes

Levi Brown, captain of the UVM Baseball Team, and chief reason for Ralph Lapointe's optimism for a good season.

This week's Catamount of the week is senior Levi Brown, captain of the baseball team. In his baseball uniform some say he resembles powerful Micky Mantle while others contend that he looks like comical Ozark Ike. Brownie, as his teammates call him, has gained the reputation of the team's long-ball hitter. Last year he led the Cats in home runs and runs batted in. He is also Coach Lapointe's best relief pitcher.

ATTENTION SENIORS

You can now get your Graduation caps and gowns in Waterman on the second floor in the old library stacks. It will be open Monday thru Friday from 9 A.M. to 11:30 A.M. and 1:30 P.M. to 4:30 P.M. until May 1st. For the girls it will be $5.10 and they Brownie in from Stamford, N.Y. and attended Norwich High School where he played baseball, basketball, and football. In 1957-58 he was an all-league baseballer, all-league in football 1958, and captained his school's basketball team his senior year at Norwich. At UVM he has played baseball for three years and played basketball in 1959-60.

Besides leading the Catamounts in many batting departments last year Levi had the team's best earned run average, 0.45. Coach Lapointe called Brownie in from center field many times last season to quell opponents rallies. In 21 innings he allowed only one earned run, while striking out 21 and walked only 3. To add to his pitching-batting talents, Brownie is a great gloveman with an extremely strong arm. He bats lefty and throws righty to add to his versatility.

Coach Lapointe expects a fine season from this year's squad and Brownie is the main reason for his optimism. Levi is a brother of Kappa Sigma fraternity and a member of the Varsity Club. Watch for Brownie this season at bat, on the mound or in center. You can't miss him. He's a tall blond who looks like Micky Mantle, or is it Orzark Ike? In either case look for Levi to lead the Catamounts.

Frosh Nine Faces Rough Opponents

Evans Expects Good

Showing Of Untried Squad

A sure sign that Spring is finally upon us is the baseball team's pre-season workout. The frosh squad, under the coaching eye of Fuzzy Evans is getting ready to enter into another season of play against strong competition.

Because of inclement weather, the team has been working out in the cage and thus, their true potential is not known. While early for final positions, the following men seem sure of starting berths on the squad: John Tartera, first base, Howie Gershater, second, "Dutch" Cassini, third, Jim Prichard, shortstop.

Larry Rice, Steve Morse and Richie Reynolds are fast moving outfielders and may get the starting roles on the squad. Reynolds is also a key factor on the pitching staff, along with Jim Brennan, Hardy Merrill, a southpaw, and Bill Christie. The receiving end of the battery will either be Nels Christenson or Tom Blanchard.

Coach Evans singled out Brennan, Reynolds, Blanchard and Christenson as the men he will rely on for a winning season. Last year's squad contributed five men to the varsity and perhaps this season's team will do even better.

This year's schedule appears just as exciting as previous ones. Home games include Norwich, May 9, Dartmouth, May 21, Vermont Aggy, May 23. While on the road, the Evans' Nine meets St. Lawrence, May 4, Dartmouth, May 11, Vermont Aggy, May 16 and Norwich, May 17.

Last year, the Frosh had a 7-3 record. The biggest challenge to the squad will be Dartmouth, who inflicted the three losses on the 1961 team.

SPORTING OPINIONS

By HOWIE GORNEY

For the last couple of weeks, my sarcastic, sardonic nature has gotten the better of me, and I have been prone to taking sly swipes at one malady or another prevalent in our athletic program. This week, it's time to praise. So, read this article carefully, for my cynicism may again rear its ugly head in my next article (if I don't find myself at a loss for material).

The subject which I plan to laud is intramural sports. The student body at UVM is fortunate to have the well-coordinated interfraternity and independent competition which we enjoy throughout the school year. Norm Strassburg, director of intramural sports, deserves a pat on the back for the fine job he does with limited facilities. I know of a few schools, whose gymnasiums put ours to shame, where an intramural sports program is nearly non-existent.

The league competition in football, basketball, volleyball, track, and softball, plus the non-league activities in such sports as handball and judo, defeat the "all work, no play" atmosphere which some past and present administrators have tried to impose on the UVM family. A student can't remain mired in his books at all times; he needs some diversion. Furthermore, the intramural competition provides essential exercise for those students who failed to get it in their rushed, overcrowded gym classes.

With the advent of the new gym, the UVM student can look forward to an increased intramural sports program. New facilities will provide for competition in such sports as hockey and swimming. This should rejuvenate interest in sports which, because of lack of adequate facilities, have gone relatively unnoticed by UVM students for years.

Kittens See Good Season

The freshman track squad, under the direction of Archie Post is preparing for another exciting season of competition. Carl Frattini, Roger Lyman, Dennis Blank, Jim Meredith, Tom Mitchell and Rick Ashton are among those comprising the team. Of note are Frattini and Lyman, who have been training in hurdling and the pole vault respectively.

Because of the cold weather, the squad has not been able to train under ideal conditions. While much is being accomplished, Coach Post feels that until the team can work out of door, its true merits will not be known.

The squad still has a month of training before actual meets start. As usual, this year's team will compete against top Vermont high school teams, topped off with a battle against Norwich.

On April 28, the Postmen begin competition against Lyndon Institute. Tim Simpson, captain of the track varsity hails from this academy. On May 5, the squad heads south to take on Brattleboro-Rutland. On the 9th, Norwich, followed by Rice Memorial on the 14th and Burlington High School on the 22nd, round out the schedule.

All meets, except the Burlington High School meet, are away contests.

Greeks Compete In Chariot Races Jazz Concert Features Musical Personalities

Perhaps the most unique facet of Greek Week is the chariot race held on Redstone Campus. The race will begin at 4:30, tomorrow, April 13. In keeping with tradition, each of the sixteen fraternities will enter a chariot, a driver, and six men who will do the pulling. Two new aspects of this year's chariot race are concerned with the design of the chariots and the shape of the track. Pre-fabricated chariots will not be allowed as in previous years. This would include converted sulkies or any other type of professional racing rig. The second feature will be an elongated "S" track instead of the former oval track. Frank Pagliaro, a member of the Interfraternity Council, stated the reasons for the change in shape. "I think that this change will serve two purposes. On the safety side, it will lessen the hazard of accidents which have been so prevalent in previous years. Its new contour will also prevent the inside chariot from having the advantage, a feature that was common to the oval track."

The contest will be divided into five heats. The first four will contain all sixteen fraternities divided evenly. The winners of the first four heats will then compete in the final race for the Greek Week and campus championship. Last year's winner was Delta Psi Fraternity, and they will be fighting to hold their crown and retain their title. Don't be surprised if you don't see any muscular Ben Hur's or Him's climb into their respective chariots when the competition begins. Since a team of six men and not four robust horses pulls the cart, it is advisable to put a man in the seat who will not keep the chariot trailing far behind,

Mock Olympics Provide Sorority Competition

The sun is shining brightly on Redstone Campus, the fans are out by the thousands, and you are there. The sororities, it seems, have decided to go "Greek" this year too; they refuse - since it's a woman's world - to let the boys win all the glory again this year in their chariot races, so the girls have come up with a bigger and better idea -- Mock Olympics.

I've been given a few major details that might help us to comprehend this new sport once the show gets under way, so let me clue you in. First off, there are three big events in this meets: Shot-put, Discus, and Handball. But, it seems that they are being played with an orange, a frizbee, and an egg! This is termed Olympics of The Modern Age. Second, these are elimination races in that each sorority has three representatives for each event; and, the best of these will go on to compete for "Miss Greek Sports 1962" (in each event, of course). Third, and most important, this is the biggest sporting event of the season, and Greeks for miles around have journeyed enthusiastically in their chariots just to see these maidens perform.

Well, it is now the end of the first heat of the chariot races, and five of the ten competing buggies have been smashed to bits, so it is time for the Mock Olympics to commence. And, here come onto the field now, warming up as they jog in. I see a few perspective Olympic Stars in the making here today. Look at Long Tall Sally over there heave that orange -- why, almost two feet! And, there's One Arm Lizzy hurling a frizbee -- her aim was a little off. They're searching furiously for it in the skeleton of the New Gym. Here comes Messy Tessy chucking a duck egg with all her might to Goody Suzie -- splat, an intercepted pass!

You say you missed this performance. Well you're in luck friend, for by popular demand, there will be a second performance of this rare event tomorrow in between the heats of the Greek Week Chariot Races.

UVM students will keep time to the great drums of Gene Krupa tomorrow night.

Oscar Brand is a well known guitarist. He has entertained the public numerous times and has made several recordings.

Oscar Brand and Gene Krupa are the stars of this year's Greek Week Jazz Concert. Both are leaders in their respective fields of music, and both their careers have been varied and interesting.

Oscar Brand - balladeer and humorist - was born in Canada in 1920. Brand traveled with his family first to Minnesota, then to Chicago, and finally came to New York City. There, in 1945, he became Director of Folk Music for New York City's Municipal Station. Since then, every Sunday at 6 p.m. he has presented a half-hour program on folklore and folksong for the City.

Oscar Brand's achievements on records are numerous. He has his best-selling series "Bawdy Songs", for which he is very well known, and he did the albums, "Courting Songs", and "Bad Men and Heroes", for Elektra Records. Some of his other recordings include "Songs and Poems of the Sea", "Drinking Songs", "G.I.", "Riddle Me This", "Absolute Nonsense", "Songs Inane Only", "Navy Songs", "Shivaree", "Laughing America", and "Pie in the Sky". His own composition, "A Guy Is A Guy", sold a million records for Columbia.

Television pioneers may remember his "Americana" show for Firestone Tires and Ben Grauer, or "Draw Me A Laugh", one of ABC's first series shows.

He was featured in Omnibus, and was a regular performer on the Kate Smith Hour, the Ted Steele Show, Mike and Buff series, and Agnes De Mille chose him to write the lyrics and act as technical adviser on her TV show "Gold Rush".

He has made his mark on film, too. His name can be seen on the opening titles of "Highway by the Sea", "It Takes Everything", and "The American Past". He has the Golden Reel Award and winning citations at Venice and Edinburgh Festivals.

To add a little color to his career, he sang the part of the weather puppet, "Jungle Dingle", on the "Sandy Becker Show," Vaseline Hair Tonic's singing cowboy commercials use the same vocal chords. His singing of an anti-bias jingle for the Advertising Council won him the Peabody citation, and his cowboy commercials for "Cheerios" on the Wyatt Earp telecast have been running since 1956.

Now we turn to the other half of the Concert.

Gene Krupa started his drumming career as a boy of 13 with a rather unimpressive band called the "Frivoleans".

He played off and on around his home - Chicago - with various small units, and then entered St. Joseph's College to study for the priesthood.

The drums won out over the books, however, and after a year's study Gene went to work as regular "skin-beater" with Joe Keyser's band in Chicago.

Then, in the late 1920's Gene made his big move - to New York where he joined the Red Nichols band to play in the musical hit, "Strike Up The Band". After three years with Red he switched over to the rhythm section of Irving Aaronson's "Commanders", following which he joined the band of Mal Hallett.

It was from Hallett's band that Gene went with Benny Goodman just as the King of Swing was gaining national prominence. Gene's reputation skyrocketed. In early 1938, Gene left Goodman to form his own band, which, through the years, has developed such stars as Charlie Ventura, Gerry Mulligan, Dave Lambert (he was here for KW), Roy Eldridge, and others.

Gene has made many feature pictures in Hollywood with his own orchestra, most notably "Some Like It Hot", with Bob Hope. He has appeared in more recent films, as "The Glenn Miller Story" and "The Benny Goodman Story".

Krupa reads and writes music, except that when accompanying an act, he doesn't play from music. This holds true not only for Gene but for the other members of the Krupa Group. They point out that

Sororities, Fraternities Prepare For IFC Sing

Phi Delta Theta, winners of last year's IFC Sing, practice for Saturday's competition. Credit: Shrage, S.P.S.

On Saturday night, April 14th, at 8:30 P.M. the Inter-Fraternity Council will present the annual IFC Sing.

This year, each of the sixteen fraternities and seven sororities on campus will sing one song in an unrestricted category. The only criterion for song selection is that the song must be done in four part harmony. Each "house" is further regulated in that the entire membership must participate in the IFC Sing.

According to IFC rules, the judges for the sing are in no way connected with the University. This year's judges are members of the International Brotherhood of Barbershop Quartets. They are Mourois Allen, Ed Bectel, Raymond Palmer, William Garneau, and Raymond Miller. Dependent upon the decision of these gentlemen, three fraternities and three sororities will receive trophies, indicating first, second, and third place in each of the two divisions.

The Panhellenic Council will also, at this time, present the Marie Hauptmann Award to the first place songleader and the Panhellenic Scholarship Cup to the sorority with the highest scholastic average from February, 1961 to February, 1962.

Coordinating the efforts of all the committees for IFC Sing is this year's IFC Sing Chairman, John Hendee. John, a member of Theta Chi Fraternity, is enrolled in the College of Arts and Sciences in the Class of 1964. He is a political science major. Tickets for this year's IFC Sing, which is to be held in Memorial Auditorium, are available in the University Store for $1.

Harris Names House Fellows

Miss Anna Rankin Harris, Dean of Women, has announced the following Senior women who will be House Fellows for the 1962-63 academic year: Sally Hall, Jane Lague, Krisdean Moore, Devora Perlman, and Lorraine Reilly.

The House Fellows assist the Head Resident in the five large residences on Redstone Campus. Their specific residence assignments will be made after room choosing. One of the main functions of the House Fellow next year will be to become acquainted with the girls in her residence hall and to assist them in any way she can.

Sally Hall is from Paterson, N.J., and is majoring in Elementary Education. This year she has been Co-chairman of the Student Guide Organization, Vice-President and Fire Captain of Patterson 2nd, and member of the Patterson Intra-Dorm Council.

Jane Lague is from Newport, Vermont, and is a French major. Jane has been a member of Newman Club, WRA, Social Chairman of the Spanish Club, and Secretary of the French Club. She is on the Dean's List.

Krisdean Moore is from Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, and is a botany major. She has been Secretary of the Outing Club, Treasurer of the University Christian Association, and has been on the Dean's List.

Devora Perlman is from Springfield, Massachusetts, and is a French and English major. She is Vice-President of Simpson 2nd, Social Chairman of the Simpson Intra-Dorm Council and Lane Series Review for the Cynic.

Lorraine Reilly is from Rutland, Vermont, and is a botany major. Lorraine is President of Alpha Lambda Delta, House President of Claggett House, Corresponding Secretary of Newman Club, Internal Affairs Vice Chairman of the New England Province of Newman Club, and a member of Staff and Sandal. She is on the Dean's List.

Those who defend the system now in operation point out that it gives freshmen a chance to adapt to their new environment and to meet the academic challenge of college with their complete attention. Notice is also given to the fact that last year the National Interfraternity Council cited UVM's fraternity system as the best in the country for a college of its size.

All fraternities on campus will send representatives to the meeting and the public is invited to attend in the Waterman Student Lounge at 8:00 P.M.

Off Campus Housing Becomes Dean Patzer's "Dormitories"

Approval Needed For Living Units

by Betty Bergman

About 200 single undergraduate men students who have spent at least six semesters here will have the opportunity to live off-campus next year in university-approved housing. The minimum standards for approved housing include the following regulations:

1. Seventy square feet of floor space per single occupant plus 40 square feet for each additional occupant.

2. Where the ceiling height is less than six feet, floor space will not be computed. Windows must be at least one-eighth the floor area.

3. One bed and mattress, one dresser, one closet or cabinet at least six square feet (subtracted from the floor space), one desk 20 inches depth minimum, desk chair, one-combustible waste basket, and one towel rack are all necessary.

4. One tub or shower and toilet for every six students.

5. No basement or cellar dwelling units are permitted.

6. Two separate floor or wall type electric outlets, or one such convenience outlet combined with an electric light fixture outlet will be necessary.

7. No open flame, portable gasoline or kerosene heaters, gasoline or kerosene cooking devices or lighting fixtures will be permitted.

8. On each floor above the second floor, two exits should be provided. These may be a combination of a stairway and a metal fire escape or two stairways.

9. The minimum requirement for all houses where five or more students are housed is one centrally Class A (2 1/2 lb. pressurized water) fire extinguisher on each floor where students are housed. The kitchen and furnace room must be furnished with a 2 1/2-5-lb. Class B (dry powder or CO2 cartridge). Specific questions concerning locations for and types of fire extinguishers may be obtained by contacting the Assistant Chief of the Burlington Fire Department.

II. The following extracts from the University of Vermont booklet, "Privileges and Regulations for Students" are provided householders to assist them in establishing proper rules of conduct.

1. Each student, as a responsible citizen, is expected to observe all local, state and Federal laws. All students share the responsibility of protecting the reputation of the University. Any students flagrantly violating regulations in off-campus facilities should be reported, by his householder, to the Dean of Men's Office for disciplinary action.

2. Undergraduate students are not permitted alcoholic beverages in any housing which accommodates students in residence, i.e., those not living with parents or spouse.

3. Guests of the opposite sex are not permitted in the study-sleeping rooms.

4. Each student must report any change of local address to the Office of the Dean of Men within forty-eight hours of the change.

According to Dean of Men, Roland Patzer, the university feels a "moral as well as legal obligation to see that students live in at least minimal housing from a health and safety standpoint."

Mr. Wallace Kessler, was hired in February to inspect those rooms and apartments that landlords have requested to be inspected for university approval. He has inspected some 200 spaces to date. Upon approval, a list will be available in the Dean of Men's office for students to inquire. "We consider this to be a service to both the student and the householder", said Patzer. "We will also furnish the student with a letter of introduction to the householder," he continued.

Upperclassmen will be asked to commit themselves as to whether they wish to live in the dorms or not, by May 24. Contracts with the university must be made for a full year.

Council Inaugurates IFC Discussion Groups

On Thursday, April 12, as part of Greek Week, a special discussion of the UVM rushing system and its problems will be held in the Waterman Student Lounge at 8:00 P.M. The chairman of Greek Week, Joel Bauer of Phi Sigma Delta and Frank Pagliaro of Sigma Nu have announced that the purpose of the panel discussion is to analyze the problems of the present rushing system at the University and, if possible, to make some constructive proposals for improving the system.

Previous to the planning of the discussion, requests were sent to many colleges across the nation asking for a description and an evaluation of their rushing systems. When the returns were catalogued they were found to cover a wide spectrum. They ranged from the University of North Carolina, where fraternities have the names and addresses of all incoming freshmen and can arrange rushing banquets and smokers near their homes so as to have the freshmen fairly decided as to which house to pledge before arrival on campus, to Dartmouth, where pledging is deferred until the sophomore year.

Last year's Greek Week included group discussions on various topics of interest to the houses on campus, but it was decided that this year the discussion would be limited to one topic which is of utmost importance to the entire interfraternity system.

Gold Key, Sophomore Honorary Plans Changes In Constitution

Gold Key, the Sophomore Men's Honorary, announces a change in its constitution regarding the selection of members.

Under the old constitution 15 members were selected by a closed, weighted ballot.

Under the new amendment there are 3 separate votes. The first 2 votes are closed and have the effect of narrowing down the list of candidates to at least 18 names. The final vote is open and a given candidate must receive a majority of 80% to be chosen for membership. The amendment also allows that the new society can vary from 12 to 18 members.

The positive effect of this amendment is that it will give the outgoing members greater discretion and flexibility in this vote than the old constitution provided for.

This year the new procedure was highly successful. From a starting list of close to 100 nominees, 12 men were chosen.

The names of these men will be announced on Foulger's Day, May 1.

Centaur Sponsors Lectures

During the past semester, Centaur, the magazine of literature and the fine arts on the UVM campus, inaugurated a lecture series, the purpose of which is to bring all members of the university family into closer communication with the magazine itself, and with literature and the fine arts in general.

The first lecture was delivered by Mr. Benjamin B. Wainwright, senior member of the department of English. Mr. Wainwright lectured on the subject, "Communication in Modern Poetry." His lecture covered most of the significant developments in the field of poetry for the past few decades and centered upon the question of how good a poem is if its readers cannot comprehend it. Wainwright laid particular stress upon the stimulating effect which the founding and subsequent development of the magazine "Poetry" has had upon the evolution of that art in America. Positive proof of the success of the lecture was furnished by the prolonged and productive question period which followed. Great thanks are due and given from the Centaur staff to Mr. Wainwright for his cooperation in taking the first step in what we hope will become an annual facet of the Centaur's relationship with the entire University.

The next lecture in the series is to be given by Professor Robert Hall of the department of Philosophy, who will lecture on the topic "The Nature of Tragedy." This learned gentleman (and his hackles will rise at that statement, but it is nonetheless true), who possesses the rare gift of reifying philosophical abstractions, will deliver his lecture on April 16, at 8 p.m. in the Memorial Lounge of the Waterman Building. The lecture is open to the public, and it is hoped that those members of the University who have not as yet heard Dr. Hall speak will avail themselves of this opportunity to do so.

NO. 6

Editor's Scrapbook

Earlier this year the Cynic announced that Arthur J. Mahoney, former Co-ordinator of Student Activities, had been asked, over the objections of student leaders, to return to UVM as Director of the new Billings Student Center. What has happened to the new Center no one knows. What has happened to Mr. Mahoney is more interesting. As of now he will not be returning to the University in any capacity. The only conclusion we can draw is that anti-Mahoney pressure by students had something to do with this decision.

We probably won't be seeing Mahoney again, but his conspicuous absence brings up another, more important point. Mahoney did not come back because of student pressure. Isn't it too bad that this pressure could not have been opinion? Did a situation of this nature have to go so far before students were informed of it that the only method of expression was extreme. Unfortunately this appears to be very common in most issues concerning the undergraduates and University policies. After certain decisions are released publicly it is found that there is opposition which can only be manifested in demonstrations. Surely student pressure proved to be effective in the STOP campaign last year, yet if the men students had been let in on this plan on the ground floor many conflicts that arose could have been avoided.

The administration says it wants to hear student ideas on policy, but why can't they answer the door when we knock instead of waiting for us to break it down. If the evasive administration would inform us a little sooner, there would be fewer people getting steamed up over otherwise calmly-handled situations. If they can't do this then it seems as if demonstrations are the best method of communication.

With the normal riot season fast approaching this topic certainly is food for thought.

PROPHECY?

Somehow, Saturday night always broke the monotony. As usual, Mary had gotten the Ballflower's little girl to sit with the kids, which as far as he was concerned was worse than leaving them alone. What a monster! But she was handy. He smiled at the thought of some kid spending a whole week's allowance to take her out. They entered the theatre and sat down in the middle row. They always sat in the middle row. The, once again, the grey screen exploded in "dazzling technicolor" and from the two speakers the muffled excitement filled the room. Yet tonight he couldn't experience the momentary thrill of feeling himself up there; flying over Germonay in a wing-torn plane; savagely embracing his dance hall girl; or single-handedly holding off a squad of Reds so his men could get away. Tonight he kept thinking of the reunion and of the man who hadn't grown old...

Memorial Hall, where the alumni reunion was held, had been packed with smoke and with middle-aged people who, like himself, were reviewing their college days. He greeted several old acquaintances, asked politely of their homes and children, and laughed when reminded of the time he told that old battle-axe of a secretary that she ought to be taken home and stuffed. But amid the friendly chatter something bothered him. His friends, and he supposed himself also, were shoeing the tell-tale signs. Grey hairs were no longer the exception, and curly hair was thinning. He looked down at himself. At thirty-five the sagging belly reflected only a trace of his once thin, attractive stature. A slight frown was penetrating his face when suddenly, as if from nowhere, he saw Evens coming towards him. His sturdy walk and quick movements seem to set him apart from the crowd. "Bill!" His greeting was warm as his hand clasped Bill's firmly. They talked of old times and then of later ones. Bill told of bought. Evens told of his adventures after he had quit school; the hitching across the country, the odd jobs, and finally of his small but growing firm in Europe. Then, as suddenly as he had appeared, he was off again, and Bill was left to compare the slender body of Evens with his own.

"Hey, dreamer," his wife turned to him, "If you aren't going to watch the show, at least share the popcorn." He did share the popcorn, but he couldn't return to the screen. A youthful face kept haunting him...

Why Evens? In school he had been a wild restless kid, always acting on the spur of the moment. He never thought things out quietly and rationally, but acted instead with his heart. Like when he ran off to Europe to "see the world." When Evens who hadn't even finished school? What fountain had he found?

Suddenly a scream echoed across the room. He looked up quickly, intently at the screen, and was immediately engrossed in his old reality. Colors danced in the darkroom, and he watched, fascinated, until they faded. Then he was forced to stare blankly at the empty, grey screen as the curtains closed.

Letters To The Editor

Congratulations

March 26, 1962

To the Editor,
Congratulations to Studentes and to Joel Posner for his thoughtful and constructive comments on the Red-Dead extremists. A calm voice in a slogan-happy era is always a refreshing change. Unspectacular though it may be, the constructive policy of working with those forces which are bringing about peaceful evolutionary change in underdeveloped countries is probably the most likely to succeed. To Mr. Posner's list of helpful avenues of effort along these lines, I should like to add the Peace Corps. These young men and women are working to insure that ten years from now we shall neither be Red nor Dead. We need more like them.

Asinine?

To the Editor:
In reference to Mr. Joel Posner's "review" of the recent production of The Threepenny Opera, may we quote just one line from the duet Polly Peachum - Lucy Brown: "Asinine". It would be highly advisable for Mr. Posner to read up on the matter, maybe he'll realize then what it is all about.

Sincerely,
Harry H. Kahn
Thomas Huber

The omission of the leading character, Ralph Bode, from the "Threepenny Opera" review was due to a mistake in the Cynic's production process. Our reviewer, Joel Posner, was in no way responsible for it. Editor.

Northern Student Movement

At the most recent meeting of the Northern Student Movement, several decisions were made which should affect the direction and future growth of the civil rights organization at UVM.

National support for education and voter registration field work was implemented by the collection of over fifty dollars in the recent button sale.

Efforts will be doubled beginning today with a button sale in Lower Waterman. The money collected aids groups working against discrimination in the South.

Recognizing that problems exist in the North as well as the South, the group decided to investigate the most effective means to combat discrimination in Burlington. Leaders will speak to other local organizations with similar interests.

The well known folk singer, Sandy Payton, has agreed to give a benefit performance for the organization. The sing will be held after spring vacation, probably at The Loft, a popular Burlington coffee house.

Chairman of the Northern Student Movement is Craig Brody. Vice-Chairman is Ben Becton.

Rotsie-Come-Home

Dear Powers-That-Be:
I like Mr. O'Hara. No, really. His lectures are quite stimulating. Why, just this afternoon I was so stimulated during English class that I sat on the edge of my seat throughout the entire period, holding my breath, straining, as it were, to hear every priceless gem emitted by this hard-working (as he keeps reminding us) man. But this stimulus, this very excitement which brought me to the edge of my aforementioned chair, which drove the mice from their holes, which brought the canine students of Waterman on the run, which caused the far-off Russians to tremble in unknown and wondering fear, this reaction was not generated by anything inside the building we call Lafayette. No, dammit, the source of it was outside, and it was dressed in green. The thing is, fellas, I couldn't hear Mr. O'Hara this afternoon. And poor Mr. O'Hara, why he was truly upset by the noise made by Our Men in Green. Because he couldn't hear Mr. O'Hara either. So there we were, all sitting on the edges of our respective chairs, pondering the mysteries of lip-reading and of Africa as presented to us in Conrad's Heart of Darkness, to the martial beat of eighty feet, when suddenly, and, I might add, most appropriately, bagpipes began to play. Needless to say, I shouted "Huzzah!" and flung away my school-books, the aforementioned Mr. O'Hara shouted "hoot, mon!" and slipped into his Black Watch kilt, and the class began to execute a Scottish "schottische". In no time at all, the bell had rung, and we were all able to run-lickety-split to the parade grounds to wave to the soldiers, bidding them tearful farewells as they headed back to Scotland. It was very dramatic. Sort of like Rotsie-Come-Home.

Now Vermont's a big state. Relatively speaking. And it is difficult for a body to see why ROTC drill cannot be performed anywhere but under the windows of Lafayette. Won't things go right if they move to another field? Can't they make just as much noise and have just as much fun elsewhere? There's big ol' frozen Lake Champlain, just begging to be marched on. Surely the fish would not object. In short, we interested students and harassed professors have only the request to ask of the Jolly Green Giants: Can't you play your silly games somewhere else?

STUDENTES

This year more than one half of the Freshman women on this campus indicated a sincere desire, by registering for rushing to learn through experience, the meaning of the word sorority. Up until February of each year, the word sorority is connotated by the large majority of these girls to mean groups of girls wearing the same sweatshirts, the same pins, eating together at the tables in the dorms, sororities or coffee shop, studying together in cram sessions or library visits, or enjoying themselves together at parties and open houses.

To those of us in sorority, the word means many, many more things. It means things which are intangible and can't be put into a newspaper article but it also means some very tangible things which I would like to discuss.

Most any girl going through rushing is immediately impressed by the tone of any given house, the warmth and the degree to which it exists and the friendliness, and the degree to which they exist. Later, as this rushee goes through the various houses she is more and more impressed by the sense of tradition of belonging, unity, and loyalty which she finds permeating the group as a whole. Should this girl eventually pledge, she'll find the meaning of sorority goes even higher than this. It goes up to the level of working together on a project that directly will not benefit any individual in the group but will leave all of them with a deep feeling of personal satisfaction and pride in the group as a whole. When this pledge is initiated, she suddenly finds a new meaning to the word tradition. She comes to realize tradition for tradition's sake is meaningless, but she does find that tradition taken for its value in furthering the ideals of a group has a very definite meaning.

We, the sorority women at the University of Vermont, are proud of our purpose on this campus. We see this purpose as giving to each and every member of the Greek system and to as many non-Greeks as possible, the opportunity to realize their full capabilities. We view sorority as just one facet of a total educational system and because we view sorority in this manner we demand of our membership a high level of scholarship, citizenship and personal integrity. We cannot tell a girl to be loyal, devoted or a good sport but we can give her the opportunities to desire these qualities in herself. We can't tell a girl she is to lead but we can put her on the path to leadership. We can't demand cooperation but we can achieve it. We can't force a girl to give, but we can make her realize the value of giving, not materially but personally. In other words, we can't manufacture a higher plane of coed but we can and do inspire the girls who wear the pins of the seven sororities on our campus to try and make themselves into the type of women they truly desire to be.

This is our purpose, this is our meaning, this is sorority.

Opinions Please

by Betty Bergman
"Do you think that all classes should be under an unlimited cut system?"

Mr. William Easterling, Instructor, Romance Language Department -

"Yes, I do. I feel that a student who is mature enough to go to college is mature enough to decide when he can afford to cut a class."

George Adler, '62 -

"Yes. Students are paying money to attend the university. They should be mature enough at this point to fulfill their responsibilities to themselves. If they are not, then they shouldn't be here. If one can get his education without attending classes, the more power to him. We don't need paternalism."

E. Robert Premo, Graduate Student -

"If material were presented in such a way as to best bring out its intrinsic value, thus making it interesting for any serious student, cuts and required attendance would be less of an issue. One easy solution might be for teachers to test frequently on matter covered in class lectures. However, this procedure would attack an effect rather than a cause. To attack the cause, the teacher must show the student the value of the subject matter, beyond pressures like tests and gold stars on papers. To succeed in this effort, the teacher must know and love his subject, and must be dealing with a mature and intellectually eager student. And so each of us must ask ourselves: Am I a mature and intellectually eager student, or am I kidding myself?"

Prof. James T. Mehorter, Assistant Professor of Education -

"Not necessarily. Some key lectures and attendant discussions are completely incapable of reaching the absent student via a classmate's notes. However, I can appreciate the adult approach to learning in an unlimited cuts situation, insofar as ultimately we wish to develop self-directing, self-disciplining people; and it would seem that a paternalistic approach tends to mitigate against this. The student must learn to do what is best for him, increasing responsibility he needs."

Thinking Out -- LOUD

by Kim Boriskin

THE GRAND INQUISITOR - PART III

I started by calling this series of columns "The Grand Inquisitor," so I guess I'm stuck with it, even though it becomes more and more apparent that the title is a misnomer, not so much because only now am I getting to the real point implied by the title, but just because it doesn't fit. The Grand Inquisitor is, of course, Representative Francis (Does anyone remember the star of the old "Francis" movies, with Donald O'Connor? Francis, you will recall, was a talking mule. The analogy, besides being obvious, is also fitting.) E. Walter, Chairman of the House Un-American Activities Committee. But, as I say, the title doesn't fit.

The more I think about, the more certain I am that my original description of him was accurate in more ways than one. I said, if you forget, that he looked and spoke like an acute dyspeptic. At first it appeared, in "Operation Abolition," that every sentence was punctuated by periodic belches. That is not strictly true; every sentence was a belch, and his whole speech was nothing more than a belch of long duration. That is to say, when he was through with his speech he had said absolutely nothing. It took many words and some time, as well as the taxpayers' money, to say it, but he said, all told, nothing that could not have been said just as articulately in a single belch.

Congressman Walter was going to retire this year and give the country some peace, and relief from his petty inquisitions. Instead, he has decided to try and inflict himself upon the country, and upon Pennsylvania, for another two years; he will probably do it. He is a politician, first and foremost, and that is one of the reasons all his blather reduces to plain piffle, and is essentially meaningless. No politician ever says anything worth hearing. Some say it with more gorgeous fustian, and some with infinitely less, than others, but the content is always the same balderdash. For another thing, Congressman Walter is more absurd than most politicians, has less knowledge of what he is about, and is scared.

The Hon. Representative is no Grand Inquisitor as the Spanish were Inquisitors, but merely a petty demagogue, finding Communists in everything he sees. To be sure, he has regular auto-da-fés, just as the Spanish did, to prove his own virility and power, but he is a petty demagogue nonetheless. He is running scared; everywhere he goes the little man sees Red plots against him. If a bush rustles, it is because there is a Communist hiding in it, just waiting there to assassinate him. All criticism of this professional superpatriot is Communist-inspired, if not Communist, period. Paranoids are bad enough without being elected to Federal office.

As if HUAC isn't bad enough, and grotesque enough - a true caricature of Government - this frightened satrap has imitators in the "Upper House," the Senate. Senator Thomas Dodd is even more grotesque when he and the Internal Security Subcommittee start in. Dodd actually had the audacity to ask Kenneth Tynan if he (Tynan) was aware that he had expressed opinions that were diametrically opposed to those of the President of the U.S., at that time, Mr. Eisenhower. Mr. Tynan could easily have pointed out, as he says, that, because Dodd was a Democrat, he himself was forced, in the majority of cases, to assume the same position as Tynan, not because he believed he was right, but merely because he was a Democrat and it was a political expedient. The reason Tynan was called in the first place was that he had produced a BBC television program, called "We Dissent," which was designed to show that there was indeed a spirit of dissent left in America. But it appears that this was too much for Dodd; it was bad enough that he and Walter couldn't stamp out dissent, but Tynan had to advertise it.

Mr. Walter should watch his pet film more carefully. The actions of the Communists who had to be ejected from the San Francisco hearings were superb comedy. They actually fought back at the police who tried to drag them out. Only an imbecile would lower himself to the level of doing that. Any person with any sense at all would have tried to walk out with a little dignity, at least. That they had to be ejected was ridiculous enough to begin with. Walter should recognize that most American Communists are jackasses, clowns, fools, no more, no less. Some are just plain stupid enough to believe that Communism is best for America, and are just as deluded as Walter. There are some good points in Marxist theory, but most is sheer nonsense, and most Communists are idiots to put any credence in it.

Mr. Walter is too small a man, with too small a mind, to comprehend this. He continues to waste our time and money with asinine laws, laws whose total effect is to make Communists find other ways of avoiding laws, which they always do (the few Reds that actually are Soviet agents), and to restrict the dissent of honest and rational men, and to rob everyone of what little freedom of thought and expression we now have left.

The church at Pearl and Church Streets has a new quote in front every week, some very good. As I write, the current one is "No idea is as bad as the evil it takes to suppress it." Well, Congressman; is the scared little satrap listening?

Don't join a fraternity . . . unless you want to see the smiles on orphans' faces at a Christmas party . . . unless you want to know the enjoyment and gain the experience of living and working with other men . . . unless you want to get a well-rounded education, socially as well as academically . . . unless you want to gain friendships that will last throughout your life.

Newspapers and national magazines are very quick to point out the seemingly bad aspects of fraternities - low averages, hazing, etc. However, the positive features of our fraternal organizations remain hidden behind the veil of editorial prejudice. It's "news" if a fraternity pledge is injured by a Hell Week hazing exercise, but if the same house later rings doorbells for the March of Dimes, no one will ever find this "news" in a publication.

In some people's minds, because of our bad press coverage, fraternalism is synonymous with parties. It's true, we do enjoy our parties but, a fraternity is more than just a social club. It is a group of individuals who have banded together to provide a place where a guy can blow off steam, study, seek advice, borrow a buck, find someone who will listen to his troubles at 2 AM; or just shoot the bull. And out of these experiences comes a man who will in four years have learned much more than how to integrate "Y".

Therefore, if a boy is not willing to give of himself, if he is not prepared to give that advice, to lend that luck, or to help a freshman integrate "Y", he should not join a fraternity. If he can do these things, the boy will become a man, a fraternity man.

UVM REVIEWS THE FRATERNITY SYSTEM

An extensive survey, aimed at presenting an overall view of the finances and services of the 16 fraternities at the University of Vermont, has been completed by the Dean of Men's office.

Dean Roland Patzer said that the survey was done in the hope that it would enable the 16 UVM fraternities to take a look at their expenses and programs, see how they compared with others, and then be able to utilize them to a fuller degree.

"I hope that we will be able to conduct such a survey yearly. Once it has been firmly established we will be able to relate a particular year's findings to those of previous years. This should prove helpful not only to the University but the fraternities as well," says Patzer.

By finding out such facts as the number of men living in fraternities and how many eat and sleep at the house, Patzer said the University will be better able to utilize its own facilities. He also pointed out that it might prove feasible for the University and the fraternities to undertake cooperative buying in certain categories.

Among other findings disclosed by the study are:

The average number of actives is 40.56 per fraternity with the highest number being 90 and the lowest 17.

Pledges average 25.56 per house (from seven to 51).

A total of 454 men live in fraternities but there are sleeping capacities for 518.

The average assessed value of each house is $53,500 (four are valued at $100,000 or above). Other areas covered in the survey dealt with monthly dues, various fees, parking facilities, and wages.

Patzer said that the next step is to discuss the findings of the survey with the Interfraternity Council and the alumni IFC. "We have a picture of where we are," says the UVM Dean, "now where do we go?"

All forms of publicity must be removed by the candidate or his representatives not later than 1 hour after the polls close on the day of the elections. A penalty will be invoked for circulars, handbills, flyers, and posters found after 5:30 PM on April 27.

The candidate may use posters, circulars, handbills, etc., of 14 x 22 inches or less to be attached to the bulletin boards, trees and elsewhere; flats may also be employed. He may also use banners

Posters in the Waterman Building must be confined to the lower hall, and must not appear on the bulletin boards across from the book store. They may appear on the boards across from the SA office, and there only.

Failure to comply with any of the above regulations will result in a penalty of ten votes for each delinquent poster of a candidate for class officer or Student Court. The Student Association Elections Committee will confiscate all delinquent forms of publicity immediately. Publicity over the radio is prohibited except interviews by WRUV with each candidate receiving equal time.

Girl Watcher's Guide

Presented by Pall Mall Famous Cigarettes

Girl watchers are honorable men

LESSON 6- Who may watch

Any male is eligible to become a girl watcher. There is no age limit, although most girl watchers are over ten and under one hundred and four. There are no height or weight requirements, although taller men enjoy an obvious advantage at crowded parties. The only strict requirement is one of character. The girl watcher is a man of honor. Since he can't possibly take notes, as the bird watcher does, we must rely on his word. Therefore, when an experienced girl watcher tells you he saw nine beautiful girls while on his way to class, he saw nine beautiful girls. And when he tells you his Pall Mall is the cigarette of the century, believe him. It is.

Cochran Praises IFC For Its Organization

"Interfraternity Council should undertake more overall campus activities" said Mr. Cochran, IFC faculty advisor. "The UVM campus needs more unified well organized leadership directing the flow of the activities." IFC is a well organized student leading body that is capable of organizing more activities that will benefit the entire university.

Mr. Cochran, in a recent interview, said that he is very pleased with his job as student advisor to IFC. He said that his job is not too tough because most activities are referred to the dean or men who takes care of any crucial accidents in the student governing process. Mr. Cochran stated that the need for a student advisor is diminishing because so much of the activities of the IFC are so well scrutinized by the dean of men.

"ARE fraternities and intrafraternity councils needed?" "Yes," A campus should not be without fraternities or a good fraternity council. "One change that would be good to make in the intrafraternity council is a splitting of the council into groups of two with those who are presidents of their respective houses in one group and those on the council who are not presidents of their house in the other group." This system would allow more representation and would help put more work on the shoulders of people other than the house presidents who already have enough to do.

When asked whether or not the present officers of IFC are capable men, Mr. Cochran replied, "Definitely". "However, this year's turnover in officers has not been as successful as in year's past. The reason has probably been because officers are usually pre-picked and they do not learn what their job is going to entail before they take over their positions. If the men know that they are going to be in a position they should make it a point to learn all about their duties so that they can take over immediately after elections.

When Mr. Cochran was asked whether or not IFC should take over the running of Freshmen Orientation Week, he replied, "No, not unless fraternities are also allowed to rush during the first semester of the freshman year."

Greek Week Banquet

On Tuesday night, April 10, the second annual Greek Week Banquet took place at The Hotel Vermont. The event, which is now a significant part of Greek Week, was attended by more than seventy-five persons.

Although the banquet is only two years old, it symbolizes Greek Week as a whole. Fraternities and sororities have a chance to get together and better relations between houses, IFC representatives, Panhellenic Council members, and Fraternity presidents may attend. These people are enabled to meet each other and appreciate the situations of other houses. Last year's banquet, for example, emphasized togetherness.

This year's banquet had an interesting group of speakers. Guest speaker was Richard Fletcher, who is the National President of Sigma Nu. Also included were Dean of Men Roland D. Patzer, Dean of Women Anna Rankin Harris, and Professor R.W. Cochran, IFC faculty advisor.

A significant portion of the evening came with the initiation of the new IFC officers. Each of the outgoing officers received a plaque as a token of their service. The former president, Jerry Emery, received a gavel in recognition of his contribution.

Panhellenic's Wamboldt Gives Council Enthusiastic Support

It was a real pleasure to interview Mrs. Wamboldt, advisor to Panhellenic Council, a person who does a lot of work behind the scenes of this "Greek" organization, and at the same time one who never claims any credit for herself.

Mrs. Wamboldt, born in the Midwest, went to school at Northwestern University and the University of Minnesota where she received her B.A. and was a Phi Beta Kappa and a Phi Kappa Phi. After these honors, she went to the University of Southern California where she received her M.A. and Ph.D. While there, she met Dr. Huber, head of the Speech Department here, who told her of the openings at UVM in that department. Mrs. Wamboldt came here, but then had to return to California for a year. She loved Vermont because of its scenery, seasons, and people. Therefore, four years later she returned to rejoin our faculty. She enjoys Burlington because it combines urban and cosmopolitan living for both she and her sixteen year old son, Wickes, a sophomore at Burlington High School.

Prior to her work at UVM, Mrs. Wamboldt worked for CBS in New York and California, where she was Director of Music Clearance for the West Coast Radio and TV. Except for teaching, most of her life has been spent in radio and television.

This past weekend exemplifies Mrs. Wamboldt's constant activity. She is Chairman of the High School Speech Festival which was just held at UVM. In addition, she is Secretary of the Vt. Speech and Hearing Association, Chairman of the First Annual Vt. Intercollegiate Poetry Reading Festival to be held on May 5th, and the Director for the oral interpretation area of UVM's Speech Department in which ca-capacity she directs such programs as the Reader's Theater. For the past three years she has worked with the Speech Clinic and is now currently working in the radio and TV area.

As anyone can plainly see, this is more than enough to keep the average woman busy, but Mrs. Wamboldt also is advisor to Panhellenic Council and the Christian Science Collegiate Organization.

When Mrs. Wamboldt has leisure time, she enjoys music, a little golf, and braiding a rug which she claims may take years to finish.

When asked to comment on the Panhellenic system, she said,

"My most outstanding impression during the year is the excellent spirit of co-operation and democracy among the Council members." Her only suggestion for improvement was that the Council stress the importance of members remaining on council a full year in order to strengthen Panhellenic.

When asked to comment on the value of sororities, Mrs. Wamboldt said: "Sorority means family, fun and friendship for the college girl. For some girls who find they are happiest working and living with a small group, sorority offers a happy way of life during the college years."

Mrs. Wamboldt says of UVM in general, "Every student that attends UVM has an excellent opportunity to enter in all sorts of activity from Lane Series to skiing as well as being able to come in contact with outstanding minds, but some people do not take full advantage of their opportunities!"

Mrs. Wamboldt has been advisor to Panhellenic Council for the past year. During that time, she has not only given time and thought to Panhellenic but also has shown genuine enthusiasm in the way in which she participates in all of the Council's activities and decisions.

COLLEGE DROP-OUT PROBLEM CONSIDERED

As admission to American colleges and universities becomes more difficult and entrance requirements and academic standards get tougher, the problem of drop-outs before graduation takes on added significance. New dimensions of the problem, including analysis of percentages and factors related to attrition, are explored in the following summaries of information from two recently published books and a statement by the dean of Rutgers University.

STATISTICS AND CAUSES

Nationally, approximately one out of three dropouts occurs for academic reasons, reports John Summerskill, vice-president of Cornell University in a thousand-page study "The American College" (edited by Prof. Nevitt Sanford, of Stanford University, published by John Wiley & Sons).

Approximately half the freshmen who enter American colleges drop out during the next four years; about 40% never graduate; and there has been no appreciable change in drop-out rates during the past 40 years, concludes Summerskill, after reviewing 35 major studies of the problem completed in the years from 1913 to the present.

Some colleges lose as few as 12 percent of their freshman class over a four-year period, while others have drop-out rates as high as 82 percent, he notes. "In general, the attrition problems that predominate in colleges involve the student's failure to meet the psychological, sociological or economic demands rather than the strictly academic demands of the college environment," says Summerskill. "The largest numbers of drop-out involve motivational forces -- goals, interests, and satisfactions relative to college and other facets of the student's life. . . . In most existing studies, the largest proportions of drop-outs are attributed to 'lack of interest in college,' 'lack of interest in studies,' 'marriage,' 'entered military service,' 'transfer,' and so forth."

"The trouble in dealing with this problem is that we do not know what motivational factors are actually predictive of college success."

"Parents occupy key positions in the wider circle of influences upon the changing motivations of the college student. . . . The lives of many college students are influenced in important ways by feelings of dependency, ambition, fear, guilt and rebellion, stemming from family aspirations, sanctions or disapproval."

"Research evidence does not support the common notion that dropouts are frequently caused by over anticipation in extra-curricular activities," he continues.

Financial difficulties are listed as one of the important causes of attrition, rating with motivation and study problems as one of the top three causes for dropouts. The annual incomes of parents whose children fail to graduate also tend to be lower than those who successfully complete college.

Jazz Concert

reading cramps their style, and that jazz must be felt by the player and therefore be improvised.

They whip up an arrangement without the assistance of pad and pencil; they use a tape recording machine, "noodling" around with a tune for two or more hours. Then they listen on the playback to what they've taped, extract the best parts and go over them several times until they've committed them to memory. It's called a "head arrangement."

The Concert is this Friday night, from 8 p.m. to 10:30. The price of admission is $2.00 apiece.

10th ANNUAL HIGH SCHOOL DAY

"The best program we have ever offered," is the way Harold C. Collins, director of admissions and records at the University of Vermont, sums up plans for UVM's tenth annual High School Day on April 14.

Collins feels that this year's offering is the best as there are more programs being offered than ever before, there is a greater variety in the programs, better timing of events has been worked out, and there will be more demonstrations, open houses, and tour activities than in other years.

High School Day is designed for high school juniors who would like to learn more about college -- what it is like, the many career possibilities that are open, college activities, etc. The program, sponsored by UVM, includes numerous meetings in a variety of fields, sample college classes, demonstrations and open houses. The program is open to all juniors, whether they are considering attending UVM or not.

More than a 1,000 are expected to be on campus. Registration will take place from 9:15 to 10 a.m. in the Waterman Building with an opening meeting following in the Ira Allen Chapel at which time John T. Fey, UVM president, will speak.

Students will then attend the different sessions of their particular interest. Each student has received a registration card to designate his interests.

Programs are being offered in agriculture, home economics, education, engineering, science and mathematics, liberal arts, music, and health.

Sample college classes will be given in chemistry, comparative anatomy, English, philosophy, and psychology.

Demonstrations and exhibits include Army ROTC, the computing center, engineering, the language laboratory, and mathematics.

Open houses will be held at Bailey Memorial Library, the chemistry department, DeGoesbriand Memorial Hospital, Fleming Museum, the Alice Blundell Home Management House, Mary Fletcher Hospital, the physics department, and the religious centers.

World Affairs Center Fosters Participation In Foreign Policy

The World Affairs Center and The Vermont Council on World Affairs are focused on programs and services to further greater understanding of world affairs and responsible citizens' participation in U.S. Foreign Policy. This Center, located on the third floor of Old Mill, has a library on world affairs, American and international policy, a particular country's policy, international organizations and the United Nations. Audio-Visual Aids are also available. This library is open for use to UVM students and faculty, and Vermont citizens. This center also has much information for those who are student teaching.

The World Affairs Center is a part of the University for students, faculty and Vermonters, while The Vermont Council on World Affairs is supported through membership contribution. The origin of the Council was in 1952 when a group of citizens felt the need for an information center on the United Nations. UVM gave them office space in Old Mill and the group was organized into The Vermont Council on World Affairs. Later, the University made appropriations to develop The World Affairs Center. The University provides office space and staff for these organizations to carry on its activities. Director of The Center is Mr. George T. Little, Professor of Political Science.

The Council and World Affairs Center provide many services, in addition to its extensive library. It holds displays at conventions in the State, provides hospitality for foreign students, (including arranging for them to speak in the community), answers requests for speakers on world affairs throughout the State and distributes various materials to groups and schools. This literature, which is distributed by and available at the Center, is a collection of information from many sources, and not the distribution of ideas on various topics. The Center does not take a position on any issue in public policy; it only facilitates academic research. In addition, the Council publishes a Newsletter five times a year containing news of past and coming events in Vermont concerning world affairs. Book reviews and informative articles are also printed.

Easter Concert To Be Given April 15th

The University Choir will present its annual Lenten-Easter concert in cooperation with the University Band and Madrigal Singers at 4:00 P.M., Sunday, April 15 in Ira Allen Chapel. The concert is free and open to the public.

The concert will be preceded by an organ-carillon recital performed by Prof. Francis Weinrich and Linda Langworthy, '62. The first half of the concert will feature a Gabrieli triple brass choir work performed by members of the University Band. The Madrigal Singers will sing a group of 16th and 17th century secular English madrigals; this will be a small departure from the traditional limitation of sacred music at this concert. The first half of the program will close with the Kyrie and Gloria from the Anton Bruckner "Mass in e minor" sung by the 60-voice University Choir and accompanied by wind players from the University Band. The entire second half of the program will be devoted to the Randall Thompson "Peacable Kingdom" sung by the Choir a capella. This work is to be performed in English and is set to texts of Isaiah.

Prof. Herbert Schultz conducts the University Band and Prof. Frank Lidal conducts the University Choir.

Four Preps Well Received

Monday, April 9, the Rotary Club of Burlington sponsored a show starring the Four Preps accompanied by the Paul Moer Trio at Memorial Auditorium. Of the money taken in, part is to pay for the Four Preps while the remainder is to go to charity.

The four members of the singing group were Ed Cobb, Marvin Ingram, Bruce Bellard, and Glen Larson. The musical accompaniment consisted of Paul Moer on piano, Bob Daugherty on bass, and Harry Stone on drums, who started playing with the Four Preps only recently.

The singing group provided a short but very entertaining concert for the people of Burlington and the UVM students. The auditorium was not as full as it could have been because of all the activities going on at the college.

Glen Parson, the commentator of the group, gave amusing accounts of all the singers and introduced the songs. Included in their repertoire were "Moon River", and a medley of "Big Man", "26 Miles", and "Down by the Station", and several songs from their albums.

Bruce Bellard, the "Stooge" for the group, performed most of the imitations when the group sang their two records mimicking other singing groups. One song urged them to join the armed forces, the other to join the peace corps. The Four Preps imitated the Platters, the Kingston Trio, and Dion and the Belmonts, Bruce being the leading voice. He also did a vivid imitation of Billy Eckstein.

CRAM COURSE No. 3: ENGLISH POETRY

Final exams will soon be upon us. This is no time for fun and games. Let us instead study hard, cram fiercely, prepare assiduously.

In this column today let us make a quick survey of English poetry. When we speak of English poetry, we are, of course, speaking of Byron, Shelley, and Keats. Some say that of the three, Keats was the most talented. It is true that he displayed his gifts earlier than the others. While still a schoolboy at St. Swithin's he wrote his epic lines:

*If I am good, I get an apple,
So I don't whistle in the chapel.*

From this distinguished beginning, he went on to write another 40,000 poems in his lifetime—which is all the more remarkable when you consider that he was only five feet tall!

I mention this fact only to show that physical problems never keep the true artist from creating. Byron, for example, was lame. Shelley had an ingrown hair. Nonetheless, these three titans of literature turned out a veritable torrent of romantic poetry.

Nor did they neglect their personal lives. Byron, a devil with the ladies, was expelled from Oxford for dipping Elizabeth Barrett's pigtails in an inkwell. He thereupon left England to fight in the Greek war of independence. He fought bravely and well, but women were never far from his mind, as evidenced by this immortal poem:

*How splendid it is to fight for the Greek,
But I don't enjoy it half as much as dancing rick to cheek.*

While Byron fought in Greece, Shelley remained in England, where he became court poet to the Duke of Marlborough. (It is interesting to note in passing that Marlborough was the original spelling of Marlboro Cigarettes, but the makers were unable to get the entire word on the package. With characteristic ingenuity they cleverly lopped off the final "gh". This, of course, left them with a "gh" lying around the factory. They looked for some place to put it and finally decided to give it to the Director of Sales, Mr. Vincent Van Go. This had a rather curious result. As plain Van Go, he had been a crackerjack director of sales, but once he became Van Gogh, he felt a mysterious, irresistible urge to paint. He resigned from the Company and became an artist. It did not work out too well. When Van Gogh learned what a great success Marlboro Cigarettes quickly became—as, of course, they had to with such a flavorful flavor, such a filterful filter, such a flip-top box, such a soft pack—he was so upset about leaving the firm that he cut off his ear in a fit of chagrin.)

But I digress. Byron, I say, was in Italy and Shelley in

He resigned from the Company and became an artist

England. Meanwhile Keats went to Rome to try to grow. Who does not remember his wistful lyric:

*Although I am only five feet high,
Some day I will look in an elephant's eye.*

But Keats did not grow. His friends, Shelley and Byron, touched to the heart, rushed to Rome to stretch him. This too failed. Then Byron, ever the ladies' man, took up with Lucrezia Borgia, Catherine of Aragon, and Annie Oakley. Shelley, a more domestic type, stayed home with his wife Mary, and wrote his famous poem:

*I love to stay home with the missus and write,
And hug her and kiss her and give her a bite.*

Mary Shelley finally got so tired of being bitten that she went into another room and wrote Frankenstein. Upon reading the manuscript, Shelley and Byron got so scared they immediately booked passage home to England. Keats tried to go too, but he was so small that the clerk at the steamship office couldn't see him over the top of the counter. So Keats remained in Rome and died of a broken heart.

Byron and Shelley cried a lot and then together composed this immortal epitaph:

*Good old Keats, he might have been short,
But he was a great American and a heck of a good sport.*

Truth, not poetry, is the business of the Marlboro makers, and we tell you truly that you can't find a better tasting, better smoking cigarette than today's Marlboro.

IFC TRACK MEET

Carl Frattini closed out the vic-tories by winning the 220 in 0:27.3, overcoming SAE, AEPI and TEP.
The remaining two events were the Pole Vault, taken by TEP and the Mile Run, won by Theta Chi. Steve Bernstein of TEP vaulted 10'6" to take first, with Sig Nu second and Acacia third. Dick Ashton's time of 5:13.9 while well over 4:54.8 record, was good enough to win.
While competition was keen, no records were broken. This fact can be attributed to the lack of preparation of many of the participants. The final scores of the meet were: Delta Psi, 33; SAE, 30; Sig Ep, 15; Sig Nu, 13 1/2; TEP, 12 1/2; AEPI, 5 1/2; Theta Chi, 5; Acacia, 2 1/2; Phi Sig, 2; Phi Delt, 1.
The officials of the tournament consisted of: Captain Tom Bro-din, "Fuzzy" Evans, Mike Ven-detti, judges; Ed Bartlett, Hal Greig and Bob Davis, timers. Archie Post, coach of the Track Team, was chief starter and referee.
Part of the tournament, the relay race competition concluded

Tuesday, April 9 with Sigma Phi Epsilon defeating Delta Psi in the finals. The semi-final match, between Sig Ep, Delt Psi, SAE and Sig Nu resulted in the elimi-nation of SAE and Sign Nu, with times of 2:57.7 and 3:02.1 re-spectively. The two victors were only one half second apart: Sig Ep, 2:55 and Delt Psi, 2:54.5.
The final match saw these two teams battle to the wire, with Sig Ep's team of Bray, Jaharis, Collins and St. Onge nosing out Delt Psi's squad of Frattini, Stone, Nurse and Foley, 2:52.4 to 2:53.4.

Pre-Enrollment To Start After Spring Vacation

Undergraduate students pre-sently attending the University who intend to return next fall will enroll in their courses and indicate their desirable class schedule from April 30 to May 9 inclusive.
Watch Bulletin Boards for no-tices concerning appointments with advisors.
Between now and the time you complete this enrollment care-fully consider the courses you will elect as well as your re-quired courses. Discuss them with faculty members and other students so that you will have decided what you want to take. This enrollment is not consid-ered "pre-enrollment." Courses decided upon at this time should be the ones you will be taking in the fall with the exceptions of courses you are prevented from taking by reason of failures.
Students enrolling in the Col-leges of Agriculture and Home Economics, Arts and Sciences, and Technology will pick up in the Registrar's Office beginning Monday, May 1 at 8:30 A.M. 1) A paper of instruction, 2) An enrollment card, 3) An en-velope of class cards, 4) A sched-ule of courses. In the College of Education and Nursing, Education students will make appointments with advisors through the Dean's Office, 143 Waterman, beginning April 25. Advisors will have pre-enrollment material. Nurs-

OUTING CLUB MEMBERS ENJOY TRIP

The warm April sun has broken the grip of five months of old winter. The snow is soft at Smug-lers Notch and at Jay Peak and is becoming water. Outing Club-bers spring skiing this past Sunday found transient pools of water along the ski trains and slopes of slush. Frequent falling, however, did not dampen enthu-siam and everyone had fun.
The bright day, the warm sun have come. As the familiar white-ness melts and the woods become the colors of dead leaves and mud, the Outing Club looks ahead at a different kind of activity.
Work parties last fall found moving logs requires a hopping and jumping gait both variable and odd. The logs are for the lean-to being built in Jefferson-ville on Outing Club land. Work will continue this Spring and the club will use the lean-to for campouts and picnics. Club members also plan to clear several of the trails unknown to most hikers on Mt. Mansfield on Uni-versity land. Trail clearing re-quires only the ability to adapt oneself to inconstant trail condi-tions and the desire to have fun. The club is promising a joint mountain trip with the Green Mountain Club and a slide show on New Foundland.

On April 3 the club accepted from the council a list of nomi-nations of new officers and elect-ed Terry Safford, president; Claude Phipps, vice-president; Mike Bove, treasurer; Cynthia Thompson, secretary. The club is proud of its officers and is looking forward with them to an eventful year. The club will miss George Perlstein and the gradu-ating council members and thanks them for their leadership and friendship.

SIGMA NU SOFTBALL

Representatives of Sigma Nu national, along with President Fey and Dean Patzer participated in ground-breaking ceremonies for Sigma Nu's new house addi-tion and renovation program. The ceremonies were held Tuesday afternoon at the Sigma Nu house. Sigma Nu's interfraternity softball team began workouts last week under Butch Heller, '63, who is beginning his third consecutive year as house athletic chairman. The social-committee headed by Max Reimerdes, '63, has begun plans for our Spring formals. The date and the name of the band are to be announced in the near future.

John Stahler, Vermont's basketball captain for the 1962-63 season.

John Stahler, high scoring forward for the Catamounts, was named captain of next year's basketball team at a meeting held after the team's finale against Clarkson. John is a junior from Huntington Station, New York and is an honor student majoring in economics. Besides playing basketball, John was also a member of Gold Key and Key and Serpent, men's honorary societies and, is also a member of SAE fraternity.

Speaking on the prospects for next year's team, John stated "We should do better than last year considering the fact that we will have everyone back from last year thus providing for a very experienced team and bench." Commenting on the freshman team he concluded that "The boys have good shooting ability and should further increase our strength." On the question undoubtedly thought of by every sports-minded UVM student, namely, the prospects for a Yankee Conference championship, he said "We can be a serious contender. But lacking a really big man will make the task tougher. However, we can compensate for this by being aggressive on the boards and developing a good fastbreak."

John expects the most trouble from both UCON, due to their tremendous height, and URI because of their exceptional freshman team. As a final quote, he said "Myself and all of the other fellows on the team are looking forward to beating St. Michael's twice next year."

Sportlight Southwich J. Alice Hofler

The election results for the Women's Recreation Association have been compiled and the new officers for next year are as follows: President - Charity Greenwood; Vice-President - Kathie Uttendorfer; Recording Secretary - Debbie Matthews; Corresponding Secretary - Jean Pacquin; Treasurer - Marcie Bullock; Sub-Treasurer - B.G. The new officers were installed at a meeting on Tuesday, April 3 in Southwich.

The tennis and softball tournaments will be starting soon. See your dorm representative for further information.

Plans are in motion for the first horse show which will be held on May 19 at the University Farm. Entry blanks will be sent to each living unit in the near future.

Consideration for the Sport's Managers has been started by the new council. The Awards Picnic is coming up soon.

What better way is there to start your summer tan, than by participating in the W.R.A. activities in the great outdoors. For your indoor sports, there is the Catalina Club Swim Show on May 1 and 2 down at the YMCA.

Congratulations to third floor Mason on winning the basketball tournament against some very tough competition.

Delta Psi Cops IFC Track Meet

The Interfraternity Indoor Track and Field Meet was held April 6-7 in the Cage. Delta Psi emerged victorious, edging out Sigma Alpha Epsilon, 33 points to 30. In fact, these two teams dominated the entire competition, taking nine out of eleven first places. Scoring was on a 5-3-2-1 basis. Delta Psi had four firsts, three seconds, and two third place positions while SAE copped five first, two thirds, and one fourth.

The 440 yd. run, 35 lb. throw, High Jump, 30 yd. dash and the 880 yd. run were all won by SAE. Fred Tripp took the 440 in one minute flat, two seconds above the record of 0:58. Second went to Sig. Ep and third to Sigma Nu. Tom Whittaker heaved the 35 lb. weight 42'4 1/4" to win, with Delta Psi's Dave Strassburg taking second position. John Stahler's 5'8 3/4" jump proved enough for first position in the High Jump, as did Bill Rundle's time of 04:00 in the 30 yd. dash. Dennis Bender's time of 2:41.1 in the 880 also proved enough to win.

Delta Psi took first in the Broad Jump, Shot Put, 30 yd. High Hurdles and the 220 yd. Run. Richie Stone, with an 18 9 3/4" jump, while under the 20'3" record, still achieved first place. His teammate, Carl Fratini finished third, with Chuck Gruttman and Dick Darling of Alpha Epsilon Pi coming in second and fourth, respectively. Stone led his team to victory a second time in the hurdling, defeating TEP and SAE in that order. John Minahan's put of 38'6", proved unattainable by Sig Nu (2nd) Phi Sig. and Sig Ep.

Sixty Attend Spring Grid Meeting

Squad Working Hard, Conditioning Is Stressed

Robert Clifford, UVM's new football coach, drills the team during spring practice last week. (Credit: R. Passero, S.P.S.)

Coach Robert Clifford was officially enstated as head football coach last week before a gathering of 60 football candidates. Former coach and Athletic Director J. Edward Donnelly introduced the squad to their new mentor, and promptly left the meeting in his capable hands. The new coach then masterfully assumed command. He conducted the meeting as if he was a professor meeting a class on the first day of a new semester. He outlined his 18 years of experience as a coach and then informed the team of their new eighth game with American International College. Assistant Coach John Coons was not present at the meeting but Clifford expressed his confidence in Coons as one of the best line coaches in the Yankee Conference. He then began to lecture on his subject, football. His philosophy for winning football is a simple one -- score 4 TDs to opponent's 2. This seems to be in accord with emphasis on offense, his formula for victory. During his six years at Colby Clifford's teams averaged 26.3 points per game and went 39 games without being shutout.

play and in person. He demands that his team exemplify university level football. Standards in the way they play and they way they appear before the critical public. "Little things make perfection and perfection is no little thing." That quote appeared on the set of plays he distributed to the players and sums up the quality of football he expects. A college football player with a sloppy uniform, usually plays a haphazard game, so he requires all his men to look sharp hoping they will play the same way.

After two sessions in the gym's cage the Catamounts have been practicing at Centennial Field every afternoon. The workouts start with a warm-up drill of six calisthenics and progress into controlled scrimmages. The 40 plus man squad was broken up into units last Monday. These units will engage in a 45 minute scrimmage game on Saturday. Next Tuesday is set for an inter squad scrimmage under game conditions. Films of this game will aid Coach Clifford in selecting promising new faces for football camp this summer and to see returning letterman in action for the first time.

Mixed Doubles Bowling

Champs Crowned

Proudly holding their trophies are the winners at the mixed doubles bowling tournament. They are (l to r) Winnie Tubbs and John Kirk, 1st place; and Rudy Passero and Emily Raitzin, 2nd place.

The University of Vermont Mixed Bowling Championships, held on April 6, 1962, was won by the team of Winnie Tubbs and John Kirk, who scored 615. The close contest for second was won by the team of Emy Raitzin and Rudy Passero who picked up 18 more pins than the duo of Judy Geuther and Peter Parks. Winnie Tubbs had the highest single string total for les femmes with 107, and Bill Odin topped the mens' single strings with 131. High three string totals were compiled by Emy Raitzin and Judy Geuther, tied at 263, and John Kirk who rolled a 357.

SPORTING OPINIONS

By Howie Gorney

To make a prediction of Vermont's first venture into bona fide Yankee Conference competition in football is as difficult as forecasting Burlington's weather. It is my personal opinion that, although we may not take home the beanpot, symbol of the championship, we will nevertheless do very well. With a new coach, a new gym, and a team with new incentive, how can we go wrong? But these are the very factors which should cause me to be cautious. Newness necessitates adjustment. A question with great bearing on the Cats' 1962 season is how well will they adjust to their new surroundings?

Bothered by this question, I decided to go to the top, meet with our new coach, Robert Clifford, and his assistant, John Coons, and see if they could provide some answers. Unfortunately, they proved no better at fortune telling than myself.

"We know what we want," said Clifford, "But it's too early to tell. The biggest thing to do right now is learn. Everything we're doing at this time is different from what we've done before, which is only natural with a change in coaches. But our only long range plan is to win."

I couldn't expect much more from the head coach and his assistant. They have only a two week spring meeting, no summer practice because of Yankee Conference rules, and a scheduled game with American International College approximately two weeks after school starts next September. All in all, Clifford and Coons will work out with the team for about a month's time before the first game. No wonder they were hedgy about the delicate subject of victories. Therefore, I will be hedgy also, for, although no one would rather see a victorious football team than myself, I will not be too hasty to forecast as such. If the team loses, well, chalk it up to experience. Don't go ranting and raving about that fumble, the pass that skidded through those finger tips, or that missed tackle. For the Catamount eleven has a big job ahead of them: encountering some of the toughest teams in New England. And they must do it under the guidance of new coaches who, although endowed with ability, must still make the adjustment to a new school and new personalities. The only thing the new coach will promise, and I'll back him up, is "interesting football."

The Vermont Cynic

I am honoured indeed to address the university on this occasion, a veritable academic festival. For today we honor the attainments of learning, we take note of academic excellence, and in so doing we remind ourselves of the true nature of a university. The term university has no meaning unless we regard it as a company of scholars devoted to the life of the mind. This being so those we honor today have by their attainments -- by the promise that is in them -- kept faith with what men founded here a very long time ago and have helped to maintain a tradition of learning which has long lent meaning and dignity to the annals of this distinguished university.

Honors Day In Review

Honors Day Cites Student Scholarship

On Tuesday morning, May 1, the annual Honors Day (Founders' Day) Convocation was held in the Ira Allen Chapel at 10:15. As usual, all 10, 11, and 12 o'clock University classes were canceled so that participants and observers could attend the ceremonies.

As the University Band, conducted by Herbert L. Schultz, played the processional, the academic procession entered the chapel and took their place. The academic procession consisted of the President's group of distinguished guests and the President of the University, the Deans, the University Trustees, the Faculties, and Seniors.

After the singing of the national anthem and the invocation by the Reverend Richard E. Leideberg, President Fey introduced Wilbur Kitchener Jordan, Ph. D., who delivered the Honors Day Address. Dr. Jordan, President Emeritus of Radcliffe College, and professor of history at Harvard, entitled his address "The Education of Justin Smith Morrill." He recalled the events of the life of the distinguished late Senator from Vermont, who was greatly responsible for the Land Grant College Act, and he tried to discover the germ of Morrill's greatness. Dr. Jordan traced the life of the self-educated Vermont farmer and showed the development of his interest in, and devotion to scholarship and education. After his well-received address, Dr. Rolf N. Haugen of the Political Science Department presented Dr. Jordan with an honorary degree of Doctor of Laws and cited his many achievements.

Next on the agenda was the recognition of students for highest scholastic achievement. The names of the two students having the highest scholastic standing (for their class) in each college were announced by the respective Deans of the colleges. In the College of Agriculture and Home Economics the students are Ann A. Holck, and Elizabeth J. Soule ('62); Phyllis C. Doledo, and Krisdean Moore ('63); Anne P. Hermayer, and Albert D. Stevens ('64); and Alice M. Burton and Elizabeth Wager ('65). In the College of Arts and Sciences the students are Dorothy E. Indick, and Lois M. Lorand ('62); Paul D. Price, and Lorraine F. Reilly ('63); Thomas S. Rowland, and Patricia A. Stone ('64); and Janet R. Koch and Peter W. Slayton ('65). In the College of Education and Nursing, Clara L. DeBoer, and Brenda M. Burgess ('62); Susan H. Eaton, and Sandra J.

Sargent ('63); Ashley W. Jewell, and Christina M. Graeter ('64); and Madeline A. Lewis and Wendy J. Kanner ('65) were recognized.

The students honored in the College of Technology are Gregory G. Playotea, and David L. Clough ('62); Joseph A. Godrick, and Stanley Zielinski ('63); Nancy J. Cranwell, and Rudolph L. Polli ('64); and Janet A. Pritchard and Kathleen A. Thomas. Cited for their achievement in the School of Dental Hygiene are Virginia G. Delorme, and Gail J. Lever ('62); and Ruth C. Heyse and Mirian S. Kittell ('63). Also read by the Deans were the names of all students in their colleges who have attained an average of 90% or over last semester.

Following the reading, the new Chief Justice of the Student Court, William R. Cullen, a junior from Hamden, Connecticut, and the new Student Association President, Paul N. Chervin, also a junior, from Worcester, Mass., were inaugurated. Administering the oaths of office was Joseph Levin, the outgoing Chief Justice of the Student Court, a senior from Burlington.

After the inaugurations, President Fey presented 32 highly coveted awards to outstanding students. Among the prized awards was the Kidder Medal, given in memory of F.T. Kidder, '80, to the senior man ranking first in character, leadership, and scholarship, which was presented to Jerry M. Emery. Recipient of the Mary Jean Simpson Cup was Patricia P. Bishop. This cup goes to the senior woman who best exemplifies the character, service, and constructive influence which Dean Simpson strove to develop in undergraduate women. Also awarded was the Alpha Lambda Delta Award to the senior who has the highest average for four years. This year the recipient was Jeannine Harrington of Brattleboro, Vermont.

The next event was the presentation of the new members of the class honor societies, Gold Key, Sophomore Aides, Key and Serpent, Staff and Sandal, Boulder, and Mortar Board. Eighty new members have been taken into these honoraries. Following, the new members of the national honor societies on campus, Phi Beta Kappa, Sigma Xi, Alpha Lambda Delta, Alpha Omega Alpha, Alpha Zeta, Kappa Delta Pi, Kappa Phi Kappa, National Collegiate Players, Omicron Nu, Sigma Phi Alpha, Tau Beta Pi, Tau Kappa Alpha, Ethan Allen Rifles, and Pershing Rifles were presented. These national honoraries accepted 128 new members.

The Honors Day Convocation ended after the singing of "Champlain", the benediction, and the academic recession.

Pat Bishop, Jerry Emery Receive Awards On Honor's Day

The highlight in the awarding of prizes at the Honors Day Convocation was the presentation of the Kidder Medal and the Mary Jean Simpson Cup. The Kidder Medal is given in memory of Dr. F.T. Kidder, '80, to the senior man ranking first in character, leadership, and scholarship. This year's Medal went to Jerry Emery of Waterbury, Vermont. Jerry is a member of Sigma Phi Fraternity and past president of Boulder Society and the Interfraternity Council. He will be attending Yale Medical School in the fall.

The Mary Jean Simpson Cup, named for the former UVM Dean of Women, is given to the senior woman who best exemplifies the character, service, and constructive influence which Dean

Simpson strove to develop in undergraduate women. The recipient of this year's Cup was Patricia Bishop of Saddle River, New Jersey. Pat is a sister of Kappa Alpha Theta Sorority and past president of the WSGA and Catalina Club. (three years) She will attend Dartmouth College next September to do graduate work in biochemistry.

Dr. Truman M. Webster, Associate Professor in the German Department, stated in his capacity as Chairman of the Ceremonies Committee, "There is no doubt that these two awards are the highest that a senior man and woman can earn. I feel assured that the two winners are deserving of the honor which has been bestowed upon them."

Morrill Gift To Be Used

A $1,000 contribution to the Justin Smith Morrill Foundation which seeks to acquire the home of Vermont's famous Senator in Strafford was approved by the University of Vermont Trustees at their Saturday meeting.

University President John T. Fey indicated that he had written to the other Land-Grant colleges and universities telling them of the project in Vermont to purchase and restore the Morrill homestead as a "significant historic site," and said that to date some 15 institutions had responded with gifts to the Morrill Foundation.

He said that other Land-Grant institutions had indicated they hoped to be able to join in the project.

Dr. Fey said he felt it "is appropriate for the University to share in this effort since Justin Morrill was a native Vermonter whose authorship of the Land-Grant Act is currently being observed during a centennial celebration of the founding of the Land-Grant colleges."

New KW Directors Named

The Directors of the 65th Annual Kake Walk have announced the appointment of James Newman, Frank Amato, and Neil Adams as directors of the 66th Annual Kake Walk. Neil, a junior in Education, served last year as Assistant Director of Publicity.

Frank, a junior in Technology, served as Assistant Director of Finance, and Jim, a junior in Technology, as Assistant Director of Production.

The new directors hope that the entire campus will join them in making Kake Walk 1963 the biggest and best ever.

Wilbur Library Features Art Exhibition "For Young Collectors"

The Printmaker's art now fills the Fleming Museum's Wilbur Library in an exhibition of 19th and 20th century graphics from the Ferdinand Roten Gallery in Baltimore.

Over 100 lithographs, etchings, woodcuts and woodengravings, in color as well as black and white, of all size, style, and subject, are displayed on special panels installed in the library's well lighted book cases, making the room the brightest gallery in the Museum. Called "For Young Collectors," the show indicates the variety and richness of what has become a highly appreciated art medium.

Represented are such familiar names as Daumier, Cezanne, Degas and Rodin of the 19th century and Braque, Kollwitz, Leger, and Matisse of the 20th. There are bullfight and circus lithographs by Picasso, and several scenes from Rouault's wood engraved series of the Passion. Numerous works by contemporary artists, some not so well known, but all respected in their own fields—for example, Friedlagner, Citron, Haas, and Baskin—are also on view.

All the works have one thing in common. They are of a kind that most young or new collectors could consider owning themselves. Referred to as "prints," lithographs, etchings, woodcuts, and woodengravings should not, as sometimes happens, be confused with reproductions. The modern print is made for its own sake; the reproduction is simply that, a printed copy of a real work of art, usually a painting, and of no intrinsic value.

The pleasant feature of the print is this: while intended as an original work of art, it appears in editions, ranging anywhere from a dozen or so numbered and signed imprints to large unsigned editions of a 1000 or more. This explains their popularity at a time when a one off Picasso sketch of a $1000 bill could be worth more than the real thing. One of his lithographs can be had for less than $10, unsigned and in a huge edition, to be true, but still a Picasso lithograph.

Gallery copies of the National Print Council's explanatory booklet "What is an Original Print?" have been put out with the exhibit for budding print connoisseurs. For further discussion, students are welcome to knock on Museum Director Janison's door.

The exhibition will continue through May 20.

Class Of '65 Completing Work For "Dogpatch Daze"

Final plans and arrangements are now being made for UVM's newest Spring weekend—"Dogpatch Daze". Weekend co-chairmen Sherman Murphy and Sharon Dummel have announced that all plans are rapidly moving towards completion for the big weekend of May 18 and 19.

The weekend, sponsored by the Class of '65 for the entire University community, will begin Friday evening, May 18, with a picnic and jazz concert behind the Cage. Appearing at the jazz concert will be the "T.J. Quartet." The quartet, from the Burlington area, have been seen many times on the UVM campus, most recently at the Delta Delta Delta Sorority Pledge Tea. All those holding Saga meal contracts will be admitted free. All others will be charged the nominal fee of $1.25.

Saturday afternoon, May 19, "Dogpatch Daze" will continue with a Carnival in the men's gymnasium from 1 to 4 P.M. Many sorority and fraternity pledge classes and residence hall units have indicated their intentions to participate by constructing a carnival booth. Entrance to the Carnival will cost 19¢ with fees for the different booths being 5 to 10¢. Besides the booths, there will be other activities such as hoola-hoop contests and Sady Hawkins races, in which all are invited to participate. There will also be a refreshment stand and entertainment.

The weekend will culminate with a gala dance on the tennis courts behind Southwick. The dance will be informal and music will be provided by the fabulous Burt Orr and his band, a widely acclaimed dance band from Providence, Rhode Island. Admission will be 99¢ stag and $1.98 drag.

Many catchy posters advertising "Dogpatch Daze" have been seen all over campus. Further plans for publicizing the weekend include an "Abner and Daisy Mae" parade probably Monday, May 14.

Collins Notes Dropout Rate Of Students

Academic failure struck down fewer than five percent of University of Vermont undergraduate students in the first semester this year, according to figures compiled by UVM Director of Admissions Harold C. Collins.

The 4.8 percent who were dropped for reasons of academic failure are just one part of a total college dropout picture which has come in for increasing national attention.

According to John Summerskill, vice-president of Cornell University, in a chapter on dropouts in a new book, "The American College," approximately half the freshmen who enter American colleges drop out during the next four years. About 40 percent never graduate, and there has been no appreciable change in dropout rates in the past 40 years, he reports after reviewing 35 major studies of dropouts.

Summerskill notes that some colleges lose as few as 12 percent of their freshman class while others have dropout rates as high as 82 percent over four years. One out of three dropouts occurs for academic reasons, he says.

UVM's Collins reports that 54 percent of students admitted to UVM graduate from the University, and he notes that "many more graduate elsewhere."

Nationally, Summerskill estimates that "some 40 percent of college students graduate on schedule and, in addition, approximately 20 percent graduate at some college, some day."

Most studies of the dropout problem stress the fact that the majority of dropouts do not occur because of academic failure, although it is known that many students drop out voluntarily because poor academic achievement either discourages them or contributes to their decision to leave school.

Collins indicates that experience has shown that about 40 percent of UVM students leave for reasons other than academic

The University of Vermont honored "four people whose service and contribution to Vermont is cherished still," on Saturday, April 28th.

The occasion was a luncheon at Marsh Dining Hall marking dedication of Austin, Marsh and Tupper Halls for men and Patterson Hall for women. Speaker was University of Vermont President John T. Fey.

Guests included Dean Emeritus Marian Patterson and Mrs. Warren R. Austin, members of the UVM Board of Trustees, and students who reside in the four new halls. Barbara Fruchtbau, a senior from Nutley, N.J., and Kenneth L. Nalibow, Woodstock sophomore, were student co-chairmen for the dedication, which was followed by a tea in Miss Patterson's honor at Patterson Hall sponsored by the Mortar Board Alumnae.

Dr. Fey told the luncheon gathering "I believe the presence here of many of the students who reside in Austin, Marsh, Patterson and Tupper Halls is the best possible statement of dedication which can be made, for the process of education and the memory of those who serve that process is perpetuated each year by the young men and women who are chosen for the gift of educational opportunity."

The UVM President read from letters praising the choice of Austin, Marsh, Tupper and Patterson as names for the University's newest residence halls. "They are worthy names," he said, and "well chosen because they remind us... of eminence of achievement."

Miss Patterson served as the University's second Dean of Women from 1922 until her retirement in 1937. Her name was chosen for the newest women's residence on Redstone campus. UVM's three new units for men students were named for Ambassador Warren R. Austin, for James Marsh, the fifth UVM President, and for Professor Frederick Tupper, a distinguished Shakespeare scholar who headed the Vermont department of English for more than 50 years from 1894 until his retirement in 1944.

failure; and that financial difficulties are a factor in many such instances. Marriage and military service also account for a number of dropouts; transfer to other colleges, student or family moves are other reasons.

Dr. Albert E. Meder, Jr., vice provost and Dean of Rutgers University, notes in a Rutgers study that "there will always be some students who discontinue their education because of such difficulties as poor health, financial reverses, family obligations... or for other reasons having nothing to do with success or failure in their studies."

"And there will always be some students who fail to live up to the promise they evinced at admission, because they lose interest, lack perseverance, refuse to accept drudgery that inevitably accompanies any worthwhile activity, or simply can't or won't work."

He suggests that responsibility for these students must be shared by the secondary schools and society at large as well as by the university, and that secondary schools could better prepare some students while colleges could salvage some with more adequate funds for counselling and guidance.

A letter from Mr. Waldo Brigham-Buckham, one of the living relatives of President Marsh and President Buckham, sums up nicely the kind of response the University has received to the names chosen for these men's halls:

"It is good to know," Mr. Buckham writes, "that one of these halls will be named for President Marsh—an occasion of pride and honor for his descendants and for both the Marsh and Buckham families.

"I am very much pleased," he continues, "that Professor Tupper's name will be memorialized. I studied under him many years ago and remember him with deep affection and respect. I have never had the privilege of meeting Senator Austin, but I have followed his career with admiration and I think it highly fitting that his name should also be chosen."

Editor's Scrapbook

It is indeed frustrating to sit idly by and view a truly American tragedy: the veritable decadence of the ideals indigenous to this country, in part based upon a constitution delimiting the rights and sovereignty of the individual as opposed to the State. This country has, from the death of the first Patriot, until the not too recent past, traditionalized a set of ideological mores, dependent on an attitude preserving the human dignity, honor, and pride of the American people. These words meant something some time ago, and their meaning is renewed and invigorated, surprisingly enough, during times of crises, particularly war. It is during the intermissions in man's constant overt struggle for survival during which he allows himself to forget that he lives in the strongest nation ever upon this earth, and that the perpetuation of his country is his constant responsibility. It is during these "slack" times that the most preposterous, outlandish and insulting proposals to deal with the internal and external problems of this nation roll forth from the tongues of American citizens.

A case in point: There is under way, at the present time, a minor redistribution of the labor force. This is, perhaps, too mild a phrase to use. What we are encountering during these present months is a legalized form of slave trading. "Citizens Committees," particularly in Louisiana, contribute funds to ship Negro families to destinations of their choice. Everyone knows this by now. It has, indeed, been much publicized. Everyone also knows, of course, that the individuals accepting this offer receive a one-way ticket.

From the nation-at-large --- utter silence. Why? Perhaps because we are faced with one of the most embarrassing, frustrating and perplexing problems ever to confront us. The entire episode, whether or not it continues, should go down in history as a definite victory for the South, or at least those representative citizens of the South bent upon maintaining segregated states. And if this is the cost, the national debt will run high.

The whole plan is so perfect. The Negro moves by choice. He is usually unemployed, dissatisfied, in want of a good job, better living conditions and a more respectable atmosphere. He is given the opportunity, paid for, by a self-righteous "Citizen's Committee". The entire plan stinks. It is worse than being granted eternal life by the Devil.

It is hard to tell a man who is down and out, who has many months to feed, and many bodies to clothe, to "stand his ground and fight," whether it be for his pride or to uphold his dignity as a human being, and this is what makes the South's "Final Solution" so hard to counter. The effort on their part is futile. They cannot hope to remove the entire Negro populace from their soil. The sad thing is they are not even lighting a few fires of protest in their feeble attempts.

As the buses roll Northward on our interstate turnpikes, built with the help of federal funds, they

Bowl Invitation Still Open

Dear Dean Rowell:

I have been out of town on an extensive business trip; consequently, I was unable to make an earlier reply to your letter dated February 20.

I do not question your right to refuse our invitation. However, I do find it difficult to understand the reason for your highly critical opinion of the program. I feel as though I invited you to my home for dinner and your refusal included criticism of my wife's cooking and my children's table manners.

I will not attempt to refute your criticism because your faculty and students have already done a very adequate job in "The Vermont Cynic". I will merely say that the invitation is still open. Any time the University of Vermont wishes to reconsider the College Bowl, we would be very happy to have them as participants.

Sincerely,

John Cleary,
Executive Producer

Stage Compliments

Dear Editor:

I wish to extend my warmest congratulations to the members of the University Players for the excellent performance of last week's play "Six Characters in Search of an Author".

The selection of the play itself should be well noted, because in my opinion, for an educational function, it is more appropriate than the Match-Maker, or the like. For in the first place, it gives a chance to the players to improve their skills and abilities in artistic evaluation, interpretation, and the performance of the more dramatic and Classical plays. (Whether it is Modern Classical or others.) Secondly, it gives a chance to the audience to learn about other and better types of plays, and to appreciate and understand more complex type of plays, rather than being used to plays which resemble skits and ordinary distasteful things.

It has been my belief, in the last years, that both the University players, and the Music students of UVM are capable of producing greater art works, such as Carmen, and the above mentioned play, rather than spending their valuable time and skill in putting out works such as Where is Charlie, or the like.

At this time, I would like to congratulate Miss Sally Buermann and Mr. Ed Kritzer and others who masterly performed their roles.

It is to be reminded that in these types of plays and performances, the background music is an essence, and supplemment. Yet in last week's performance, the lack of music did not disturb the magnificence of the production.

Sincerely,

Cyrus Kermanj, Jr.

Friend Or Foe

To the Editor, & The Wasson Infirmary:

After several of our friends and the close relative of one of the undersigned has come near to suffering serious bodily injury at your hands, we, although not professing vast knowledge of the medical field, do offer the following advice.

Firstly, it is useless to treat a dislocated shoulder with Ben-Gay for it would be somewhat slow in taking effect. Secondly, although Johnson & Johnson have high regard for their band-aids they are quite inadequate in the case of a jaw slashed open by rusty metal. Also, not all lung infections are bronchial colds for once in a rare while a student does contract pneumonia. Lastly, please do exercise some care in administering blood tests for it is quite uncomfortable (not to mention the difficulty in drawing blood) to have the needle pierce both sides of one's vein!

Kindly heed our unsolicited advice bearing in mind that not everyone who arrives at Wasson is trying to escape ROTC drill, or add to their collection of pink, green and white pills.

Desiring to see all our friends at graduation, we remain

Sincerely yours,

Joel F. Morris, '63

An Old Question

Dear Editor:

Democracy must prevail.

It is time that the question, concerning compulsory ROTC at UVM, be brought out from behind closed doors into the open, in the form of public discussion. Any discussion should be non-violent, include representatives of all interested parties, and exclude any mass demonstrations, spontaneous or otherwise. The great American freedoms of speech, press, and assembly should be observed. A peaceful, democratic organization dealing with the question should be given full co-operation by the administration and the military science department. Sincerely,

Raymond LeBlanc

Guest Editorial

Last April 12th, Mr. Boriskin devoted about a thousand words to the thesis that Rep. Francis E. Walter, chairman of the House Un-American Activities Committee:

- 1) resembled a talking mule,
- 2) spoke in belches,
- 3) is more absurd than most politicians,
- 4) sees Red plots against him everywhere
- 5) is paranoid,
- 6) has created asinine laws which
 - a) restrict dissent of honest and rational men,
 - b) rob everyone of freedom of thought and expression.

The cause of this derogation seems to be displeasure with the House Un-American Activities Committee in general, brought into focus by resentment at the film "Operation Abolition". If there is a chair of reasoning behind it, we might reconstruct it as follows:

- 1st Premise: Certain laws (Smith Act, etc.) restrict honest dissent and freedom of thought and expression.
 - 2nd Premise: These laws are bad.
 - 3rd Premise: They were enacted by the House Un-American Activities Committee.
 - 4th Premise: The Committee's activities are determined by its chairman.
 - 5th Premise: Mr. Walter is the chairman.
- Therefore: Attack Mr. Walter and extirpate the root of the evil.

Even more distressing than the personal slurs in the article are the totally wrong assumptions about the legislative process, the function of the committees of the House and the assignment and responsibilities of committee members. Even if the writer of the article is too tender in years to have absorbed such elementary material, surely the editors should have learned enough in two or three years of university education to catch and correct such basic misinformation.

Let's stop and consider the general problem of how the House of Representatives is going to make any laws at all. Since each of the 437 members must stand for re-election every two years the membership is constantly changing. While a few make a career of it, the average term of service is only a few years. Moreover each member has a multitude of affairs to tend to, the majority of which involve dealing with his constituents. Even a casual visitor to the House is overwhelmed with the tremendous rush and frantic motion perpetually in evidence. Unlike the staff of a university, the Representatives by and large do not pursue a deliberate course of action of their own choosing. Thus it cannot be reasonably expected that each member, holding an essentially temporary job, can independently ascertain

There are a few basic tools that every educated man should carry with him. But since our educational system leaves much to be desired, and since many of June's graduates will go forth into the world with many holes in their respective funds of knowledge, I -- in the public interest -- will tell a joke. For the sophisticated joke is one clear mark of the educated man, and every college graduate should know at least one.

The story has it that three medieval scholars were engaged in a discussion of anatomy; the anatomy of the horse, to be exact. Eventually they got around to the horse's teeth, and the question arose as to the number of teeth that the horse had. The first scholar suggested that they check Biblical references to horses. "Surely," he pointed out, "the Bible will answer our question."

The second disagreed. "I've looked through the Bible and it says nothing about a horse's teeth, but Aristotle -- that source of all knowledge -- has probably studied the subject carefully. Why don't we simply check his writings?"

"I have already done so," said the third, "and there is nothing there which would help us."

All three looked glum until the third had an idea. "The solution is simple; let us get a horse and count the number of teeth in his mouth."

The other two, when they had sufficiently recovered from their first horror, then dragged their companion off to the Inquisition. I realize that this joke does not illicit peals of laughter, but then, no self-respecting educated joke should. It does, however, draw from us a smug enjoyment, and this is clearly the aim of the Sophisticated Story.

We enjoy the naivete of the three scholars and we are smug because our scientific approach to truth is today so direct. But our superior feelings are uncalled for, because today we are as shackled as were those three long ago, and our approach to knowledge is often as blind.

A prime example of this was provided on this campus not long ago. If you will remember, much interest was generated, centering around the House of Un-American Activities Committee -- HUAC, for short. At that time, I was discussing the committee with an acquaintance of mine. He was explaining to me some pertinent facts about the committee. Among the other things that he pointed out was the fact that its members disobeyed all rules of fair play; that witnesses were denied the right to speak in their own defense, and that even the simplest guarantees of proper counsel, parliamentary courtesies, and fair questioning procedures were not granted. I -- admittedly ignorant about HUAC -- was extremely interested.

That night I did some research into the committee. I first, of course, read the verbatim minutes of its meetings. I had expected to find all manner of abuses recorded there. As I read, though, I, at first, thought that there was something wrong. The minutes I had, read exactly like ones of the House Agricultural Committee. All rules of order were followed, parliamentary procedure reigned supreme. Slowly I realized the Committee's devilishly clever plan; they openly granted all rights to their witnesses but secretly -- well need I say more?

I sought out my friend and asked him where he had found the accounts of HUAC's secret operations. Well, it seems that he hadn't really found any, in fact, he had never even read the Committee's minutes, but he was sure....

I was dubious! Then, to cap things off, I found a report by the American Bar Association stating that the investigating procedures used by HUAC were consistent with the most vigorous legal standards. Of course, this did not mean that HUAC was blameless, but simply that my friend had been irresponsible in his analysis of the situation. I soon lost interest in the whole question.

Then, one of the CYNIC's columnists began a series of exposes, in which he was going to destroy (verbally, of course) HUAC. I was eager indeed to read his commentary, for I had not really gone into the subject deeply enough myself (and neither, apparently, had any of the rabid anti-HUAC people with whom I had talked). Yet I was still

UVM Professor Spotlighted In "Focus"

Czechoslovakia -- its natural resources, industry, agriculture, and economic development under the Communists -- is the subject of an article by a University of Vermont professor appearing in a national publication.

The article, by Dr. L.A.D. Dellin, associate professor of economics, appears in Focus, the monthly publication of the American Geographical Society. The magazine serves to provide background facts and interpretation of current world problems and problem areas and is used widely as an educational aid in colleges and universities.

In his introduction, Dellin points out that when the Communists took over in 1948, they inherited an industrial plant whose prewar output, balanced between heavy and light industry, brought in more than half of the national income and employed more than two-thirds of the labor force.

Now, after completion of the second five-year plan (1956-60), official figures indicate that two-thirds of the national income (which is 2.5 times greater than in 1948) is derived from industry, while the number of non-agricultural employees has risen only slightly, and there has been a substantial change in the ratio between heavy and light industrial production, presently claimed to be three to one.

Dellin sees some serious problems arising because of a deficiency of resources for industry. He says that Czechoslovakia suffers from a severe labor shortage, has but a modest minerals base, and is decidedly deficient in fuels and metals to support its large and ever increasing industrial complex.

Coal of all types provides more than 90 per cent of the energy but at the present stepped-up rate of production -- 84 million tons in 1960, useful reserves may not last beyond the end of this century. To face such problems, the country is attempting to reduce the use of coal to 81 per cent and to step up electrification of the railroads, is beginning to import Rumanian natural gas, and is developing hydro-electric power.

Iron ore -- another crucial ingredient for modern industry -- is none too plentiful, meeting only one-third of domestic requirements.

Yet, in spite of shortages, industry is leaping forward according to Dellin. With an area only the size of New York state and a population of but 13.8 million, Czechoslovakia claims two per cent of the world's industrial output and fifth place in per capita industrial production in the world. It competes with East Germany for second place, after the Soviet Union, within the Soviet bloc. In per capita output, it leads the Communist bloc in steel, cement, and some engineering goods, as well as in cotton textiles, footwear, and sugar; and trails only the Soviet Union in machines and equipment and military goods.

Today, the strongest branch of Czech industry, and for that matter, of its economy, is engineering, especially of the heavy type, representing about one-third of total industrial output and employment. The chemical industry is being boosted with ever increasing emphasis.

On the other hand, the light, or consumer goods, industry, has only recently surpassed prewar levels in quantitative terms and many of the articles are of inferior quality.

The agricultural situation is even worse, says Dellin. In prewar days, farming met domestic needs and supplied a sur-

PROFESORES

I note, with pleasure and satisfaction, that many parents of Vermont students are expected to visit the University campus this weekend to share, if only too briefly, something of the year's college experience.

In many respects, college education often belongs, at least in spirit, as much to the parent as to the son or daughter. In the great majority of cases, the student would not be at college if the family environment had not invited the young boy or girl to think seriously of college; and -- even though more and more young men and women earn part of their way through college -- there are few families which do not make financial sacrifices to help their sons and daughters to obtain an opportunity for college education.

To the parents who understand all too well that college costs are increasing, I would like to report that the University of Vermont and, indeed, most colleges, are working with you to underwrite the cost of education for each student.

Tuition and fees paid by students do not cover the cost to the college of the student's education. Part of the cost is underwritten by state and federal funds, by gifts from business and industry, private philanthropy, by alumni, friends and parents.

In addition, the University of Vermont is fortunate in having some special funds for scholarships and loans which continue to make possible education at UVM for many young men and women who otherwise could not have gone to college.

As parents, you may take some pride, I believe, in knowing that your son or daughter has not lightly or capriciously won admission to the University of Vermont.

While we do not believe, institutionally, in a policy which would admit only those students who stand in the very top of their high school class, the University on the other hand does not admit any student unless that student presents credentials which suggest the student may reasonably be expected to succeed academically at the University.

But I should like to share with you the fact that the majority of students who fail to complete their undergraduate education at Vermont fail to do so for other than academic reasons.

Less than five per cent of UVM's undergraduates are dropped because they have failed academically.

Others leave school for many reasons -- financial, marriage, military service, family problems, transfer to other colleges, and for lack of motivation.

It seems worth noting that, while the great burden of responsibility for success or failure must ultimately rest with each student, those parents who succeed in maintaining affectionate communication with the son or daughter who has entered college can and do contribute to the student's chances for success.

Most of you already know that college years are characteristically years in which young men and women begin to seek and accept new and invigorating independence.

It is the University's effort to provide for its students an atmosphere which provides freedom and independence in terms of individual responsibility. You may be reassured or dismayed to learn, if you have not already heard, it rumored, that some students occasionally regard this effort as "paternalistic."

Certainly, and I hope you will find this reassuring, the University does not view for itself a paternal role.

The University's primary purpose for being is the education of qualified young men and women. Its primary responsibility is to seek to provide for its community of scholars an atmosphere in which the accumulated knowledge and understanding of man's life can be studied, tested and projected.

The process is both formal and informal, and rooted in the belief that the individual is important, and in the conviction that the individual who has earned an opportunity for college education must in turn accept the responsibilities which make that opportunity valuable.

Again, let me say that I believe that the education of the individual belongs, at least in spirit, as much to the parent as to the son or daughter, and the fruits of education belong to the world, for education -- whether formal or informal -- is the process by which mankind seeks to enrich and advance the human experience.

And let me say again that it is with pleasure and satisfaction that your University welcomes you.

Pirandello Drama Plays Arena

by Jules Older

Six Characters in Search of an Author was brought to UVM's Arena Theater last weekend by the University Players under the direction of the newest member of the drama department, Robert G. Ackley.

Luigi Pirandello's controversial play concerns reality and illusion. The playwright parenthetically notes that this is a play in the making, and indeed, it is a

The action takes place during rehearsal of another Pirandello drama. Six characters walk into the theater and demand that their story be told. Theirs is a sordid tale of incest and revenge, and they play it to the audience of actors and extras. Their story ends, or almost ends, with the death, or illusion of death, of the two youngest characters. Nearly everything that can be said about the play must be qualified with an "or" until it is decided what is illusion and what is reality.

The Players undertook a difficult assignment and suffered some of the inevitable consequences of their decision. On the whole, they survived nicely, and in parts, came out beautifully.

Edward Kritzer played the guilt-ridden father with compassion and understanding. The audience suffered with him the incessant torments of his step daughter.

This vengeful young lady was portrayed by Sally Buermann. She was quick and intense at all times, so much so that the audience was occasionally left in wonder that she had any hate left in her body.

Stephen Lemberg acted the part of the shortsighted director. Mr. Lemberg opened strong, closed strong, and left the audience weak. There was just too much, too much of the time.

The wretched, bumbling mother was played somewhat breathlessly by Sheila Rosen. Her facial expressions were painfully realistic, but again, too much pain over a period of three acts became melodrama long before the final curtain.

Arnold Bendich, Nancy Streit, Erik Anderson, and Elizabeth Soule handled their supporting roles comfortably, and all three aided the pace and tempo of the action.

Usually in a college production, the level of acting ability is proportional to the size of the part. But in Six Characters in Search of an Author—this was not the case. The dozen extras added a freshness and realism that strengthened immeasurably the illusion of reality. There was none of the usual bitpart hamming or first role shyness. They were there, and they were real.

These students who missed the production (and from the size of the Friday night audience, there must be many), missed a show that, while not consistently first rate, was well worth seeing.

Acacia Grabs Sing Trophy

At 8:20 P.M., on Saturday, April 14th, the lights in Memorial Auditorium dimmed and the first of twenty-two competing Fraternities and sororities stepped on stage. The Annual IFC Sing was on!

The winning Fraternities this year were: Acacia, first; Alpha Tau Omega, second; Phi Delta Theta, third. In the Sorority competition first place went to Alpha Chi Omega, Delta Delta Delta placed second, and third place went to Kappa Alpha Theta.

Two houses which deserved mention are Sigma Alpha Epsilon and Kappa Sigma. The program said "Shenandoah"—and that was the first line sung by the brotherhood and pledges of SAE. But that is where the resemblance to this song ended. For five minutes, the assembled crowd was treated to a musical verbalization of the feelings of many of the members of fraternities and sororities at UVM. Congratulations to the men from SAE on what was probably the most original, well planned, and well executed performance of the evening.

Kappa Sigma Fraternity, entitled their rendition "Standing on the Corner," proceeded to do a number of beer commercials in Barber-shop style.

Alpha Chi Omega combined hard work, talent, and a good selection of songs to take first place in the sorority competition. It seemed that the eyes had it, that is, the attention paid the director made, the difference between a trophy and no trophy. Marty Gardner, song director, seemed to have complete control over her group. When her hands stopped, so did the group's voices. When she signaled for a rise in pitch, there was a rise in the pitch. Attention, along with an obvious knowledge of the song, paid off.

Opinions Please

by Betty Bergman

The White Citizen's Council of New Orleans has recently initiated a program of paying one-way transportation to the North for unemployed Negroes and their families. Do you think that this plan is a valid and effective one?

Alice Zalon, '62—"No; not unless they pay one-way transportation to the North for whites and their families. We all know that they are not doing this out of the goodness of their hearts, but in order to get rid of the problem before someone else solves it in a way that will be detrimental to their 'principles'. Perhaps a secondary reason is that they're trying to ease their consciences, if they have such things."

Steve Cohn, '64—"No. This plan is invalid from a practical and moral standpoint. First of all, very few Negroes can be absorbed into the Northern work-force. More important, the South is once again, refusing to abide by the constitutional principles of equality and justice. The United States' free world leadership requires effective civil rights at home. However, some Southerners insist upon magnifying American civil rights problems, instead of dealing with them realistically and in the tradition of our democratic heritage."

Ted Schriber, '63—"No. I don't think that relocating a problem is going to solve it. It's just moving it to another area. The longer one lives with his problems the more adept he is at solving them. A little effort on the part of both parties plus a little time should bring about a happy coexistence."

Mr. Harry Kahn, Assistant Professor of German—"This plan is unethical."

Mr. John Hubbell, Assistant Professor of Romance Languages—"I have no valid opinion, as I am not thoroughly familiar with the issue. However, it might provide a great opportunity for economic and cultural betterment for some Negroes."

Harry Levins, '63—"I think that it will make people of the North either put-up or shut-up. The South is testing the North's ideals. I wonder if the North will put these theories into practice. However, I don't think that many Negroes will accept this proposition, because of their Southern background and their pride."

Thinking Out -- LOUD

by Kim Boriskin

LEST WE FORGET

Last December a lot of forgetting was done. First, Schroeder forgot Beethoven's birthday, December 16. We also forgot December 20, the 119th anniversary of the Americanization of the bathtub. No flags were waved, cannons fired, or revivals held. We simply forgot.

Had it not been for a Cincinnati grain and cottondealer who made frequent trips to England, we might all be veritable Bathless Oroginses. The man, one Adam Thompson, first got interested in the bathtub in England, and in 1842 commissioned one James Cullness to build and install one in Thompson's home in Cincinnati. In England, where Lord John Russell had introduced the bathtub in 1828, tubs were still oversized dishpans. Thompson changed that.

Thompson's tub was a rather luxurious thing, even without our "modern" innovations (gold faucets and the like). It was made of mahogany, and was made watertight by lining it with sheet lead. It weighed 1750 pounds, was seven feet long and four wide, and the floor on which it rested was reinforced to hold the thing. The outside was very highly polished and elaborately decorated. All who saw it thought that it was, at least, a highly skilled job, even if tubs weren't very useful.

Thompson also invented a system to eliminate the time wasted in filling even small tubs, much less his monster. He pumped well water up to a tank over the tub, and stored it there until it was needed. One pipe, for cold water, led directly to the tub. The other was coiled inside the chimney from the kitchen, thus making use of the hot exhaust from the stove in that room to heat the water.

On December 20, 1842, Adam Thompson inaugurated the Era of the Bathtub. He took two baths, not just one, that day—a cold one in the morning, and a hot one in the afternoon. In ushering in an era, Thompson also ushered in a hot controversy.

Tubs were denounced all over the country. Many said that it was a plot to Anglicize the U.S., and to rob us of our democratic simplicity (simplemindedness!). The other main attack came from the doctors. They claimed that it would lead to all sorts of dire ailments: arthritis, rheumatic fevers, phthiasis, etc. Some quack actually claimed that it would lead to the appearance on the human body of gliis!

Naturally, our lawmakers passed by the hot air and started introducing laws into the various state legislatures. In late 1843, a law was being considered in Philadelphia that would have prohibited bathing between November 1 and March 15. It missed becoming law by a mere two votes. In Virginia, during 1843, a tax of $30 a year was levied on bathtub owners, and in other states tub users had to pay exorbitant water rates. In early 1845, Boston made bathing illegal except by medical advice, but the law wasn't enforced, and was repealed in 1862.

In 1847, came a breakthrough. John F. Simpson made a tub that was the equivalent of the Ford. It was made of pine lined with zinc, bringing it within reach of practically everyone. The Brooklyn plumber tried to have it patented, but it was hopeless. By 1848 all the plumbers in New York were busily installing the new tub. Then medical opposition collapsed.

In 1849, the American Medical Association almost passed a resolution absolving the bathtub of all medical guilt. In 1850, the resolution actually did pass. Even the eminent Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes fought for the tub.

Opposition was finally crushed by President Millard Fillmore. As Vice-President under Zachary Taylor, he visited Cincinnati, where Adam Thompson had lived, and took a bath in Thompson's tub. He felt none the worse for it, and so, on taking office after Taylor's death, he ordered his Secretary of War to take bids and have one built in the White House. Naturally there was an uproar, but a cast iron tub was finally put in, and remained there until Grover Cleveland replaced it with an enamel tub. That was the end of the opposition. By 1860, all the newspapers in New York advertised that every hotel in the city had at least one tub. In 1870, a prison got a tub for the first time, and the Army, under General McClellan in 1862, started bathing.

But what do we do, as good patriotic Americans? We forget it completely. We take it for granted. I propose that this be corrected and December 20 made a national holiday. That's the least we could do for old Adam Thompson.

Kibbutznik Delivers Talk About Kibbutz Life Today

Sunday April 29th, at the Hillel Brunch sponsored by the Student Zionist Organization, began a two-day visit in Burlington for an Israeli "kibbutznik," representing the American Zionist Council by the name of Dov Shalgi. During his stay, he spoke on "Kibbutz Life in Israel Today."

In addition to the brunch on Sunday, Mr. Shalgi, with the cooperation of Professor Kahn, director of Hillel, Drs. Lewis, Oren, and Scheans of the Sociology department, and Dr. Samenfink of the Home Economics department, spoke to a total of five classes at various times on Monday.

To attempt a brief summary of the speech itself, it would perhaps be advisable to begin with a definition of "kibbutz." A kibbutz is a communal agricultural, and in many cases also an industrial, settlement. The word itself (translated from the Hebrew) means "group," and the basic principle behind its existence is that of "sharing."

There are many different trends in the kibbutz movement today. This is due to the fact that every major step taken in a kibbutz is decided for the benefit of the members by a "general assembly" made up of members; there is no written constitution. In addition, membership in a kibbutz is completely voluntary; one may become a member if he feels that this kind of life is suitable for him, and one may leave anytime he realizes that this is no longer the case. The truly unique thing is that here is a society running entirely without money, each member giving according to his abilities and receiving according to his needs.

Among the noteworthy statements made by Mr. Shalgi was the fact that in none of the kibbutzim does there exist a policeman; delinquency simply is no problem. As for education, each child is entitled to twelve years of compulsory schooling up to the age of 18. As far as family life is concerned, it is perfectly "normal" in the sense in which we use this term. A "family" consists of a man and wife, legally married, plus their offspring. Although children live in their own communities on the kibbutz, family life is not only normal, but is actually reinforced in many ways. The hours which children spend with their parents, after the parents finish work in the afternoon until they put their children to bed at night, are hours which are completely devoid of the stresses and strains of financial problems. It is a period when the most natural parent-child relationship can flourish, and one in which parents may truly enjoy their children, and vice versa. The same amount of respect and affection is felt for the parent here as in America and in the rest of Israel. One of the major achievements of the kibbutz way of life is in the great measure of social justice which has been established; there are no rich and there are no poor classes.

Mr. Shalgi returns to the Jewish Agency in New York.

ALUMNI DIRECTOR

A 1953 University of Vermont graduate was named alumni director of his alma mater by the Board of Trustees, Saturday.

Paul V. Mravlag, Jr., of 21 Mount Airy Road, Basking Ridge, New Jersey will assume his new post as of Aug. 1. He succeeds Lawrence F. Killick who is retiring.

After graduation from Vermont, Mravlag spent a year with the New York Telephone Co. in the commercial manager training program. Since 1954 he has been with the Singer Manufacturing Co. in New York City.

Summer Jobs

Eighty-five per cent of the undergraduate body at the University of Vermont had paid jobs last summer and, of this number, 56 per cent earned part of or most of their college expenses.

These and other statistics are the findings of a survey in which a total of 500 UVM students took part. The survey was conducted by the offices of the Dean of Men and Dean of Women with John White, graduate staff assistant, serving as project director.

The survey was conducted in an attempt to determine how University of Vermont students spend their summers and to provide information for the committee which plans the University academic calendar.

Students were selected at random by class, college in which enrolled, age, sex, and by in-state and out-of-state.

A total of 77 per cent of Vermont males and 64 per cent of the women stated that they worked to earn part of or most of their college expenses. This was contrasted by 43 and 38 per cent figures respectively for out-of-state students.

The largest percentage of Vermont males (24%) were employed in construction work while the largest number of the out-of-state males (22%) worked in unskilled labor or industry.

The top source of employment for in-state women was at resorts (23%) while non-resident women were almost divided between office (32%) and recreation work (34%).

Average male earnings for the summer were $610 to $385 for women.

Eighty-one per cent said that their jobs started before July while 68 per cent found work terminated by Labor Day.

Excluding seniors, 96 per cent of those who took part in the survey plan to get jobs this summer while 24 per cent said they already had attained a summer position.

New Medical Library In Future

In the very near future, UVM should have a new Medical Library. This forthcoming move has been prompted by a number of pressing problems.

The present library, located at the Medical School Building on Colchester Avenue, has insufficient space to accommodate even the medical students. Adding to the congestion are graduate students, students in biological, chemical, and nursing sciences, and undergraduates who are merely curious.

There is also a prevailing problem of mutilation and theft of medical journals and books.

As a result of these situations, Mr. Bowman, Director of the Libraries, has advised that all undergraduate students should not use the library unless they have a specific assignment. If such a need arises, they can use or borrow only material on a class reading list. Written permission from the instructor is desirable.

Faculty members are asked to notify the Medical Librarian when wishing to assign any material in the Medical Library. Department chairmen should also give the librarian a roster of those students needing the facilities. The material can be placed on reserve at Bailey Library, however, if the instructor so desires.

When the Library moves, this policy may remain in effect. As the Library will be planned in the same decor as Bailey, there is a possibility for attraction of too many students. If so, the establishment will be restricted to the aforementioned.

The new Library will be housed in a building to be constructed near the Medical Alumni Building. There will be two levels. The top floor will house the card catalogue, reference desk, and a reading room. Below will be the main stacks. It is planned that all literature pertaining to medicine will be found in this building.

As of now, a new Medical Librarian is being sought. When the building is finished, the complete establishment will be under the direction of Mr. Bowman.

NOTA BENE

The Panhellenic Council has announced plans for its annual picnic to be held at Southwick on the evening of Monday, May 21st from 5 to 6:30.

Tentative plans include entertainment by the Tattlers and an appearance by Mary Jean Simpson, former Dean of Women.

The money raised by this function is placed in the Mary Jean Simpson Fund, which, it is hoped, will be used to sponsor a foreign student in the near future.

The Society for the Advancement of Management (SAM) will have their annual Banquet this afternoon in the Waterman Faculty Dining Room. Guest speaker will be William Gomberg, Professor of Industry, and at the Whorton School of Finance. Professor Gomberg is the former head of the Management Engineering department of the International Ladies Garment Worker's Union (I.L.G.W.U.). Professor Gomberg is a specialist in the fields of time study and work standards. He is the author of the book A Trade Union Analysis of Time Study. Tickets will be only $2.50 per person, available from S.A.M. members.

The tennis courts on Redstone Campus will be available for recreational use during the following hours:

Monday through Thursday, 4:30 p.m., until dark

Friday, Saturday and Sunday, all day

All other hours, the courts are used for required physical education classes. Your cooperation in keeping the courts free for those classes is greatly appreciated.

NOTA BENE

SAM is sponsoring a field trip to Montreal in order to visit the Dominion Engineering Works and the Trans-Canada Airways. Prof. Milton Madworney and Prof. Marshall will accompany approximately 30 members on May 30.

ARIEL Changes Policy

The Ariel is undergoing a change of policy concerning senior pictures and organization pictures for the 1963 Ariel. Being under contract to the publisher and to the official yearbook photographer, deadlines must be set for pictures and must be observed in order to receive the book for delivery before the second semester ends. The following policies have been adopted and the staff of the Ariel asks your cooperation in observing them.

1. Senior men are requested to wear a white shirt, coat and tie for their pictures when they go to the Kirk Studio.

2. There will be a resitting charge if the first proofs are not acceptable to the student and they are not the fault of the photographer. (If the way your hair was combed is unsatisfactory, then there will be a charge, but if the photographer is at fault, there is none. This resitting charge is a credit towards any pictures you might order.)

3. If an organization is scheduled and notified of the picture date and time, and they do not appear for that picture, they will have to pay a charge of $3.00 to get the picture in the yearbook. If part of the group shows and part is absent, the people who are there will represent the group in the picture.

Your cooperation in making the 1963 Ariel your yearbook is needed and will be appreciated by the staff of the Ariel.

plus for export; during the Communist period, it has improved little if at all and is lagging behind the rest of the economy, barely catching up with population growth. The country is now importing one-fourth of its needed grain and 10 per cent of its meat, as well as butter and fodder.

In general, the author says, the lag in agriculture exemplifies the lopsided development of the economy, and prevailing lack of enthusiasm for Communist Policies. The 1965 targets are to surpass prewar output by one-third. Judging by past experience, Dellin says it seems unlikely that such goals can be achieved even if the government devotes a larger share of its investments to agriculture.

Czechoslovakia is a big trader, having become a leading member of the Communist bloc with respect to foreign trade, and also aid; credits, delivered and promised, have run at a rate of about $100 million a year since 1956, which makes it the main European exporter of industrial credits and perhaps even the world's leader on a per capita basis.

Before the war, nearly half of all trade was with Germany, Britain, France, and the United States with practically none with the Soviet Union. Today, more than one-third is with Russia and another third or more with the rest of the Communist countries.

Dellin speculates about the third five-year plan now under full steam. It calls for Czechoslovakia, but 1965, to surpass all Western European countries in per capita industrial output, with renewed emphasis on capital goods, thus further postponing the time when consumers' goods—clothes, cars, refrigerators, TV sets, and such—are abundant and obtainable by the ordinary citizen.

The article is accompanied by industrial-transportation, minerals, and agriculture maps. Much of the research was done under a UVM faculty summer fellowship grant and is based on a score of original-language sources. This is the second contribution by Dr. Dellin to Focus, the first being an article on Hungary, Rumania, and Bulgaria, published in May, 1960.

Letters

To the editor:

On perusal of the rules and regulations for next term's off-campus housing, I was at once taken aback by a frightening injustice to be. There on page three of the Cynic flagrantly existed these words: "Guests of the opposite sex are not permitted in the study-sleeping rooms." You can well imagine the aesthetic gyrations and spiritual convulsions which can seize one upon recognition of the horrendous implications of such a statement. After recomposition had been effected, a second reading of this shameful sentence rendered verification of what was afoot.

What are the implications of this statement? Does it mean to dictate that a female guest in an off-campus apartment may only be allowed in the kitchen? Or the bathroom? No, I think not. I fear and grieve that the logical extension of this rule would make it a violation of regulations for a student to have a woman in his apartment at all. Does this include the student's sister? Or his mother? Perhaps the prevention of incest is the noble sentiment behind this.

But let us continue our logical extension. Quite obviously the framers of this regulation - the Dean of Men and his boys - deem it their responsibility to preserve and protect the virginity of UVM's weaker sex - whenever possible. Now to begin with, where does anybody get the right to dictate to others what they should or shouldn't do about their sex life? I thought this was a "free" country, with freedom of choice, thought, belief, etc.. Surely our administration should have no designs on squelching our basic freedoms and democratic ideals. Why they don't even do that in CUBA!

How is it possible for a university to teach and foster intellectual grandeur, when they attempt to infringe upon the students' creativity and biology? It is well agreed that there is enough guilt associated with sex already. It most surely would be a great injustice to add "breaking the school rules" to this guilt feeling.

The device by which the necessary information is developed, evaluated and disseminated is the system of Standing Committees. There are 20 in the House, each established by the enactment of a public law (requiring concurrence of the Senate and the President), and each dealing with a broad topic of national affairs, such as Agriculture, Armed Services, Education & Labor, Commerce, and the like. Each committee has its own permanent staff, or secretariat, and it is this body of paid career professionals which provides the continuing technical knowledge essential to sound legislation. Their work is supervised and approved by the committee they serve, which in turn is directed by the law creating it.

The primary method of developing facts is by the sworn testimony of witnesses--and so we come to the hearing procedure. Hearings result in a published record, which the members of Congress may consult in forming their legislative opinions. These hearings are the chores of the House. Committee work is akin to washing the dishes or mowing the lawn. Assignment to the committees is determined by vote of the House and these assignments shift from one session to the next. Thus a committee's activities cannot be attributed to the motives or actions of a fixed group.

To be specific, although the House Un-American Activities Committee has been a standing committee only since 1946, a large number of different people have served on it. As a matter of fact only one present member was an elected Congressman at the time the committee was created. Of the present membership two were assigned in 1961, two in 1958, one in 1955, one in 1953, one in 1951 and two in 1949. In the face of these facts it should be apparent that the continuing work of the committee over a period of sixteen years on the problems of subversion cannot reasonably be the result of a conspiracy led by a paranoid, even a dyspeptic one.

Since a report must be passed by a majority of a committee it is the height of fantasy to ascribe the "asinine" laws resulting from information developed by a committee of nine, whose diverse membership is constantly changing, to its chairman. Mr. Boriskin would be on firmer ground if he inveighed against the House, the Senate and the Presidents who, Democrat and Republican alike, enacted the statutes he dislikes.

Under any circumstances, even if his thunderbolts were to overwhelm Mr. Walter and his colleagues with consternation and remorse, the committee, following the instructions of the public law which directs and orders its activities, would be assigned new members and continue to hold public hearings on the activities of the Communist Party.

Presumably a student at a university in the 20th century stands at the pinnacle of an age of knowledge and reason, if not tolerance and understanding. The spectator might view the invective with wonder but tolerate it as a form of superstition which might disappear with more experience. He can only find incomprehensible the lack of the most rudimentary knowledge of the country's basic legislative institution which has led Mr. Boriskin to attack so savagely the wrong target and for the wrong reason.

vaguely interested as to the harm they were doing, and surely a person who felt strongly enough to write three articles about the committee would have the "dope."

But here again I was sadly disappointed. I found only a disorganized mass of name-calling, irresponsible character assassination, and misrepresented facts. I was told, for example, that the Committee's chairman was an "acute dyspeptic," a power-hugging scoundrel, and a public "belcher." I also found out that no politician ever says anything worthwhile and that a respected businessman who owns a radio and TV station is an "idiot." Nowhere was the slightest shred of evidence given to substantiate these, or all the other McCarthy-like claims made in those articles (though I suppose the columnist checked into that gastric condition). Further, these rash statements were never really connected with the faults of the Committee.

And so, I still remain in the dark about HUAC. However I do know this; if anyone is to successfully evaluate it, they must not strike at fake demons and non-existent bully tactics. They must objectively weigh the Committee's value against the objections to it, and they must do so in the light of our legal and social systems and any possible potential threat of internal Communist subversion. They must not do it in the light of preconceived notions, emotional political ties, or add hominum evaluations.

I also know that the experience I had with HUAC can be repeated over and over again. I have met countless "liberals" and "conservatives" who have done only the most emotional evaluations of the political realities in this country. I have talked to peace marchers, anti-segregationists, rabid critics of the U.N. and opponents of nuclear testing, critics of the Catholic position on birth control and anti-flouridationists; I have discussed politics with myriad "believers" of every persuasion from Communism to Neo-nazism; I have done this and have found that both sides of any given question are loaded with people who have not the slightest comprehension of the position they take or the facts behind the issue at hand. I have heard educated people say they would not vote for Kennedy because he "has too much already", as I have heard others say they oppose Nixon because he's "sneaky."

In short, I have seen too many people in our society shackled by their own emotions and intellectual blind-spots, sporting unsupported and barely considered opinions, and earning themselves a large and eager audience who smile at the antics of three scholars who don't like the idea of poking around in a horse's mouth.

Outing Club

On the April 29, the Outing Club and Green Mountain Club took a joint trip to South Mountain. It has been warm enough just long enough to arouse hiking enthusiasts. Cars left early Sunday morning from Waterman and Redstone with various climbers. Perhaps there is no other phenomenon which so simply and definitely announces Spring as the determined scrambling of Outing Clubbers up muddy trails. Although the sun theoretically has been growing stronger day by day, the snow still blocked hikers and created awkward, if not at the time humorous, situations.

The Outing Club is building a lean-to in Jeffersonville. Last fall work parties cleared and burned brush, peeled and laid base logs. On May 6 the Outing Club will need people to burn more brush, peel, paint, notch, and maneuver more logs. The Outing Club bought the land planning for the new ski dorm. The lean-to will be temporary shelter and is a challenge to all aspiring and expiring "engineers". The work is fun and extemporaneous.

First Two UVM Skydivers Jump

On Saturday, May 5, two UVM sophomores successfully completed their first static line parachute descents from a height of 2500 feet, at the Orange Sport Parachute Center, in Orange, Mass. Julie Shrager and Mark Goldstein were the first UVM students to actually jump, as members of the hastily formed and not yet organized UVM Skydiving Club. The group of 17 men who drove to Orange the weekend of April 27, did not jump, due to bad weather conditions. But all these men did complete the three hour course of instruction, and may jump as soon as they have the time and the inclination.

Both Shrager and Goldstein feel it was a wonderful experience. "It was great", says Goldstein, "I intend to do it again as soon as I can."

Skip Fornier is currently in charge of the group, and he can be reached for information at 2-2615.

Collins Notes Dropout Rate

Dr. Meder adds that whether any dropout rate is to be considered, high or low, depends on the underlying philosophy of the institution. "If it seeks to admit only students of exceedingly high qualifications who are almost predestined to make good, as do some private institutions, the dropout rate should be negligible. If it seeks to give worthy students with creditable records a chance to pursue higher education and prepare themselves for richer and fuller lives, it must be prepared for a somewhat higher dropout rate."

"Rutgers," he says, "accepts the philosophy of the land-grant colleges and state universities—that of promoting the practical and academic education of every student who is likely to be able to profit by college attendance, both for his sake and in the national interest, as well as for the future betterment of society."

University of Vermont President John T. Fey has indicated that UVM's philosophy of admissions is also based on the belief that it is in the best interests of society to provide an opportunity for college education to every student who presents evidence that he or she has a reasonable expectation for success in college.

"We have set reasonable entrance requirements," Dr. Fey states, "in order to insure that we do not unfairly waste the time and resources of either the individual or the community we serve."

He notes that UVM bases its admissions decisions on the applicant's academic record in high school, on his record on College Entrance Examination Board tests, and on recommendations of the student's principal, teachers and guidance counsellors.

Experience has shown, he adds, that it is not always the borderline student who fails to make the grade academically, and cites a study of 1960 which showed that, of 121 freshmen dropped for academic failure after the first semester, 15 ranked in the top 20 percent of their high school graduating class.

In 1960, 44 percent of UVM's freshman class ranked in the top 20 percent of their high school graduating classes.

Another 29 percent ranked in the second quintile; 15 percent in the third, seven percent in the fourth and three percent in the bottom 20 percent.

Students admitted who ranked in the third, fourth and fifth quintiles of their graduating class in high school all presented some additional credentials which suggested reasonable expectation for college success—good recommendations from principals or teachers, or good scores on CEEB tests or both.

Rank in one's graduating class is not, in short, sole guide to admission at UVM.

President Fey notes "with interest" that James Gunn of the University of Kansas, which admits all graduates of "qualified" Kansas high schools, reports in an article entitled "Explode 'Huge Flunk-out' Myths" that the University of Kansas this semester lost fewer than five percent of its undergraduates because of academic failure. The percentage of loss for the freshman class was 6.65 percent.

"This, with information from other current studies of the problem, tends to support the conclusion of Cornell's Dr. Summer-skill who suggests that research in this area has only scratched the surface," Dr. Fey said.

UVM Self-Study Report Completed

The Final Report of the University of Vermont Self-Study is being distributed to faculty and staff members of the University who began the self-evaluation process approximately two and one-half years ago.

The 84-page volume is the report of the Final Evaluation Committee, which worked with individual department and division reports in preparing the final report.

University President John T. Fey said the study would provide the University with a base for continuing self-study.

He said that the University had already moved to implement a number of recommendations which have resulted from the study process, and added that many more recommendations contained in the Final Report would be studied by various faculty and staff groups and committees.

He praised the effort of all who participated, and said that the Board of Trustees had already provided a means for a formal continuation of the process of self-study by authorizing appointment of an assistant for institutional research.

UVM Dean of Administration Lyman S. Rowell served as coordinator of the self-study. Dr. Samuel N. Bogorad, chairman of the department of English, served as chairman of the Final Evaluation Committee which prepared the printed report, and as editor of the report.

Other members of the Final Evaluation Committee included William Adams, chairman of the department of forestry; Charles Christensen, department of physical education; Earle Clifford, former Dean of Men; Clinton Cook, chairman of the department of chemistry; Grant Kennedy, chief accountant; Harold Pierce, professor emeritus biochemistry; Howard Smith, coordinator of research; Frank Steeves, associate professor of education; and Lawrence Van Benthuyzen, director of public relations.

Med Library

Because of insufficient space and conflicting demands for materials in Medical library, students not registered in the Medical College are asked not to use that library unless they have definite assignments in books or journals located there.

Undergraduates who need to use or borrow books from the Medical Library may do so only if the books are on a definitely assigned class reading list, or if they have a written request from their instructor.

Recent instances of mutilation of periodicals and book losses necessitate restriction of the use of this collection to students who really need the material.

Faculty members are requested to notify the Medical Librarian when they wish to assign material which is in the Medical Library. Such material may be placed on Reserve at Bailey Library if the instructor wishes.

UVM Grad Heads Department At Columbia

A University of Vermont graduate of 1928 will become chairman of the Columbia University Department of English and Comparative Literature on July 1.

He is Dr. Lewis G. Leary whose special field is American Literature. He will succeed Dr. Marjorie Hope Nicolson who is retiring.

Dr. Leary joined the Columbia University faculty in 1952 as professor of English in the Graduate School. He was formerly professor of American Literature at Duke University, and had previously taught at the University of Miami.

Following his graduation from Vermont, Dr. Leary taught for three years at the American University in Beirut, Lebanon, where he prepared his first book, a text, After World War II, he was with the office of Strategic Services, he prepared "The Last Poems of Philip Freneau" and "Articles on American Literature Appearing in Current Periodicals," 1920-1945. He also collected for Columbia's bicentennial celebration a volume of essays entitled "The Unity of Knowledge."

Dr. Leary is a member of Kappa Sigma fraternity, for which he was a Kake Walker, at Vermont. A graduate of Pelham Memorial High School, Pelham, N.Y., he was a member of Gold Key, Vermont sophomore honorary society, was a football and track man, and a member of the 1928 "Ariel" Board.

NEW CHAPEL ON CAMPUS

A chapel on the campus of the University of Vermont is in prospect for Episcopal students at UVM, following action of the UVM Trustees Saturday which authorized a 40-year lease of University land for the purpose.

UVM President Fey said that about an acre of land located west of University Heights and East of the Redstone Campus walk would be made available to the Episcopal Diocese of Vermont.

He indicated that the Episcopal Church had requested the opportunity to provide a chapel for its students. The University approached representatives of the Catholic, Jewish, and other Protestant faiths to advise them that it would be willing to make land available to them for the same purpose, Dr. Fey said.

He noted that the idea had been received with "pleasure and appreciation," but that no other church group was interested at this time. The B'nai B'rith - Hillel Foundation at Vermont has recently purchased its own center, and the Newman Club rents a building from the University. Several Protestant denominations have established a center in another building rented from the University.

CATS DEFEAT UCONN TWICE

By Ray Bello

It seems that this column has been reserved for derogatory criticism of various coaches and athletic deficiencies at UVM. This is not a standard policy of the Cynic, but there just hasn't been anything to praise lately; no league titles, no outstanding athletes rating national recognition. The only fact rating publicity has been the "new gym in our future" but that is no longer in our future. Now we have something to use bold type for and actually praise.

Coach Ralph LaPointe's Catamount nine at this writing possess at 12-2 overall record, 3-0 in state competition and are currently at the top of the Yankee Conference standings with a 4-0 mark. Back to back wins over highly regarded Rhode Island and a brilliant sweep over powerful Connecticut in last week's doubleheader skyrocketed Vermont to unaccustomed heights.

Now for some praise... A baseball team is as good as its pitchers and UVM has two of the best in the YanCon. Every Vermont fan expected Dick "Dutch" Cassani to win consistently and that is just what he is doing. But few expected lefty Dick DeNicola to come through in the surprising way he has thus far. Cassani is 4-0 while DeNicola has six consecutive victories without a loss, but can these two mainstays carry the Cats to the title?

As expected, most of Vermont's offense has been supplied by Levi Brown who has been batting over .400 and driving in many runs. But it has been the unexpected support from batters like Wayne VanHam and Bob Sherriff that has been responsible for the Cats' great success so far this season. Maynard Ducatte, Dick Boutillier, and Bill Rundle all have aided the team with their consistency at bat and in the field. As for Coach LaPointe, all that can be said about him is that he is not a "nice guy". Ask any of her players; he humbles and reprimands them (for their own good, of course) no matter how well they play. This is the reason why he never finishes last.

The Cats face the University of Massachusetts twice this week end. The Redmen are in second place and would like nothing better than to knock both Cassani and DeNicola out of the pitcher's box and Vermont out of first place. This series will be decisive either way in UVM's plans for winning the Yankee Conference.

Record Holder for the mile - Bill Perkins, distance runner of Coach Post's track squad, has run the fastest mile in UVM track history. Bill won mile and 880 last week against Middlebury.

"Dutch" Cassani, UVM righty, has a 4-0 so far this year. Besides being number one starter, Cassani has belted two homers. Cassani is one of the best pitchers in New England.

Southern Trip In Review

Brown and Cassani Star On Road Trip

The Catamounts returned from the 51st Annual Southern Trip with a 5-2 mark. As expected, captain Levi Brown and pitcher Dick Cassani led the Vermont nine on the road. Brown batted .482, blasted two homeruns and accounted for 16 rbi's. Cassani hurled a 3-hit shutout his first time out, pitched two complete wins, while striking out 18 men. The Southern journey has prepared the Cats for Conference play.

Upset victories over powerful Villanova and Fairleigh Dickinson University offset unexpected losses to Trenton State and the Coast Guard Academy. Overall, Coach Lapointe was pleased with the 5-2 record and feels confident in continuing his dynasty of winning baseball at Vermont.

The opener was a sparkling 3-0 shutout over Long Island University for Cassani who won his own game by belting a homer. Manard Ducatte, Bob Johnson and Brown, along with Cassani, collected UVM's five hits.

In chalking up their second straight win, Vermont stunned Villanova, 10-2. Lefty Dick DeNicola went the distance striking out eight men. Brown was the whole story as he led the Cats with a single, a double and a homer in three trips, good for 6 rbi's. Cassani, playing left field, smacked a single and a triple.

A disastrous 5-run third inning at Trenton cooled the red-hot Cats as the Teachers beat Vermont 6-1. Poor fielding was the main cause for their first loss. Sophomore hurler John Babcock went 5 innings giving way to relievers Ted Jones and Wally Schillo and was tagged with the loss. A home run by Cassani accounted for the only score, while Brown collected two hits but had a bad day in the field, committing two errors in center.

A three run burst in the third inning furnished enough runs to turn back the University of Baltimore 5-1. Big Jim Howe lost his bid for a shutout in the ninth in picking up the win. Again it was Brown's heavy artillery that accounted for the win. It was his three-run homer that supplied the margin of victory.

The Cats won the fourth and fifth games in one day, beating Fairleigh Dickinson University 16-12 in the morning and Upsala 6-2 in the afternoon. Sophomore catcher Bill Rundle, Brown and Mike Benway led the hitting attack against FDU, Rundle stroked three hits while Brown continued his hot batting streak with three hits and five RBI's, including a triple and a double. DeNicola started and got credit for the win, although four pitchers were used. At Upsala, Dick Boutillier's two RBI's supplied enough runs for the victory, as Cassani fanned seven and pitched his way out of trouble in the second inning, finishing the game off with seven scoreless innings.

Going into the Coast Guard game with 5-1 record and a travel weary team, Coach Lapointe sent Babcock to the mound to face the Guardsmen. Again Babcock didn't get any support from the batting attack and suffered the defeat. A windblown fly turned into a two run double for Brown accounting for the Vermonters only tallies.

Vermont headed home after a successful road trip ready to face the best in the Yankon and battle for the title. This year could be the year Vermont takes home the Yankee Conference Championship.

RIFLEMEN COP TITLE

The varsity sharpshooters copied the Yankee Conference title, the ROTC team took top honors for all ROTC teams in New England and also won the First Army intercollegiate ROTC championship. Not to be outdone, the freshman squad walked off with Pennsylvania Freshman League laurels for the second year running.

With 259 individual firers involved in league matches, Peter Carr of Wallingford had the seventh highest average, 284.4 out of a possible 300. Team captain Bruce Hodgman of Burlington was 12th, 282.6; Rick Hubbard of Middlebury 16th, 281.8; and Al Farrington of Burlington 19th, 281.7. Hubbard also lettered in skiing.

Vermont Moves Into 1st Place In YanCon

Dick Cassani and Dick DeNicola hurled the Catamounts into undisputed possession of first place in the Yankee Conference with 3-1 and 6-2 wins of the University of Connecticut last Saturday.

In the opener of the doubleheader, the first six innings were scoreless till the Huskies scored on an error and a pair of singles in the seventh. UVM came back with two runs in their half of the inning. Levi Brown, Bob Sherriff and Joe Pare banged out singles to load the bases when Cassani hit a sharp grounder to third baseman, Enrico Genitto, who let it go through his legs for an error and two runs. The Cats scored again in the eighth.

Vermont struck early in the second game with two runs in the first stanza, followed by two more 2 in the fifth. The best the Huskies could do with DeNicola's assortment of breaking stuff resulted in single tallies in the fifth and sixth. Wayne VanHam and Bob Sherriff featured at the plate for the Catamounts, as they scored two more runs in the seventh.

Tennis Team Opens Poorly

The UVM Tennis team, under the direction of coach Fred Marston, has so far gotten off to a poor start, losing to St. Lawrence and Rhode Island, while barely defeating an excellent Union College squad.

All tournaments are played on the basis of nine points, distributed between six singles and three doubles matches. As usual, each set is comprised of six games with victory coming with winning two of three sets.

Things get off on a shaky note, Tuesday, as UVM took on Union at our home courts. The final score of Vermont 5, Union 4, shows the closeness of the match. There were many outstanding players, but among the top net men were: Pete Jellnick, Bob Katz, Steve Krintzman; Steve Ratner, Bernie Camm and Jerry McGee.

After the Union victory, things did not go so well. St. Lawrence trounced the Marston men, 7-2. The only bright spots were the performances of Steve Ratner and Pete Jellnick, who won their doubles matches against stiff competition. Perhaps one reason for the poor showing was the fact that all the team could not attend the out of town event.

Thursday's match with New Hampshire, at Durham, has postponed because of inclement weather conditions. This gave the squad an extra day's practice before meeting Rhode Island on Saturday. However, the team was soundly defeated, 8-1. The only victory was taken by the team's captain, Bob Katz, who defeated his previously unvanquished rival in three sets, 4-6, 6-4 and 6-2.

After these past defeats the team is eagerly looking forward to May 9th's meet with Middlebury College. It hopes to pull their won-lost record to the .500 mark and then stay on the winning side. One should look for excellent performances by the team's topmen Pete Jellnick, Steve Ratner and Bob Katz.

UVM classes end Thursday, May 24; final exams begin on May 25. Commencement will take place on June 10.

Frosh Orientation Nears Completion; Awaits September

Plans and arrangements for next year's Freshmen Week are entering their final stages. Student Association co-chairmen Nancy Davis and James Flashman announced that a tentative schedule has been drawn up and most committees will have to have completed their work by finals week.

The general organization of the week will follow that of Freshmen Weeks in previous years. Tuesday, September 11, will be set aside for men's and women's registration, parents orientation and reception meetings as well as a get acquainted meeting and opening convocation that evening in the Chapel. Harold Gilbar, Class of '64, and Nora Barclay, '63, are subcommittee co-chairmen for men's and women's registration respectively. Greetings committee co-chairmen are Geraldine Babson and Harvey Tauber, both '64.

The following day, Wednesday, September 12, will be devoted to late registration, placement tests and meetings with the deans of the various colleges. There will also be a coffee hour for transfer students that afternoon in the Fleming Museum Lounge. That evening, two welcoming banquets will be held simultaneously in the Waterman and Simpson dining halls. Co-chairmen for the banquet committee are Rose Beagan, '63, and Douglass Barrett, '64.

Thursday, September 13, there will be a registration meeting during the morning followed by meetings of the men and women of the class of '66 in the Ira Allen Chapel and the Southwick Gym respectively. The afternoon will be taken up by meetings with faculty advisers and open houses at the religious centers on campus. In the evening, following the President's Reception from 7:30 to 8:30, the Freshmen Mixer will be held. Mixer co-chairmen Vivian Collins and Neil Pink are making preparations for this affair.

Freshmen will be in for a rough day on Friday, September 14—class registration from 8:30 A.M. to 3:30 P.M. That evening there will be a coffee hour for married students and their families and a special S.A. movie for freshmen.

The main event for Saturday, September 15, besides a WSGA meeting and a meeting with the Dean of Women in the morning, will be the Picnic and Pep Rally on the East Campus. Making preparations for the Picnic and Pep Rally is the committee headed by Martha Gardner and Ronald Hosta, both '64.

Another important aspect of freshmen orientation, aimed at acquainting the incoming students with UVM, is the annual Handbook, this year being prepared by the committee of Denise Plunkett and Stephan Likosky. A different publication, this one aimed at acquainting freshmen with each other, is the Freshmen Record. The committee preparing the Record is headed by Lee Cauley and Harvey Demmler. The committee handling all publicity for the week is under the direction of Ellen Lipp and Sherman Murphy.

Overall chairmen Nancy Davis and James Flashman wish to emphasize that the activities of Freshmen Week are for freshmen and designed at helping them to become a part of the UVM family. Even committee members will only be admitted to their event.

Approximately one week after the end of orientation week, Friday night, September 21, the annual Club Carnival and Varieties will be held in the University Gym. The reason for the late date is so that co-chairmen Susan Oshlag and Frank Lewis and their committee can scout for talent among the freshmen.

Joan Baez, George Shearing To Spark Lane Series Presentations For 1962-63

Joan Baez, the "Queen of folk singers" in the U.S. and the George Shearing Quintet, a top jazz combo, will highlight 1962-63 Lane series Red and Blue concerts. Other attractions include a Broadway musical, Rodgers and Hammerstein's "Sound of Music," and the off-Broadway musical comedy, "Little Mary Sunshine".

"Little Mary Sunshine", a gentle spoof of the old-time "Rose Marie" type of operetta, is in its third year's running in New York. "The Sound of Music", still running on Broadway, with a total of more than 1000 performances, is based on Vermont's own Trapp family.

Other attractions include world-famous names in opera, ballet, orchestra, instrumental music, folk song, and jazz. The complete list is as follows: "The Turn of the Screw",

Benjamin Britten's opera based on Henry James's ghost story of the same name; "Il Tabarro and Gianni Schicchi," Puccini's one-act operas by the New York City Opera Company, with Julius Rudel conducting; "San Francisco Ballet", first tour of this west-coast group to the East; "American Ballet Theatre", which has had three previous appearances on the Lane Series, is directed by Lucia Chase and will have a full orchestra and new repertory; "The George Shearing Quintet", a jazz ensemble making its first appearance in Burlington; "Van Cliburn", internationally famous winner of the Tchaikovsky Competition in Moscow as an outstanding pianist; "Shakespeare Revisited", with Helen Hayes and Maurice Evans, foremost actors of the contemporary stage, in scenes from Shakespeare's plays; "Carlos Montoya", the world's famous outstanding flamenco guitarist; "Robert Shaw Chorale NAD Orchestra", will be making its second appearance on the Lane Series with a superbly trained ensemble under the direction of its founder, Robert Shaw; "Hague Philharmonic Orchestra", its first American tour under the patronage of Her Majesty Queen Juliana of the Netherlands; and finally "The French National Orchestra" making its American debut under the baton of the young American conductor, Lorin Maazel, who in the past seven years has become one of Europe's leading musicians.

Each series this year will include seven concerts, rather than the six which were offered during the last two years. Division into the two series, the Red and the Blue, will be announced in August, and tickets will go on sale in September.

Mortar Board Project Is Honor System Study

The 1961-1962 Mortar Boards chose as their project for the year an investigation of the possibilities of the establishment of an Honor System at the University of Vermont. Our outline of procedure was as follows:

1. Research was gathered from past copies of the Cynic to learn of past endeavors to establish an Honor System at UVM.
1. Letters were sent to all the heads of departments at the University to learn what professors and members of the faculty had attended or taught at a college or university which had an Honor System. These members were then interviewed.
3. A letter of inquiry was also sent to the National Student Association to obtain information about honor systems throughout the country and the ways in which they were established and organized.

Through our research, group discussion and interviews the following questions are some of many which arose: What type of an Honor System would it be - academic, social, or academic-social? Would it be compulsory? Would it imply reporting others as reporting oneself? Who would enforce it? Who would act as the Judiciary body? How would it be presented, to the Administration, Faculty, and student body? Do the students WANT it?

We, as past Mortar Boards, feel that a project of this nature cannot be carried on by a group of senior women; we would propose that a committee composed of a wide representation of student opinion, including all classes-both men and women, be organized to work on the problem.

WRA Holds Awards Picnic

This evening, Thursday, May 17, at Southwick will be the scene of the annual Awards Picnic. Along with the good food will go awards and recognition for those who have helped to make W.R.A. functions a success this year. The awards will be offered for each sport and also The All Sports Trophy will be awarded to the dorm or living unit which has accumulated the most points during the year.

The purpose of W.R.A. is to provide an opportunity for those who are interested to participate in various functions. Of those who participate, there are a few who stand out in ability and sportsmanship. These are the qualities which W.R.A. tries to foster. Those who most exemplify these characteristics will receive awards tonight. All are invited to come and share in the activities. You might be one to receive an award.

On Saturday, in conjunction with the Animal Industry Club, W.R.A. is putting on a horse show at the University Farm in the afternoon. The horses are being supplied by Mr. Carl Bessette of Champlain Stables. Classes will be held for beginners, intermediates and advanced riders. A bareback and a jumping class will be the main attractions. A Morgan Stallion and several foals from the farm will be present for a demonstration. Come and watch a UVM first.

Dr. Bond To Direct Pre-Med Advisory Group

Beginning in mid-June Dr. Charles Farrington Bond, Associate Professor of Zoology will be the Chairman of the Pre-Medical Advisory Committee. He succeeds Dr. Reuben Torch, also an Associate Professor in the Zoology Department. The position is basically an undergraduate responsibility and serves to coordinate the advisory committee. Dr. Bond emphasized the point that the chairman of this committee is in no way the sole decider of its verdicts. "In assuming the chairmanship I realize the great help which the rest of the committee provides in carrying out the responsibilities of the Pre-Medical and Pre-Dental Advisory Group. I realize the importance of this committee to the students at the University of Vermont and feel that by working with the group in my new capacity I can continue to help the students in their school affairs."

Dr. Bond, a native Pennsylvanian, was graduated from Bucknell University with a A.B. degree. He went on to do graduate work in Zoology and received his M.S. and Ph.D. from Cornell University. At Cornell he took courses in physiology in the College of Veterinary Medicine and is qualified to give aid to Pre-Vet students as well as the Pre-Meds and Pre-Dents. Dr. Bond is also a qualified physicist and foresees a greater concentration in the field of biophysics. "Just as the fields of chemistry and biology are interrelated, so are those of biology and physics."

This new field of biophysics is one which is going to be of greater importance in the days ahead. Dr. Myborg of the Physics Department is essentially a biophysicist and there is a department in the Medical School in Physiology and Biophysics with Dr. Sichel as Chairman. The Graduate College now offers a Doctoral program in Physiology and Biophysics.

Dr. Bond stated, when asked about the students going on to medical and dental study, "The better students are capable of doing an adequate job, and the best ones do a fine job. Such is shown by the number of UVM graduates who, after graduating medical school, return to this area and participate in this medical center atmosphere." He also feels that the Zoology Department, like all other departments which are connected with the Pre-Medical Program, are making efforts to improve the quality of their offerings at all times. At the moment both the Zoology and Botany Departments are in the process of establishing doctoral programs which ought to help the undergraduate offerings.

When asked about this area in regard to its medical facilities, Dr. Bond stated, "I find living in this area very enjoyable although not a native New Englander. One of the important aspects of living here is the fact that the area is an excellent medical center and appears to be improving all the time."

Loan Act

Affects UVM

A total of 743 University of Vermont students have borrowed $170,335 under the National Defense Student Loan Program to help finance their college education during 1961-62.

The UVM figures run through the end of March. Nationally, students borrowed $71 million dollars during the 1960-61 academic year, the last period that complete figures were available.

Since the program was started by the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare in February of 1959, nearly 250,000 students have borrowed $130.6 million.

The average loan at the national level is $470, while at UVM it is $229.

During the first year of the program, UVM students borrowed $11,622.50. This jumped to $102,682 for 1959-60 and to $124,343.50 in 1960-61.

A total of 1410 colleges and universities are participating in the program. As of last June, 12,785 student borrowers had repaid nearly two million to the loan funds, about eight times the amount actually due.

Borrowers are required to begin repayment one year after they complete their college work but may stretch out the payments over a ten-year period at three per cent interest. Repayments of loan principal and interest go back into the funds of the colleges and universities and may be used for further loans to students.

Undergraduate and graduate students are eligible for loans if they are enrolled full time at an institution participating in the program. They may borrow up to $1,000 in an academic year and $5,000 over the course of their college work.

College and universities contribute $1 for each $9 received from the Federal Government.

PLANS FOR "DOGPATCH DAZE" NEAR COMPLETION

May "Dogpatch Daze" are here in all their glory. Final plans and arrangements are now being made for UVM's newest Spring weekend--- "Dogpatch Daze". Weekend co-chairmen Sherman Murphy and Sharon Dannel have announced that all plans are rapidly moving towards completion for the big weekend of May 18 and 19.

The weekend, sponsored by the Class of '65 for the entire University community, will begin Friday evening, May 18, with a picnic and jazz concert behind the Cage. Appearing at the jazz concert will be the "T.J. Quartet." The quartet, from the Burlington area, have been seen many times on the UVM campus, most recently at the Tri Del Sorority Pledge Tea. All persons with Saga meal contracts will be admitted free. All others will be charged the nominal fee of $1.25.

Saturday afternoon, May 19, "Dogpatch Daze" will continue with a Carnival in the men's gymnasium from 1 to 4 PM. Many sorority and fraternity pledge classes and residence hall units have indicated their intentions to participate by constructing a carnival booth. Entrance to the Carnival will cost 19¢ with fees for the different booths being 5 to 10¢. Besides booths, there will be other activities such as hoola-hoop contests and Sady Hawkins races, in which all are invited to participate. There will also be a refreshment stand and entertainment.

The weekend will culminate with a gala dance on the tennis courts behind Southwick. The dance will be informal and music will be provided by the fabulous Burt Orr and his band, a widely acclaimed dance band from Providence, Rhode Island. Admission will be 99¢ drag and $1.98 drag.

Sherman Murphy, originator of the idea for a freshman weekend, and the entire freshman staff of officers has been working hard on the weekend. This is the first time that the freshman have attempted to coordinate such a weekend and the prospects of its success appear to be good. Support the Freshman and have a good time at the same time!

Senate Approves Bill

On April 25, debate began in the Senate on S. 2750, commonly termed the Mansfield-Dirksen bill. This bill provides that a 6th grade education will be sufficient to satisfy literacy requirements in Federal elections. The bill does not attempt to eliminate literacy as a proper and reasonable qualification for voting. It prohibits arbitrary or unreasonable tests which do not simply test literacy, but instead certain vague and indefinite standards and have frequently been used to deprive citizens of their right to vote because of race or color.

In many of the Southern states, Negroes are systematically deprived of the right to vote. In Mississippi, where Negroes make up 40% of the population only 2% of the registered voters are Negro. There are counties with large Negro populations where not a single Negro is registered.

These states have created this situation by intimidation and misuse of state literacy laws. The literacy tests are impossibly subjective, to the extent that Negro college graduates have often failed them. President Kennedy, in his January 11 State of

Braun Leaves Chemistry Department To Work With Graduate School

Dr. Charles Ernest Braun, Dean of the Graduate College has recently announced that he will be leaving the Department of Chemistry to concentrate on his work with the Graduate School. He has been Dean since 1952 when the Graduate College and Office of the Dean was established (except for a brief period when Dr. John H. Kent of the Department of Classical Languages and Literature was Dean.)

Dr. Braun graduated from Brooklyn Polytechnic Institute where he received his B.S. in Chemistry. He received his A.M. and Ph.D. from Columbia University. In 1928 he joined the Chemistry and is presently a Pomeroy Professor. Dr. Braun has taught Organic Chemistry at UVM since 1928; it was the only course he taught during his years as Dean of the Graduate College. In the year 1937-38 he was a guest on the faculty of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. From 1943-1946 he was in the Chemical Warfare Service (Chemical Corps) as a major in charge of the Chemical Warfare Division at the Chemical Warfare Service Labs at MIT.

Dr. Braun stressed the growing significance of the Graduate School. "In the last two years the number of National Defense Education Act Title IV Fellowships has increased from three to eleven; graduate teaching fellowships have increased from thirty-three to forty-four in one year as well as graduate research fellowships (from none to four)."

"It is hopeful," stated Dr.

Braun, "that programs will be established May 16 in Zoology and Botany. To be inaugurated at UVM these two programs must be voted upon by the Executive Committee of the Graduate College as well as the entire faculty of the Graduate College. Presently there are six programs leading to the doctorate degree and thirty-seven leading to the M.A. or M.S. degrees."

How would you forecast your next few years?

Today, the young man planning his life realizes as never before that in today's world his own future is tied inevitably to America's future. How can he serve both?

Many college graduates, both men and women, are finding a rewarding answer on the Aerospace Team — as officers in the U.S. Air Force. Here is a career that is compelling in its challenge and opportunity. And it is a way of life that holds the unsurpassed satisfactions that come with service to country.

As a college student, how can you become an Air Force Officer?

It is in connection with this self-evaluation that the CYNIC is attempting something which has never been done in the past with the paper.

Since this paper belongs to the students, it is the opinion of this editor that their criticism is of prime importance in improving the newspaper and serving their best interests. Below are a number of questions relating to an evaluation of the CYNIC. Letters To The Editor

Misplaced Name

Dear Editor:

I feel that a serious omission was made in the listing of the internships received by the medical students. Ruth Andrea Seeler of Armonk, New York, who is the only girl in the class, will be interning at Jacoby Memorial Hospital, New York City. She is the thirty-eighth senior in the College of Medicine.

Sincerely,
Barbara E. Pflug, '65

Reactionary?

To the Editor:

Here at UVM we surely have something unique. Whereas the majority of college student bodies throughout the U.S. are labelled merely apathetic, we of the UVM family can rightly be called ultra-conservative. So much so, that we border on being reactionary. A fitting example is the high degree of importance placed by a majority of the students on the petty chit-chat at the "status tables" in the coffee shop. Another prime example is the super-abundance of sport and auto magazines sold at the bookstore in place of anything which relates to the function of the University.

So while Spring is "busting our all over," why don't we wake up, and climb out from amongst the sand dunes and beer cans to the pulse of our times.

by Betty Bergman

Do you think that comprehensive examinations should be given to students in their major fields of concentration before graduation?

Dave Selib, '62 - "I will take this answer from two points of view. Selfishly, seniors have enough responsibility before graduation, and they should not be burdened with the additional responsibility of such examinations. From another point of view, it would insure that the student has mastered the subject and has come up to such standards. Overall, it would seem to me, that such an exam would exhibit a basic distrust on the part of the faculty and administration that the student would not meet his responsibilities. Therefore, I personally feel that there should not be comprehensive exams."

Liz Sanguinetti, '62 - "Yes. I feel that they would be worthwhile because they indicate a student's general knowledge, but still show the ability to correlate the details."

Neal Adams, '63 - "Yes, I think that it would be a very

Thinking Out -- LOUD

POST MORTEM FOR A BATH TUB

Well, I proved a point. I knew that history would repeat itself. Last week I wrote a column dealing with the bath tub, almost all of which was previously published on December 28, 1917, by, of all people, H.L. Mencken. Then, as now, it was printed as sheer buffoonery. Mencken wrote it because W.W. I had started, the U.S. was in a highly moral frenzy, and serious writing was impossible. So he wrote the bath tub story.

My purpose was merely to verify that people are no less gullible today than they were in 1917. Several people -- indeed, most everyone that spoke about the article to me -- actually believed it. Please, IT WAS ALL PURE FICTION, EVERY LAST BIT OF IT.

Not only did the general populace believe it in 1917 but Mencken's little spoof was even taken seriously by medical men, scholars, and historians. They even wrote books including this as pure gospel, and some are probably still in use in universities all over the world.

But that isn't all. On May 23, 1926, after practically every paper had reprinted HLM's article, he wrote a public denial of the story's truth, and pointed out all the absurdities in the article. It was featured in the Editorial Section of the famed Boston Herald, along with a cartoon labeled "The American Public Will Swallow Anything." But three weeks later, the Herald again printed Mencken's original story, and was completely serious about it! And this time it was on the first page of the Editorial Section!

Then, on July 25, six weeks after the Herald's blunder, Mencken again ran an editorial in the paper, not only going over the story again, but having a good laugh at the Herald, too. This was reprinted all over the country, and all over the world. Then early in 1927, the famous Scribner's Magazine pulled the biggest bonehead stunt of all. What should they print but a learned article on bathing, and in it, stated as fact, was all of the old poppycock that H.L. Mencken had published almost ten years before.

For those interested, it's all in Prejudices: Sixth Series, "A Hymn to the Truth." The original article, from the New York Evening Mail, can be found reprinted in A Mencken Chrestomathy, "A Neglected Anniversary."

To those of you who are already familiar with the story and the hoax, the above explanation was obviously unnecessary, and also unintended. I apologize for wasting your time and arousing your ire.

"If theah's anything I like, it's a good joke."

THE DAWN OF CIVILIZATION

Please prepare for a shock. I am going to offer a compliment. I would like to congratulate the Sovereign State of Georgia. Of all the States in the South, every one of which still appears to belong to the Confederacy, Georgia is perhaps the only state that has decided to abandon its barbarian ways and try civilization.

Everyone is well aware of the fact that when Atlanta's elementary school system was integrated, there was little trouble until the Klan started to make noise, and even then it was pretty quiet. Compare that to Louisiana or Arkansas. But how many of us are familiar with this news dispatch from the New York Times of March 23, 1962:

TWO OUSTED IN BEATING ... Georgia Policemen Ordered to Resign -- Victim Lost Eye.

LAWRENCEVILLE, Ga., March 22 (UPI) -- Two policemen here ordered to resign today after a Negro they had arrested for drunkenness lost an eye in a beating.

John Brown was found in his cell by Police Chief Buck Love and was taken to an Atlanta hospital, where his right eye was removed.

Fire two cops for beating a Negro? That's ridiculous. No good Southern community would stand for it. Such an act of herecy would probably get the Chief tarred and feathered, or simply lynched, in Mississippi. The local White Citizens' Council would be on him in no time. But it happened. Two cops were fired, summarily and without any hearings, as a result of a beating they gave a Negro. And apparently nothing happened to the Chief. I'm sure the local Klan got their two cents in, and so did the local White Citizens' Council, but that's all.

An event like this is truly amazing. Georgia is on the road to civilization, it appears. The Dark Ages are almost over in one part of the South, at least. Lynching, baiting Negroes, burning crosses, bombing places where Negroes live, and so forth are still the major participation sports in most of the South, but at least one state is coming out of it.

Board Names New Chairmen

Two new department chairmen were named by the Board of Trustees of the University of Vermont on Saturday.

Dr. Kerr L. White, associate professor of preventive medicine at the University of North Carolina School of Medicine was appointed professor and chairman of the department of preventive medicine, and Miss Norma L. Woodruff was named chairman of the department of nursing. Miss Woodruff has been associate professor of nursing since 1959.

A native of Winnipeg, Manitoba, Dr. White conducted his undergraduate work at McGill University in Montreal and graduate work at Yale and McGill. He did his internship at Mary Hitchcock Memorial Hospital in Hanover, N.H., and was resident in medicine at the Dartmouth Medical School, Mary Hitchcock, and the V.A. Hospital.

From 1953 to 1959 he was at the University of North Carolina. In 1959, he was Commonwealth Fund Advanced Fellow at the University of London. In 1960, he returned to North Carolina.

Miss Woodruff received her nursing diploma from the Burbank Hospital School in Fitchburg, Mass. and has done graduate study at Columbia and Boston University.

She taught at Burbank Hospital from 1941 to 1946. She then spent two years at the University of Oklahoma as surgical clinical instructor and later taught at Columbia. She returned to Burbank Hospital for three years before coming to the University of Vermont in 1952 as an instructor in nursing.

UVM Seniors To Present Music Recital

Seven graduating seniors in music will be presented by the UVM Department of Music in a series of three recitals to be given in Ira Allen Chapel at 8:30 P.M., Saturday, May 19, Monday, May 21, and Tuesday, May 22. The recitals are free and open to the public.

Miss Cloutier recently gave a recital in Boston at a meeting of the National Association of Teachers of Singing Eastern region. She will be accompanied by Norma Holmes Auchter.

The recitalists on Monday, May 21 will be Joan Lucille Chicoine, mezzo-soprano from Falmouth, Mass.; Jacqueline Louise Prouty, pianist from St. Albans; and Alice Zalon, soprano from Paterson, N.J. Miss Chicoine will be accompanied by Miss Linda Langworthy, and Miss Zalon by Armand Paul Brisson from Milton.

but there is considerable concern expressed about how it is used and, in some instance, abused. Summarized, this general concern shows that not only students but faculty and library staff as well have a common goal in mind for a library. An attractive, new, and handsomely furnished building now exists. Two things remain to be done. As rapidly as possible, a larger, well rounded book collection should be acquired. At the same time, the library should become an orderly, quiet, and inviting place to study and read - a place, moreover, to be shown with pride to parents, visitors, and friends of the university.

That there be student understanding of library operations, acquiring, organizing, and servicing books, two student representatives from SA attend meetings of the Senate Library Committee. That Bailey become a quiet, orderly, and useful university library, the Director of Libraries has held a number of discussions not only with interested individuals but with representative student groups. Out of these has come endorsement by the Student Association, the Pan Hellenic Council, and the Interfraternity Council of some simple, general rules of library conduct and of seeking to establish them as traditionally accepted conduct rather than as rules.

1. One does not bring coffee, ice cream, cokes, sandwiches, and sticky, messy food into the library. (An exception to this would be the need for an occasional "coffee" in the All Night Study Room.)
2. Anyone is entitled to ask individuals or groups for quiet, and conversely, out of respect for others, individuals or groups asked to be quiet are not entitled to take offense. Also, out of respect to others, one bears in mind that the comfort of shoes off and feet on the table is exceeded only by the unpleasantness this can create for a neighbor.
3. One does not hold loud conversations or smoke in the stairways.

To promote acceptance of this brief set of manners and establishment of them on a tradition basis, Ronald Hosta, SA Library Committee, will work with the MC's for next fall's Freshman Orientation committees. While introducing Freshmen to the library's resources and facilities, the MC's can also put across these generally endorsed points of conduct. During the summer, the library will arrange to have them included with general library information in the mailings to incoming Freshmen.

In respect to this, or any other library matters, the library certainly welcomes comments, questions, and suggestions from individuals as well as from student organizations, societies, or service clubs.

good idea. If students going to receive a degree in their particular field it seems logical that the school deserves some indication of what they have achieved before granting a degree."

Mr. Norman London, Assistant Instructor of Speech - "Yes I feel that Comprehensive examinations, either oral or written (or perhaps both), would be a very profitable experience in terms of summarizing and evaluating a student's competence in his chosen major area."

Ronald Fay, '62 - "No, because I feel that once you have completed a course, there is no need to be re-examined on the material. If the comprehensive exams were given, a senior would spend this time re-studying old material for the exam rather than pursuing further knowledge in his subject matter."

Vic Hoffman, '62 - "I think that it's a system that can be used very effectively, providing that it is not the only basis for evaluating a student's four-year college performance. It should be mandatory only for students desiring special qualifications in their major field, particularly if a student is going to graduate school."

Senate Approves Bill

the Union Message, called such devices, "insidious". He said the right to vote, "should no longer be denied through such iniquitous local devices as literacy tests".

Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy has called literacy tests the principal device for discrimination in voting. The bill was unanimously supported by the Civil Rights Commission and by both major political parties.

Recommendation two of the 1961 United States Commission on Civil Rights Report under voting qualifications, reads as follows: "That Congress enact legislation providing that in all elections in which, under State law, a 'literacy' test, and 'understanding' or 'interpretation' test, or an 'educational' test is administered to determine the qualifications of electors, it shall be sufficient for qualification that the elector have completed at least six grades of formal education.

The United States National Students Association strongly recommended the passage of this bill. At the 14th National Student Congress in a resolution passed on voting rights the following statement was made: The right to vote is undeniably the cardinal freedom of citizens in a democratic system.

CRAM COURSE NO. 5: SHAKESPEARE

Continuing our series of pre-final exam cram courses, today we take up the works of William Shakespeare (or "The Bard of Avon" as he is jocularly called).

First let us examine the persistent theory that Shakespeare (or "The Pearl of the Antilles" as he is affectionately referred to) is not the real author of his plays. Advocates of this theory insist that the plays are so full of classical allusions and learned references that they couldn't possibly have been written by the son of an illiterate country butcher.

To which I reply, "Faugh!" Was not the great Spinoza's father a humble woodcutter? Was not the immortal Isaac Newton's father a simple second baseman? (The elder Newton, incidentally, is one of history's truly pathetic figures. He was, by all accounts, the greatest second baseman of his time, but baseball, alas, had not yet been invented.) It used to break young Isaac's heart to see his father get up every morning, put on uniform, spikes, glove, and cap, and stand alertly behind second base, bent forward, eyes narrowed, waiting, waiting, waiting. That's all—waiting. Isaac loyally sat in the bleachers and yelled, "Good show, Dad!" and stuff like that, but everyone in town used to snigger and pelt the Newtons with overripe fruit—figs for the elder Newton, apples for the younger. Thus, as we all know, the famous occasion came about when Isaac Newton, struck in the head with an apple, leapt to his feet, shouted, "Europa!" and announced the third law of motion: "For every action there is an opposite and equal reaction!"

(How profoundly true these simple words are! Take, for example, Marlboro Cigarettes. Light one. That's the action. Now what is the reaction? Pleasure, delight, contentment, cheer, and comfort! And why such a happy reaction? Because you have started with a happy cigarette—a felicitous blend of jolly tobaccos, a good-natured filter, a rollicking flip-top box, a merry soft pack. As Newton often said, "You begin with better makin's, you end with better smokin's." Small wonder they called him "The Swedish Nightingale!"

But I digress. Back to Shakespeare (or "The Gem of the Ocean" as he was ribaldly appellated).

Shakespeare's most important play is, of course, Hamlet (or Macbeth, as it is sometimes called). This play tells in living color the story of Hamlet, Prince of Denmark, who one night sees a ghost upon the battlements. (Possibly it is a goat he sees: I have a first folio edition that is frankly not too legible.) Anyhow, Hamlet is so upset by seeing the ghost (or goat) that he stabs Polonius and Bare Bodkin. He is thereupon banished to a leather factory by the King, who cries, "Get thee to a tannery!" Thereupon Ophelia refuses her food until Laertes shouts, "Get thee to a beanery!" Ophelia is so miffed that she chases her little dog out of the room, crying, "Out, out damned Spot!" She is fined fifty shillings for swearing, but Portia, in an eloquent plea, gets the sentence commuted to life imprisonment. Thereupon King Lear and Queen Mab proclaim a festival—complete with amateur theatricals, kissing games, and a pie-eating contest. Everyone has a perfectly splendid time till Banquo's ghost (or goat) shows up. This so unhinges Richard III that he drowns his cousin, Butt Malmsey. This leads to a lively discussion during which everyone is killed. The little dog Spot returns to utter the immortal curtain lines:

Alack, the play forsooth was sad and sobby,

the project to them; if they decide that it is feasible to continue working on it, they will begin work once again in the fall.

Since finals are almost upon us and since the method of taking these would be changed under an academic Honor System, this would be a good time for us all to give some thought to the possibilities of an Honor System at UVM. Do you want one?

THE VERMONT CYNICTau Beta Phi Elects Members

Tau Beta Phi, national engineering honor society, has elected five students and eight alumni of UVM to membership.

The five students, all Juniors, are Thomas Bartholomew, Roger Holbrook, William Sandrin, James Selleck and Arthur Stringer.

Alumni chosen were James

Root, '41; Roger Hawkins, '53; and Austin Ross, '37. Officers of the Vermont Alpha, Chapter elected for the ensuing year are: Abraham Daudlin, president and delegate; Joseph Godrick, vice president; Arnold Turner, corresponding secretary; Thomas Bartholomew, treasurer; Arthur Stringer, recording secretary; and William Sandrin, cataloguer.

UVM To Honor Professor Blasberg

The University of Vermont will honor the late Prof. Charles H. Blasberg on Friday, (May 18) when it dedicates a new laboratory building on the Horticulture Farm.

University of Vermont President John T. Pey will be the speaker at a noon luncheon for members of the Blasberg family, and Paul R. Miller, dean of the College of Agriculture and Economics, will preside at ceremonies at the Blasberg Horticultural Field Laboratory located just off Shelburne Road in South Burlington.

An open house will be held at the Laboratory from 2:30 to 4:30 on Friday, and Dean Miller said "we are hopeful that the apple trees and lilacs on the Horticultural Farm will put on a display of spring blossoms for the occasion."

The public is cordially invited to attend the open house, he said. Prof. Blasberg was a member of the University of Vermont faculty from 1938 until his death in April of 1961.

A native of Hawthorne, N.J., he received the B.S., M.S. and Ph.D. degrees from Rutgers University, where he served for a time as a County Agricultural Agent.

He came to Vermont as horticulturist for UVM's Agricultural Extension Service, and was named chairman of the department of horticulture in 1944.

He was known throughout the country for his work in fruit tree nutrition, strawberry breeding and apple root stocks.

The University of Vermont Senate and the American Society for Horticultural Science passed resolutions citing Prof. Blasberg's contribution.

The ASHS resolution said that "horticulturists of his calibre are becoming very rare... he impressed on his students, his readers, his listeners, the fact that we still live in a biological world, that all through out lives we are surrounded by plants and are dependent on their activity, but he also impressed on all of us who came into contact with him that we depend on plants not only as a source of food but also as a source of recreation and enjoyment."

"His extensive knowledge of fruit tree nutrition and his influence in this important field will have a profound beneficial affect on commercial orcharding throughout the northeast for years to come," the resolution said.

Nota Bene

Any students who are interested in sportswriting and would enjoy in assisting in the sports information program at UVM are invited to contact Larry Kimball in the public relations office (second floor of Alumni House) relative to working during the 1962-63 academic year.

The public relations office is planning on using pictures of all graduating seniors with commencement stories. The office is using Ariel pictures in this project. If any seniors believe that they have not had their class picture taken for the Ariel, would they please contact either Mr. Kimball, assistant public relations director or Mrs. Aiken, secretary, in the public relations office (second floor of Alumni House) by May 22 to arrange to have a picture taken.

All undergraduates interested in educational careers or courses in education should note this advertisement.

There will be a talk at 4:00 p.m. Friday, May 18, in Waterman Student Lounge by Mr. O.W. Ross on the subject: "Manpower Needs of the Sixties." Mr. Ross, who is Executive Director of the Manpower Utilization Council of New York City, will concern himself with the integrative problems of Education, Business and Industry.

That's Friday, May 18, at 4:00 p.m., Waterman Lounge sponsored by Kappa Phi Kappa, Men's Education Fraternity. The public is invited.

Dietetic Appointments Received

Three senior women in the College of Agriculture and Home Economics at the University of Vermont have received their dietetic internship appointments.

Each, March, throughout the country, seniors majoring in dietetics make application for an approved hospital, food clinic, or administrative internship which provides for a year's "on the job" training.

The three UVM seniors are Julia Lawler of 145 Robinson

Parkway, Burlington; Joyce Alexander of Wilmington, Del. and Lillian Ferrant of Boston. Miss Lawler will study at the Eastman Kodak Co. in Rochester, N.Y., Miss Alexander at the Indiana University Medical Center in Indianapolis, and Miss Ferrant at Massachusetts General Hospital in Boston.

Completion of the internship fulfills requirements for membership in the American Dietetics Association.

All that I've said is not to be construed to mean that Georgia is out of its feudal period yet. That such beatings happen is enough to demonstrate the fact that Georgia still has a long way to go. That White Citizens' Councils and the Ku Klux Klan still exist indicate that Georgia is still as bad as Mississippi and Louisiana, probably the two worst states, in many ways. But at least they are trying.

Maybe if we didn't try to force Civil Rights measures on Georgia too fast we could get at least one state that didn't come out of the struggle still living in a Reconstruction atmosphere. If we just kept the pressure on them in a general sort of way - if we made sure that, when we tried to do anything in the South, we told Georgia that she wasn't exempt, even though we weren't pushing her - then maybe Georgia would do something on her own. It is certainly worth a try.

Now compare New Orleans to Atlanta. In New Orleans Mommy escorts her little darlings to school to make sure that the little darlings are not corrupted by seeing any Negroes, or, Heaven forbid! having classes with them. Incidentally, the children learn the best way to curse Negroes, and that thrills Mommy no end.

Louisiana has some geniuses amongst the Poor White Trash that generally makes up its White Citizens' Council. The fellow, one George Singleman, who thought up the Freedom Bus bit, for transplanting dissatisfied Negroes to the northern states, must have been given the highest award the KKK can give, whatever it may be. As for commenting on it, the accompanying cartoon, by the syndicated Herblock, says it all.

I take that back. Singleman, the second in charge, under Leander Perez, of the New Orleans branch of the Louisiana White Citizens' Council, made a little slip in an interview broadcast over NBC's Monitor on Sunday, April 29. At one point, talking about the Freedom Bus rides, he said something like, "... If those niggers - those Negroes..." The important thing is not exactly what he said, but the slip of the tongue. That is as eloquent a comment as anyone could make.

Couple those two together - the comment by Herblock and the inadvertent slip - and add the antics of Mrs. Gaillot after her excommunication, and there really is nothing more to be said. One can just sit and look and be amazed and amused. It's tragicomedy at its purest.

Control Is Key To DeNicola's Undeclared Record

Dick DeNicola, UVM lefty, has given up only 10 walks in 58 1/3 innings while striking out 37, while compiling a perfect 8-0 record.

Dick DeNicola has been the mainstay of the UVM pitching staff this year. Thus far he has seven wins without suffering a defeat. He has pitched the Cats out of many tight spots to pick up wins in relief.

DeNicola's last outing was his best effort so far this year. He shutout the Redmen of UMass 6-0 on seven hits while only allowing only two walks. The shifty lefty is most effective under pressure. He possesses a fine curve and can put the ball where he wants to with little effort. Although he doesn't have the speed of his teammate "Dutch" Cassani, Dick manages to get his fastball by the best batters.

Dick is from Hamden, Connecticut where he was voted the MVP of the Hamden High baseball team. Dick's father is the mayor of Hamden. Among Dick's many activities on campus he is a member of the Varsity Club, Newman Club, and is a dorm floor counselor.

Cats Denied Chance For NCAA Crown

The Catamounts are nearly in as Yankee Conference Champions but are out of the New England NCAA baseball tournament.

The Cats are currently setting the pace with a 6-0 record in the YC. They need only two wins in their remaining four games to clinch the title. If the Catamounts go on to win the Conference title it will be the first Yankee baseball championship in UVM history.

Last Friday after the University of Massachusetts game Coach Ralph Lapointe conferred with tournament chairman Paul Eckley, Amherst College Coach. Lapointe informed Eckley that Vermont cannot possibly compete in the regional playoffs if the dates conflict with examinations.

"We're going to have the tournament between May 31 and June 4 because other teams are available then," stated Eckley who has the power to set the tournament dates.

"Well, we're out," replied Lapointe who stated he is in full accord with a university rule since losing two men on academic ineligibility when Vermont competed in 1955 despite the examination conflict.

Tennis Team Ends Season

The UVM Tennis Team has found it rough going all season. With high hopes they began the season against Union College and while we won, it was by the narrow margin of five to four. The next two matches would be classed as catastrophes for Coach Marston's men as they fell to St. Lawrence, 7-2 and then to Union, 8-1. This disappointing start was then compounded as the squad met defeat at the hands of the Middlebury Panthers, 6-3.

Each match consists of three double and six single events, comprising an overall point score of nine. Our netmen managed to take only two singles events and one doubles match. The best performance was by the squads captain, Bob Katz, who won his singles event over Middlebury's Brown, 3-6, 6-0, 6-3. Recovering from a poor start, Katz smashed his way to victory. The other singles win was at the left hands of Bickerson, defeating Mertens of the panthers in a well played match.

The doubles victory came by the sure team-work of Katz and Krintzman as they decisively beat Middlebury's Daniels and Fuller, 6-0 and 6-2. The other members of the squad faced rough going and as seen by the score, victories were few and had to be fought for.

"So you think your the New York Yankees" - Coach Lapointe talks with Captain Levi Brown. Coach Lapointe doesn't mind if his baseball team thinks it's the Yanks as long as they keep winning. Brown is currently batting .456 and is hitting the long ball like Mantle and Maris.

Vermont Sweeps UMass Series 10 Straight For Cats

Stay up "Duke" - Maynard Ducatte scores winning run against UMass on daring double steal. Cat's took two from the Redmen to move closer to title. Credit: Ojanen, S.P.S.

The D-boys did it again. The winning pair of Dick DeNicola and Dick Cassani combined their pitching talent to sweep the UMass series last weekend. On Friday DeNicola shutout the Redmen 6-0 while Cassani hurled a 4-3 squeaker on Saturday. DeNicola is 7-0 so far while Cassani is 6-0. Vermont is now three games ahead in the Yankee Conference.

DeNicola's 6-0 Shutout was a masterpiece of control pitching. He allowed only one man to reach third safely while giving up seven scattered hits. DeNicola walked only two men and has only allowed eight walks in 49 2/3 innings thus far this season.

Vermont scored in the fourth with two outs against Mass. Levi Brown walked, Dick Boutillier singled him to third on a hit and run, Nick Carmoli then hit a two strike pitch by third base, scoring the first run. Little Joe Pare followed with another single again on a 0-2 pitch. Two runs scored on the hit. Catcher Bill Rundle blasted a home run to left center some 500 feet from the plate in the fifth to up the score to 4-0. Slugging ace Levi Brown, crossed up the Redmen with a bunt single. Brown then stole second and advanced to third on a wild pitch. After Boutillier grounded out Carmoli laid down a perfect bunt as Brown scored on the squeeze play.

Maynard Ducatte closed out the scoring in the seventh with a long homer to wide open left center, almost in the same spot where Rundle belted his.

Cassani pitched his sixth victory as UVM beat UMass on a double steal in the ninth. Going into the ninth trailing 3-2 the Catamounts displayed some daring baserunning and heads-up baseball to win.

Bob Johnson opened the inning with a single, Nick Carmoli sacrificed him to second, Hayne Van Ham walked, putting runners on first and second. "Duke" Ducatte then hit a hard drive to right field, which was bobbled by the right fielder. This allowed Ducatte to reach first but Van-Ham was tagged out going to second after the error. This put men on first and third with two out seemingly out of reach for the Cats.

Brown was the next man up, but before he even swung at a pitch, the UMass catcher let a ball go by him. Johnson surprised him and everyone in the stands by racing across the plate before he could recover. The passed ball only went a few feet away from the plate. Ducatte ran to second on the play and the game was tied at 3-3. Brown walked and Ducatte stealing third on the last pitch.

The winning run came on a daring maneuver when Brown broke for second and Ducatte dashed for home on a delayed double steal. The unaware UMass catcher threw the ball to the pitcher who realized what was happening but could not do anything about it. He bobbled the ball and Ducatte crossed the plate with the winning run.

SPORTING OPINIONS By Ray Bello

Vermont is a small university and has never been rated as an athletic power in New England. With all UVM's progressive steps in the way of athletics all indications seem to favor a re-evaluation of Vermont's overall sports program. In the next ten years Vermont will evolve into a respected Yankee Conference competitor and during that time UVM will surely win some titles and even rate national acclaim.

The baseball team is on the verge of winning their first Yankee Conference Championship. At this printing the Cats only need one win to tie and two to clinch the title. But even before they have won the title Coach Lapointe has been forced by a university policy to decline a likely invitation to the NCAA regional playoffs because of examination conflicts. This is regrettable for it would have been Vermont's big chance to gain national recognition in baseball.

A new era in football is starting at UVM. Next season's full Yankee Conference schedule and the new coaching staff will give the Catamounts a chance to flex their muscles and seriously consider taking home the "bean pot."

Last year's 3-3-1 record was one of Vermont's best in the past decade. Next season's team will be composed of 16 returning lettermen and a host of new talent from the undefeated freshman squad. Look for the gridgers to improve upon this past season's record.

The completion of the new gym will give Vermont one of the best basketball playing areas in all New England. This will be an important factor in attracting potential stars to come to Vermont. In the past they would shy away from UVM because of the poor conditions of the "old gym."

The new gym will institute many new sports; hockey, swimming and perhaps some obscure, but difficult sports like squash and wrestling will become part of UVM's sports program. Vermont may not grow much bigger in the near future but its athletic reputation is sure to undergo a welcome metamorphosis. The day might come when all the undergrads go to "our beautiful Lake Champlain" to cheer the crew team but for the present the proposed sports improvements will welcome an addition to UVM.

UNIVERSITY OF VERMONT BURLINGTON, VERMONT SEPTEMBER, 1962

SPECIAL EDITION

Frosh Rules 1914 Version

"Hark Ye to These Restrictions Lest the Waters Be Thy Grave."

Put away childish things—wear not thy prep school insignia. You are now in college.

Clad thy skinny ankles in sombre black. Wear no corduroy clothing.

Wander not away from the established paths on campus. Dare not tread upon the north side of College Street. Be not seen on Church Street after 10:30 in the evening save in the presence of upperclassmen.

Doff your cap to the President—tip them to the faculty and seniors.

Upon the earliest opportunity procure a little green cap. Stick to it, nor separate from it ever. Mar it not with your needless name, nor the noisome numerals of your class, nor remove the bright and becoming button. As wintry blasts approach procure a regulation freshman toque. After this the cap shall not be worn until founder's day. Sundays may be an abundant supply of pipes and matches. Collegiate contests must also be attended.

Smoke is the saddest of sins. Play not with the pleasing pipe nor caress the contraband cigarette. Contaminate not your childish cheeks with the costly cigar. Fearful is the fate of him who fights the nasty nicotine. Smoke only in secret seclusion with fear and trembling in your heart. At college smokers this rule is void.

When the strains of "Champlain" are heard show respect to your alma mater by rising and doffing caps. Have all college songs firmly imbedded in your minds by the first football game.

We, the all-powerful Class of 1917, heartily welcome you to our University. Join with the student body in an endeavor to make a bigger and better Old Vermont.

NEW GYM READIED

October Dedication Planned

Artists' conception of UVM's new gym, now almost completed.

When the doors are opened to UVM's new gymnasium and field house on Spear Street this October, the University's physical education and intercollegiate athletic programs will have one of the finest and most modern and complete plants in the United States.

Housed in three main structures—the field house, the swimming pool, and the gym—the new plant will make possible many new sports, beside the activities now in the regular programs.

The semi-cylindrical shape of the field house, the largest of the three main structures, dominates the skyline along the crest of the hill on which it stands, and which slopes downward to the Burlington-South Burlington dividing line.

The field house, 140 by 488 feet, measures almost half the length of a football field in width and 1 1/2 times the length of a gridiron in length.

One half of the field house will house a hockey rink, 85 feet by 190 feet, and will seat up to 4000. During the summer the rink will be drained and converted to indoor tennis courts.

Not only will the rink provide for recreational skating and intramural hockey, but it will soon house a new Catamount hockey team. Present plans will have informal hockey competition, with an expansion into formal intercollegiate hockey competition, said UVM's Director of Athletics, J. Edward Donnelly.

The portion of the field house separating the rink from the cage will contain showers, locker rooms, and rest rooms, with storage closets and a "warming room" for chilled iceskaters.

The other half of the field house is the "cage," with a one-tenth mile circumference track around a baseball infield, hammer throw, shot put, pole vault and broad jump platforms.

In addition to its present outdoor competition, UVM will compete in indoor track meets once the track is completed.

Baseball will also benefit from the new cage. There will be a larger number of batting "lanes" than in the old gym, so that a larger number of hitters can take batting practice at the same time. As in the old cage, the baseball team will use the cage for early season practice and for intrasquad games during inclement weather.

A covered walkway connects the field house with the rectangular main gymnasium. Inside the building are three main units. The front unit houses the administrative offices, and a main lobby leading into the center gym portion of the building.

In this center section are three basketball courts, each one a regulation-sized 94 by 50 feet, the standard college size. When the two side courts are covered by the portable bleachers, approximately 5000 spectators will be able to watch the game. With additional seats on the center court, for meetings and conventions, the total seating capacity will be increased to 6500.

The last unit of the gym building will contain the swimming pool, handball and squash courts, showers, locker rooms, rest rooms, classrooms, and storage space. (continued on page six)

Frat Finances Surveyed

An extensive survey, aimed at presenting an overall view of the finances and services of the 16 fraternities at the University of Vermont, has been completed by the Dean of Men's office.

Dean Roland Patzer said that the survey was done in the hope that it would enable the 16 UVM fraternities to take a look at their expenses and programs, see how they compared with others, and then be able to utilize them to a fuller degree.

"I hope that we will be able to conduct such a survey yearly. Once it has been firmly established we will be able to relate a particular year's findings to those of previous years. This should prove helpful not only to the University but the fraternities as well," says Patzer.

By finding out such facts as the number of men living in fraternities and how many eat and sleep at the house, Patzer said the University will be better able to utilize its own facilities.

He also pointed out that it might prove feasible for the University and the fraternities to undertake cooperative buying in certain categories.

Among other findings disclosed by the study are:

The average number of actives is 40.56 per fraternity with the highest number being 90 and the lowest 17.

Pledges average 25.56 per house (from seven to 51).

A total of 454 men live in fraternities but there are sleeping capacities for 518.

The average assessed value of each house is $53,500 (four are valued at $100,000 or above).

Other areas covered in the survey dealt with monthly dues, various fees, parking facilities, and wages.

Patzer said that the next step is to discuss the findings of the survey with the Interfraternity Council and the alumni IFC. "We have a picture of where we are," says the UVM Dean, "now where do we go?"

Grid Coach Invites Frosh

The freshmen men have an open invitation from Varsity Coach Bob Clifford to try out for the frosh football team. Previous experience is not necessary.

This year's freshman football team will be coached by Head Coach "Fuzzy" Evans. He will be assisted by Ralph LaPointe (baseball coach) and former UVM great, Kenny Lambert.

The date, time, and place of the frosh football meeting will be announced at a later date.

Interested individuals should report to "Shorty" Cote at the fieldhouse any time during Freshman Week to draw equipment.

ATTENTION PARENTS...PLEASE NOTE CHANGE IN OUR PLANS

Our original intention was to present to you a reasonably accurate image of what the Cynic looks like during its regular printing throughout the school year.

A sports page is absent simply because there are no athletic events which we can report to you during the summer months. We do hope that you find the news article on the new gym interesting.

It was rather difficult to accumulate timely news to print and so for the most part the articles contain information which is, in a sense, general.

We do hope that you find this issue entertaining and that you choose to subscribe knowing that the following issues will be more "news-worthy" and timely in their presentation.

UVM Grads, Faculty, Students Make The News

A University of Vermont economics professor is one of 14 American and European scholars who have contributed chapters to a new book, "East Central Europe and the World: Developments in the Post-Stalin Era."

Dr. Lubomir A.D. Dellin is the author of the chapter on Bulgaria. The book had a June 22 publication date. The Notre Dame University Press is the publisher and Prof. Stephen D. Kertesz of Notre Dame is the editor of the volume.

The author of a widely-acclaimed book about Bulgaria in 1957 and of numerous articles, Dr. Dellin focuses his analysis on the post-Stalin domestic developments and foreign policy of that Communist-dominated country.

In his chapter, the author says that during the post-Stalin era, the Bulgarian regime permitted little relaxation and, with national leadership as well as the communist dissidents liquidated long ago, no Hungary or Poland was possible.

"Yet," he says, "the undercurrents were strong and potentially explosive. Even the Communist intelligentsia -- not to mention the non-Communist masses--proved that they have responded little to the relentless ideological drive and, that, on the contrary, they resent Russification and sovietization. This is one of the most significant and, for the free world, most encouraging lessons of the Communist experiment."

Dr. Dellin continues by saying that the lesson can not be disregarded by the Communists either. "The year of 1962 compared to 1953 evidences a letup in the most odious terrorist practices of the Stalin era and a flight improvement in the unbelievably low living standards. But there is no letup in indoctrination or economic practices. Voluntary workers' detachments and comrade courts have been substituted for the most objectionable open duties of the militia and courts. With collectivization in agriculture completed, the regime embarked upon the 'big leap forward' and this proved not only unrealistic but required enormous sacrifices. Industrialization continues to get high priority with minor modifications as a result of Comecon policy."

He goes on to say that the lack of an independent foreign policy has, paradoxically, brought some international prestige and respectability to the regime because of its admission to the UN and the resumption of diplomatic relations with the United States.

Dellin concludes by saying "although the ruthless Soviet exploitation has been modified, foreign rule seems to be the most strongly resented feature of Communist practices. Religion and, particularly nationalism, remain the 'deadly enemy' and are even exploited by the Communists against Bulgaria's neighbors. Since liberation has become a remote possibility, the attention of the people is absorbed by the many problems of everyday life. But it seems safe to say, they would hardly stay aloof in the event of any hopeful developments."

Dellin is chairman of the Program of Russian and East European Studies, established recently as part of UVM's Center for Area Studies. His "Agriculture and the Peasant" will appear this fall in a symposium on "East Central Europe in the Sixties,"

A University of Vermont faculty member has been named "alumnus of the year" at Long Island University.

Dr. John Abajian, Jr., professor of anesthesiology in the UVM College of Medicine and one of the nation's leading authorities in the field of anesthesiology, has been selected to receive the Tristram Walker Metcalfe Memorial Award at the annual homecoming of LIU's Alumni Association on Saturday (June 9). The award is named for the university's first president.

Dr. Abajian was a member of the Class of 1933 at LIU. He received his MD in 1937 from the New York Medical College and spent his internship at Norton Memorial Infirmary in Louisville, Kentucky. He served his residency in anesthesiology at the Gotham and Lenox Hill Hospitals in New York City.

During World War II, he was consultant anesthesiologist to the Third Army and later served as national consultant in anesthesiology to the Surgeon General of the Air Force.

Dr. Abajian has been attending anesthesiology at Mary Fletcher Hospital since 1940 and at DeGoesbriand Hospital since 1945. He has been a member of the UVM College of Medicine since 1946. He is also medical director of the Vermont-New Hampshire Red Cross blood program.

The writer of many articles for medical journals, Dr. Abajian introduced the anesthetic, fluothane, in the United States and it is now one of the most commonly used anesthetic drugs.

A native of Providence, Rhode Island, Dr. Abajian is married to the former Mel Kazanjian and the couple has three children.

Frosh Debaters Take Honors

Last semester, at LaMoyne College, Syracuse, 15 eastern colleges were represented at the annual Varsity Debate Tournament. The news-making factor of this event was that four freshmen from Vermont defeated the fourteen other upperclass teams to place first in the debate.

The affirmative stand was taken by Dan Newcomb and Ruth Baldwin, who downed Siena, Misericordia, U. of Buffalo, and St. John Fisher, losing only to the U. of Rochester. Above and beyond the team victory, Dan took two First Speaker ratings, while Ruth took one.

The negative was defended by Sharon Call and Carmen Wegner who paralleled the affirmative in beating four colleges: RIT, Syracuse School of Forestry, Misericordia, and U. of Rochester. Their single loss was to St. Andrews. This team also took top honors with Carmen receiving three First Speaker ratings and Sharon four Second Speaker ratings.

When the judges compiled the points from the two sides of the argument, Vermont had won with eight victories -- two losses, U. of Buffalo had placed second with seven out of ten wins, and U. of Rochester, third with an equal number of points.

An extension economist at the University of Vermont was elected to be a member of a Department of Agriculture team that is studying the possibilities of expanding the marketing of U.S. farm products in the Caribbean area.

Verle R. Houghaboom is one of six Federal and State Cooperative Extension workers chosen for the study. The team left June 15 and is accompanied by a staff member of the USDA Foreign Agricultural Service.

The team is one of four Extension groups which is visiting major world areas to conduct marketing studies for the Department of Agriculture. Other teams will go to Africa, the Middle East and Europe, and to South Asia.

The studies are a part of the work program the Department continually carries on with U.S. agricultural interests to maintain and expand foreign markets for U.S. farm products. The extension specialists, since their return July 23, have been developing material to be transmitted to urban and rural people, professional agricultural workers throughout the United States.

The Caribbean team visited Brazil, Venezuela, Columbia, Mexico, Nicaragua and Trinidad, where emphasis was placed on cash market potentials for U.S. agricultural commodities in such developing countries as Columbia, Venezuela, Brazil and Mexico.

A University of Vermont graduate of 1928 will become chairman of the Columbia University Department of English and Comparative Literature on July 1.

He is Dr. Lewis G. Leary whose special field is American Literature. He will succeed Dr. Marjorie Hope Nicolson who is retiring.

Dr. Leary joined the Columbia University faculty in 1952 as professor of English in the Graduate School. He was formerly professor of American Literature at Duke University, and had previously taught at the University of Miami.

Following his graduation from Vermont, Dr. Leary taught for three years at the American University in Beirut, Lebanon, where he prepared his first book, a text. After World War II, he was with the office of Strategic Services. He prepared "The Last Poems of Philip Freneau" and "Articles on American Literature Appearing in Current Periodicals," 1920-1945. He also collected for Columbia's bicentennial celebration a volume of essays entitled "The Unity of Knowledge."

Dr. Leary is a member of Kappa Sigma fraternity, for which he was a Kake Walker, at Vermont. A graduate of Pelham Memorial High School, Pelham, N.Y., he was a member of Gold Key, Vermont sophomore honorary society, was a football and track man, and a member of 1928 "Ariel" Board.

A University of Vermont senior has been awarded a Fulbright Scholarship for study at the University of Edinburgh.

Edward R. Whalen of Winooski has just been notified by the State Department and the Board of Foreign Scholarships of his award.

Whalen, who is the son of Mrs. Leona J. Whalen of 230 Main St., Winooski, earlier in the year won a Woodrow Wilson Fellowship for graduate study at Harvard, but he plans to postpone acceptance for a year now that he is the recipient of a Fulbright.

"I feel that somebody is going to wake me up any minute," was Whalen's comment upon being notified of his award.

Whalen will depart for England aboard the S.S. United States on Sept. 7 and will arrive in London on the 12th, where all Fulbright scholars who are to do study in England will undergo eight days of orientation. Whalen will start classes at Edinburgh on the 20th. He will specialize in the field of Anglo-Saxon literature.

An English major, Whalen is a Dean's list student, a member of Phi Beta Kappa, is a member of the John Dewey Club, and was art editor of the Centaur, student literary magazine. He is a graduate of Cathedral High (Rice Memorial) in Burlington and plans a teaching career, at the college level, in English.

The last UVM recipients of Fulbright's were Clifford Giddings of East Dorset, who studied in France, and Gston Choiniere of Orleans, who studied in Denmark. Both were members of the Class of 1958.

Women's Dorms Planned For '63

Two new women's dormitories and a dining hall will be completed on Redstone campus by the fall of 1963, if plans at UVM go according to schedule.

Melvin A. Dyson, UVM comptroller and business manager said that $1,580,000 has been reserved for construction of the new dorms by the Housing and Home Finance Agency, a federal agency.

Dyson said the fact that the money has been reserved does not mean it has been appropriated. A detailed preliminary plan has been submitted and UVM has been informed, Dyson said, that the money has been reserved at an interest rate of 3 3/8 per cent.

Along with the detailed plan for the dorms, the university submitted a plan showing how the money will be paid back. The federal agency lends money to schools at low interest rates.

If the university has convinced the agency of the need for the dorms, the money will be appropriated.

Plans call for two dormitories housing a total of 285 women, and a dining hall, according to Lyman S. Rowell, Dean of Administration.

They would be connected to Patterson Hall, and the dining room would serve Slade, Robinson and Patterson, he added.

"The pattern would be similar to the rooms in Patterson, with some refinements," Rowell said, "We feel these will be the finest type of dormitory available."

If the money is approved and the dorms are built, which seems more than likely, it would result in other changes.

Rowell said Grassmount would probably be restored to its original appearance and be used as a guest house for alumni and faculty and university guests.

Once Again It's 1914

The entering class this year numbers 153. Of these 119 are men and 34 women. Burlington's representation is very large in the Class of 1918, there being 27 from this city. Rutland is next, having sent 7. The enrollment of 1918 shows 85 different localities represented. The Freshmen coming within the state number 113, and the remaining 40 are divided among 11 different states.

CANE RUSH

The annual cane rush and tug-of-war will take place on the back campus this afternoon. The freshmen will meet at 1:30 sharp and march downtown to the store of Miles and Perry, again the donors of the canes, returning to the hill at 2:00 when the rush will take place. The rules:

1. The canes will be carried by the side winning the toss.
2. The rush will last seven minutes.
3. Each whole cane counts two points for the class in possession. Each crook end with one foot of cane will count one point.
4. At the end of the rush Boulder men will judge as to the possession of the canes counting the hands in disputed cases. The crook hold will be considered an advantage.
5. Cleated shoes must not be worn. Wear preferably either tennis or rubber soled shoes.

TUG OF WAR

Time, 2:20 o'clock.

1. There shall be ten men on each side.
2. There shall be three pulls, each lasting two minutes.
3. Cleated shoes are barred.

Lane Series Program To Feature Cliburn

Internationally known pianist, Van Cliburn, will perform at UVM. (Credit: Steinway & Sons.)

Broadway and off-broadway musical comedies and pianist Van Cliburn will be among the highlights of the expanded, 1962-63 Lane Series at the University of Vermont.

Next season's program will have 14 concerts, seven each in Red and Blue series, rather than 12. Division into the two series will be announced in August. Highlighting one of the series will be the Rodgers and Hammerstein smash hit "The Sound of Music," while the other will present "Little Mary Sunshine." The latter, a gentle spoof of the old-time "Rose Marie" type of operetta, is in its third-year in an off-Broadway theater.

"The Sound of Music" is still running on Broadway, already having passed the 1000 performance mark, and is based on Vermont's Trapp family.

Van Cliburn is the internationally famous winner of the Tchaikowsky competition in Moscow.

The rest of the program includes:

The Turn of the Screw -- Benjamin Britten's opera based on Henry James' ghost story of the same name. Featured will be Metropolitan Opera star Patricia Neway in the full New York City Opera production.

Il Tabarro and Gianni Schicchi -- Puccini's one-act operas by the New York City Opera.

San Francisco Ballet -- First Eastern tour of company of 80. Repertory of classic and contemporary ballets.

American Ballet Theater--Has appeared three times previously in Lane Series.

Joan Baez--Young American folk singer.

George Shearing Quintet, Shakespeare Revisited--Helen Hayes and Maurice Evans in scenes from Shakespeare's plays.

Carlos Montoya--The world's outstanding flamenco guitarist, Robert Shaw Chorale and Orchestra -- Second appearance in Lane Series. Program will have classical and popular music, Hague Philharmonic Orchestra --First American tour under the patronage of Her Majesty Queen Juliana of the Netherlands.

French National Orchestra -- American debut of this famous European orchestra under the baton of the young American conductor, Lorin Maazel.

Tickets for the 1962-63 Series will go on sale in September.

Science Hall Keeps Pace With Growing Chemistry Department

Students in chemistry courses at the University of Vermont are enjoying fine new facilities in one of the University's oldest buildings - thanks to a thorough interior renovation.

When Williams Science Hall was built in 1896 at a cost of $160,000 - the gift of Dr. and Mrs. Edward M. Williams of Philadelphia - it was the first completely fire-proofed college building in the country.

Sixty-five years later, when much of the interior space and equipment was inadequate for the teaching and research needs of the departments using the building, the building remained so sound that renovation seemed both practical and desirable.

The project, which has seen a "stem to stern" renovation of chemistry department facilities, and the first modest beginnings of renovation of zoology department facilities, was begun in the summer of 1960. Work has since been carried on around the clock on a schedule carefully devised so as to permit lectures and laboratory periods to be held with a minimum of interruption.

Future plans for departments now making use of Williams Science Hall have been additionally spurred by the University's Trustees who recently authorized planning for classroom-laboratory construction for sciences.

Cost to date for the Williams Science Hall renovation project amounts to about $440,000, but the investment has provided bright new student facilities, more than doubled the area available for chemistry research, and made possible the initiation of a doctoral program in chemistry.

The biggest teaching advantage gained in the renovation, according to Prof. Clinton D. Cook, chairman of the department of chemistry at Vermont, results from the installation of individual laboratory lockers which allow better, more advanced level work.

New benches, new glass plumbing, stainless steel ventilation ducts, relocation of stock rooms, and the introduction of semi-automatic balances which give student chemists a means of more rapid and modern techniques, were all cited by Dr. Cook as advantages gained with completion of the renovation project.

Enrollment in the department of chemistry has continued to grow, according to Cook, from 834 students enrolled in chemistry courses in the fall of 1959 to 1052 students this past fall.

The number of majors is increasing, too, he adds, as is graduate work in chemistry.

The University of Vermont has had an above average record in terms of the number of its chemistry majors going on to receive the Ph.D. in the field, and UVM's own new Ph.D. program has attracted five candidates in its first year. Over 50% of the Department's graduates go on either to medical school or to graduate work in chemistry.

The UVM program is particularly oriented toward those who wish to develop academic careers, according to Cook, who points out that every graduate student in chemistry at Vermont is given some teaching role in

Engineers Housed In New Building East Hall Razed

Picture shows East Hall being constructed in 1947. Building is now being torn down. (Credit: R. T. Conant).

Ground-breaking for a new engineering building at the University of Vermont on Monday, July 30, began the beginning of the end for a grand old postwar landmark.

East Hall never wore ivy, and has been a costly and demanding thorn in the side of UVM's Buildings and Grounds staff for most of its UVM history, but it helped make it possible for thousands of young men and women to go to college.

The story of the "temporary" one-story wooden frame building which now lies chipping and peeling just south of the old engineering building at UVM began in 1947, when the postwar return of veterans boomed UVM enrollment from 1,300 to over 3000. The university acquired the frame structure, which served during World War II as a Navy hospital, and erected on the East campus where it quickly became known as East Hall.

Considering the average UVM enrollment of over 3,000 students since 1947, East Hall has served 50,000 students.

Though tagged from the start as "temporary," East Hall has served to make it possible for the University to meet and adjust to a variety of enrollment pressures which have continued in the post-war years.

Its many wings--though giving new students extra-difficult orientations problems -- have made it possible for East Hall to serve both as a classroom and a residence hall building. Before the renovation of the Old Mill and the new classrooms of Lafayette Hall, the old Navy hospital housed UVM's largest academic department -- the English department.

It has also served as residence hall when the occasion demanded, first for women, later for medical students, and then for a number of men students.

It has also housed the geology department, and given darkroom and film library space to the Division of Audio Visual Services. Members of the speech and drama department have been housed in East Hall, as have library reading rooms and various student clubs and groups including University Players and the staff of the undergraduate literary magazine and members of the Buildings and Grounds automotive and roofing department.

Through it all, the Buildings and Grounds staff has worked "almost around the clock" to keep the temporary structure shipshape.

There is no basement. The building is damp. Paint peels. Walls crack. In winter, the ceiling develops mysterious swellings which must be tapped, lest they loose a deluge.

But East Hall has served when no other facilities were available. Once before, its term of "temporary" service was believed near an end, but special enrollment pressures kept it useful.

Now, with the start of construction of a new engineering building, at least one wing of East Hall will be "retired" from service; and time is definitely running for the rest of the structure.

If UVM's Buildings and Grounds staff may greet the occasion with cheer, the passing of this post-war landmark may evoke nostalgia for many who knew it as students and teachers.

Fey Approves ETV

University of Vermont President John T. Fey on May 17 told Vermont education and television representatives that the University is committed to presenting a plan for an ETV network for Vermont to the 1963 Legislature.

He pledged again that the University's presentation would be "in behalf of all interested education institutions and groups in the State."

President Fey noted that the Ford Foundation sponsored ETV study for Vermont had had the interest and cooperation of many educational institutions both within the state of Vermont and in neighboring states.

The University's application for Ford Foundation support for the project, he said, had been "in behalf of all the educational interests in Vermont," and the presentation to the Vermont Legislature of the plan for an ETV network for Vermont will follow this same purpose and philosophy, Dr. Fey said.

Establishment of the ETV network proposed in the Vermont study would be at an estimated cost of $1,500,000. Estimated cost of operating the network, which would have four UHF transmitters and give "reasonable expectation" of coverage to 97 per cent of Vermont's population, would be between $230,000 and $320,000, depending upon the initial programming schedule.

Ariel Pictures Campus Life

The Ariel, UVM's yearbook, was first published in 1886 by the Sophomore Class. It seeks to recapture forever, life on the UVM campus. All phases of campus life are included in over 200 picture-filled pages of sports, activities, fraternities, sororities, features, honoraries, candid shots and others. With the passing of time, the echoes of school life grow fainter and fainter, and then die away. It is our hope to recapture these moments in the Ariel so that the echoes will begin as you glance through your book in years to come.

He praised the work of UVM Prof. William J. Lewis, who directed the Ford project, and that of Jack McBride, general manager of the University of Nebraska ETV station, who served as project consultant for the Vermont study.

THINKING OUT LOUD

by Kim Borlskin

Kim Borlskin is a sophomore engineering student and a resident of Burlington, Vermont. He is an avid reader and takes a great interest in political events. (Credit: Al Tolk, S.P.S.)

Although it has been apparent for quite some time that President Kennedy never at any time intended not to resume atmospheric testing, despite all the hot air he expended saying otherwise, and any moral reservations he may somehow have certainly notwithstanding, the first official announcement by the President himself came on March 2 of this year. In honor of the event I have put new words to a very old Hebrew Passover song called "One Kid."

One Bomb, one Bomb the President dropped on Christmas Island, One Bomb, one Bomb.

And the blast came that was the Bomb the President dropped on Christmas Island, One Bomb, one Bomb.

And the cloud came and the blast that was the Bomb the President dropped on Christmas Island, One Bomb, one Bomb.

And the wind came and dispersed the cloud that replaced the blast that was the Bomb the President dropped on Christmas Island, One Bomb, one Bomb.

And the fallout came and was carried by the wind that dispersed the cloud that replaced the blast that was the Bomb the President dropped on Christmas Island, One Bomb, one Bomb.

And the rain came and settled the fallout that was carried by the wind that dispersed the cloud that replaced the blast that was the Bomb the President dropped on Christmas Island, One Bomb, one Bomb.

And the grass came and grew on the rain that settled the fallout that was carried by the wind that dispersed the cloud that replaced the blast that was the Bomb the President dropped on Christmas Island, One Bomb, one Bomb.

And the cow came and ate the grass that grew on the rain that settled the fallout that was carried by the wind that dispersed the cloud that replaced the blast that was the Bomb the President dropped on Christmas Island, One Bomb, one Bomb.

And the milk came and was taken from the cow that ate the grass that grew on the rain that settled the fallout that was carried by the wind that dispersed the cloud that replaced the blast that was the Bomb the President dropped on Christmas Island, One Bomb, one Bomb.

And the couple came and drank the milk that came from the cow that ate the grass that grew on the rain that settled the fallout that was carried by the wind that dispersed the cloud that replaced the blast that was the Bomb the President dropped on Christmas Island, One Bomb, one Bomb.

And the child came and was born to the couple who drank the milk that came from the cow that ate the grass that grew on the rain that settled the fallout that was carried by the wind that dispersed the cloud that replaced the blast that was the Bomb the President dropped on Christmas Island, One Bomb, one Bomb.

And the blue and green hair came and grew on the two heads that were on the child that was born to the couple who drank the milk that came from the cow that ate the grass that grew on the rain that settled the fallout that was carried by the wind that dispersed the cloud that replaced the blast that was the Bomb the President dropped on Christmas Island, One Bomb, one Bomb.

Has anyone else noticed the apocalyptic hypocrisy in the President's plan to use Christmas Island as a test site? After all, just what does the name signify? (In these days it means Hall to Mammon All powerful, for Sell we Must! But I meant the name's theoretical significance.) Isn't Christmas the birthday of mankind's supposed Saviour? And here we are, right on the island named with Christ's birthday, testing and perfecting the most colossal instruments we have ever dreamed of to destroy the mangle man and his works. And not only do we indulge in this monstrous hypocrisy, but practically nobody even realizes it. Certainly President Kennedy, and, for that matter, everyone connected with Bomb tests, doesn't. Either that, or he's got enough of a sense of humor to play the most stupendous joke on mankind since time immemorial. And I seriously doubt it.

Ever since Stripe toothpaste was introduced, people have been wondering what the next innovation in toothpaste would be. The most common suggestions were polka dots and plaid. But the rumor is that Lever Brothers is going to be a bit more imaginative and follow up Stripe with a toothpaste containing Rorschach tests, using real ink.

I think I see some fuzz on Mr. Glean's head. Could that mean that he's growing hair? It seems to me that some time after his initial appearance, this anthropomorphic soap somehow changed his features, to the point where he looked almost like President Eisenhower. At the same time, sales increased sharply, but dropped off again when Eisenhower left office. Now that Ike no longer will sell soap, could they be trying to make Mr. Clean look like President Kennedy?

Did you know that Handy Andy, the little janitor type with four arms that competes with Mr. Clean for top honors as human soap, may very well not be a cartoon character dreamed up by someone at an ad agency? It has been hinted that he is really the son of a couple who got too close to the A-bomb tests in Nevada—the first peacetime atomic mutation. The government and the ad agency are understandably silent on the matter. Claude Eatherly, the commander of the lead plane in the group that dropped the A-bomb on Hiroshima, is now the co-author of a book called Burning Conscience. It is a collection of letters he exchanged with philosopher Gunther Anders, and it describes the anguish and guilt Major Eatherly felt at having murdered 200,000 people. It was this guilt that led him to turn down a hero's welcome when he returned home to Texas. It led him to try and commit suicide twice, forge a check and send the proceeds to a children's fund in Hiroshima, commit all sorts of senseless crimes, (recognized crimes, for which there could be no here's welcome), and finally to land in Veterans Administration hospital, where psychiatrists all tried to convince him that he had done nothing wrong in Japan!

Then there is Charles Sweeney, who piloted the plane that dropped the A-bomb on Nagasaki. His conscience bothered him so much that he became Director of Civil Defense for the Boston area. In that position he will, if there is ever a nuclear attack on Boston, help more people get killed, with the useless programs Civil Defense now has. If his conscience bothered him, he would be working to change these programs, not support them.

And of course there is Harry Truman, who, as President, authorized the dropping of the two bombs. On his seventy-fifth birthday he said that he felt no "pangs of conscience" whatever, about the bombs, and that his only big mistake was not marrying before his thirties!

I think we all owe a great debt to Alka-Seltzer for defining our current national philosophy. In one commercial a man is shown gorging himself on all sorts of Italian delicacies, and, as one might expect when one eats too much, he gets sick. Then comes Speedy Alka-Seltzer to the rescue, and we are told, at least by a strong implication, that it is all right to abandon moderation; when the inevitable reaction sets in you can call in a specialist, in this case Alka-Seltzer. What they neglect to say is that you had better pray that the specialist works.

THE U.S. WILL ALWAYS BE A-HEAD

It is a matter of record that some few years ago a certain business institute encountered difficulty in convincing students that English Composition was a course which belonged in a business curriculum. (Hard as it may be for you to credit such a report, Gentle Reader, I beg that you suspend your disbelief, however unwillingly.) To make a sweet story short, let it simply be announced that the institute's problem was solved by a specialist in semantics, who deftly plucked to the heart of the matter and changed the students' attitude by the clever expedient of changing the course name to "Communications Skills."

This academic adjustment to the realities of our society once seemed harmless enough, if not indeed amusing; but, as with many an apparently harmless beginning, things progressed from innocuous to worse. Therefore, let us begin again and diagnose what must be regarded as an infectious disease, studying its inception and incubation through until we gain a vision of the broader malaise which this particular sickness reflects.

Once upon a time, there was a young man named Prospective Tycoon. Upon graduation from high school, our impatient young hero was accepted as a candidate for vocational training by an institution of higher learning. He might have chosen one of a number of other institutions, but his community and its values had long since given him free choice all the earmarks of foreordination. With the blessings, then, of his spiritual parents, young PT set forth to seek his fortune (s).

But imagine his consternation when upon matriculation young PT was introduced to a fair young damsel of the curriculum, the blushing Miss English Composition! "A strange bedfellow for an enterprising youth," cried PT. "I must see that she is made an honest woman." (This was nobly spoken, according to his lights.) Never ones to block the path of a young man with drive, the institute's authorities bowed to PT's wishes and sent Miss E C to the famed verbal cosmetologist and window-dresser Semanticist the Great. The Great Hiss, as he was affectionately called (unrelated to Alger of the same surname, although a close relative of Horatio Alger, Jr.), succeeded in transforming our fair maiden so completely that it was necessary to change her very handle, as they say in the selling game. "No longer the product of a traditional lack of imagination," exulted the Great Hiss, "you shall henceforth be known as Communications Skills."

"Ah," exclaimed the authorities. "Once plain and unvarnished, the captivating creature now before us will surely stir the heart of the promising PT." And indeed promising he became; Made over in the image of Success, the Bitch Goddess, little E C now appeared so voluptuous that as CS she elicited from PT the most extravagant of promises.

Yea, PT promised her everything -- everything, that is, except her heart's desire. He promised her everything; but what he in fact gave her was an imitation rattlesnake suitcase as a wedding present. And so, with his prize now in his possession (young and ole, PT was always one to prize his possessions), the ambitious PT left behind the College Green and set out (Hell-bent, some will say) in pursuit of the Long Green.

"We are penniless now, my Dear," he said, "but if you will but lend me the aid and succor of my wedding gift to you, that I may use it as my sample case, I have no doubt that I shall soon have made my mark(s)." So saying, PT embarked on one long sales pitch which carried him from one spell-binding sale to another. Behind him he left a love without a suitcase, that very suitcase containing the marvelous cosmetics which the Great Hiss had been at such pains to teach her to apply to herself. After a day or two without makeup, the attractiveness of this business widow began to fade that the gentlemen of the neighborhood who had anticipated her husband's departure with such relish saw the error of their ways and returned in spirit as well as flesh to the embrace of those whom society indulgently considers their licit lives.

At length, PT returned, for the sample case he had carried was becoming threadbare (even trite phrases and clichés wear out, and the fashion was turning from "in terms of" and "wise" to "image." Indeed so time-worn had become his bag of verbal tricks that PT had resorted more and more frequently to the basic word "communications" itself, in a desperate effort to win friends and influence people -- to sell himself and thereby whatever product he might be vending at the moment).

Imagine PT's astonishment when, upon reaching all that he should ever know of home, he found three young whelps crawling and pulling on the floor of his valued existing-room (who calls that "living"?). In a gesture of exasperation, he began to push the little monsters aside, whereupon a sweet voice he could scarcely recognize murmured, "No, no, PT. They are the children of your loins."

Disgusting as they had looked to him but a moment before, the three little shavers now appeared to PT in a new light. "There's a sucker born every minute, boys," quoth PT from the depths of the unconscious of his race. "Don't just crawl there; be up and doing. Live off the fat-heads of the land." Grabbing up and emptying a wagon full of blocks, he gave his offspring one final piece of fatherly advice: "Here! Hitch this to a star!"

So saying, PT turned to greet his Communications Skills; but instead he viewed a reincarnation of the guileless English Composition, hopelessly unadorned, with just a trace of beauty yearning for appreciation and development, but with none of the expensive accoutrements that had once made PT the envy of all red-blooded competitors. Where was the painted woman with the cheek-stretching smile, the counterfeited good cheer, the come-hitcher, well-met glance, the honeyed voice? Whither had fled that very symbol of other-directed self-assurance from whom he had drawn his strength?

"Did you not pledge yourself to love me, for better or for worse?" pled the pale English Composition, sensing that things were now taking their turn for the worse.

"No," began PT, searching for words with which to communicate.

the very disreputable cell-like hole in the basement of a tenement-house, in a part of the town which was definitely on the other side of the tracks. There was a draughty chamber in an attic, where the cooing of the pigeons around the sooty chimney woke me up. There was a glass-roofed studio of a painter who had gone to Sicily and who needed a caretaker. There was the bucolic solitude of a summer-house in the vineyards and the untidy room in the house of a professor. But all these places had one thing in common: nobody controlled my coming or going. Only the professor did, but he was a very lonely old man constantly in need of a partner to play cards, or a comrade in arms against his gragon of a housekeeper. It was a hopeless battle, anyway.

Strange company I had sometimes, and we used to sit up all night, talking, arguing or listening. There was one friend who wrote long epics of ghoulish obscurity, and there was the girl who used to read her term-papers, and I really can't recall who was funnier in the serious if unsuccessful attempt to grasp a straw of reality. I also never shall be able to recall the outcome of the extensive argument between a law student and a biochemist into which they eventually drew the pharmacist and a student of psychology. They discussed the problem of divine providence, I remember that, and that the infuriated housekeeper threw me out on the following morning.

On that day when I arrived here, I also saw the parents, taking their sons and daughters to college, obviously worried about their future, so far from home. And I remembered how we arrived. Sure enough, we were not much older. But we arrived alone and stayed alone. For a month. Maybe more, maybe all the time because there was no compulsory company of the class of (7) or of a residence hall. Somehow one managed to find a room (see above) and settled down. The fact that most students in Liberal Arts were away from home showed in the beards that sprouted like Ulysses' during the time of his absence. Of course they were shaved off as soon as the girl from the neighbouring desk in the library was not a stranger any more. But what remained was the "artist" activity. There were the uninhibited soul, exuding poetry anytime in the interplay of the shadows in the lecture-hall which became intricate enough; there were, of course, also the collectors of empty bottles, obscenities and assorted pieces of female garb. And there was the very matter-of-fact looking girl whom I met on a walk. Perched on a park-bench she painted a terribly sweet and accurate aquarell of the green-house with its glittering panes.

And then, the tepid summer-evening, of course we had been cutting the evening-session of the seminar, when we sat on the bumpy embankment over the oily river and watched the black thunderhead creep up, now and then outlined by lightning. The first heavy drops sent us running for cover under the railroad-bridge and . . . But, maybe, all this doesn't belong here.

We would and could meet at all hours, in my place or somebody else's. In class, nobody thought of taking attendance. It was impossible anyway. The lecture-halls were crowded enough to give fits to any building-in-spector. For two semesters I followed the main lecture on "German Literature in the 20th Century" sitting on a windowsill, 7 feet over solid ground, which I shared with two more students - if I chose to go there at all. But in spite of all, there were the serious attempts. Scraps of reality were fused into images, sentence after sentence was linked together and the whole paper, or the story, or the poem were re-written again and again. In the end, maybe, we had five pages, or only five lines.

But all of us lived alone, independently. Not that we liked it all the time, especially when thoughts of responsibility crept up on us. We did our own cooking - oh the terrible dishes! - and entertained our friends whenever we wanted. How much was accomplished by these chats, that so often became fierce arguments. Thus new perspectives and ideas opened up and we would devour them. But if we didn't feel like it, we could shut ourselves off, and we didn't have to put up with the flood of transistor-swelled human babble. We didn't always like silence, but if we wanted it we found it in the refuge of our rooms, shabby as they often were. The belching and burping of the prehistorical heating plant, or the cooing of the pigeons did not disturb; it was as much a part of the surroundings as the gentle swell of the noise of the city. The places were free from intrusions and so had the kind of quiet we needed to do some work. This crossed my mind as I stood there on the Green, looking at the residence halls.

I had almost forgotten this first impression when, some weeks ago, a student came up to me and said:

"Sir, I couldn't study the assignment for today. You see, I'm living in Hall (and I forgot the name) and the fellow on the floor above is some kind of an athlete."

"So what?"

"Well, did you ever try to study, when every 45 seconds a pair of heavy dumbbells crashes on the concrete floor directly over your head?"

No, I didn't. I never had a roommate either, except . . . But that's another matter . . .

PROFESSORES

When I arrived here, after a storm-tossed bus-ride on the day of hurricane Danna, I felt that something was different. It was not the thin cluster of lights which was Main Street, or the strange trees, or the unfamiliar sounds of a foreign country. It was still quite vague when I walked up the hill, but when I walked across the Green and saw the residence-halls behind the blistered rust colored walls of a low-squatting building - then I suddenly knew, I saw the drab facades, heard the noise pouring from the windows and I knew. I have lived in many places during my studies. There was

Example Of Letters To The Editor

To the Editor, & The Wasson Infirmary:

After several of our friends and the close relative of one of the undersigned has come near to suffering serious bodily injury at your hands, we, although not professing vast knowledge of the medical field, do offer the following advice.

Firstly, it is useless to treat a dislocated shoulder with Ben-Gay for it would be somewhat slow in taking effect. Secondly, although Johnson & Johnson have high regard for their band-aids they are quite inadequate in the case of a jaw slashed open by rusty metal. Also, not all lung infections are bronchial colds for once in a rare while a student does contract pneumonia. Lastly, please do exercise some care in administering blood tests for it is quite uncomfortable (not to mention the difficulty in drawing blood) to have the needle pierce both sides of one's vein!

Kindly heed our unsolicited advice bearing in mind that not everyone who arrives at Wasson is trying to escape ROTC drill, or add to their collection of pink, green and white pills.

Desiring to see all our friends at graduation, we remain

Sincerely yours,

Dear Editor:

Democracy must prevail.

It is time that the question, concerning compulsory ROTC at UVM, be brought out from behind closed doors into the open, in the form of public discussion. Any discussion should be non-violent, include representatives of all interested parties, and exclude any mass demonstrations, spontaneous or otherwise. The great American freedoms of speech, press, and assembly should be observed. A peaceful, democratic organization dealing with the question should be given full co-operation by the administration and the military science department. Sincerely,

Raymond LeBlanc

Instead of using these, we are told to buy as much Alka-Seltzer as we can, since this nostrum is made for People. And who expounds on people-remedies and non-people-remedies for our edification? A preposterous talking pill, naturally.

Shaffer beer ought to team up with Alka-Seltzer as fuglemen of our modern philosophy. Shaffer, you will recall, is "the one beer to have when you're having more than one." In other words, you get stiffer better with Shaffer? The morning after, if you're a People, you can have all your woes cured by Speedy Alka-Seltzer.

Now that both companies have seemingly come out four-square against moderation (bad for the economy, I guess), this great patriotism should not go unrewarded. The Chemistry department at Vermont required undergraduate research as early as 1901. Though research participation is not presently required of all chemistry undergraduates, the opportunity to actively participate is available and is considered by the Department to be a most important part of the educational process for most students. Formal recognition of the role of undergraduate research in chemistry at Vermont has just been received in the form of a $7015 National Science Foundation grant which will permit a selected group of junior or senior chemistry majors to work on research during the summer months.

The swimming pool measures 72 feet by 42 feet, has both high and low diving boards, and an area for seating 250 spectators. As with hockey, the present plans call for informal competition initially, with formal diving and swimming competition soon after on an intercollegiate basis.

The facilities were named in honor of three outstanding graduates of the University of Vermont. The swimming pool was named for the late Frank D. Forbush; the field house for Albert L. Gutterson; and the gym for the late Roy L. Patrick.

Forbush was a member of the class of 1886. After graduation he maintained close association with the University, and was a member of the Alumni Council.

Gutterson, a 1912 graduate, is a resident of Springfield, Vt. He served on the Board of Trustees, and in 1960 was awarded an honorary Doctor of Science degree.

Patrick graduated with the Class of 1898, and later was a member of the University's Board of Trustees. In 1949 he received an honorary Doctor of Laws degree, in recognition of his leadership in the development of many Vermont enterprises, as well as his services to UVM, and to the community as a whole.

In naming the field house after Gutterson, UVM honors his record of achievement in track. In the Stockholm Olympics in 1912, he won a gold medal for placing first in the broad jump. His UVM broad jump record, which he still holds, has withstood all efforts to break it for half a century. If and when the mark is broken, it may very well take place, ironically enough, in the very field house named for him.

Construction of the new facilities began early in the summer of 1961, and proceeded steadily through last winter. Hundreds of motorists, driving in and out of Burlington on Williston Road, had their imaginations captured by watching the giant steel beams being emplaced, and this soon became a sort of minor spectator sport. First the steel arcs went up, and as the roof slowly built up towards the peak, where workers on the roof were barely visible from the street, sidewalk superintendents found a new refuge.

With completion scheduled for next fall, interest is shifting to the interior, where, next winter,

Plans and arrangements for this coming year's Freshmen Week have been completed. Student Association co-chairmen Nancy Davis and James Flashman said that the schedule has been drawn up, and that most committees had their work done by finals week.

The general organization of the week will follow that of Freshmen Weeks in previous years. Tuesday, September 11, will be set aside for men's and women's registration, parents orientation and reception meetings as well as a get acquainted meeting and opening convocation that evening in the Chapel. Harold Gilbar, Class of '64, and Nora Barclay, Class '63, are subcommittee co-chairmen for men's and women's registration respectively. Greetings committee co-chairmen are Geraldine Babson and Harvey Tauber, both '64.

The following day, Wednesday, September 12, will be devoted to late registration, placement tests, and meetings with the deans of the various colleges. There will also be a coffee hour for transfer students that afternoon in the Fleming Museum Lounge. That evening, two welcoming banquets will be held simultaneously in the Waterman and Simpson dining halls. Co-chairmen for the banquet committee are Rose Beagan, '63, and Douglass Barrett, '64.

Thursday, September 13, there will be a registration meeting during the morning followed by the men and women of the Class of '66 in the Ira Allen Chapel and Southwick Gym respectively. The afternoon will be taken up by meetings with faculty advisers and open houses at the religious centers on campus. In the evening, following the President's Reception from 7:30 to 8:30, the Freshmen Mixer will be held. Mixer co-chairmen Vivian Collins and Neil Fink made preparations for this affair.

Freshmen will be in for a rough day on Friday, September 14--class registration from 8:30 A.M. to 3:30 P.M. That evening there will be a coffee hour for married students and their families and a special S.A. movie for Freshmen.

The main event for Saturday, September 15, besides a WSGA meeting and a meeting with the Dean of Women in the morning, will be the Picnic and Pep Rally on the East Campus. Preparations for the Picnic and Pep Rally were made by the committee headed by Martha Gardner and Ronald Hosta, both '64.

CHARLIE CATAMOUNT SAYS:

the first UVM basketball team in several decades will be playing on a Vermont court.

NEW SPORTS AVAILABLE

This fall the opening of UVM's new gymnasium will make 27 new sports available to freshmen and sophomores.

There will be such new sports as archery, soccer, squash ball, skiing, skating, souba and skin diving, tennis, track and field, wrestling, and weight training.

While some of these sports have long been team sports, they are only now being made available to all men students as part of the regular physical education program.

The sports a student will elect will be partially determined by his score on the athletic ability, or Cozens, test. The test is made up of standing broad jumps, bar snap, parallel bar dips, and running an obstacle course.

The test measures primarily agility, strength, coordination and speed.

Students are not rated on a "pass" or "fail" basis, but receive grades from superior to inferior. All below average students are restricted to a choice of certain developmental sports, such as swimming. Those with ratings of Average or better will be allowed complete freedom in choosing their programs. Last year, over 50% of the students taking the test had scores below average.

Given a large enough staff, it will be possible, with the new facilities, to have nine sections going at the same time.

The staff will include three new members this fall: Dr. Leslie Leggett from Adrian College, Adrian, Mich., whose doctorate work in physical education was done at Springfield College, Springfield, Mass.; William S. Ruffer, who is completing his doctorate work at the U. of Michigan this year, and has been Director of Physical Education and Facilities at Northern Michigan College, Sault Sainte Marie, Mich.; and John Coons, who has been director of Physical Education and Athletics in East Longmeadow, Mass., and will act as assistant football coach, besides working in the regular physical education program. Harold Greig, also a new staff member, has been at UVM since last February. He is also a graduate of Springfield College, and is now completing his Master's degree work at Purdue University, Lafayette, Ind.; he was also Director of Physical Education and Athletics at Hartwick College, Oneonta, N.Y.

It is now possible to take physical education as a minor at UVM, and joint plans are being made by the men's and women's physical education departments for a program which will allow interested students to major in physical education.

What began as a fable for our times has been concluded on a somewhat hopeful note, albeit with dissonant chords in the background. There are those cynics who will argue that the fable is, after all, more fairy tale than parable; and in view of so nearly happy an ending, one must aver that mayhap they are right.

Tenderfoot Frosh Go Through Week Of Indoctrination Two UVM Freshmen Assaulted In City

by a Passive Observer

During the period from September 11 to September 16, over a thousand bright-eyed and smiling freshmen were indoctrinated in the traditions of UVM. At eight o'clock, Tuesday morning, those who were responsible for greeting, registering, and orienting the freshmen were gleefully sipping their Espresso and munching their Sugar Corn Pops. Committee reports were attended to, a few brief speeches were presented, and at precisely 9:30 A.M., all were at their stations.

Then, the freshmen arrived. The boys brought golf clubs, tennis rackets, and the clothes on their backs; the girls brought trunks, suitcases, satchels, hats, shoes, sweaters, etc. Each received a beautiful, shiny green beanie and a yellow ID card to match. Then, all were escorted to the cubicles which are to be their homes.

There was little time to rest, however, and all gloomily anticipated the Placement Tests on the following Wednesday. After the Opening Convocation, the freshmen retired confidently to their dorms.

Alas, the fateful dawn appeared. The dubious newcomers advanced to meet dubious tests

On Friday evening, September 14, two UVM freshmen were assaulted by four Burlington High School students; one was beaten, and a beanie stolen from the other. The incident occurred at approximately 7:30, at the corner of South Winooski Avenue and Main Street.

Lawrence Myott, the victim of the beating, told this reporter that the four scattered upon hearing a call for a cop. The call came from an unknown source. At this time, a police cruiser passed and according to Myott, "saw me standing on the corner with blood streaming down my face," but "he proceeded on his beat without stopping."

Myott and Gary Newman, the other freshman involved, proceeded to the Stop and Shop grocery on Main Street where first aid was administered to them. They were accompanied by two other Burlington High School students who identified the four accomplices.

At the police station, the two high school students were interrogated for an hour and a half. Myott and Newman were taken to the infirmary by two policemen in car #8. Larry Myott then walked to the Mary Fletcher Hospital where he was further treated.

At 11 P.M. that evening a personal interview was held with Dean Patzer who advised all freshmen not to wear their beanies downtown.

On Wednesday, September 19, stitches were removed from Myott's left eyebrow.

This reporter was also informed of at least two other university students who were beaten by males of high school age. Further details on these incidents were not available at the time of printing.

Still two other UVM students were reportedly knocked down and robbed, Thursday night, September 13. The two students failed to report the incident.

Gym Building Helps To Initiate New 1962-3 Athletics Program

With the new UVM gymnasium nearing completion final arrangements are now being made for the introduction of a new men's physical education and athletics program at the University.

The students who will find themselves most effected by the changes will be the freshmen. As usual, all freshmen and sophomores will take the Cozen's Test and will be placed in one of the five classifications of physical ability--inferior, below average, average, above average and superior. However, freshmen who are classified in the first two categories will have to choose their courses from a relatively limited list of activities which are to be "primarily development courses such as body building, weight training, wrestling, judo, beginning tumbling and some swimming.

Freshmen placing in the top three categories and all sophomores will be able to choose their courses from a lengthy list including archery, badmitten, basketball, boxing, conditioning and weight training, golf, gymnastics, handball, judo, squash, soccer, football, track and field, tennis, various swimming programs, volleyball and wrestling.

The Cozen's Test administered is the same one used since it was brought to the University in 1929 by Dr. Howard Prentice, then Director of Physical Education at UVM. It is considered a reliable test of physical ability and is accepted as such in the physical education profession.

Another phase of the program effected by the expansion of facilities is intramurals. Director of Intramurals, Norm Strassburg, hopes that the expanded program will attract wider participation, especially by the independents. Swimming and hockey are two new sports which will become part of the intramural program later this year. There will also be swimming and hockey teams, but only on an informal basis this year. Strassburg also has hopes of introducing intramurals for graduate students and faculty.

The expanded facilities and program have created a need for an expanded Physical Education and Athletics Department. Coming to UVM from Adrian College in Adrian, Mich., is the varsity football team's new end coach, Dr. Leslie Leggett. Dr. Leggett is a graduate of the U of Maine and received both his Master and Doctor of Physical Education from Springfield College in Springfield, Mass.

The coach of the new hockey team will be William Ruffer who comes to us from Michigan Tech. He received his baccalaureate from U of Conn. and his Masters from Columbia Teachers College. He will shortly receive his doctorate from the U of Mich.

Hal Grieg, a graduate of Springfield College has come to UVM from Hartwick College in Oneida N.C. Mr. Grieg has his master's degree from Purdue and will assist in coaching the UVM ski team.

Unfortunately, because of the late start this semester the new program will not be in full swing until next semester.

and even more dubious deans. But by 6:00, appetites had returned, and the Banquet was ravenously consumed.

Thursday night, however, was the crowning event of the week. Not only did the frosh have the chance to shake the President's hand, but, in addition, to view members of the opposite sex at the Freshman Mixer. They were in luck. The stalwart brigade, which guarded the door, held. It was not until 10:30 that all the girls were gone.

Friday morning the freshmen met with the greatest challenge of their careers--registration! Fortunately, all survived, and the casualties could be heard--loud, but hoarse--cheering at Saturday's Pep Rally.

Monday morning the fully oriented frosh trooped off to class. One English teacher happily chirped, "They all sat there like zombies." Well, maybe next year....

But it's not over yet! On Friday, September 21, the Klub Karnival and Varieties will be experienced. We should witness some interesting displays. By then, our sweet little innocent frosh will be so thoroughly oriented that it will take them 84 years to lose their fervor for UVM.

College Democrats' President, Carl Gerard Denies "Leftist Domination" Within NSA

Carl Gerard, President of the National Federation of College Young Democrats, deplored recent attempts by collegiate Young Republicans to smear the National Student Association as "leftist-dominated." "We realize the NSA does not speak for college Republicans," said Gerard, "but fortunately college Republicans in their idolization of Barry Goldwater do not speak for the vast majority of college students in America."

Gerard, a senior dental student at the University of Buffalo, issued his statement in response to a call by James Harff, Chairman of the Young Republicans College Committee, for College Young Democrats to "repudiate the leadership of the National Student Association." The NSA this week concludes its 15th annual Congress at Ohio State University in Columbus, Ohio.

"It is true that NSA has traditionally taken a liberal position with regard to civil liberties, desegregation, federal aid to education, colonialism, and other issues," said Gerard. "However, of the fourteen NSA resolutions affecting national policy passed at the last NSA Congress, thirteen of them endorse action taken or initiated by the Kennedy Administration." "The NSA also acted responsibly," continued Gerard, "in (1) deploring the lack of academic freedom in Cuba as a result of the existence of a dictatorial form of government; (2) condemning the Soviet-East German action in building the Berlin wall; and (3) urging that the United States refrain from resuming nuclear tests unless such testing is necessary for preservation of United States deterrent capabilities." "These are hardly the expressions of a 'leftist-dominated' organization," said Gerard.

Gerard pointed out that contrary to the "witch hunting" method of fighting communism so popular with the John Birch Society and other extremist groups in the U.S., the United States NSA has stressed attacking those conditions throughout the world upon which communism feeds -- hunger, poverty, ignorance, disease, and despair. "The outstanding work of NSA internationally has been one of the most influential factors in encouraging the young democratic leaders of the emerging nations to establish democracy and avoid totalitarianism," Gerard said, "and today many former NSA leaders are doing outstanding work in the Peace Corps and other responsible governmental positions."

"Rather than join the college Young Republicans in repudiating the largest and most representative student organization in America," Gerard concluded, "we call on the Young Republicans to respect the democratic tradition of allowing free speech and differences of opinion." "We further suggest that the real thing bothering the Young Republicans is not the liberal stands of NSA, but rather their growing awareness that their Goldwater Republican views are completely out of step with the times and are held by an increasingly smaller percentage of the American student community."

All-French Program Initiates Lane Series

A change in date will get the 1962-63 Lane Series season at the University of Vermont opened more than two weeks earlier than previously planned.

The French National Orchestra, originally scheduled for a Red concert on November 2, will now open the Red series on October 6.

The change was made, according to the Lane Committee, so that the 100-musician orchestra could come directly to Burlington following an appearance in Montreal. Originally the orchestra would have gone to New Haven from Montreal then come back for its November date in Burlington.

Charles Munch, former musical director of the Boston Symphony, remains as guest conductor for the October 6 appearance of an all-French program of Berlioz, Roussel, Milhaud and Debussy.

Jack Trevithick, executive secretary of the Lane Series, reports that early samplings of subscriptions to the series show interest to be almost equally divided between the two series. Usually one series outdraws the other.

In addition to the French Orchestra, the Red concerts include the New York City Opera Company in two one-act operas by Puccini (Oct. 22); Van Cliburn (Nov. 19); Olatunji and Company of African dancers, singers and drummers (Dec. 3); the San Francisco Ballet (March 19); "Carnival," musical comedy (April 1) and the George Shearing Quintet (April 25).

The Blue series opens on October 1 with the Broadway musical, "The Sound of Music." Other concerts are Joan Baez, folk singer (Nov. 13); Carlos Montoya, flamenco guitarist (Dec. 12); "The Turn of the Screw," an opera (Feb. 5); Helen Hayes and Maurice Evans in scenes from the plays of Shakespeare (Mar. 4); the San Francisco Ballet (Mar. 20); and the Hague Philharmonic Orchestra (April 17).

SMOKING PRIVILEGE FORFEITED

Because of excessive carelessness, University of Vermont students have forfeited their privilege to smoke in classrooms.

The rule was recently issued by the University Council whose decision was justifiably influenced by a report indicating that "damage to floors and furniture in classrooms and laboratories due to smoking habits has increased markedly."

According to the Council, the report of damages was further substantiated by "increasing criticism" of the classroom smoking privilege "by smokers as well as non-smokers."

Formerly, the privilege of smoking had been granted or denied students by each individual professor. But now, the non-smoking rule is universally applicable in classrooms and laboratories during class periods.

Reading Center Opens

Because of our desire to help you gain maximum benefit from your work at UVM, the Reading Center has been established. The primary purpose of this center is service to ALL students.

In addition to scheduled courses in developmental reading for those individuals who want to improve their reading, the Reading Center offers the following additional services:

*Diagnostic reading testing to determine your strengths and weaknesses in reading. This testing is done on both an individual and group basis.

*Supervision of "home-study" programs designed to meet individual needs in reading. Your program would emphasize your reading needs, i.e., speed, note-taking, preparing for examinations.

*Individual consultation for those interested in self-improvement.

The Reading Center also maintains a library of current professional books on the teaching of reading and has an up-to-date collection of reading textbooks ranging from kindergarten through the university level.

ANOTHER YEAR, ANOTHER DOLLAR

With today's entry I begin my ninth year of writing columns in your school newspaper for the makers of Marlboro Cigarettes.

Nine years, I believe you will agree, is a long time. In fact, it took only a little longer than nine years to dig the Suez Canal, and you know what a gigantic undertaking that was! To be sure, the work would have gone more rapidly had the shovel been invented at that time; but, as we all know, the shovel was not invented until 1946 by Walter R. Shovel of Cleveland, Ohio. Before Mr. Shovel's discovery in 1946, all digging was done with sugar tongs—a method unquestionably dainty but hardly what one would call rapid. There were, naturally, many efforts made to speed up digging before Mr. Shovel's breakthrough—notably an attempt in 1912 by the immortal Thomas Alva Edison to dig with the phonograph, but the only thing that happened was that he got his horn full of sand. This so depressed Mr. Edison that he fell into a fit of melancholy from which he did not emerge until two years later when his friend William Wordsworth, the eminent nature poet, cheered him up by imitating a duck for four and a half hours.

But I digress. For nine years, I say, I have been writing this column for the makers of Marlboro Cigarettes, and for nine years they have been paying me money. You are shocked. You think that anyone who has tasted Marlboro's unparalleled flavor, who has enjoyed Marlboro's filter, who has revelled in Marlboro's jolly red and white pack or box should be more than willing to write about Marlboro without a penny's compensation. You are wrong.

Compensation is the very foundation stone of the American Way of Life. Whether you love your work or hate it, our system absolutely requires that you be paid for it. For example, I have a friend named Rex Glebe, a veterinarian by profession, who simply adores to worm dogs. I mean you can call him up and say, "Hey, Rex, let's go bowl a few lines," or "Hey, Rex, let's go flatten some pennies on the railroad tracks," and he will always reply, "No, thanks. I better stay here in case somebody wants a dog wormed." I mean there is not one thing in the whole world you can name that Rex likes better than worming a dog. But even so, Rex always sends a bill for worming your dog because in his wisdom he knows that to do otherwise would be to rend, possibly irreparably, the fabric of democracy.

"I better stay in case somebody wants a dog wormed."

It's the same with me and Marlboro Cigarettes. I think Marlboro's flavor represents the pinnacle of the tobaccoist's art. I think Marlboro's filter represents the pinnacle of the filter-maker's art. I think Marlboro's pack and box represent the pinnacle of the packager's art. I think Marlboro is a pleasure and a treasure, and I fairly burst with pride that I have been chosen to speak for Marlboro on your campus. All the same, I want my money every week. And the makers of Marlboro understand this full well. They don't like it, but they understand it.

In the columns which follow this opening installment, I will turn the hot white light of truth on the pressing problems of campus life—the many and varied dilemmas which beset the undergraduate—burning questions like "Should Chaucer classrooms be converted to parking garages?" and "Should proctors be given a saliva test?" and "Should foreign exchange students be held for ransom?"

And in these columns, while grappling with the crises that vex campus America, I will make occasional brief mention of Marlboro Cigarettes. If I do not, the makers will not give me any money.

© 1962 Max Shulman

The makers of Marlboro will bring you this uncensored, free-style column 26 times throughout the school year. During this period it is not unlikely that Old Max will step on some toes—principally ours—but we think it's all in fun and we hope you will too.

A Modest Proposal

Sing a song, a rich refrain,
And let echo swell the strain
To our lake, our loved Champlain.
Lovely Lake Champlain.

CHORUS

Sing a song, a rich refrain,
And let echo swell the strain
Lovely Lake Champlain.

Mirrored mountain's craggy crest,
Waves before the storm-winds pressed
Cannot rob thy beauteous breast
Of its charm, Champlain.

E'en the sunset's golden glow,
Given back from Mansfield's brow,
Make thy face still fairer now,
Ever fair Champlain.

When we think of college days,
When we sing our college lays,
We will not forget thy praise,
Our loved Lake Champlain.

Words by C.W. Fisher, '84

Each year at the Freshman Banquet, a card is placed before each dinner setting. This is the "Menu and Program" card. At the bottom of the program page there is the notation: "Champlain" (sung by all). It is best that this song is printed, not just for the sake of the freshmen, but also for the benefit of the upperclassmen and faculty members. Champlain is supposedly the official UVM school song, and yet, rarely does an individual make an effort to memorize this song. Champlain is never sung at rallies, football games, or at convocations. The words are forgotten as soon as the freshmen leave the orientation banquet. It is as if the university was trying to ignore this, our school song. And with good reason. To use a rather repugnant term, the song is lousy, and is unfitting for our school. For one thing, it's about a lake: a lake which is one mile from the school. Besides, this is a university, not a lake. It is quite probable that the Burlington Chamber of Commerce would like nothing better than for our students to go marching around singing "Champlain" - the students would be walking, singing commercials for the Burlington area. For another thing, it just ain't (it's in the dictionary, remember) dignified to stand up at a football game, lock pinkies with the students on either side of you, and sing about a lake!

It would be a very easy matter to "analyze" the song, make fun of its strains and chorus, and just pass the entire matter off as a joke. Unfortunately, it is too important a matter to let it go at that. Champlain has outlived any useful purpose it may have served. It is time to break with long-standing tradition and change the words and the tune. It is about time UVM had an official school song to sing, and to be proud to call our own.

The Vermont CYNIC will take the names of all parties interested in instituting a change, and will arrange for a meeting of these individuals, so that a committee may be formed to either write a new song or initiate the writing of a new alma mater. Write or call the CYNIC, UN 4-4511, ext. 344.

Frat Presidents Vie IFC

IFC might just be on the way out. The fraternity presidents met a short time ago and agreed upon a set of rushing rules. This meeting was not held under the auspices of IFC, nor at the present time has IFC condoned the action of their constituents. Just what the rushing rules are, no one is quite sure of at the moment. If the fraternity presidents cannot get together with their own IFC representatives and agree upon something, it seems as if the IFC program needs revising. Or perhaps someone is playing fraternity politics again - a child's game.

Dateline: College

by Betty Bergman

From the Vidette of Illinois State Normal University, to the Chungang Herald of Chungang University of Seoul, Korea, flow the newspapers of the universities and colleges around the world, dispensing news of interest to the members of their respective campuses, and to fellow collegians, the world over. Some of the material is trivial, trite, some impending, some important. From wherever it comes, the Cynic takes you to these schools as we DATELINE: COLLEGES.

To start on a lighter note, the incoming freshmen might like to take a bout with the writer of an article that appeared in the May 5th edition of the State College News at State University College at Albany. The writer outlined a program that he thought would be effective for the wearing of the traditional beanie:

"1. The period for freshman beanie wearing should be extended, at least until the middle of the junior year.

2. Beanies should be worn at all times, awake or asleep, in the shower or out.

3. To implement the above, to start the rivalry period off in friendly, good spirits, and (very important) to economize, all freshmen should have their heads shaved by upperclassmen who would then paint beanies on, in the appropriate place."

The final note of friendly advice was: "Let each become all that he is capable of beanieing." The headline to this article was, "The question: To beanie, or not to beanie." Freshmen, beware, "Big Brother is watching you!"

On the other side of the beanie question, came this comment by the vice-president of a student organization at Texas State University, appearing in the July 20th issue of the Campus Chat: "There will be a lot of freshmen here next fall . . . and we would like to see them all wearing their beanies because it gives them pride in their class and it also makes the upperclassmen proud of them." Perhaps, this is the lighter side of the beanie story!

The one common denominator that all entering freshmen have at UVM is the fact that they will all be enrolled in English 1. Thus, it seems that a few tips would not be out of order. One journalist in the Campus Chat of June 22, had this "aesthetic" form of "poetry" to offer.

"If I were not a poet
(which I certainly am not)
I would probably try to conceal

the fact by writing like this . . .

. . . orperhapsthisway."

The writer comments, "This sort of cryptic form seems to be a way to get around the more laborious task of observing rhyme and meter schemes. If a poet can't discipline himself to produce well-made poetry, he can probably hide his lack of ability or laziness by resorting to unintelligible forms or by turning out poems so long nobody ever gets around to reading all of them . . . At other times . . . poets pile line on line and ramble on until they exhaust the reader and lose him. Conciseness calls for talent, but the poet who can't handle words must bury his deficiency under a verbal deluge!" . . . English teachers find this fault in freshmen themes and papers (and sometimes in later ones). The untrained writer has to ramble on for a page or so before he reaches the point he's aiming for.

"Sheer volume, rarely impresses anyone, nor does complex word and sentence arrangement. These verbal gymnastics put the work on the reader . . . The poet's job is to express, not impress."

A word to the wise is . . .
The handiest tool the English student learns about is the library. Brooklyn College was obviously concerned with the vandalism that was occurring in the library, with students destroying books and periodicals.

To solve the problem, the college installed a photocopier. According to the KEN of May 28, 1962, "It is hoped that the introduction of a new photocopier . . . will eliminate the shameful mutilation of books and periodicals. In the past, students have displayed a remarkable lack of maturity and restraint as they indiscriminately ripped pages from whatever volumes contained some desired information. The major reason for this, we may assume, is that some individuals are simply not willing to go to the trouble of copying material; the new photocopier will remove this 'burden,' and 25 cents will now purchase a neat, legible, easy to obtain reproduction . . ."

"An ounce of prevention . . ."

From the Vidette of Illinois State Normal University of July 11, 1962 comes this idea that might prove to be enterprising for some of UVM's fine artists . . . A display, combined with a sale of paintings and art pieces.

An editorial that appeared in the Campus Chat of North Texas State University dated, July 6, 1962 . . . "The Billie Sol Estes scandal exemplifies and magnifies a problem Americans face today - the decline of U.S. morals.

"Scandals in business, agriculture and government are given the greatest play, but personal immoralities are evident every day in newspaper stories. All these headlines raise the question of moral weakness in the average individual today.

"On the question of slipping moral standards, Dr. Liston Pope, professor of social ethics at Yale, says: 'I don't believe human nature has changed very much. But the conditions under

by Sue Chagnon

While most of you were working or relaxing in mid-August, Dick Paye and I left for Columbus, Ohio to attend the 15th National Student Congress at the Ohio State University. Little did we realize what a dynamic educational and political experience was in store for us. Soon after our arrival on campus, we were initiated into the endless routine of meetings that started at 9 A.M. and ended at 1:30 A.M. every day.

The meetings were broken down into plenary sessions, which involved all delegates, regional caucuses (our region, New England, is the largest), committees to vote on legislation before it is brought to the plenary floor, subcommittees to draft legislation, and seminars to examine fully certain problems relating to student government, the university, national affairs, and international affairs.

The first two days of the Congress were spent in seminars which featured speakers, discussion groups, student panels, and panels composed of administrators and faculty members. My seminar, entitled "The Role and Structure of Student Government," attempted mainly to define the student's place in the academic community. Questions such as "from whom does student government derive its power?" and "how autonomous should student governments be?" were discussed fully. The consensus reached was that student governments, by their very nature, could not be completely autonomous bodies, since the responsibility for their action ultimately rests with the administration which has to deal with diverse outside pressures. There was strong feeling however, that students should take a more active part in the total university community, because without them there would be no university. In the fields of curricular planning, faculty committees, calendar planning, and judicial authority, students should be given an opportunity to show responsibility and to contribute ideas on an equal basis with the faculty and administration. Most of the administrators present at the seminar were appalled at the demand of students to have equal opportunities in areas such as curricular planning, because of their "lack of 1. responsibility, 2. time, 3. intelligence, and 4. experience." They pointed out that the student is in college for a four years' educational experience, whereas the administrator or faculty member is better qualified to make the decisions, since making them is his life's career.

The most interesting speaker at our seminar was the Assistant to the Dean at Ohio State, who spoke on freshman orientation. He stressed the point that freshmen were the most amorphous, gullible group of people in the world and are the most easily influenced by their peers. Using this as a thesis, he suggested taking a more positive approach and initiating freshmen not into a social institution, but into an intellectual community. This end can be best achieved by the upperclassmen, not by the administration. A positive suggestion he made was the assignment of 2-5 books for summer reading, and then panel discussions during freshman week involving upperclassmen, freshmen, and faculty. This approach would encourage active participation by the freshmen and initiate intellectual discussion among them.

After our two days of seminars, we broke up into committees and then into sub-committees in order to write legislation. My sub-committee was entitled in Loco Parentis, which, translated literally, means "in place of the parents." This is a broad area covering every phase of paternalism in universities, whether administered by the deans, faculty, or student governments. Because of the breadth of the topic, we split again into sub-subcommittees to stimulate more worthwhile discussion and obtain concrete results.

These two days were probably the most difficult of the Congress. Much time was spent in discussing our topic, "The Role of the Administrator," but getting a worthwhile resolution on paper was a task because of the wide diversity of opinion on this matter. At 2 A.M. we finally finished drafting our piece of legislation which urged administrators to set policy which furthered the free association of ideas, and condemned those administrators who were swayed by pressures outside the university community. The resolution was given relatively low priority and hence never reached the plenary floor, but it will be acted upon by the Post-Congress National Executive Committee (NEC).

The next day all the subcommittees on In Loco Parentis met and we debated, amended, and voted on the dozens of resolutions drafted the day before. Some were substantial, but many were inane attempts to clarify "student rights" in the academic community. Somehow, the Congress delegates seem to forget that a student willingly gives up certain rights when he enters into a contract with the university. A good example of this is a bill entitled "Search and Seizure" which would require the university to obtain a search warrant before entering a student's room. As ridiculous as this sounds, the bill is now before the Post-Congress NEC which will determine its ultimate fate.

The two days after final subcommittee legislation was drafted, the larger committee again hashed over the many items before it and prioritized those items which were passed. About half the bills were dropped at this time and the remaining resolutions were improved by amendments before being introduced on the plenary floor. The title of our committee was "Aims of Education," and the resolutions covered the spectrum from "Education and the Cold War" to "Smoking in College." As in sub-committee, some expressed excellent ideas, but most were a little ridiculous.

When each committee finished prioritizing its legislation, the NEC spent all night working out a priority list for the legislative plenaries, which started the next morning. A resolution has to be extremely important to finally be placed in the top ten on the list, because literally hundreds of bills are acted upon by committees.

The remaining days of the Congress were spent in legislative plenary sessions, which involved every delegate. These sessions were probably the most educational part of the Congress. The liberal and conservative factions organized to support or fight resolutions, and the room turned into a political battle ground. Working papers presenting both sides of the issues were distributed, and amazing well-informed delegates debated the issues on the plenary floor. Organized political machines were set into motion to try to influence voters to sympathize with their side of the issue.

THINKING OUT LOUD

by Kim Boriskin

SOME OBSERVATIONS AND PREDICTIONS FOR THE COMING YEAR

Every now and then things happen on the UVM campus; someone gets aroused about something, someone holds a demonstration or protest meeting about something else, etc. Just what some of these things will be is the subject of this column. The order is random, not chronological.

Kake Walk will be held in the new gym, which will finally have been completed by early January. A record crowd will be expected, but only 136 will show up. The ceremonies will be back to Memorial Auditorium next year, and it will again be packed. UVM's little symbol will have a new legend put on it. "Studis Et Rebus Honestis" will be changed to something more fitting of the atmosphere of UVM: "So What?"

This being an election year, various politicians will come to UVM, or just to Burlington, to speak. As usual, everyone will intend to go, but attendance will be very poor, also as usual. Then there will be a vote taken to see who are the most favored at UVM. Several mavericks will suggest voting for Alfred E. Neuman, since all the regular candidates offer nothing. Alfred E. Neuman will win over William Jennings Bryan by a narrow margin. The office contested won't matter; the results will all be the same.

Someone is going to get annoyed about compulsory ROTC again, and start a campaign. I will offer my help in any way possible - even though I no longer take ROTC - just as I have in the past. Somewhere along the line the whole thing will bog down, just as it has in the past, and compulsory ROTC will be strengthened by one more failure to beat it.

There will be more drinking on campus than ever before, and the University will officially deny that it goes on. Earle Clifford, former Dean of Men at UVM, will try and export some of his secret police and undercover agents back to UVM from Syracuse. Fortunately for UVM, which doesn't need his help, his effort will fail.

Instructors will finally manage to get together and avoid having four different hour exams in one week. They will arrange for five on the same day. The students will naturally protest, and the situation will be eased. The five hour exams will be split into two days of exams.

All the right-thinkers who read the CYNIC will be constantly taking exception to what I write, and denouncing me as a fool, a Red, and other such things, mostly ridiculous. The rare few who agree with me will discreetly hold their peace.

Plans for finally tearing down the rest of East Hole--pardon me, East Hall--will be scrapped. East Hall will finally go in 1983.

The Billings Student Center will somehow make the current deadline, and will actually be opened in mid-November, something like on schedule. It will therefore make Vermont history.

Pomeroy Hall will finally collapse, or burn down. Fortunately, nobody will be in it at the time.

UVM will be caught up in another cigarette package collecting contest. The prize this time will not be a hi-fi or a car, but an iron lung and free medical care for two years, plus funeral expenses soon thereafter, since the winner will undoubtedly contract an acute case of lung and throat cancer.

A glorious year of ROTC will be capped off by the Military Review. It will be highlighted by the performance of the graduating heroes, who will give every command on the wrong foot, and who will then try to cover up their mistakes by giving different commands, all the wrong ones. Films will be made of the proceedings and used as training films for future ROTC classes. All the reviewing brass will resign and join the Navy.

All-in-all it will be a worthwhile year at UVM.

IT'S ALL IN THE NAME

by Joel Posner

"It's All in the Name"

It is a firmly entrenched tradition, . . . and a good one and true . . . that CYNIC columnists begin the year with an explanation of their "purpose" in writing for the CYNIC.

Never one to buck tradition, I would like to do this by explaining the significance of the name of my column: OVER LIGHTLY. The name, you see, was not shosen without some thought. The words come, in fact, from the immortal Abraham Lincoln himself.

Though there is some confusion on the subject, most experts seem to agree that Lincoln made this never-to-be-forgotten enunciation during the third year of his first term as president. As the story has it, the statement came as Lincoln watched with anguish the unfolding Battle of Chancellorsville.

Lincoln had been through much at the time of the battle. He had worried through two-and-a-half years of heart-breaking war; he had watched as the well trained Army of the Potomac was allowed to lie fallow under prissy and over-cautious generals. And then, in an attempt to get the Northern Armies moving, he had appointed the swaggering and pompous little General "Fighting Joe" Hooker to head the Northern forces.

But, "Fighting Joe" had proved, also, to be a disappointment and, at the time of our story, he was embroiled in the fiasco at Chancellorsville.

As our tale begins, "Old Abe" had spent a sleepless night, walking the floor over battle reports from the scene of combat. The reports had not been good.

It was early, now, and the first light of dawn was shimmering through the east windows of the White House. No one stirred in the presidential household save for the president himself and his faithful cook, known simply as "Old Jim." Abe had brought "Old Jim" with him from Illinois, and the two were devoted to one another.

Jim had spent many a night watching as Lincoln worried away the darkness over some presidential decision. But this time, Jim realized, it was somehow different. This time, Abe was drained, worked out, almost despondent.

The faithful servant tried, in the only way he knew, to relieve the burden on his friend. He looked up at Lincoln, who was standing worried in a corner; he smiled shyly and said, "Mista Lincon, I just found me a batch of the biggest, freshest eggs you eva' did see. How's about me makin' us some breakfas'?"

Abe, not one to disappoint a friend, said, "You know, Jim, I do believe I'd like that real well."

"And how would you like them eggs, Mista Lincoln?"

The president looked at Jim for a long minute. Then, a faint smile broke through his lined features and, with the home-spun humor that has made Abraham Lincoln one of the most beloved figures in American History, he said, "Over lightly, Jim, just over lightly."

This then is the purpose of this column: To turn issues, both current and eternal, OVER LIGHTLY with the hope of causing some thought, of provoking some comment, and of drawing some controversy from those of you who will do me the honor of being my readers.

Some of the most controversial resolutions this year were:

1) Federal aid to Education - NSA supported heartily the bill in Congress which would provide $1000 scholarships for higher education.

2) The McCarran Act - NSA warned the US Congress to examine the act carefully and amend it or repeal it if necessary. The McCarran Act is a complex piece of legislation which requires Communist organizations to register with the US Government. NSA seems to think this prohibits freedom of association. 3) The Cunningham Amendment - NSA loudly called for the repeal of this amendment which prohibits Communist mail from Russia from being distributed in the US as first, second, or third class mail. (It can still be sent parcel post.)

Museum Rents Pictures

Fleming Museum announces that pictures will be rented for the 1962-63 school year on Monday, October 1 in the Wilbur Room of the Museum, beginning at 9 A.M. Many new pictures have been added to the student rental collection. The cost is one dollar for the year, of seventy-five cents if the student is a member. Memberships may be purchased at time of rental. These are one dollar for the school year and entitles the student to admission to a program of eight films held at the museum, beginning with "Four Hundred Blows," on October 3, as well as invitations to all lectures and previews of shows throughout the year. New students may be interested to know that there is a hi-fi in the Museum lounge that plays records held in the secretary's office. Museum hours are 9 A.M. to 4:30 P.M. Monday through Friday, 2 to 5 P.M. on Sunday. It is closed Saturday.

New Student Officers Guide UVM Lane Series

A new slate of student officers and a new faculty representative will guide the George Bishop Lane Artists Series of the University of Vermont this coming year. Marion Force, a UVM junior from West Caldwell, N.J., has been elected chairman of the student-faculty committee which operates the Lane Series, one of the major collegiate artists series in the country. Prof. Frank Lidral, chairman of UVM's department of music, has been newly appointed to the Lane committee for a four year term, succeeding Prof. Ippocrates Pappoytsakis, also of the department of music, who has served on the Lane Committee since its formation seven years ago. Other student officers elected include Susan L. Tinsley of Burlington, secretary; Brenda M. French, Hyde Park, production manager; Barbara Dutton, Roseland, N.J., publicity director;

Lucy Blau, Woodmere, N.Y., house manager; and Barry Freeman, Forest Hills, N.Y., treasurer. Elected as assistants were Frederick P. LaBelle, Burlington, production; Jane Wenzel, Glen Rock, N.J., house; Sandra L. White, Orleans, publicity; Barry Messinger, New York City, assistant secretary; and Samuel S. Plotkin, Long Beach, N.Y., assistant treasurer. The Lane Series was established in 1955, as a result of a gift of more than $300,000 from the late Mrs. Nellie S. Lane of Minneapolis, Minn., in honor of her husband, George Bishop Lane, a Vermont graduate of 1883. The Lane Series proved so popular in its three first years that a double series was inaugurated in the 1958-59 academic year. A Summer Lane Series was begun in 1956, and the Lane Chamber Arts Series was initiated in 1961.

The Major series has presented more than 60 concerts since 1955, including such attractions as the Royal Ballet, the London Philharmonic, Vienna Philharmonic, Philadelphia Orchestra, New York City Opera Company, Rudolph Serkin, the Robert Shaw Chorale, and many others. Executive secretary of the Lane Series is Prof. Jack Trevithick of the department of English. Other UVM staff serving on the committee, in addition to Prof. Lidral, include Prof. Edward J. Feidner, department of speech; Gordon Paterson, assistant treasurer; and L.E. Van Benthuysen, director of public relations.

Ippocrates Pappoutsakis, professor of music at UVM, will be the lecturer.

The course will go from the classical period of Haydn and Mozart through the era of the great romanticists, to the present day. The emphasis will be on orchestral music. The Lectures will be illustrated with selected works of Haydn, Mozart, Beethoven, Schubert, Mendelssohn, Schumann, Liszt, Brahms, Tchaikovsky, Dvorak, Grieg, Debussy, Ravel, Sibelius, Schoenberg, Stravinsky, Thomson and others.

The textbook for the course is An Introduction to Music, second edition, by Martin Bernstein.

Prof. Pappoutsakis was born in Cairo, Egypt of Greek parentage. He received his musical education at Harvard University and the New England Conservatory of Music. At UVM, he teaches theory and ear-training, conducting, orchestration, and music appreciation. He is the director of the University Orchestra, and founder and director of the University's summer music session for high school students.

NSA Conference

4) Nuclear Testing - In an all night session, after 6 hours debate, NSA condemned the US as well as Russia and France for the resumption of nuclear testing.

You may be wondering what these issues have to do with student governments. One of the main functions of NSA is in acting as a pressure group in the US Congress, and hence national and international issues are debated at great length at the summer Congress. This growing away from the campus has evoked much criticism of NSA, which is supposed to represent "students in their role as students." The Association justifies itself by saying that students should be concerned with the total community, not only with their university. NSA hopes to stimulate more national and international awareness on campus by concerning itself with such issues.

Sandwiched in between the committees, sub-committees, and plenaries are regional caucuses, whose function is to discuss regional problems. During these sessions, we heard many student speakers on civil rights programs, student tutor societies, peace movements, and a report on the World Youth Festival held at Helsinki, Finland from delegates who had attended. The regional meetings also provided an opportunity for candidates for national offices to give campaign speeches. The fall New England regional conference has been tentatively scheduled for a weekend in October at the University of Rhode Island. The main topics to be discussed will be "The Aims of Education" and "Civil Rights Movements in the North."

Besides the planned meetings, the individual contact with students from over 400 schools was invaluable. Two concrete suggestions impressed me as necessary programs for this year: one is a central bulletin board for used books, operated as a student government service. Instead of hunting around the dorms and in Waterman, students would have a central place to look for book bargains. The second idea is a daily news roundup to be placed on the tables in both cafeterias. This would make students more aware of national and international events, and might stimulate discussion on important issues. The news service would be provided by Senate, independent of the CYNIC.

NSA on the campus level must be improved, and the only solution is in getting a responsible, competent coordinator. My suggestion is to hold a campus wide election for the position, which should arouse more interest than an appointment. NSA can do much for its member schools; it's its travel bureau which provides discounts for trips, in its pamphlets and research papers on every phase of student government, in its Student Government Information Service (SGIS) which provides free access to information on campus, national, and international events, in its newspaper, which links both member and non-member schools, and in its attempt to make students aware of the world around them. NSA can be the most effective organization on campus if given a chance, and its qualities must be explored by a competent coordinator.

which it operates have changed immensely. For Americans, at least, these changes have come so recently that we've not quite caught up with ourselves."

"A relationship between wrongdoing and the opportunity for wrongdoing was noted by Yale psychologists some years ago, after they investigated student cheating on examinations. Findings showed that students would cheat in a classroom when they got the chance, yet the same students would not cheat in another classroom where cheating was impossible."

"On many other campuses today, increasing competition for college degrees and pressure placed on the student by his parents to excel, may tempt the student to cheat. He grasps at any method of making the good grades he needs to stay in school. "Some evidence exists, however, that a new awareness of moral issues is appearing. Dr. Pope feels that this generation is beginning to think of problems in terms of right and wrong, rather than following the crowd."

"Response of the young people to the Peace Corps, international relations and national problems, such as the racial conflicts, indicates a more realistic outlook on existing problems, and a deeper look to find the right answer."

"Throughout its history, America has assumed a role of unique leadership in the world and much of this leadership has been marked by moral strength. Every American must bear the responsibility that this role demands. Perhaps the greatest burden lies with the students, the leaders and educators of tomorrow."

If you have ever wondered what type of articles are printed in school newspapers of foreign countries, where the students are reportedly more active and interested in the political happenings of their country, this reporter finds very little that was indicative of this "spirit", as opposed to our own American college journals. However the following article may prove to be of interest. It appeared in the April 10th issue of the Chungang Herald of Chungang University of Seoul, Korea.

"April Student Uprising led the way to the downfall of the Rhee Administration in 1960. Six Changuangians were killed on that day. At a special ceremony the 6 young martyrs will be honored with the National Foundation Medals for their sacrifices.

"The ceremonies for the late six will include a music concert accompanied by the Korean Marine Corps' Band, drama performance, art exhibition, lectures and other colorful events. Bereaved families of the six martyrs and distinguished guests are invited to rituals."

In an extensive column that was devoted to the pros and cons of the now-defunct medicare program of the Kennedy administration, in the Vidette issue of July 18th, the conclusion was one that many congressmen might have secretly said themselves. "I turn to the big three of the medical profession for a solution: Dr. Kildare, Ben Casey and Doc Adams. How speak ye, Gentlemen?"

According to the KEN of May 28th, the chapter of the NAACP of Brooklyn College, last spring conducted a unique drive. "The BC, NAACP and ecutive council collected over 30,000 volumes in a book drive for southern Negro students. The books, donated by the library, . . . bookstores, college departments, and students, are going to the Student Non-Violent Coordinating Committee headquarters in Atlanta, Georgia."

"From Atlanta, they will be distributed to areas throughout the South. Many of them are headed for Malcolm, Georgia. They will be used by the college students to teach high school and elementary school students who have been expelled from schools."

If you think that you had a problem reading material from other school publications, try your hand at this "Printer's Puzzle", from the State Signal of Trenton State College, of May 18th . . . it's designed to stump any proofreader. The problem is to put the punctuation in this series of words:

That that is is that that is not is not is not that it it is. For those of you who have no patience, here's the answer: That that is, is; that that is not, is not. Is not that it? It is. Watch for the next issue of the Cynic, where we will once again take you with us, as we DATE-LINE: COLLEGES!

Yankcon Crown First In UVM History

Capt. Levi Brown chats with UVM mentor Ralph Lapointe after signing with the Milwaukee Braves. Brown batted .351 and pounded out 32 RBI's for Lapointe's 1962 Yankcon champs, the first in UVM history. This summer Levi played for Eau Claire, Wis., in the Class "C" Northern League.

Last spring brought mountain greenery to Vermont along with the baseball season and the Yankee Conference Championship to Coach Ralph Lapointe's team for the first time in the University's history. Representing District I in the NCAA baseball tournament Vermont placed second in the eastern regional playoffs.

Lapointe Has Winning Team

The man most responsible for the Yankcon crown was Coach Lapointe. He molded a good squad into a great team. His key players were pitchers Dick Cassani and Dick Denicola, catcher Maynard Ducatte, and slugging outfielder Levi Brown. All of the above players were named to the All-Conference first team.

Dick Denicola was the pleasant surprise for Lapointe. Denicola was basically a slowball pitcher with a good curveball. He relied on his control and rarely walked a batter. He won 10 games while only losing one. Cassani relied on his fastball and ended the season with a 9-0 record.

Brown was the big man at bat as he batted .351 and batted in 32 runs. Brown spent the summer with a farm team of the Milwaukee Braves. Ducatte was a real leader out on the diamond. He batted a respectable .310 and stole 19 bases. He had 32 hits which tied him with Brown for the team lead.

Other Catamounts that played an integral part in the Cats successful season include Joe Pare (.295), Bob Sherriff (.297 and 19 RBIs), Dick Boutillier (.264) and Doug Carmolli (.268).

SPORT NOTICES

Majorettes

Try-outs for the UVM majorette Squad will be held at Southwick Gymnasium; Tuesday, September 25th at 7:30 p.m. Regular and alternate members of the 1962-63 squad will be chosen by the present squad, the band director and drum major. Judging is based on twirling ability, strutting, poise and appearance.

All interested freshmen and upperclassmen are invited to come and present their own short routine. Bermuda shorts are appropriate dress.

Intramural Football

Entry blanks are now available for any unit interested in participating in the intramural football league and can be obtained in the Physical Education Office in East Hall from Norm Strassburg. Entry blanks must be in by 5 P.M. Wednesday, Sept. 26, because the league will begin play on Tuesday, October 2.

Anyone interested in officiating for the intramural football league should contact Norm Strassburg immediately. Officials will be paid.

There will be a meeting of the managers of all units participating in the intramural football league on Monday, October 1. The room will be announced later.

Baseball

There will be a meeting of all battery men next Monday afternoon with Coach Lapointe at 3:30 p.m. at Centennial Field. All varsity, last year's freshmen and all new freshman candidates are requested to attend.

Golf Team

UVM will enter a four man team in the ECAC golf championships this fall. Plans call for a qualifying round at Dartmouth, October 13.

The teams and the ten low players will qualify for the championship round to be played at Bethpage, Farmingdale, Long Island, New York, October 20. Golf tryouts will be arranged for interested upperclassmen. If interested, contact Mr. Donnelly at the Athletic Office for a play-off schedule.

X-Country

All freshmen interested in trying out for this year's cross country team should report to the equipment room in the old gym until 3:00 p.m. Monday, Tuesday, or Wednesday.

Meet Coach Post each day at 4:15 p.m. on the lawn in front of Morrill Hall. Managers are also needed. Any ambitious freshman interested in this position should contact the Athletic Department in East Hall.

Window Displays

In an effort to help student organizations promote their activities, the University Store is making available one of the store windows for displays. The window immediately to the right of the main store entrance has been so designated.

It is felt that this window, because of its smaller size, may lend itself more readily to organization displays. However, should a suitable display necessitate the use of one of the larger windows, this can be arranged.

A few simple guides follow which will assist all concerned with these displays:

1. Displays shall be for a period not to exceed one week.
 2. The window space shall be reserved with the manager on a strict first come, first serve basis.
 3. Windows will be put in on the Monday afternoon of the display week and removed on the following Monday morning.
- It is hoped that these displays will add interest in student activities.

CATAMOUNT CLIPPINGS

By RAY BELLO

For all those freshmen who do not know what a Catamount is, it's a cat of the mountains or a Burlington beatnik....UVM will have one of the best dressed football teams on and off the gridiron in New England. Their spanking new uniforms will look sharp from the Catamount decals on the sides of their new helmets to their new football shoes with white trim and white laces. The new green and gold short-sleeve jerseys carry each player's number on both sleeves. To add the final professional touch each uniform will sport green knee-high stockings. Off the field the team will wear their new green blazers whenever they appear in public as a team or travel.... There is a lot of green in Vermont, but the UVM football team will have 15 returning "non-green" lettermen to add to their twenty or so green newcomers.

During the pre-season conditioning program, the squad was required to awaken at seven to do their early morning running which consisted of two warm-up laps around the field behind the old gym, and a series of sprints. The total yardage covered each morning exceeded 1500 yards and played an integral part in the conditioning program. Each morning line Coach Coons, who was stationed at the 50 yard marker, would ask the team what it likes to do in the morning. Each morning except the last, the team shouted out a sleepy "run!" When asked what they like to do in the morning on the last day, the long gray line of football players clad in gray shorts and T-shirts let out with a loud uninhibited "SLEEP!"

After the Colby scrimmage, the coaches reviewed the films and issued a critique on the scrimmage to each player. Comments on each man were offered so he could improve his weak points.....Down at Centennial field there stands an apparatus known as the iso-bars which is used by the Catamounts to strengthen themselves in the most modern fashion known to athletics. During one of the practices the bars were left unattended and a tribe of children took over. As they romped on the bars the importance of this new training device seemed lost and the bars became good old monkey-bars with kids hanging from all sides.....It costs the University over a dollar a day to tape co-captain Paul Harris's injured knee, but trainer Bob Grant spares no expense in caring for athletic injuries. Mr. Grant is a dedicated man who helps build an air of confidence in the team. They know if they receive the slightest sprain or wound, Bob will always be there to take care of it.....

R.B.B.

New Coaches Confident

There is a new look to this year's football team and it's a welcome one. The new coaching staff, headed by Coach Robert Clifford, has initiated many new innovations to Vermont football. The Catamounts have new uniforms, a new system and an air of confidence that will help them win many games this season.

The Clifford influence goes deeper than the brand new half-sleeve jerseys or the newly-styled helmets that boast two Catamounts on either side. It goes to the heart of each member of the team. Coach Clifford fosters a spirit of confidence and instills in each player a sense of pride.

His able assistants are well qualified and will help him mold the Cats into a winning team. Line Coach John Coons is a spirited coach who has worked with Coach Clifford before, at Colby College. Upon Clifford's request, Coach Coons left his head football coach and athletic director position at East Longmeadow, (Mass.) High. Clifford regards him as "one of the finest line coaches in the New England area."

End coach Les Leggett was also a head football coach before coming to UVM. Coach Leggett has his doctorate degree in physical education and has handled the ends very skillfully this season.

The youngest member of the staff is backfield coach, defensive specialist, Cy Theobald. Theobald graduated from Colby this past spring. He was regarded by Clifford as "one of the finest defensive backs Colby ever had."

The offensive attack will use a T formation with variations. The key to the success of the drive series is a good faking backfield.

Clifford's formula for winning football is a simple one, four to two. He'll let the opponent score two touchdowns as long as his boys have scored four TDs. His brand of football will be exciting to watch and hard to beat.

Switching training sites from Petersborough, New Hampshire, to the UVM campus, the 1962 football Catamounts have been preparing themselves for their tough Yankee Conference schedule ahead this fall. Coach Clifford's forces will play all New England state schools except the University of Connecticut, which makes them eligible to take home the "beanpot."

The team was introduced to the new "drive" series last spring and has adjusted to it very well thus far this fall. In a pre-season scrimmage with Colby College, Coach Clifford's previous school where he was head coach for six years, the Cats showed a world of potential. Clifford was extremely pleased with the team's performance.

Thus far this season, tentative starters have been named by Coach Clifford. He has put this team in gold scrimmage shirts and they are known as the "golden team". The gold backfield boasts two of the Green Mountain State's fastest and finest home grown products, Dean Dent and Ken Burton. Ken, "the Rutland flash", is the smaller of the pair but is just as big a threat to break away as the heavier Burton, whose home is in New Haven. Both boys will supply many thrills for the Catamount fans and many TDs for the team.

The quarterback spot is being held by co-captain Paul (Reb) Harris. Harris is being plagued by a leg injury that is hampering his running game, but hasn't affected his passing. He has been throwing good hard passes thus far in the pre-season training period.

John (Chris) Greer and sophomore Jim Brennan are both able signal callers and can handle the team with great skill. Greer has a year's experience over Brennan but Brennan has displayed a good arm and fine running ability. Look for both boys to aid Harris at the quarterback spot.

The fullback, perhaps the most important man in the new "drive" series offense, is small but powerful Frank Amato. Amato was the team's leading ground gainer as a sophomore and seems to be back in stride after a fair year last year. In the Colby scrimmage, Amato was the most consistent runner. He ran well and blocked and faked equally well.

Other backs who will help the Cats this year include big Richie Reynolds, who runs hard and fakes well, speed merchant Al Brown, defensive halfbacks Pete Weiss and Frank Foerster, and Wayne VanHam. Newcomers Joe Andreas, John Wittmaack, and Carl Ettlinger add depth to the backfield.

The line has many lettermen returning to fill starting berths. They are backed up by newcomers from last year's undefeated freshman team. Co-captain Dave Sequist has been moved to right tackle to fill the spot left by last year's starter John Fyfe for the only major change on the team.

The ends include last year's starters Frank Bolden and Paul Toussaint, along with Bill Burke, Doug Barrett, and Mike Rosenbaum. Newcomers Paul Grardi, Jim Meredith, and Larry Rice supply the reserve strength at the end position.

The left tackle spot is held by letterman Merrill Thoresen. With Sequist at the other tackle, Vermont has a solid foundation of big men to build on. Ted Jzyk, Tom Mongeon, Ed Fugit, Den Black, and converted end Fred Boese bolster the tackle position.

Jeff Harvey and Bill Davidson look like likely candidates to get the nod at the guard spots. Harvey is a senior and a letterman. He is backed up by two newcomers, George Oelze from the freshman team and Ray Bello a transfer student who was ineligible last year. The left guard slot is a close battle between hustling Bill Davidson and Ron Hertel. Duane Barber, a carry over from last year, should see a lot of action.

Center is being held by Gerard McGee, but another hustling Davidson, this one is Bob, Bill's brother, is giving McGee a battle for the starting spot. The team kicker is center Dave Baker who is the team's biggest man at 243 pounds and surprisingly the team's fastest lineman.

New Student Director Holds Dual Role

Billings Student Center
Chaired By Emil Spees

Mr. Emil Spees will act as both Director of Student Activities and Director of the soon to be completed Billings Center. The duties of the Director are enumerated in the green pages of the present UVM Date Book and read as follows: "He, (Mr. Spees), as Director of Billings Center, works with the Policy and Programming Boards. He assists the members, officers, and advisors of student organizations in initiating, carrying out, and evaluating their programs in terms of personal, group, and University goals. All extra-curricular activities other than athletic events are arranged with the Director of Student Activities."

Mr. Spees is a graduate of Southern Illinois University. He received his BA in history and his MA in college student personnel. For the past three years he has worked in the Student Personnel Department of Washington and Jefferson University. Upon being asked how he felt about the Student Center Mr. Spees commented, "I am quite pleased with the building. A great deal of forethought has been made to provide UVM with a facility designed to meet its needs. The University didn't have to build a center as a duplicate to another college's student center. It merely used facilities available and achieved something which should prove adequate. It will serve as a town meeting hall besides serving campus needs."

A temporary governing board for the Billings Student Center will have its first meeting September 27. The role of this board is to plan and help the needs of the campus. Now that the building is almost finished they will evaluate what type of board is needed to serve all the groups and individuals on campus. This committee consists of two faculty members; Dr. Betty Boller (Education) and Dr. Donald Moser (Mathematics). Deans Harris and Patzer, Paul Chervin (President of SA), Laurie Cone (President of IFC), Phyllis Levine (President of WSGA), Marie Guyer (President of Pan Hel), and the soon to be elected President of the Men's Residence Hall Council. Mr. Spees will be an Ex-Officio member of the committee.

The furnishings from the old Billings Library will be used where most appropriate. These include the Richardson chairs which will be used with the conference tables. The snack bar will not utilize any of the old furniture but will be modern in design.

In summing up the responsibilities and duties in his new capacity Mr. Spees said, "The emphasis on this job will be one of a helping agent; one that will help everyone including the individual student."

LAWRENCE DEBATE CLUB SEEKS SUCCESSFUL YEAR

The Lawrence Debate Club of the University of Vermont kicks off its 1962-1963 season with high hopes of still more improvement to its fantastic record of a year ago. During the past academic year debaters participated in 266 decision debates and 14 non-decision debates. Competing in 21 intercollegiate tournaments and 5 intercollegiate round robins, the team covered 20,000 miles and debated in 12 states. Debaters and coaches traveled by car, bus, train, and plane in compiling 163 victories for a .622 win average.

The squad appears strong again this year, as only two debaters have graduated and a great many freshmen have expressed an interest in the program. Returning for active duty are regulars Gil Tornabene (President), Elaine Zak, Mike Cronin, Betsy Lisman, Bill Germain, Sharon Call, Carmen Wessner, Ruth Baldwin, Dan Newcomb, Freda Ecker, Alice Becker, and Lynn Baier.

This year's Fall semester schedule includes tournaments at Rosemont College in Philadelphia, New York University, St. Joseph's College in Philadelphia, Wake Forest College in Winston-Salem, North Carolina, Pittsburgh University and our own Vermont Invitational Tournament. In addition Vermont debaters will also find plenty of action at Hamilton College, Dartmouth College, St. Anselm's College, Middlebury College and Norwich University.

All interested students are cordially welcomed to participate in the program. The team is desirous of giving all newcomers an opportunity to test their wits against opposition from different colleges across the country. Tournaments are of varied toughness enabling the Lawrence Debate Club to provide action for all debaters regardless of whether or not they have had any prior debate experience. All interested should contact one of the three coaches. Professors Robert Huber, John Travis or Norman London, any afternoon between 4:00 - 6:00 in Pomeroy Hall.

Star Studded Cast To Open In Lane Series

Above is the Wedding scene in "The Sound of Music" in which Jeanne Carson portrays Maria and John van Dreelen stars as Captain von Trapp.

Opening the 1962-63 season of the Blue Lane Series will be the hit musical show, "Sound of Music." Written by Rodgers and Hammerstein, and Lindsay and Crouse, the show is presently running in its third year at New York's Lunt-Fontanne Theatre.

The story is based upon the true-life experiences of Baroness von Trapp and her family. Reminiscent of the fairy-tale, "Cinderella," the plot tells the story of Maria Rainer, a young former postulant, who abandons her religious career to serve as governess for the seven wonderful, ebullient children of a widower, Captain von Trapp. She spends much time teaching the youngsters to sing, and eventually falls in love with and marries the illustrious Baron von Trapp. With the advent of World War II, the Baroness flees Austria to escape the horrors of Hitler's Nazism.

The family came to America, and now live in Stowe, Vermont. They will appear at Memorial Auditorium on the evening of the show, Monday, October 1.

Starring in the two lead roles will be Jeanne Carson as Maria, and John van Dreelen as Captain George von Trapp.

Recently assuming the starring role as Maria Rainer in the Broadway run of the show, Jeanne Carson made her stage debut in "Finian's Rainbow" at City Center in New York. Born in Yorkshire, England, the daughter of talented, theatrically experienced parents, she nevertheless achieved success in the theatre "on her own." Starring in "Love from Judy," "Daddy Long Legs," "Time to Go," and "A Kiss for Cinderella," she asserted her versatility in music, drama, and dance.

It was Max Liebman who brought Jeanne Carson to the United States and starred her in "Hey, Jeannie," which soon proved to be a successful TV show. Jeannie is married to an actor, Biff McGuire. They reside in England and make appearances in various motion pictures, theatre productions, and television shows.

Handsome, talented, French-born John van Dreelen is quite suited for the part of the Baron, Judging from his romantic background. Possessing a fluency in English, French, German, Italian and Dutch, he served in the Dutch underground in World War II, after escaping from a Nazi concentration camp.

His theatre debut was made in Holland in 1940, at the Royal Theatre in the Hague. After the war, he toured Great Britain with Sir Laurence Olivier's production of "Daphne Laureola," eventually coming to New York's Music Box Theatre, where his experience was, at first, primarily in television. In the 1950's he spent much time in Europe in shows such as "Gigi," "Kiss Me Kate," and "The Beautiful Galathea." Just recently he returned from the Schauspielhaus in Dusseldorf, West Germany, after starring as Petruchio in Shakespeare's "The Taming of the Shrew." Presently, he has various TV engagements, including several features on "77 Sunset Strip."

The "Sound of Music" will begin at 8:30 P.M., Monday, October 1. Tickets are no longer available, since the entire Blue Series is sold out.

SA Organizations Housed In East Hall

Until the new Billings Student Center is completed, many campus organizations will have temporary offices in the west wing of East Hall.

In room number one is located the Office of the Director of Student Activities, Mr. Emil Spees. The SA occupies two rooms, three and five with the IFC sharing room five. The Vermont CYNIC uses rooms seven and nine with the Student Photography Service (SPS) in rooms eleven and thirteen. The Kake Walk Office is located in room sixteen and the Vermont Ariel in eight. Until the new gym offices are ready for occupancy, the Gym Department will be located in room ten. For the interest of student organizations, Mr. Spees informs the CYNIC that rooms two, four, and six are available for meetings.

The west wing is open from 7 a.m. until 11 p.m. Monday through Friday. On Saturdays the hours will be from 7 a.m. until 5 p.m. Sunday's hours run from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m.

Of interest to campus organizations, fraternities, and sororities are the mailboxes located opposite the Office of the Director of Student Activities. Mail addressed to an organization, fraternity, or sorority should be marked East Hall. This is the only way that a letter can reach the box via the University Messenger Service.

Another note of interest from Mr. Spees involves the use of the slips and forms used for social functions. There will be different slips for different kinds of social events so groups are encouraged not to use old forms that they may have, but to stop in at Mr. Spees' office and pick up the correct ones.

It is hoped that the Billings Student Center will be ready for occupancy by the end of this semester, as the size of rooms in East Hall in most cases proves inadequate to organizations' needs.

In Review: Annual Klub Karnival, Campus Varieties

On Friday night, September 21, the annual Klub Karnival and Campus Varieties was held. The Klub Karnival was the first event of the evening, and droves of enthusiastic freshmen signed-up for the various campus activities. Shortly after the massed autograph signing, most went outside to a Pep Rally, where school spirit was vociferously evidenced.

Towards nine o'clock, however, the booths were dismantled, the fires outside were in subtle smolder, and all assembled moved onto the gym floor. Many also were standing on the balcony. Then, the apex of the evening occurred, for Campus Varieties began.

Under the capable direction of co-MC's Susan Oshlag, '63, and Frank Lewis, '64, a variety of acts were presented. There were not only skits and folk singers, but also dancers and musicians. There was even a bagpipe player. There were three unusual skits. Alpha Epsilon Pi Fraternity presented a fresh and humorous satire of American Bandstand. Among other characters were rock and roller Allen Greed and a new glamour girl, Miss Chastity Frump. Pi Beta Phi Sorority had a "fashion" show in which the more unusual styles on campus were displayed. Recommended attire included a mortar board and a boulder. There was also a musical, as Alpha Epsilon Phi Sorority presented a satire on Hollywood cowboy movies.

There were several folk singers. Among these talented people, mention should be given to frosh Ed Malozzi and Peter Wolcott, a guitar and banjo duet; the 4-Tens, a freshman group of three guitars and one banjo; and Summer Silverman, '65, who sang some "clean folk" songs.

Variety was present with many other interesting displays. There was a singer, a monologist, a bagpipe player complete with a female jigster, an accordeon player, and an impressionistic dancer. Up for special commendation is John Helfer, '66, who, with a one-man show, made his guitar sound like several.

UNIVERSITY IN PROGRAM OF BUILDING EXPANSION

by Marilyn Sitomer

For the past year and a half the rise of new buildings on the UVM campus has been a main concern of the students. Last year over three thousand wide-eyed students stared impatiently at the huge buildings that were being erected on our campus. With the beginning of the second semester of last year the students' perplexed looks were rewarded with the completion of three new mens dormitories and a beautifully constructed modern library. This year, after a long fruitful summer, the students returned to find the near completion of a modern gym, the beginning of a new engineering building, and the complete renovation of our old library to a luxurious student center.

The deadline for the opening of our new student center is scheduled for the beginning of February. However, there is a good chance that the renovation will be completed sooner than expected and will be ready before the completion of the first semester. Once inside the building a wandering student will come across various lounges for purposes such as reading, activities, or merely for the purpose of socializing. Along with these lounges there will be other rooms for the pleasure of the students.

By November 1 of this year we will all witness the commencement of our new gym located on Redstone Campus. Among its many assets the gym will contain an Olympic size swimming pool for the complete enjoyment of all students. The gym will be used for our forthcoming Kakewalk and will permit a greater number of spectators to view our renowned winter carnival.

The progress of our new engineering building has been quite rapid. The men have been working only a short time and have already set the date of completion for the spring of 1964. Unfortunately, six months after the completion of our new engineering building, East Hall will be confiscated.

In closing I would like to quote a senior UVM coed, "University of Vermont has certainly come a long way since my freshman year."

Nota Bene

The Young Democrats' Club is having its first open meeting Wednesday, October 3, at 7:00 in the Waterman Student Lounge. The speakers will be Senator Jack O'Brien, from Chittenden County, Professor V. Naramore, Burlington Committee Chairman, and Harold Reynolds, candidate for the U.S. House of Representatives.

"The 400 Blows," a French film directed by Francoise Truffaut will be shown October 3, at 8 p.m. in the Arena Theatre. Admission will be by Museum membership, which may be purchased at that time.

Come to R.P.I. General Admission tickets are all $1.00. Because all spectators are charged the same price no need to present I.S. The Vermont students and alumni will be seated on the Vermont side of the field, but this is not mandatory.

AT PRATT & WHITNEY AIRCRAFT...

YOUR EYES CAN BE ON THE STARS BUT YOUR FEET MUST BE ON THE GROUND

The glamour and excitement of space age programs often obscure a fundamental fact. It is simply that farsightedness must be coupled with sound, practical, down-to-earth engineering if goals are to be attained. This is the philosophy upon which Pratt & Whitney Aircraft's position as a world leader in flight propulsion systems has been built.

Almost four decades of solid engineering achievement at Pratt & Whitney Aircraft can be credited to management's conviction that basic and applied research is essential to healthy progress. In addition to concentrated research and development efforts on advanced gas turbine and rocket engines, new and exciting effects are being explored in every field of aerospace, marine and industrial power application.

The challenge of the future is indicated by current programs. Presently Pratt & Whitney Aircraft is exploring the areas of technical knowledge in magnetohydrodynamics . . . thermionic and thermoelectric conversions . . . hypersonic propulsion . . . fuel cells and nuclear power.

If you have interests in common with us, if you look to the future but desire to take a down-to-earth approach to get there, investigate career opportunities at Pratt & Whitney Aircraft.

To help move tomorrow closer to today, we continually seek ambitious young engineers and scientists. Your degree? It can be a B.S., M.S. or Ph.D. in: MECHANICAL • AERONAUTICAL • ELECTRICAL • CHEMICAL and NUCLEAR ENGINEERING • PHYSICS • CHEMISTRY • METALLURGY • CERAMICS • MATHEMATICS • ENGINEERING SCIENCE or APPLIED MECHANICS. The field still broadens. The challenge grows greater. And a future of recognition and advancement may be here for you.

For further information regarding an engineering career at Pratt & Whitney Aircraft, consult your college placement officer or write to Mr. William L. Stoner, Engineering Department, Pratt & Whitney Aircraft, East Hartford 8, Connecticut.

Democracy And Press

A few days before Sue Chaynon and Dick Paye arrived in Columbus, Ohio, for the 15th National Student Congress, I departed from the same city after attending the Sixth Student Editorial Affairs Conference, also under the auspices of NSA.

The conference began Wednesday, August 15th, and ended Friday evening, August 18th. If it were not for a single interesting aspect of the trip, the entire excursion would have been a total loss.

A quick rundown of some of the meetings and seminars held during the four days brings one point to light. Such topics as "The Student Press: Power Structures," "The Student in Education, a Proper Press Concern," "The International Student Conference," "VIII World Youth Festival," the Peace Corps, the Latin American problems, and a discussion of "In Loco Parentis" were discussed. The subjects chosen for discussion could in no way benefit any single editor, other than to increase his general knowledge of a given subject, nor could any of the information he gained aid him in improving his newspaper. It was certainly not worthwhile for me to spend your money if I could not come back with a good many ideas on how to improve the CYNIC. However, "informal" discussion groups were also held, and it was at one of these that I voiced considerable discontent with the entire programming of the conference.

To my surprise, there seemed to be a general dissatisfaction with the way the program was running. At 1:30 a.m., Friday, August 18th, eight representatives of SEAC, including myself, met with Ed Garvey, then President of the United States National Student Association, and several of his confederates. The purpose of our meeting was simple; it was the beginning of an attempt to form an autonomous and tightly bound organization of editors. I prepared a brief speech prior to this early morning rendezvous, but never got a chance to recite it, since someone also adequately and eloquently covered the same ground. However, printed below for your enjoyment or otherwise, is the text of what I was going to say:

The basic trouble with this year's Congress seems to be that up to this point it has lacked direction, and has functioned as if it has lacked direction. It now has a common goal, and functions toward meeting this goal as a far more efficient organization.

Would it not be more feasible, or at least more plausible to contain within this particular session of editors an "editor's workshop" where specific problems of concern to a pre-chosen group could be discussed?

One of the major objections raised at today's session was that under the auspices of NSA a Collegiate Press Service would necessarily reflect the political views of NSA rather than serve in the best public interest by presenting all the news.

It does not seem reasonable to me that dis-affiliating would solve this particular problem, since it would still, in effect, be impossible to publish ALL the news and disseminate the same to the various colleges joined in this union. The news that WOULD be printed would still have to be tempered by some general policy, in this case rather than being NSA's, it would be SEAC's. The question is really, should SEAC remain a symbolic organization, and have its editorial policies tempered by NSA, or should it become an autonomous group, formulating its own policies, etc.

NSA has stated it is not obligatory that as a member any individual agree with any or all of the resolutions set forth by NSA. Hence SEAC, if it may be considered an individual, much in the same manner as a corporation is legally considered an individual, has a right to disagree (as an individual or organization) with any of those resolutions passed by NSA.

If this theoretically newly-formed organization is to function in its true state it must only be interested in what NSA is doing from the standpoint that NSA is making news, then go one step farther and accumulate information pertinent to college presses which does not necessarily concern itself with either NSA or what NSA is doing.

It was the middle of last April that the revolutionary news stunned the Ivy League. A 261-year-old college was on the threshold of taking the fatal step. A special faculty committee at Yale recommended the eventual admission of women undergraduates as a "substantial proportion of each class." Presently only the professional and graduate schools of Yale are open to women.

Other admission policies are being made in Ohio, especially in regard to entrance requirements. It seems that a person can get into Ohio State University with the proper police recommendation. It was reported in The Tech (MIT), that one Cleveland Resident "was recommended on grounds of housebreaking."

"His application had apparently been accepted, for the judge informed him, 'You are hereby sentenced to one to five years in Ohio State University.' The 'student' would have had enough time to get his bachelor's degree and to do a year's work on his master's, had a court clerk not caught his error. He would have had a state scholarship, too."

In "Dateline: Colleges" of last week, we told you about one school where an art show also included a sale of the works of the students. From the September 17 edition of the Connecticut Daily Campus News of the University of Connecticut, we learn that a faculty exhibit is being displayed. It consists of recent sculpture, paintings, prints, drawings, and photographs of the teaching faculty. UVM might implement this idea, plus the sale of faculty art work, to help faculty members supplement their meager salaries!

Freshmen who have been suffering from frequent and severe headaches since their arrival at college should be relieved to know that they have a great deal of company in their misery. According to the Daily Campus News, "a recent survey discloses that young adults of college age - 19 through 24 - suffer not only the most frequent headaches, but the most severe ones of any other comparable age group. Even the harassed business man takes second to students, with a total of 77% suffering frequent headaches as against 80% in the college group." "It might be said that headaches linked to higher education compose a literal 'four-point program' ... Roughly, the four points fall under the categories of finances, friends, finals, and the future."

Speaking of finances ... the following appeared in the Campus Chat (North Texas State University) of July 6. "A North Texas professor, known for her efficiency recently received a bill for a purchase she had made. After sending in her check she received a letter from the concern, returning her check with the note, 'You over-paid us.'

Unable to understand this, she double-checked the notice before she mailed her second check. Again she received a note, this time stating she had under-paid the firm. Terribly confused she sent her check for the third time.

"This time she received a note saying, 'Please pay the amount due. You have been paying the date.'"

"American Students Awaken From Long Political Sleep." This headline appeared in the Daily Campus News of September 18. "After almost twenty years of general apathy which earned young people in the United States the name of 'the silent generation,' a new wave of political interest is sweeping campuses across the country. Student Militancy, which reached its peak in the 1930's hit bottom during the 1950's, under the impact of the cold war and senator Joseph McCarthy.

"A recent survey showed that American students are by no means unaware or unconcerned with national and international issues. The three issues which have inspired most student response are peace, civil liberties and democratic rights

"What is the reason for this upsurge in student political action and interest? One informed American observer stresses that this reflects the new realities of the world we live in; the reality of socialism existing side by side with capitalism, the reality that both 'sides' possess nuclear weapons which are capable of destroying civilization itself, that colonialism on a world scale and the policies of discrimination are coming to an end, the reality of automation in the United States.

"This upsurge in the ranks of the students and youth have dispelled completely wrong ideas about this generation," he declares. "Not long ago it was generally accepted that this was an a-political generation ... I think that it is possibly one of the most critical generations in history."

Does UVM have Trophy-itis? This is the latest disease that has plagued the University of Rhode Island. In an editorial that appeared in the September 12 edition of The Beacon of that school, the writer lamented on how living units invest great sums of money to make Homecoming displays in an attempt to win a $15 trophy. He states that "...If it weren't for Emblem and Badge Trophy Company we would have no school spirit. The trophy acts as the initiative for every competitive venture on our campus.. Does UVM have Trophy-itis? 'Just asking!'

Some of the results of a poll taken by The Bonaventure (St. Bonaventure University) were reported in a spring edition of The Tech. One of the questions asked was: "Do you sleep with a teddy bear?" One reply was: "No. The last teddy bear I slept with bit me." And did you know that the preferred type of pillow is foam rubber!!

Speaking of sleeping, how many of you were awake when you read last week's CYNIC. Did you notice any mistakes? If so, you should be on the CYNIC staff. Just stop into room 7, East Hall.

A VERMONT DRIVER'S MANUAL

The purpose of this manual is to acquaint Vermont drivers with the customs of their state, and to acquaint non-Vermonters with the same. It is necessary to the survival of both classes. It contains several sections, each of which deals with certain aspects of driving, such as the purpose of white lines, or the common misconceptions people have about the functions of various things, such as stop signs. If it all sounds somewhat tongue-in-cheek, that is because it is.

SECTION 1: Traffic Signals.

Traffic signals are generally arranged with a red light on top, a yellow or orange light in the middle, and a green light on the bottom. The reason for these lights seems obscure, but they at least let the country or rural driver know when he is in a town of any size. On the farm these contrivances are unknown, but they do exist in larger towns and cities. They really mean nothing. Some people believe that a car is supposed to stop on a red signal, and many municipal laws make that mandatory. Nonetheless, it is permissible to ignore lights. Many Vermont drivers know that, and as a result, do indeed ignore the lights. These enlightened few are known by the soreheads as bad drivers, accident prone, and quite a variety of other name, all unpleasant. The enlightened few themselves merely call themselves enlightened, privileged, and so forth. And who should know better?

SECTION 2: STOP Signs.

These are generally red octagons with the word STOP in white letters. Every true UVMer knows what STOP stands for. It does not mean that a car is supposed to come to a standstill. It is merely put on corners to keep the driver alert. It is always desirable to treat a STOP sign as a red light, and proceed right through it. For the sake of appearances, you can slow down a bit when approaching a STOP sign, but it isn't required.

SECTION 3: Lines.

Roads generally have white or yellow lines painted on them. Sometimes the lines are dashed, sometimes single continuous, sometimes double. The purpose is always the same: they are guide lines. Some people have the mistaken idea that you are supposed to drive to the right of the center stripe on smaller streets, and between the lines on larger roads. That is not true; the lines are there so that you can guide the center of your car over them. By keeping the car centered over the line you do not wander all over the road, but keep straight. More and more people are learning this, and driving is much more pleasant for all as a consequence.

SECTION 4: Directional Signals.

If you look closely, Vermonters, you will notice that there is a lever on the left side of the steering post (in American cars) which can be flipped up and down, just like the shift lever. When it is flipped up or down, a little light blinks on and off with a clicking noise, right there on the dashboard. Some people use these lights when they turn a corner or switch lanes. That is not their use; they are only there for amusement. If you get bored driving, flip the lever and watch the lights. It keeps you alert. But most Vermonters seem to know the correct use of this interesting gadget, so I only need to tell this to non-Vermonters, most of whom still use the lights for turns and stuff.

SECTION 5: Safety Belts.

All one hears these days is the advantage of having seat belts in the car. Some people think that they are used to strap one in, as in an airplane. That is wrong; they are made to be hung out the door when the car is in motion. That makes for very attractive ornamentation for a car, which is always to be desired. But as protection for a passenger, they are not to be used. Should an accident occur, you can always get another car.

SECTION 6: Right Of Way.

There is only one rule that a driver in Vermont need remember about right of way, despite the fact that there are many rules floating around, some of which are even taught in schools. The one rule to remember is simply that if there is any doubt about that right of way, then always assume you have it. Most Vermonters already know and use this rule.

SECTION 7: Traffic "Lanes."

If one must drive in the so-called "lanes," rather than down the white line (see SEC. 3), then he should at least know the proper use of these "lanes." You can stay in a lane and proceed straight ahead, or else make a turn from a lane. A good general rule is that the right-hand lane should be used for making left turns; right turns should be made out of the left-hand lane. This is true even when other directions are painted on the road or signs are put up to indicate otherwise. They may be ignored.

SECTION 8: Speed.

Roads are being built better than ever, with better surfaces, and being used by better cars. Drive at any speed you wish, any time you wish, and anywhere you wish.

SECTION 9: Walking.

If you should be forced to walk somewhere and find it necessary to cross a street, remember that the streets were made just for you. It is permissible to cross anywhere you wish, such as from between parked cars, and as slowly as you wish, even though the driver who had to screech to a stop to avoid hitting you gets angry. Just give him a contemptuous look and slow your pace a little. They're your roads, and he has no right getting mad just because you crossed in front of him in the middle of the street.

There it is. Since all too many people follow these rules all too often, let me wish you all the best of luck on our roads. You'll need it.

Hanau Heads Placement Program

A young, vital, forward-looking man has come to the University of Vermont to breathe new life into the placement program. He is Douglas Hanau, aged 30, presently living in Essex Junction with his wife and four children.

Mr. Hanau did his graduate work in education and the social sciences at Colgate University. While there, he was a member of their freshman counseling program and assisted the placement admissions officers in addition to his regular work. For the next four years, Mr. Hanau worked in the personnel departments of the Union Bag-Camp Paper corporation and Bell Telephone Laboratories, with special emphasis being placed in both jobs on college recruitment. Thus, he has been recruiting college students for the past six years.

Mr. Hanau joined the administrative staff of UVM on June, 1962, and spent the major portion of the summer both, interesting new companies to come to the UVM campus, and studying the placement centers of other colleges.

Speaking of the coming year, Mr. Hanau said that a number of changes will be instituted. A group meeting for registration, which was previously large and unwieldy, will now be broken down by curriculum and sex, to insure easier questioning along academic lines. The new placement officer emphasized that all seniors and graduate students should at least register, so that they could receive the benefits of his office in the future, even if they don't want to avail themselves of the service at this time.

After the registration meetings, at set dates, Mr. Hanau will conduct thirty minute demonstration interviews to be followed by a question and answer period. Beginning about the middle of October, individual meetings will be held with all senior and graduate students. During the recruit-

National Foundation Offers Study Grants For Grad Students

Each year the faculty of the University of Vermont recommend students to be the recipients of a national fellowship. Last year, a recipient of this honor was Ed Whalen, a 1962 graduate.

To accomplish its purpose of attracting large numbers of men and women to the profession of college teaching, the Foundation annually awards fellowships to 1,000 prospective first-year graduate students, and honorable mention to another 1,500. Woodrow Wilson Fellows are chosen from about 10,000 candidates nominated by college faculty members in the United States and Canada. From funds granted by the Ford Foundation, a Fellow is fully supported for one academic year at a United States or Canadian graduate school.

The Foundation primarily supports candidates in the humanities and social sciences since financial aid from other sources for students in the sciences is plentiful. Science and mathematics majors with a clear interest in a teaching career may be nominated, but if U.S. citizens, they must apply simultaneously for a National Science Foundation Fellowship and accept that award if it is offered.

A Fellow receives a living stipend of $1,500 for one

Dr. Moody's Study Is Subject Of Science Conference

by Ira D. Feinstein

Dr. Paul A. Moody, chairman of the department of zoology, at UVM was one of some 200 scientists, who recently attended the First International Conference on Taxonomic Biochemistry, Physiology, and Serology. The conference, held at the University of Kansas on September 4, 5, and 6, was sponsored by the National Science Foundation and the host institution.

The purpose of the conference was to bring to light some recent developments in the use of biochemistry, physiology, and serology in the classification of animals and plants (taxonomy). A paper presented by Alan Boyden of Rutgers entitled "Perspectives in systematic serology" utilized the results of some work done by Dr. Moody on the American and African porcupines and the musk ox. Dr. Moody has done considerable research in the study of animal relationships using a variety of serological techniques. Serology is the study of the nature of blood serums as indicated in tests involving antibodies. The field in which Dr. Moody has worked, comparative serology, utilizes the results of such tests in the classification of animals.

Dr. Moody received his baccalaureate degree from Morningside College in Sioux City, Iowa and his doctorate from the University of Michigan. He has been associated with the University of Vermont since 1927 and has headed the department of zoology here since 1945. He is currently on a semester sabbatical and is using this time to prepare a textbook on human genetics. His text, "Introduction to Evolution", has been used in courses at the University and Dr. Moody also intends to prepare a revised edition of this text.

ing season, three group meetings will be held open to all students, faculty and administration members, in which a corporate member will discuss opportunities in his industry. Also, over the year, Mr. Hanau will be available to speak on placement-related subjects to the members of all living units.

Looking ahead to the future, and depending upon student need and interest, the placement office is hoping to attract a number of new companies, concerns and institutions which will offer a wide variety of career opportunities to the student body. In line with this endeavor, the placement office hopes to open up in all areas more career oriented summer employment experiences.

One thing especially should be remembered by all students, says Mr. Hanau, "The office does not place anyone. The individual places himself or herself."

12,000 For You ?

Inquiries about Danforth Graduate Fellowships for college teaching careers worth up to $12,000 are invited. Dr. Donald E. Moser, Associate Professor of Mathematics (347 Waterman) announced today.

The fellowships, offered by the Danforth Foundation of St. Louis, Missouri, are open to male college seniors or recent graduates preparing for a career of teaching, counseling, or administrative work at the college level. Applicants may be planning to major in any field of study common to the undergraduate liberal arts and sciences curriculum, at the American graduate school of their choice, but should not have already undertaken graduate work. Nominations close October 28.

Approximately 100 fellowships will be awarded to outstanding candidates nominated by Liaison Officers of accredited colleges and universities in the United States this year. Nominees will be judged on intellectual promise and personality, integrity, genuine interest in religion, and high potential for effective college teaching.

Winners will be eligible for up to four years of financial assistance, with an annual maximum of $1,500 for single men and $2,000 (as well as $500 per child) for married men, plus tuition and fees. Students without financial needs also are invited to apply.

Danforth Fellows and leading scholars are guests of the Foundation at an annual conference on teaching.

There are now 472 Danforth Fellows in graduate study preparing to teach, and 267 more already teaching in some 150 colleges in this country and in 20 institutions abroad. Danforth Fellowships may be held for life, with certain benefits after completion of graduate study such as financial assistance to attend educational conferences.

Students may hold a Danforth Fellowship concurrently with other appointments, such as Ford, Fulbright, National Science, Rhodes, Woodrow Wilson. Winners will become Danforth Fellows without stipend until these other awards lapse.

The Danforth Foundation, one of the nation's 10 largest educational Foundations, was founded in 1927 by the late William H. Danforth, St. Louis businessman and philanthropist. The Foundation's primary aim is to strengthen higher education through its own programs of fellowships and workshops and through grants to colleges, universities and other educational agencies.

Friday afternoon saw many, many very busy student editors. In the space of about eight hours, they had drawn up a constitution, elected officers and re-organized to form an autonomous press association. It was heartwarming to watch democracy work on so pure a level and with such efficiency. I found it most pleasing to be one of the signers of original constitution of the new United States National Student Press Association, an organization which can be of great service to college newspapers and to the academic world in general.

Scene And Heard

by Susan Milman

The UVM calendar of social events has been crowded with excitement, even though the school year has just begun. Replacing the divots of Theta's front lawn looks like quite a project since it was twisted to dust this past weekend at a successful open-house held with SAE after the game. The AEPH's need a bit more training to outshine the TEPS at another softball game like the one which was recently played at Redstone. The TEPS played with a double handicap—batting left handed and running backwards on an enlarged diamond—and still soared victorious. Needless to say, all had a wonderful time.

The summer months were also very exciting for the sorors of Gamma Phi, Theta; and Alpha Chi. The Gamma Phis sent seven delegates to their National Convention, where they proudly accepted the Efficiency Award. Alpha Chi's Marilyn Gardner returned from National Convention in Miami Beach, with glowing reports and a nice tan to match! She was accompanied by a chapter alum, Marjorie Perrin. Grace Waters and Melissa Hetzel were Theta's delegates to National Convention. Melissa, who acted as National Song Leader, charmed all the sisters with her many talents.

AEPH would like to take this opportunity to welcome their new housemother, Mrs. Roy Meyers.

THE WHEREABOUTS OF CUPID
Congratulations to these gentlemen who captured the hearts of the Alpha Chis and were recently pinned: John Simson, '62, of Middlebury College and Jill Murry, '64; Carl Eells, '64 of Acacia and Marti Robinson, '64; and Scott Hallock of Lambda Iota and Carolyn Knight, '64.

Cupid wasn't idle this summer either in searching out Gamma Phi's Sue Rex, '63, who just became pinned to John Mello, '63 of Alpha Tau Omega. Congratulations to AEPH's Ellen Lipp and Phi Sigma Delta's Larry Bender on their recent pinning.

CHIMES OF WEDDING BELLS ARE IN THE AIR

The summer sun illuminated the sparkle of diamonds. Recently engaged were Theta's Joyce Flesher, '63 and Acacia's John Mills, '62; Gamma Phi's Coral Gillespie, '63 to David Webster, '63 at Bates College; Gamma Phi's Barb Rifkin, '62 to Marty academic year. If married at the time the award is offered, he is entitled to an additional allowance of $500 for his wife, $400 for the first child, and $200 for each additional child. Tuition and fees are paid directly to the Fellow's graduate school. A Fellow is not supported at his own undergraduate institution unless he is enrolled in a three-year M.A. program or can present strong personal reasons for remaining there. All candidates are urged to apply simultaneously for financial aid from other sources.

Every candidate must be nominated by a faculty member, no later than October 31, 1962. Forms sent to the candidate upon nomination must be returned to the Regional Chairman by November 20, 1962. By the end of December, 1962, a candidate must have applied to at least one graduate school in the United States or Canada. Notifications of awards and honorable mention are sent out by March 15, 1963.

Levy, '62 of AEPH at Buffalo; and Alpha Chi's Mary Louise Dente, '63 and Dick Norton, '62 of Phi Delta Theta.

Congratulations!
Best wishes to Alpha Chi's Kelly Fuller Chevalier and Carl Chevalier, who were married on September first and to Gamma Phi's Ann Josselyn, who recently became Mrs. Gary Kelly.

SNEAK PREVIEW:

Saturday, October 6, features Pic Party at Gamma Phi. All are welcome. More details later.

Outing Club Plans Year

Trips go out "rain or shine" (or so it is claimed) and outing club activities are surrounded with an aura of adventure enjoyed by superpeople. Weather is not remembered when bad-rain does not dampen outing club spirit. The outing club is already looking forward to sponsoring UVM's Mountain Day, a chance for everyone to climb Vermont's highest mountain and to enjoy cider, doughnuts, and fall-foliage on the summit of Mt. Mansfield. Hiking trips are adjusted to the interest of the participants. On November 9, the outing club will present John Jay and his newest movie of skiing in Europe and local areas. Later in the semester the outing club will conduct bus trips to Smugglers Notch, Jay Peak, and Mad River Glen. The outing club wants to run bicycle trips, slide shows, square dances, bushwhack races, and rock climbs, open to everyone. Rock climbing is an increasingly popular activity.

WRITE? YOU'RE WRONG

In the recent furor over the assassination of President McKinley, it may have escaped your notice that a nationwide study of the writing ability of American college students has just been published.

The survey reveals an astonishing fact: that when students have completed their freshman year and are no longer required to take English, their writing skill progressively declines until we come to the fantastic situation where graduating seniors actually are poorer writers of English than incoming freshmen!

Many theories have been offered to account for this incredible fact. Some say that seniors know less English than freshmen because all seniors major in French. This is not true. No more than 94 percent of seniors major in French. How about the other six percent?

Well sir, of the other six percent, half—or three percent—take physics, and it is not hard to understand how these poor souls grow rusty in English when all they ever say is "E equals MC squared."

Of the remaining three percent, two-thirds—or two percent—major in whaling, and their English too grows feeble with disuse. Whalers, as we all know, do not speak at all except to shout, "Thar she blows!" maybe twice a year.

Of the one percent remaining, it cannot be fairly said that they are poor writers. The fact is, we don't know what kind of writers they are. Why not? Because they never write. And why don't they ever write? Because this remaining one percent of American college students are enrolled at the University of Alaska, and never take their mittens off.

(Incidentally, I received quite a surprise upon first visiting Alaska two years ago when I was invited to Juneau to crown the Queen of the Annual Date Palm Festival. Frankly I expected to find a surly and morose populace. After all, going through life with your mittens on all the time is hardly calculated to make you merry as a cricket. Not only can't you write, but you miss out on all kinds of other fun things—like three card monte, making shadow pictures on the wall, and lint picking. However, to my astonishment, I discovered Alaskans to be a hale and gregarious group, mittens notwithstanding, and I soon found out why: because mittens notwithstanding, they could still smoke Marlboro Cigarettes, still enjoy that rich mellow flavor, that fine, clean Selectrate filter, that truly soft soft pack, that truly flip-top flip-top box—and that, friends, will make anybody happy, mittens notwithstanding. In fact, Alaskans are the happiest people I have ever met in the whole United States—except, of course, for the Alaskan vendors of Marlboro Cigarettes, who have not been paid in many years—indeed, never—because how can anybody dig out coins to pay for cigarettes when he is wearing mittens?)

But I digress. What are we going to do about this deplorable condition where college students, having completed Freshman English, become steadily less proficient in the use of the language? The answer is simple. We will make them take Freshman English all through college. In fact, we won't let them take anything else! This solution, besides producing a nation of graceful writers, will also solve another harrowing problem: where to park on campus. If everybody takes nothing but Freshman English, we can tear down all the schools of law, medicine, engineering, and whaling, and turn them into parking lots. Can't we?

© 1962 Max Shulman

The makers of Marlboro, who sponsor this column, plead guilty to being among those Americans whose writing skill is not all it might be. However, we like to think that as tobaccoists we know a thing or two. Won't you try us and see if you agree?

CATAMOUNT CLIPPINGS

by Ray Bello

MONDAY MORNING OBSERVATIONS

A well-groomed University of Vermont Football squad played a good football game against a tough opponent last Saturday on a well-trimmed Centennial Field. Old Centennial has never looked so good as it did last weekend, thanks to the fine work of Phil McGrath and his crew. The grass was cut so each ten yard strip would look like the grass grew on different angles. It is these little things that help a team make a good appearance before a home crowd. The Catamounts certainly made a good appearance in their sharp new uniforms and their proficient pre-game warm-up show. The line's performance for the fans resembled the precision displayed by the Rockettes. On a whole the Catamounts look very organized and well trained.

But what about the little things expected of the crowd as a sign of support and school spirit. After the initial wave of cheers that accompanied the Catamounts on to the field, it was difficult to tell there was a crowd of over 5,000 people present at Old Centennial. The cheerleaders, male and female, were too inhibited. The Vermont bench made more noise than the spectators whenever UVM had a scoring possibility or needed backing when the going got rough. The psychology of a college football fan is generally that of a passive observer. All the rah-rah spirit of high school days is left behind when one enters college. This should not be so for the team can sense when the crowd is behind it. The most reassuring feeling in the world for a football player is to hear a band blasting out a spirited football song above the cheers of the crowd.

CLIFFORD APPLIES NEWTON'S LAW TO UVM FOOTBALL

Scientifically-minded Coach Clifford has applied many fundamentals of science to this year's pre-season conditioning. Most notable of these are his use of Newton's second law of motion and his extensive use of the isometric bars, affectionately known as the "iso-monkey" bars.

Clifford has expressed concern in team speed and has been quoted as saying that he would give the opponent a thirty-pound edge, if his man could "hit the other man first." In essence, this is Newton's second law of motion. The force of a moving body is defined as the mass (m) of the body, times the acceleration (a) of it, or simply, $F = ma$. For the benefit of the not-so-scientifically oriented football fans, one's mass is his actual weight (w) divided by the force of gravity (g) on earth, or $m = w/g$ and acceleration is defined as change of speed, $(a = \frac{v_t - v_o}{t})$, where v_t is a speed after a time t and v_o the initial speed, usually 0.

What do all these definitions have to do with Vermont's football team? Well, for a practical application take two linemen, a 250 pound tackle and a 200 pound guard and have them accelerate their masses head-on at each other. If the 200-pound guard is quick getting off his mark and building up speed, while the bigger man is a little slower picking up speed, upon collision the two men would stop short in their tracks. This can be written as $F_1 = m(250 \text{ lbs})a$ and $F_2 = m(200 \text{ lbs})a$ or $F_1 = F_2$.

With this in mind, Coach Clifford had the team out every morning at 7:15, running, in order to improve team speed. In accordance with Newton's law he has emphasized short bursts of speed by making the team run 50-yard sprints at top speed...

Ruffer Head's UVM Hockey Program

by B. Zaccaro

In the 1940's, the University of Vermont offered ice-hockey as one of the sports in its physical education program. The team practiced and played its games on an outdoor rink. Because of the difficulties presented by its upkeep, the rink and the sport were temporarily abandoned. With the building of the new field house, the University is once again able to submit to its students the chance to play ice-hockey. To be situated in the field house is an 85 ft. wide by 190 ft. long ice-skating rink where the new Catamount ice-hockey team will have its start.

Mr. William Ruffer, coach of the new squad, is a man wisely chosen for this job. Interested in hockey all his life, he shows a strong determination that Vermont will bear a sound team within five or six years. He coached the hockey team, along with basketball and track, at the Sault Ste. Marie branch of the University of Michigan from 1951 - 1960. He also participated in a Senior Hockey League at the same school.

Coach Ruffer feels that it will be necessary to spread, over a number of years, a building-up program which would place the Catamounts on an annual league basis. He also expressed the belief that attempting to form and condition a team in less than four or five years would be almost impossible.

The expenses of a hockey team come to quite a sum. An estimated cost for a 25-man squad can be priced at close to $10,000. The cost to outfit one man with the proper equipment ranges anywhere from $300 to $350. The Physical Education Department of the University has given the word to Coach Ruffer to go "all out," in order to make up a team, not only a good one, but also a secure one.

It is Coach Ruffer's wish to keep a large group of players this year, thus, men of all four classes can qualify for the team. However, in a few years, he will want to form two distinct units, a 25-man Varsity squad, and also a Freshman squad. In this manner, there will be fresh material each year to add to the ranks of the returning upper-classmen.

The upkeep of the rink will be a one-man operation. The University has purchased a complex jeep-like machine which will be driven onto the ice and lay down an even coat of hot water, while at the same time, it brushes the excess snow away. The price of this machine is close to $8900. However, in the long run, the machine will stand to make a profit. It is not only a time-saving device, for the entire process would take but ten minutes to complete, but it requires the employment of only one man.

Because of its abrupt beginning, the 1962-63 squad will not enter any conference competition. However, there will be a number of scrimmages with nearby schools plus an exhibition to be given on Kake Walk Weekend.

Football Fact

Although the game was won on passing for AIC, Vermont had a better completion percentage, completing 6 of 16 while AIC only connected on 6 of 18. AIC quarterback Dick Glogowski connected on many short passes before unloading the "bomb" that accounted for the Aces first score.

Cats Drop Opener; Look Ahead To RPI

Fullback Frank Amato cuts inside his right end for a 5-yard gain against AIC. Block is being made by co-captain Dave Sequist. The UVM ground forces could only amass 159 yards to American International's 190. Despite slight edge in ground gaining yardage, Coach Clifford was pleased by the performance of the defensive line. (Credit: Audio-Visual)

by Mickey Steinberg

The UVM Catamounts opened their 1962 football schedule on a sour note Saturday, by being defeated by A.I.C. 14-8 at Centennial field before approximately 6000 disappointed home rooters.

The score of the game, however, does not tell the whole story. On three occasions the Cats had opportunities to break the game wide open. In the second period the AIC quarterback threw a jump pass which went astray and landed in the hands of the Cats' Frank Bolden, who had clear sailing ahead. However, Frank could not hold the ball and it went as an incomplete pass. In the third period the same thing happened - this time Ken Burton could not take advantage of a misplayed pass.

In the waning minutes of the game, Co-Captain Paul Harris threw a long pass to end Bill Burke, who was free, deep in AIC territory, but Burke couldn't complete the reception, and the ball fell through his outstretched arms.

The cold, raw, and drizzly weather didn't enhance the game any, as both teams had trouble getting started in the first half. Only one first down was all that either team could muster, and it looked as though one touchdown would be decisive in the battle of punts. Things continued along this pattern until the twelve minute mark of the second period. At this point halfback Pete Schindler scampered 15 yards to his own 40, and quarterback Dick Glogowski then fired a fifty yard pass to Charlie Gilligan for a T.D. Joe Occhiuti booted the extra point, and the teams left the field with the score 7-0 in favor of AIC at halftime.

The second half brought a heavier drizzle and with it a UVM T.D. The Cats took possession of the ball at their own 40 and started to drive. Three running plays gave them a first down on the Aces 43 yard line. It was here that Harris hit Burton with a short pass on the 38. Burton went the distance with the aid of some fine blocking and some phenomenal faking. The Cats scored the two point conversion as Harris dove into the end zone from the 3rd yard line.

The score was UVM - 8, AIC - 7, at this point, and it looked as though the Cats might be able to squeeze out a victory. However, the AIC quarterback, Dick Glogowski, started to fill the atmosphere with passes to his pet receivers, end Dave O'Neil and halfback, Charlie Gilligan. With the ball on the UVM 28 yard line Glogowski faked a pass and handed off to Pete Schindler, who skirted his own left end for the decisive score. Occhiuti ended the scoring with his second extra point, and the final score was 14-8, with the Cats on the shore end.

Even though the Vermont defensive wall, led by "Ollie" Thoreson, Dave Sequist, and soph George Oelze, played very well. The Cats just couldn't come up with the long gainer when they needed it. Ken Burton, Dean Kent, and Richie Reynolds ran well, and Kent did some fine punting to keep the Cats out of danger as he averaged 37.5 yards a boot.

Coach Bob Clifford sets his eyes on next Saturday's contest with RPI; where he is hoping for his first victory at his new position. Clifford will have to open up his offense considerably so that he can successfully adhere to his formula of "Letting the opponent score two touchdowns as long as his boys score 4 T.Ds."

New Gym To Open During Homecoming

UVM, in its expansion of campus facilities, has taken a giant step in the construction of a new field house and gym. With these additions, an enlivened interest in sports is anticipated, for a host of new athletic activities will now be available.

The field house will contain UVM's new swimming pool. A swim squad is soon to be formed, and will compete on an intercollegiate basis.

The revival of the Catamount ice-hockey team, which existed in the '40s is now in full swing.

The regulation-size ice skating rink will also be situated in the field house, thus adding another winter sport to the list.

Of course, the new and beautiful home of the basketball team is not to be forgotten. It will seat a capacity crowd of 5,000.

The physical plant is excellent, and the Physical Education Department is looking forward, as is the student body, to the official dedication to be held during Homecoming.

Burns Detectives To Patrol Campus Campus Security Expanding

With the recent purchase of additional lands and the construction of new buildings on campus, there has arisen a need for greater campus protection of property and person. To satisfy this need, the University has acquired the services of three men supplied by the nationally known Burns Protective Agency. These men will be uniformed and along with the existing campus police, will help to protect the University property and students and to patrol the walks between the Main Campus and Redstone. In addition, they will be on 24 hour service. The present campus police will be trained by these men; it is hoped that the former will be transformed into a more efficient protection force.

The University has supplied a 1962 Chevrolet Biscayne which will be utilized by the Burns' men. The car contains a two-way radio for greater efficiency. Their salaries are paid for by Burns through funds provided for by the University's Security Budget.

This new program will cost no more than hiring three additional campus police. Statistics show that campuses across the country are satisfied by the work of the Burns Protective Agency. They will have no jurisdiction off campus, but with cooperation from the Burlington Police Department, it is felt that the campus and town will be greatly protected.

IFC To Reorganize Structure; Adopts New Rushing Policies

Some significant developments are taking shape in the University Inter-fraternity Council that will effect a great many male students. The two most outstanding developments are the evolving of a new rushing policy and changes in the structure of the IFC itself.

IFC President Laurie Cone described the new rushing policy as one of "limited contact". On the University campus all contact between fraternity men and freshmen is permitted except that fraternity men may not give rushers rides in their automobiles nor treat them to anything. Of course, no freshmen are allowed into fraternity houses nor may Greeks, who do not live in the freshmen dormitories enter these buildings. Off-campus contact is to be kept at a minimum with no freshmen attending apartment parties. Greeks and freshmen are expected to sit at separate tables in establishments downtown.

An important change in the rushing policy is that first rushing will take place first semester. Sometime in late October or early November two Sundays will be designated for first rushing. Saturday night, October 13, the IFC will sponsor a dance for all Greeks and freshmen interested in rushing fraternities. At the dance each house will have a section of tables which they may use to rush as they wish. Carried over from the previous rushing systems is the plan to hold second rushing over the inter-session recess.

Dean Rowland Patzer, Dean of Men, feels that it is wrong to approach any problem with a negative conclusion in mind. He cites as such a negative approach the totally "unenforceable" no-contact policy of last year. The dean, himself an officer of a national fraternity, has shown considerable interest in the University fraternity system since he came to the campus last September.

The most significant proposal to change the structure of the IFC is that each house president head the delegation to the IFC from his respective fraternity. The present arrangement of the IFC representative and the house presidency being two different offices has been criticized by many as inefficient. It is Laurie Cone's opinion that "From personal experience, I find that it is impossible for the IFC to operate efficiently or to form any policies without the consultation of the house presidents. These men are best suited to express the sentiments of their houses."

The recent self-evaluation by the IFC has been hailed by many as a significant progress in itself. Dean Patzer has expressed his feelings that "It is a healthy sign when any organization attempts to take an objective look at itself. After the IFC has decided, on an honest forthright basis, just how it may best serve the University and the fraternity system at UVM it will better be able to achieve these ends."

Music Department Faculty Will Present Concert Series

Rehearsals proceed as the Music Department faculty prepares for their programs. (Credit: Sulton, S.P.S.)

The Department of Music at the University of Vermont will present a series of six faculty artist concerts this year. The forthcoming series results from a department policy of presenting its faculty for the benefit of all university students, with special emphasis on those in the field of music. All concerts are open to the public at no cost and will be held in Ira Allen Chapel, with the exception of the final presentation.

The initial recital will be given November 4th by pianist Nola, L. Marberger, a new faculty member.

George C. Green, Jr., also new to the University faculty, will be heard in a violin concert on December 6th.

A chamber music recital on February 7, will be presented by Professor Green, Mrs. Flora C. Kinsey, violoncellist, Dr. Frank W. Lidral, chairman of the department of music, pianist, and John K. Park, hornist.

Appearing jointly on February 28th will be David L. Kinsey, pianist, and Francis A. Weinrich, baritone.

Norma Auchter will perform on the piano sometime in March.

The final recital will be held in cooperation with the Fleming Museum in the Marble Court on April 21st, featuring Miss Marberger on the harpsichord. Other faculty members will be heard in a program of Renaissance and Baroque music.

Although faculty members have participated in public recitals in the past, this series is seen by the Department of Music, as establishing a precedent and will become an annual affair. Dr. Lidral, department head, feels the University has a capable artist faculty which should display its talents for the mutual benefit of both student body and faculty.

Munch To Conduct French Orchestra

by Joan Klonsky

The Red Lane Series premiere presentation, October 6th, will be the Orchestre National Français. Consisting of 110 members, the Orchestre is currently on a North American tour; its first engagement in the United States was earlier this week at the brand new Philharmonic Auditorium in New York's Lincoln Center for the Performing Arts.

Directing the French National Orchestra is Charles Munch, one of the world's foremost conductors, who recently retired from his position as Musical Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Born in Strasbourg, in 1891, into a distinguished musical family, Mr. Munch's original intention was to become a doctor. However, once in Paris, where he was to pursue his medical studies, he soon began concentrating on the study of the violin under Lucien Capet. By a circumstance of boundaries he was drafted into the German Army while vacationing at Strasbourg in 1914, and, in 1920, he was wounded at Verdun.

Following the Armistice, Mr. Munch studied with Carl Flesch in Berlin and, later, with Furtwängler and Bruno Walter in the Gewandhaus Orchestra at Leipzig. In 1932, to retain his French

Evening Division Adds Three Courses

Three additional off-campus courses for the fall semester have been scheduled by the Evening Division of the University of Vermont.

The courses are to be given at Proctor, Springfield and Stowe and are in speech, mathematics, and political science respectively.

At Proctor, John C. Travis of the department of speech will teach oral interpretation of literature. A three-hour offering, registration for this course will be held in the Community Room of the Proctor Free Library at 7 p.m. on Monday (Oct. 1).

The Springfield High School Library will be the site of registration on Wednesday (Oct. 3) from 4:30 to 7 p.m. for the course, elementary college algebra. It will be taught by Harry Lighthall of the department of mathematics. This is also a three-hour offering.

Robert S. Babcock, department of political science, will teach a course in state government at Stowe High School. Registration for this three-hour course will be held on Tuesday (Oct. 2) at 7 p.m.

Further information may be obtained from the UVM Evening Division office.

WHAT TO WEAR TILL THE DOCTOR COMES

Now that you have enrolled and paid your fees and bought your books and found your way around campus and learned to hate your roommate, it is time to turn to the most important aspect of college life. I refer, of course, to clothes.

What does Dame Fashion decree for the coming school year? (Incidentally, Dame Fashion is not, as many people believe, a fictitious character. She was a real Englishwoman who lived in Elizabethan times and, indeed, England is forever in her debt. During the invasion of the Spanish Armada, Dame Fashion—not yet a Dame but a mere, unlettered country lass named Moll Flanders—during the invasion, I say, of the Spanish Armada, this dauntless girl stood on the white cliffs of Dover and turned the tide of battle by rallying the drooping morale of the British fleet with this stirring poem of her own composition:

*Don't be gulleas,
Men of Britain.
Swing your cutlass,
We ain't quittin'.
Smash the Spanish,
Sink their boats,
Make 'em vanish,
Like a horse makes oats.
For Good Queen Bess,
Dear sirs, you gotta
Make a mess
Of that Armada.
You won't fail!
Knock 'em flat!
Then we'll drink ale
And stuff like that.*

In 1589 she invented the laying hen

As a reward for these inspirational verses Queen Elizabeth dubbed her a Dame, made her Poet Laureate, and gave her the Western Hemisphere except Duluth. But this was not the extent of Dame Fashion's service to Queen and country. In 1589 she invented the laying hen, and she was awarded a lifetime pass to Chavez Ravine. But she was not to end her days in glory. In 1591, alas, she was arrested for overtime jousting and imprisoned for thirty years in a butt of malmsey. This later became known as Guy Fawkes Day.)

But I digress. Let us get back to campus fashions. Certain to be the rage again this year is the cardigan (which, curiously enough, was named after Lord Cardigan, who commanded the English fleet against the Spanish Armada. The sweater is only one product of this remarkable Briton's imagination. He also invented the glottal stop, the gerund, and the eyelid, without which winking, as we know it today, would not be possible).

But I digress. The cardigan, I say, will be back, which is, I believe, cause for rejoicing. Why? Because the cardigan has nice big pockets in which to carry your Marlboro Cigarettes—and that, good friends, is ample reason for celebration as all of you will agree who have enjoyed Marlboro's fine, comfortable, mellow flavor and Marlboro's filter. So why don't you slip into your cardigan and tie yourself to your tobaccoist for some good Marlboros? They come in soft pack or flip-top box. Cardigans come in pink for girls and blue for boys.

Cardigans or pullovers—it's a matter of taste . . . And so is Marlboro a matter of taste—the best taste that can possibly be achieved by experienced growers and blenders—by science, diligence, and tender loving care. Try a pack.

Newly Formed Political Club Stimulates Student Interest

by Ira D. Feirstein

"To stimulate interest in politics among UVM students"—this is the purpose of the Young Democrat's Club as expressed by the club's co-chairman Barbara Lawrence. In a recent interview with Miss Lawrence she discussed the purposes and functions of the club and outlined the club's activities for the coming year.

Barbara, a sophomore chemistry major who hopes to enter the field of chemical research after attending graduate school, shares the club's chairmanship with sophomore Bill McGrath. Bill, a resident of Burlington, is a political science major who plans a career in law.

In further discussing the purposes of her organization, Barbara was insistent in making it clear that the prime purpose of the club was political education rather than political indoctrination. "College students are expected to become the intelligent voters of America and yet I find intellectual stagnation, rather than intellectual activity to be prevalent on the University campus. Many intelligent students become too engrossed in their studies and social activities and thereby miss their opportunity to have their college years become a thoroughly meaningful and broadening experience."

Planned for the coming year is a program of activities not to be outdone by any other club or organization on campus. Party structure and issues of national importance are to be the theme of many speeches and proposed debates.

This being an election year affords the Young Democrats an excellent opportunity to participate in party politics. Planned, are a voter registration drive and then a door bell-ringing campaign for the Democratic candidates in the area. The club is throwing its full support behind Phillip Hoff's fight for the governorship of the state and Frederick Delaney's fight for the position of Lieutenant Governor. Also backed is Harold Reynolds drive for the position of Congressman at large from the state of Vermont.

Miss Lawrence, herself a resident of Forest Hills, New York, hopes that out-of-state students will not take a "who cares about Vermont elections" attitude. She insists that "this opportunity to observe the operations of a political party during a campaign and to support the party of your choice is too valuable to be missed."

"The United States must understand that the world is moving on and 'our place-in-the-sun' can be insured only if we are willing to move with it. The Democratic Party, headed by President Kennedy, supports those progressive ideas which must become the policy of this nation if we are to keep up with and maintain our position of leadership in the rapidly changing world. We cannot be bound by old prejudices, old beliefs, and old credos in this brave new world."

The Young Democrat's Club is ably advised by Professor Daniels of the Department of History. Prof. Daniels is chairman of the Special Projects Committee of the State Democratic Committee and is also active in the Chittenden County committee.

"Political indifference and apathy are the two biggest enemies that the United States faces today. If the Young Democrats can have their way, this University will not remain a haven for these enemies."

RESIDENCE HALLS

(Reprint from UVM Self Study)

The University is engaged in a program of reducing the number of small housing units for women. These are, by nature, more expensive in operation than are the larger units which have been built on the Redstone Campus, Patterson Hall, the newest women's residence hall, provided for a small increase in housing and made possible the elimination of Mansfield House as a dwelling unit. Completion of the projected units attached to Patterson Hall will permit the withdrawal of women students from some other houses, particularly Claggett, and Sanders probably should be sold while Grassmount could become an excellent alumni and faculty house providing facilities for entertainment and for guests of the University.

The new residence hall for men will house nearly all of the sophomore and junior men, with the other underclassmen and some seniors living in fraternity houses. The remainder of the seniors will have to continue to rent rooms in the city. In the past, residence halls for men have been very inadequate. It is believed that with the opening of the new hall, there will be a change in attitude regarding University housing, and that living there will be considered a privilege rather than a requirement. In all, four more units of a size comparable with the present one are planned for the area which will be available to the University with the final removal of University Heights and the relocation of WJOY.

Outing Club Draws Following For Climb

Eighteen University students climbed from Smugglers Notch, a narrow cleft between Mt. Mansfield and the Sterling Mountains, last Sunday, following the Long Trail, Vermont's "footpath in the wilderness", up to Sterling Pond and Lodge. The trail looks across at the profile of Mt. Mansfield. At Sterling Lodge, some climbers built a fire and boiled water for a hot drink. Others ate sandwiches, nobly trying to stay on good terms with the insect population. After lunch part of the group followed a ski trail around Sterling Pond, up Spruce Peak and collapsed on the sundeck of the warming hut, while two members, roused to adventure, bailed out a submerged rowboat, undoubtedly left over from the War of 1812, and proudly ferried themselves across Sterling Pond. All day it was the mud that attracted particular attention. It was everywhere—underfoot, overhanging, massed around. No one can appreciate the amount of mud that filled the forests of the mountainside, unless he actively struggled down the trails. As the group tumbled out of the woods, picnickers in the notch were startled.

Outing Club was very pleased to see such an interested group of prospective members on the 24th, in Southwick lounge. Terry Safford, president, introduced Claude Phipps, vice-president, Cynthia Thompson, secretary, and Chris Moore, treasurer. The council presented this year's program and trips. After the business meeting, Roger Ketchum showed some excellent slides of Outing Club members and "chaperones" on trips and in activities. Special note was made by John Jay's ski film on the 9th of November and of Mountain Day, October 7.

Mountain Day is the traditional all University climbing day. The Outing Club runs the outing for the Student Association, which originated Mountain Day, many years ago. Buses will drive climbers to Underhill, where groups will begin the easiest ascent up Maple Ridge, Mt. Mansfield, the highest of the Green Mountains, rises 4,393 feet above the sea. Along the horizon from the summit, on a clear day, you will see the Adirondacks beyond Lake Champlain and even Mt. Royal overlooking the city of Montreal. Have the fun of walking along the forehead, nose, lips, and chin of the famous profile. You will eat your sandwiches from a ledge where the flank of the mountain west and watch the cloud shadows and fall foliage. Cider and doughnuts for everyone will be packed up to the summit and served free. Many trails offer varied afternoon side excursions to the Octagon House, chairlift, Green Mountain lodges, or whatever.

Anyone connected with the University and interested in Outing Club is sincerely invited to come on any trip. Membership cards can be obtained on any of the trips or at a meeting. Watch the club bulletin board in Waterman for trip announcements.

Prof. Colburn To Be Honored

On Friday, October 5, a reception will be held at the Fleming Museum in honor of Professor Francis Colburn who has just completed his second decade at UVM. Being here on campus since 1942 Prof. Colburn has become well-known to everyone through his paintings and his recording of "A Graduation Address. The public is cordially invited to attend this event which is scheduled to begin 8:00 p.m. Faculty wives will be pouring and students of Prof. Colburn will be ushering.

An exhibition of his work, which is on display now at the museum, opens officially on Sunday, October 7. Here is a wonderful opportunity to see the talent of one of UVM's own faculty on display, so do plan to attend.

Billings Library Becomes New Student Center

UVM students will soon return to the old Billings Library - which is to be the new student center. (Credit: A. Toir, S.P.S.)

The adaptability in 1962 of the architectural treasure which was Billings Library at the University of Vermont and which will be the Billings Center late this fall is being demonstrated daily as this well-constructed building of 1885 undergoes transformation.

The gift of Frederick Billings, UVM 1884, nearly 80 years ago, this massive red sandstone building in the romanesque style was emptied of its books last October when students and staff engineered a mass move to the new Guy W. Bailey Memorial Library. The architect of Billings Library was the famous Henry Hobson Richardson and the building, so long and so well used, is regarded as one of his masterpieces.

University officials and the architectural firm of Barr, Linde and Hubbard have worked carefully, it is apparent, to preserve the best of the traditional Billings Library building, and to add with discretion the innovations required by a student body eight times as large as the one for which this structure was originally devised.

Almost undetectable in the renovation are changes in the exterior of Billings. Its interior, although divided into space in line with Center needs, keeps its characteristic appearance.

The huge fireplaces in the lobby and the Marsh Lounge will be usable. The arching structure and beams of the lobby and apse are being retained and a great amount of the almost preceless woodwork. The familiar dusky rose red paint and its related greens and buffs are being matched exactly.

The wooden columns which marked the division between study cubicles in the old days will stay in place, continuing to divide space now to be used for activities. The cubicles flank the long, open "activities lounge" which is itself separated on the south from the lobby by a huge glass partition and is furnished on its north end with a platform suitable for the presentation of skits.

The circular apse will become the "quiet reading lounge," divided into back-to-back cubicles, furnished with desks with individual reading lamps. This room will keep its two-story height but will be better ventilated than in the past, as will basement space, by means of air ducts.

The former Marsh Room to the east of the main lobby will become the "Marsh Lounge," furnished in keeping with its scholarly tradition, to be used in a formal fashion, and for lectures before small groups.

An improved main entrance to the Center will eliminate the need for the protective structure which each winter has been erected there to keep the cold winds from blowing directly into the building.

Near this entrance will be the office of Emil Spees, director of student activities, who joined the University staff on July 1. An adjoining information desk will be manned at all times.

Student groups will have a filing center in what was once the "Vermont Room," up the modern stairs which have replaced the tortuous, steep and hazardous treads of 1885; student groups will have small and large conference rooms on this upper level, joined by an overhead walk.

Student organizations which need more space will find it in the large circular room in the basement. These include the CYNIC, the Ariel, the Kake Walk Committee, and the Student Photo Staff.

On this lower level are also a snack shop, conference rooms, lobby, and a coat room to be manned continually for safe checking of belongings.

A noise-confining ceiling will go over the snack shop space and the walls will be painted, but wherever else possible, the original open beams and much of the wall paneling will be retained.

This basement area, plagued by dampness of the long years, has been thoroughly waterproofed. The roof has been made tight again.

Who Is SAM?

This question, if polled on campus, would see a lot of shrugged shoulders. A little more than a year ago, if someone had asked me this question, I would have had to confess that I did not know the answer. One year later, I'm very enthusiastic over the potentialities offered by this SAM.

You probably feel that SAM is either a very important guy or some kind of a "nut." Actually, SAM is not a "who" -- SAM is a "what". The letters S.A.M. represent the Society for Advancement of Management. It is a national organization encompassing the fields of industry, commerce, government, and education. Membership is open to anyone on campus who is interested in the work that the society does. It began in the early part of this century, 1912 to be exact, and has progressed steadily since then. Today there are 190 chapters in colleges and universities throughout the United States, Canada, and Puerto Rico. This society acts as a common meeting ground for executives already on the ladder of success and those students approaching the first rung. The information which can be obtained in an organization such as this is virtually unlimited. There are many activities such as meetings, conferences, seminars, panel discussions, plant tours, and community projects.

We are already lining up a community project as well as our monthly meetings, but most important, our chapter is hosting the Northeast Regional Conference in March. This conference will bring together about 40 chapters from New England, New York, New Jersey, and Canada. We have tried for three years to get the conference held here, so we feel pretty fortunate to have succeeded at last. This conference will not only be an asset to the chapter but to the University as well. There is much to be done and plenty of opportunities for students who are interested in bettering themselves.

We have not yet lined up the speakers for this conference, nor all the speakers for our regular monthly meetings. However, we have made arrangements for lec-

WRA PLANS NEW YEAR

The Women's Recreation Association of UVM opened its membership drive at the Klub Karnival, September 21, where many women students joined the Association. The WRA All/Sports trophy, which is awarded at the end of each school year to the living unit which has accumulated the most points in tournaments throughout the year, was on display; it contained lollipops which were given to each woman who joined WRA.

Any woman student who has not yet joined the WRA may do so by seeing any member of the WRA Council, or the WRA representative on her floor or in her house. Membership in the Association entitles a woman student to such benefits as WRA picnics, participation in sports days here and at other schools, and distures from several prominent businessmen of the Burlington area and are hoping to have nationally known business and labor leaders here for the conference. Announcements will appear in The CYNIC as further plans are made.

This, then, is SAM. An organi-

The annual WRA Planning Conference was held this year at Southwick on Saturday, September 29. Representatives attended from Middlebury College, Skidmore, Vermont College, Green Mountain Junior College, Colby Junior, Castleton State College, Plattsburg State Teachers College, and Potsdam (NY) State Teachers College. Also, in attendance were the council members and PE staff of the UVM WRA. Among the day's procedures were included the setting up of the schedule for sports days for this school year, and a film on field hockey. A buffet luncheon concluded the planning conference.

Editor's Scrapbook IFC RULES REVISED?

This past Tuesday evening representatives of IFC met with the freshman men at their dorms. Such questions as "What is Rushing," and "What is the fraternity system at UVM," were proposed and discussed. The rushing rules, which now stand, were made known to the fraternity presidents and house representatives at the first IFC meeting this year.

These rules are printed below:

1. No freshmen allowed in a fraternity house.
2. No fraternity men allowed in freshman dorms unless they live there.
3. No freshmen allowed to ride in fraternity man's car.
4. No fraternity man allowed to buy a freshman anything.
5. Minimum of contact, off campus, between freshmen and fraternity men. No drinking together, no prolonged conversation.
6. No freshmen allowed in fraternity man's apartment.

A dance is to be held October 13, at which time all UVM Freshmen will register in order to attend first rushing later this year. Fraternities will have tables set up at this dance, the purpose of which is still unclear. It is assumed that this will give the freshmen and the fraternity men a chance to look one another over, and to set down and chat for a while.

Several criticisms are in order. Drinking should not even be mentioned in such rushing regulations. Words such as "minimum contact" and "prolonged conversation" have no place in rushing rules since they are not definitive and hence they are ineffectual. It is really time to become realistic about the entire business. Why have the myriad of intricate little plans conceived and acted upon, supposedly behind everybody's back, in an effort to obtain a pledge class?

It is almost impossible to keep an eye on who is doing what legally or illegally. It would certainly be a sad state of affairs if we were to have a repeat performance of last year's charges and counter-charges by fraternities stemming from a similar set of rushing rules.

While the precise reasons for this dance are rather hazy, the benefits to be derived are non-existent. Fraternity men: Pity the poor freshman upon his entering. Allow him thirty paces within the entrance at the dance before you lasso and bind him, and begin to extol the virtues of YOUR house. At best, make sure you are the last to corral him. It is usually the last and the loudest that makes an impression.

An open policy, beginning, say, after Thanksgiving, is the best policy possible. Total no-contact up to this time and an open rushing divided into two phases, with total contact at all times after Thanksgiving would at least reduce the hypocrisy and make everything which now occurs anyway, quite legal.

IFC has taken one small step. It is now time to say: "May I," and take that one last Giant Step.

Letters To The Editor

School Spirit?

To the Editor:
Since the football season started Saturday, the usual letters about the lack of school spirit will begin to flow to the editor's office with their accustomed regularity. I would like to open the season with a flat denial of this premise. School spirit does exist at UVM. This was amply demonstrated at Freshmen Varieties Friday night, September 21. It seems that there really was talent in the Varieties. A Frosh named John Helfer appeared on stage and announced that he was going to play the classical guitar. Since there are probably not more than a dozen or so classical guitarists in New England and none in Vermont, this is an opportunity that few of us will ever have again. Mr. Helfer, however, was not allowed to play. In an example of rudeness which will probably not be paralleled this year in any other college in this country, Mr. Helfer was booed and catcalled off the stage. What could be more indicative of the Vermont spirit? We in Vermont have spirit. We proved this Friday night, September 21st, and we can be proud of ourselves.

This letter, I'm sure, will have the usual effect that letters of this sort do. There will be either a flood of angry protests and threats or indifference. Perhaps it is time that people who worry about this behavior and attitude do something. What? I don't know. Maybe mass transfers are in order. It does seem a shame, though, to waste the faculty and facilities of Vermont.

To Mr. Bowman...

Dear Mr. Bowman:
It has again come to the attention of The Student Association Senate that noise and socializing in the library is making it increasingly difficult for good study habits. At last week's SA Senate Meeting, unanimous vote recommended that the library staff take immediate action in evicting those persons who are using the library as a social center and making it impossible to be used for study. If people do not wish to assume responsibility in showing respect for the library, we advise that they should be evicted by the staff. We, of course, realize that this necessitates a "watch-dog" system and also that this is not the role of a librarian. Therefore, it seems necessary, in order to create a real university library atmosphere in Bailey, that library staff, faculty, and students join in creating such an atmosphere by stressing to the thoughtless and inconsiderate the need for quiet and consideration for others.

I think we are aware of the responsibility and maturity which most college students should display; and it is in this respect that we offer a suggestion for alleviating this problem.

Very truly yours,
Paul N. Chervin
President

Mr. Bowman Replies

From discussion, we know that the Bailey staff agrees fully with this letter, and we take this occasion to remind UVM students that: 1) Books will not be loaned without showing I.D. cards. This will reduce the number of non-returned and unaccounted for books in the library's circulation records. To use Reserve Books and Periodicals in the library, showing an I.D. card will not be required. 2) The library staff will undertake to impress upon students, when necessary, that they are not showing consideration to serious readers. 3) The question on non-UVM student use of Bailey is now under discussion with other institutions to establish the following general policy: a) Bailey's study and reference facilities will not be generally available to non-UVM students. Students from other institutions can use the library only upon presenting a request from the librarian of their own school saying that the student needs materials not available in his own library. The materials requested in this manner will be used in Bailey only, and not loaned out of the library. 4) Library staff, students, and faculty must be more cooperative in making the exit control more effective.

A continuation of the cooperative spirit shown during last November's moving will, if continued, be all we really need to alleviate the present problems and establish in Bailey the air of a real university library.

From the Boston University News of September 18, comes the following: "Most students come to school to learn, and, if possible, to enjoy themselves while doing so. In addition they feel that life at the University offers a chance to meet new friends, to mature, to become cultured, and to acquire the other attributes desirable in the modern man or woman."

"But, on this campus there is one group of students who are not interested in any of these—they have other things on their minds."

"To begin with, the majority of this group is seldom seen in class. Several of them cut enough classes in one semester to last them through four years of undergraduate study and at least five years of graduate work..."

"They do not enjoy themselves, and neither do they meet new friends. Other students shun them with much the same aversion they would exhibit before a case of the mumps."

"Members of the faculty, too, seem to be averse to having these people in their classes and look for all manner of plots to have them dropped out of classes."

"Mature they do not, for never a day passes that students sitting in that tabernacle of higher learning known as the Commons, do not compare this segment of their population to 'A bunch of two year old kids.'"

Who then are these apparently offensive people, none other than the snooping reporters of the BU News. The headline was, "So You Want To Be A Reporter."

Is Vermont a cultural desert? One brave columnist on the Syracuse Daily Orange, in the September 25 issue, attempted to defend the cries of babes who've returned from the culture-laden cities of the world. Much of his defense of Syracuse, can perhaps be applied to UVM.

"To those of you fresh from a summer near New York, Chicago, or San Francisco, your senses filled with pungent memories of symphony orchestras, theatres, movie houses, are galleries, lecture halls, museums, radio and TV stations, Syracuse may surely seem a cultural desert."

"A twist of your local radio dial may tune in Dandy Dan Leonard instead of Jacques Frey. Jim Deline may fill your TV screen instead of David Susskind. A rock 'n' roll show may be featured at a local station instead of Leonard Bernstein at the Philharmonic Hall. And 'Peyton Place' may be playing at Fayetteville instead of a Bergman film festival in Queens..."

He continues to make a list of the available cultural activities on-campus, that would be comparable to Vermont's Lane Series, guest lecturers, Vermont Conference, lectures and discussions at the Loft, or at the various religious groups... or perhaps, a special exhibit at the Museum, or a Players Production. Indidentally, are you aware, that over the summer, Burlington acquired a full-time FM station? (98.9 on your FM dial.)

Burlington, like Syracuse, or many other college towns, "does not feed you culture on a silver spoon as does New York or San Francisco. It used a stainless steel spoon, and you must feed yourself."

An article that appeared in the September 26 edition of the Daily Campus (U Conn) revealed the expanded reciprocal graduate programs available to New England students. The program allows New England residents to be admitted at graduate schools in this area for in-state tuition. "New graduate programs open to Vermont students are law and sanitary engineering at Maine."

THINKING OUT LOUD

A HERITAGE OF DECADENCE

For a long time I have maintained that a good part of our population, concentrated mostly in the South, was almost totally insane. As I write, the happenings at the University of Mississippi have more than proven me right. They have an old tradition to uphold, down there, and they are doing a fine job of it. Governor Ross Barnett is making himself the third of Dixie's own version of the Three B's: Blease, Bilbo, and Barnett. Bilbo and Barnett, it will be noted, are both Mississippians. If figures.

For the first time during the whole affair with James Meredith, the Negro who is trying to enroll in Ole Miss, Barnett showed some sense. In his statement capitulating to the inevitable, he said that while his heart told him differently, and was against the move, his better judgement told him to avoid the inevitable bloodshed that would needlessly follow if the National Guard were called, and that he was going to allow Meredith to enroll in the University. In true Southern fashion, he tempered the sense with the already evident signs of the moral and intellectual vacuum that still thinks of itself as the Confederate States of America. He said that his heart told him differently -- in effect, that he knew it was against all moral dictates, that it was wrong and sinful, to admit a Negro to such a bastion of white supremacy as Ole Miss.

Some others did not, however, show even the minimal respect for reason that the Governor showed. When Barnett made his statement that the school was to be integrated, everything let loose. In Jackson, the state capital, an occasional shot of tear gas was needed from the federal marshalls to keep the rioters from becoming too violent. In Oxford, where the University is located, the budding intellectuals there went even further. Marshalls had to form a ring around the building where Meredith was to register to keep the mob from breaking in. Of necessity, they wore helmets and vests containing gas masks and tear gas cylinders, and almost everyone carried a tear gas gun, as well as the usual pistol. This ring of marshalls was forced to fire a barrage of gas to stop an outbreak of vandalism. Then came an organizer.

Shortly after the barrage of gas mentioned above, former Major-General Edwin Walker demonstrated that we are better off now that he is out of the military. He rallied the students and general riff-raff there behind him, and the mob, with Walker at its head, attacked the line of marshalls, throwing bricks. Fortunately, the tear gas dispelled the mob again. Walker promised to regroup the attack again, but he never did, which is certainly no misfortune. He also reiterated his promise to arm thousands of private citizens if necessary, and bring them to Mississippi if he thinks they are needed there.

This wave of small-time anarchy was not just noise. Several marshalls were injured, and at least one newsman was killed. And of course, numerous bystanders and demonstrators were also injured.

To add to this disgusting show, the politicians had their say. Governor Faubus of Arkansas, another of Barnett's ilk, said that if President Kennedy sent troops into Mississippi he would lose the whole South to the Democratic Party, which, of course, Mr. Kennedy is titular head of. Isn't it typical of a Southerner to warn Kennedy of his political stakes, completely disregarding any grounds of principle? Perhaps it is because Mr. Faubus himself is not the most principled of men, unless he calls hunting Negroes as a pastime "principle." In any event, the best thing for the country would be to dissociate the South from the Democratic Party. Every bar to progress in Congress seems to have a Dixiecrat behind it.

A delegation from that other great paragon of progress and civil rights, Louisiana, presented a scroll to Barnett which read, in part: "We rededicate ourselves to the tasks of exposing the conspiracy which seeks to overrun the proud peoples of Mississippi, Louisiana, and other states where freedom has not been crushed." A message from the Governor of Alabama, Senators Sparkman (to think that he was almost our Vice President) and Hill of Alabama, and the state's nine Congressmen said that they were behind Barnett all the way.

A few Southerners, notably Georgia's Governor Vandiver, said that no matter what they thought of the act of integrating Ole Miss, they were definitely against Barnett and his actions, and that he was foolhardy to act as he had. Some Southerners have some sense left, but they aren't easy to find.

And while all this sickening mess is getting more disgusting by the hour, Barnett, Walker, and the others like them continue to argue that they are merely sticking up for States' Rights, and that sort of bilge. Until they begin to be honest with themselves, and until they get all the poor white trash out of high office, the politics of the South, and especially of an earthly Hell like Mississippi, will continue to be almost entirely a contest to see who can shout (pardon me) "Nigger!" the loudest. Yes, friends, be proud of the United States. Some day even a Negro might be able to be proud too. Then we can all whistle "Dixie" together. Hail, Blease, Bilbo, and Barnett, hail!

FOOTNOTE: Shortly after the above was written I learned that not one man, but two, had been killed, one having been shot in the back. It was also announced that General Walker was taken prisoner, charged with "Rebellion, Insurrection, and Seditious Conspiracy" and sent to a hospital for federal prisoners, there to undergo a psychiatric examination. I wasn't so far off, when I said that so many in Mississippi were almost completely insane."

Faculty

Awards Fellowships

Each year the faculty of the University of Vermont recommend students to be the recipients of a national fellowship. Last year, a recipient of this honor was Ed Whalen, a 1962 graduate.

To accomplish its purpose of attracting large numbers of men and women to the profession of college teaching, the Foundation annually awards fellowships to 1,000 prospective first-year graduate students, and honorable mention to another 1,500. Woodrow Wilson Fellows are chosen from about 10,000 candidates nominated by college faculty members in the United States and Canada. From funds granted by the Ford Foundation, a Fellow is fully supported for one academic year at a United States or Canadian graduate school.

The Foundation primarily supports candidates in the humanities and social sciences since financial aid from other sources for students in the sciences is plentiful. Science and mathematics majors with a clear interest in a teaching career may be nominated, but if U.S. citizens, they must apply simultaneously for a National Science Foundation Fellowship and accept that award if it is offered.

A Fellow receives a living stipend of $1,500.00 for one academic year. If married at the time the award is offered, he is entitled to an additional allowance of $500.00 for his wife, $400.00 for the first child, and $200.00 for each additional child. Tuition and fees are paid directly to the Fellow's graduate school. A Fellow is not supported at his own undergraduate institution unless he is enrolled in a three-year M.A. program or can present strong personal reasons for remaining there. All candidates are urged to apply simultaneously for financial aid from other sources.

Every candidate must be nominated by a faculty member no later than October 31, 1962. Forms sent to the candidate upon nomination must be returned to the Regional Chairman by November 20, 1962. By the end of December, 1962, a candidate must have applied to a least one graduate school in the United States or Canada. Notifications of awards and honorable mention are sent out by March 15, 1963.

How many cuts have you taken, so far this semester? If you've only had one, that's one more than the Freshmen at U Conn. are allowed to have. According to the Daily Campus of Sept. 18, "There is no cut system for freshmen. . . . Attendance is taken in all courses numbered 199 and below. The Attendance records for all freshmen and sophomores are maintained in the registrar's office. Students failing to submit acceptable excuses for class absences will be called into the attendance office and placed on warning."

OVER LIGHTLY

by Joel Posner

"THE HOLIEST SACRAMENT"

Last week, I heard a campus clergyman and a member of the Psychiatric staff of the UVM Medical College discuss their respective roles in dealing with people.

We tend to think of psychiatrists as almost mystical guardians of some hidden and powerful knowledge. Many of us feel it is immoral for one of them to use this knowledge to try to convince us of something. We protest that he is making us want something we don't really want, that he is somehow using his black magic to subvert our will.

The psychiatrist I heard disturbed me precisely because he did not fit the picture. He answered most questions with the explanation that while he - as an individual - felt strongly about some aspect of human behavior, he - as a scientist - could make no definitive statement on the subject. Yes - he said - he felt organizational pressures on people were harmful, but - no - he, as a scientist, didn't KNOW they were.

Now, this is something taken for granted in academic societies. No college student worth his salt has not, somewhere, ranted against The Organization. Everyone KNOWS it is the root of all evil. Everyone, that is, but the scientist who studies human behavior. He is not really sure about anything.

This, as I said, disturbed me. Where are we, if in this age of nuclear bombs, of "Atheistic Communists", of hidden persuaders - we can't tap the fount of universal knowledge for our side? Even more important, where are all the people who go to psychiatrists for help? And why do so many of them emerge as better people for having gone?

The answer to that, perhaps, is that these people benefit not from scientific treatment so much as from the partaking of the holiest --- maybe the one holy --- of human sacraments: It is the sacrament of two people joining together . . . uniting in a peculiar way, if only for a short time and for the benefit of one of them. It is the sacrament of a man talking to his priest (and, some believe, through that priest to God.) It is the sacrament of one human being committing himself to another. It is the sacrament that is the one salvation. It is, my friends, the sacrament of love.

It is not an easy sacrament to partake of. To do it, we must overcome the original sin of self-centeredness which is our birthright. But unless we can learn to love, we will, I fear, condemn ourselves to a Hell of loneliness, of isolation.

We are fortunate that men have had the wisdom to create for those of us who are in that Hell to partake in the saving sacrament. Let us now hope that man --- who has been so successful in using his intellect to give us things to lengthen and shape our lives --- will be successful in using his heart to give us the understanding to make our lives meaningful.

Geologist To Lecture

A professor of geology at the University of Illinois, who is on tour as Sigma Xi national lecturer, will speak at the University of Vermont on Tuesday, (Oct. 2).

Dr. Jack Luin Hough will discuss "The Prehistoric Great Lakes of North America" at 8 p.m. in Memorial Loungs. His appearance at UVM is co-sponsored by the Vermont chapter of Sigma Xi and by the University Lecture Series. The Lecture is open to the public.

Dr. Hough, who will speak throughout New England and New York during his month-long tour, says that some 10,000 years ago, Lake Huron was 390 feet lower than it is today. "The first known lakes that later evolved into the five Great Lakes come into existence only about 15,000 years ago, as melting water from the glaciers accumulated between the retreating ice fronts and the broad valley basins," says Dr. Hough.

The aging process has been slow in the Great Lakes, but is now being accelerated by men's increasing use of the waters for recreation, water supply and sewage disposal, he warns.

A Chicago native, Dr. Hough has been a devotee of the Great Lakes since his early years of camping, nature study, and sailing activities along the shores of Lake Michigan.

He took his B.S., M.S., and Ph.D. degrees at the University of Chicago, writing his Master's thesis on the bottom sediments of Lake Michigan and the Doctor's thesis on Cape Cod and Buzzard's Bay sediments under the joint supervision of the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution.

Dr. Hough was an oceanographer and submarine geologist on the U.S. Navy Antarctic Expedition of 1946 and 1947. In the fall of 1947, he joined the staff of the University of Illinois department of geology and soon thereafter began a series of studies which led to the writing of the book "Geology of the Great Lakes" for which he received the Geological Society of American Kirk Bryan Award. In 1954-55 he was head of the department of geology and geophysics at the Indian Institute of Technology at Kharagpur, India.

"The unforgivable sin in a university is complacency and conformity..." The Xavier University News of September 21 covered the annual address to freshmen by the president of the University. Father O'Conner said: "I want you to be rebels in the good sense of the word. I am not pleading for an intellectual revolt, but I am pleading for a little intellectual initiative and inquiry."

"The success of the student in college will depend largely on his determination. Determination is something that doesn't appear on pre-college tests or on high school transcripts. It is a God-given desire, a nagging hurting thing that drives you on when everything seems against you, when the easiest thing is just to lie down and quit, the desire to develop all the talents within you to the fullest."

"Sound Of Music" Fails To Live Up To Expectations

by Carol Mable

The 1962-63 George Bishop Lane Artists Series opened last Monday with the award-winning musical, "The Sound of Music". Or, perhaps it would be better to say the "once-upon-a-time" award-winning musical, for Monday night's performance did not live up to the reputation established by a three-year run on Broadway. The show's failure to move, though it endured for two and a half hours, cannot be blamed on the performers themselves.

Jeanne Carson, in the role of Maria Rainer, was charming, child-like, and poignant. It was Miss Carson's buoyant spirit and powerful singing that made one almost forget that the first act lasted for a gruelling one and a half hours.

The sisters of the Nonnberg Abbey were at their best in the delightful song, "Maria", though their acting seemed a trifle forced, particularly in the case of Rosalind Hupp, who portrayed the Mother Abess.

The whistle-blowing Baron Von

Baroness Von Trapp and Marion Force, Chairman of Lane Series, at Performance of "Sound of Music." (Credit: A. Toik, S.P.S.)

Trapp, John Van Dreelan, and his uniformed tribe of children were excellent in those scenes involving Miss Carson, but whenever she left the stage, the whole company lost most of its spirit.

As just "another musical", the show could have been called a success, if the technical aspects had not been so disturbingly faulty. The audience was constantly bothered by improper lighting and slow, noisy scene changes. These slow changes prevented the play from forming a coherent whole, and made it instead an entertaining evening of listening to familiar tunes, with little story line, between them.

Undoubtedly, many of the spoken lines were enjoyable, but the acoustics of Memorial Auditorium managed to lose most of these somewhere up around the basketball net. One wonders what kind of a review the actors give a theatre on the morning after.

Scene And Heard

by Sue Millman

The UVM campus is still bubbling over with talk of summer happenings. During the summer, available brothers and pledges of Phi Mu Delta spent their free hours on high ladders with just buckets of dark green paint for company. Result: one neatly painted, dark green fraternity house, as well as several dark green pledges! The sorors of Gamma Phi returned to Burlington to find their house covered with a new coat of white paint. The ADPIs were very pleased with their newly decorated front hall and upstairs -- compliments of their Alums. What was even nicer was the fact that the ADPIs were able to show their newly decorated house to representatives from different chapters in their Province at a Workshop the weekend preceding Freshman Week.

To add to all this excitement, Representatives Hedy Reis and Gina Selman of Delta Delta Delta returned from National Convention at Hot Springs, Arkansas, with many new ideas for the coming year. The brothers of Sigma Phi enjoyed talking to Richard Holden, who spent the summer in the "Old World."

EXCITEMENT!

The AEPis invited the AEPis to a dessert hour last week. The boys introduced a newly formed band, whose debut, by the way, was quite successful.

The ADPIs had Dean Ohanesian as their dinner guest. Needless to say, they are proud of Jean Conner, '65, who sang for us at the S.A. Pep Rally.

The sigma Phis are looking forward to a great intramural football season. Competition has already begun. The AEPis were victorious last week when they beat the TEPs 18-6.

The weekend hails more excitement. Saturday evening the AEPis are having a "Jungle Party." Music will be provided by the Rockers. Everyone on campus is welcome. Friday afternoon and Saturday morning are two days to remember -- the AEPis are having their annual "minute" car wash.

The 8th edition of Lambda Iota's Garbage Collectors Coalition was held last Saturday night and was a big success again this year.

WELCOME

It ought to be a good year for the Sigma Phis with their new adviser, Lt. John Strickler of the ROTC Dept. The ADPIs held a tea on Sunday, September 23, to introduce their new housemother, Mrs. Pace, to the campus. A large crowd made the welcome a memorable one. Tri Delta welcomes back Jackie Flick Peterson and Sandy Cameron.

POTPOURRI

Congratulations to the newly elected officers of Lambda Iota: James Foley, Vice President; Jim Douglas, Secretary; Paul Hudson, House Manager; Norm Blair, Social Chairman; John Carbone, Athletic Chairman; Dewey Caron, Scholastic Integrator; John Morse, Publicity Chairman; George Cronk, Rushing Chairman; and Rod Gibeault, Corresponding Secretary.

Congratulations are also due Jim Suskin of Phi Sigma Delta on being elected as new Vice Master Frater.

Cupid has been busy in adorning UVM coeds with fraternity pins. Best of luck to the brothers of Phi Sigma Delta and their pinmates: Fred Gabbe and Joan Tumpowsky, Mickey Steinberg and Sue Bertheimer, Larry Steinberg and Loraine Kugell, and Jerry Winkler and Maggie Berger. Congratulations to Tri Delta's Gina Selman, who recently became pinned to Chuck Love-lage of Dennison University, and also to Tri Delta's Irvine Dantelson and Arnie Pellegrini of Delta Psi. Congratulations are also in order for Lambda Iota's Bill Rowe, '63 and Dick Dutton, '64 on their pinnings to Judy Johnston, '65 and Dale Parker, '65, respectively. Best wishes to Sharon Newton, ADPI, '64 and Joe St. Onge of Sig Ep, who is now attending school at Northwestern University.

Congratulations to Phi Sigma Delta's Mike Rosenbaum and his fiancée Barbara Isaacson, and to Phi Mu Delta's Bill Vavies, '63 who just became engaged to Sheila Feely of Vermont College.

Wedding chimes resounded on the UVM campus. Added to the ranks of Phi Mu Delta's married Brotherhood is Chuck McCuin, '62, who was married to Nitia Kenz of Highgate. Best wishes to Tri Delta's Peggy Sadler-Tonseth and to John Tonseth, who were married August twenty-fifth and also to Tri Delta's Mary Webb Pratt and Roy Pratt of Lambda Iota, who were married on September first. A big congratulations to Sigma Phi's Stu Burroughs, '63, who married the former Gineva Peterson of Boston University this summer.

Pershing Rifles Hosts Fresh Men

Tuesday evening, September 25, Company L-12, PERSHING RIFLES, at the University of Vermont, was host to more than 60 freshman men at its annual first semester smoker. This event introduced PERSHING RIFLES to the class of incoming ROTC cadets and gave them a chance to consider the merits of joining the organization.

The program consisted of brief talks by faculty advisor Capt. A. Short, Company Commander, Capt. Frank Bolden and other members of the officer staff. A demonstration of precision trick drill was also offered by members of the PERSHING RIFLES trick drill team.

This marks the fifth year of operation for PERSHING RIFLES on this campus. Each year has seen successive growth and improvement, with this year promising to be the biggest year in the organization's brief history. Plans for the year feature a trip to the national convention in New Orleans along with several drill competitions and assemblies in Boston and Washington D.C.

Freshmen who are interested in joining may still do so. They should contact Operations Officer, 1st Lieutenant Abbott Brayton at extension 583.

We all make mistakes.

Reflections of Telstar

Remember the picture above? It flashed across your television screen on a hot night last July. Perhaps you remember that it originated from France. And that it reached the U.S. via Telstar, the world's first private enterprise communications satellite.

Since that summer night, the Bell System's Telstar has relayed electronic signals of many types—television broadcasts, telephone calls, news photographs, and others.

But there's one Telstar reflection you might have missed. Look into the faces of the Bell System people below and you'll see it. It is the reflection of Telstar's success that glowed brightly on the faces of all who shared in the project.

Their engineering, administrative and operations skills created Telstar and are bringing its benefits down out of the clouds to your living room.

These Bell System people, through their talented, dedicated efforts, make your phone service still better, more economical, and more useful.

The reflections of Telstar are many.

Intramural touch football, between fraternity and independent groups is again occupying the spotlight in non-varsity sports activity. As in the past, the fraternities are divided into four leagues, A-D, competing amongst each other. League A is composed of Sigma Nu, Alpha Gamma Rho, Alpha Tau Omega and Tau Epsilon Phi. "B" consists of Delta Psi, Theta Chi, Sigma Alpha Epsilon and Phi Sigma Delta. League C contains Alpha Epsilon Phi, Sigma Phi Epsilon, Sigma Phi and Kappa Sigma. The final fraternity league, "D", includes Acacia, Phi Mu Delta, Lambda Iota and Phi Delta Theta. The ultimate winners of leagues A - C and B - D will meet in a semi-final playoff. These winners will then compete to determine the fraternity championship.

There are also independent-dorm leagues (E & F) from Chittenden, Buckham, Wills and Converse Halls. League G, made up of graduate students and dorm counsellors will also compete in the tournament. The victors in the dorm-independent and grad leagues will then compete against the fraternity champions for the all campus title.

The type football played is commonly known as razzle-dazzle, which permits unlimited forward, lateral and rear passing. There is no tackling, as the ball is declared dead when a defender touches the carrier with one hand. Each team is made up of seven players, with unlimited substitutions permitted. The game consists of four quarters of 15 plays each. Each team has five plays in which to score. There are no first downs. All games commence at 4:15 P.M. sharp, in front of the freshmen men's dormitories.

Cats Rip RPI 82-6; Set New Record

Football Personalities

The Men: Tackles "Zeke" Sequist and "Ollie" Thoresen are UVM's typical linemen. (Credit: Audio-Visual)

by Bernie Zaccaro

College football teams usually have one or more huge, burly linemen, who comprise the mainstay of the forward wall. The Catamounts are no exception. Dave Sequist and Merrill Thoresen are the two cement blocks that shatter the stability of UVM's opponents each Saturday on the gridiron.

Dave, a member of the class of '63, attended East Hartford High School in Connecticut, where he was active in sports, participating in four years of football. While in high school, Dave played end, and later switched to the interior line. Besides football, Dave also belonged to the Track squad for four years, where he threw the shot put. He was placed on the second team of the All-Connecticut Football Selections, to mark his abilities in pre-college days.

Sequist, a zoology major, in the College of Arts & Sciences, is seeking a career as a Veterinarian.

Merril, a '64 man, also attended East Hartford High, where he was active in four major sports: football, basketball, baseball, and track. He too, attained some honor by making the All-District Team. From high school, Merrill attended Bridgeton Academy, a prep school in Maine for one year.

Now in the College of Arts & Sciences, Thoresen plans to coach as his profession for the future.

The two husky tackles had little to say about last week's slaughter over RPI aside from the fact that they were happy they won. They are both aware of the fact that this week's game should be tougher, but have the confidence and determination to be victorious.

UVM Skiers Get Ready For Season

by Prentice Phelps

The large group of men that was seen playing soccer on the middle field in front of Wills Hall was not a soccer team; but it was a team. That group of players was the 1962-63 UVM Alpine and Nordic ski team, under the direction of the new head coach, Jake Stewart. The conditioning and coordination that a racer needs is often underestimated, and Stewart was not cutting any corners when he started practice on the 20th.

This is the first time that the team has had an early fall workout in quite a few years. With new training clothes and equipment, Coach Stewart is looking forward to having this large (about 70 in all) and eager group of ski-enthusiasts trimmed down and in the best shape possible by the first snowfall.

Top physical conditioning is important in any sport as everyone well knows. In the sport of skiing there is no exception. No athlete could race down a steep, treacherous, two mile downhill course, or run cross-country for five miles and not be in good physical condition. Our American FIS team trained all summer for just one week of races. Coach Stewart is employing many of the same training tactics used by them as he has scheduled trips to Stowe and to other mountain ranges. Running is a necessity for getting ski-legs in shape, and the team will be running about four miles a day. Jake has also included in his fitness program, weight lifting, trampoline, bicycling, and calisthenics.

Last year Vermont's ski team was one of limited numbers and support. The Varsity only had seven (a full team is eight) men competing in both alpine and nordic events and was therefore hindered in its chances in the carnivals and meets. This year however, Coach Stewart hopes to have as many as twenty-five Varsity hopefuls by the time the season starts. This will create more and better competition for those first eight positions, and a better team to represent the green and gold this winter.

Most of last year's lettermen are returning this season and are headed by co-captains, Tom Clark and mainstay Rick Hubbard. Also returning are Jim Dwinell, Sky Thurber, Dave Umstead, Chris Quimby, and Dave Christianson. Competing with these men for a varsity berth is last year's Freshman team consisting of Nash Lamb, Bob Ireland, John Wilsie, Chuck Baraw, and Chuck Stewart. These Sophomores, along with promising Rod Carnile, will add to the depth of the team and help make it known in the years to come.

Coach Stewart was most impressed with the large turnout of Freshmen. For the meeting held on Thursday, the 20th, there were over 40 Freshmen present. Jake expects that this number will decrease as the season moves along, but if it doesn't, he will have a large and difficult cut to make, which would be quite ironic compared to last year. In making a prediction for the coming season, Coach Stewart, who took over the team last January, was optimistic as he said that the cross-country unit would be the strongest part of the team and the new depth would be a great help.

Clifford Is Expecting Trouble From Maine In UVM's First Yankon Game

Vermont's football Catamounts established a new all-time university scoring record by overwhelming Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, 82-6 last Saturday at Troy, New York.

The 82 point total eclipsed the previous mark by twenty points. During UVM's first football season way back in 1897, the turn-of-the-century Cats walloped Norwich 62-4; a record that was equaled again in 1922 when the Green and Gold ran over the Cadets 62-0.

CATS NOT NAPPING

The Catamounts play their first Yankee Conference game Saturday against powerful Maine, at Centennial Field. The Cats are not resting on the impetus of their spectacular drubbing of RPI to gain their first Conference victory. They are preparing to clash with the heavier Black Bears, who have always given Vermont trouble in the past, with confidence in their offensive power.

Coach Clifford is familiar with Maine's tactics, for his Colby team met them every year during his six year tenure at the Maine college in the State Series. He knows what to expect, which could be anything, and plans to be ready for it on Saturday. Maine has lost their last two games to Rhode Island, 14-7, and to Massachusetts, 10-0, and are seeking their first Yankee win.

SATURDAY'S SLAUGHTER

With only three minutes and thirty seconds gone in the game, speedy halfback Ken Burton sprinted 53 yards through a huge hole over right tackle to start the scoring parade. Twenty-two seconds later, alert Deane Kent intercepted a misguided Engineer missile and ran it back 27 yards for the Cats second TD within a minute.

The next time the Catamounts gained possession of the pigskin, they scored again as Kent scampered 28 yards up the middle for the touchdown. Dave Baker's third successful conversion brought the score to 21-0 at the end of the first period.

Frank Amato registered the first of his three tallies at 3:09 of the second stanza on a one-yard dive into the end-zone. With RPI offering little resistance, the touchdowns kept coming as sophomore quarterback Jim Brennan sneaked over from the 4-yard line. It took only twenty seconds for the Cats to score again. This time Al Brown picked off an RPI pass and raced 26 yards with to pilfered pigskin for UVM's final TD. . . . of the half. After Baker connected on one of two PAT attempts, Brennan elected to try for a two point conversion. He passed to Wayne Van Ham for the extra points that rounded the score off to 42-0 at half-time.

"WHEN YOU'RE DOWN AND OUT"

The RPI band played an inspiring song, "Hey Look Me Over," during the half-time break which contained lyrics that fit the Engineers situation perfectly. The song states that "when your down and out, the only way is up." Unfortunately this did not spur the RPI squad to rally as the Green and Gold added six more touchdowns in the second half.

It was amazing how quickly the Cats scored two more TDs. On the first play of the half, sophomore fullback Richie Reynolds broke away for a beautiful 64-yard scoring run, with only 38 seconds gone. After the defense forced RPI to punt Ken Burton took off for the game's longest run, a 74-yard touchdown jaunt at 3:53, again on the first play of that set of downs.

Amato scored his second TD on an 11-yard run at 9:41 of the third period, and VanHam returned an intercepted pass 42 yards for another score at 11:21. Amato then grabbed a punt blocked by Ray Bello out of the air and streaked 39-yards down the sideline for his third TD. Baker converted on the first three tallies of the period to raise the score to 75-0.

It was here that RPI managed to convert a Vermont fumble into six points. The Engineers recovered on the Cats 42-yard line and drove for the score with a determined drive capped by a 3-yard sweep by Ron Tocci to avert a shut-out.

Brennan ended the scoring with a 43-yard end-sweep with less than three minutes left in the game. Carl Ettlingev's kick boosted the tally to 82-6 and so ended the game.

CATAMOUNT CLIPPINGS

By RAY BELLO

At least the Rensselaer rooters had something to cheer about during last Saturday's game, as an RPI cross-country man finished first in a meet that was being held simultaneously with the football game. While he crossed the finish line in front of the Rensselaer stands, the fans applauded wildly, but their cheers abruptly subsided as they caught a glimpse of the stadium scoreboard which read, 75-0. . . . While the Vermont backfield was collecting touchdowns, the linemen were trying to earn themselves a tie, the kind you hang around your neck and not on the scoreboard. The reward for spectacular line-play such as causing or recovering a fumble, intercepting a pass, tackling the quarterback before he throws the pass, or blocking a punt is a two-fifty cravat. . . .

Nobody asked me but -- Dave Baker kicked-off 15 times against RPI for probably some kind of record. . . . The game films showed that Vermont could do no wrong Saturday. They made many mistakes, but each time they did, RPI could not capitalize on them. The Cats are working hard this week to sharpen their claws for the Black Bears of Maine. They are trying to forget about the spectacular swamping of RPI and concentrate on scoring a few TD's against the Bears.

SPEAKING OF SCORES

Saturday's 82-6 lop-sided score not only established a new university all-time high, but might well be the highest point total for any NCAA football team this year.

Unfortunately for RPI this was not their worst defeat. Colgate walloped team 107-0 in 1915 for their all-time set-back.

Rensselaer has not won a game in two years and have lost twenty-one in a row. Good luck to RPI in their remaining games this year, they'll need it.

The largest score on record for a football contest was registered by George Tech when they completely annihilated Cumberland State Teachers 212-0 back in 1911.

When speaking of astronomically high scores, coaching ethics must be considered. Coach Clifford had to give his first team some experience in Saturday's game. He used them for approximately 15 minutes while letting his second and third teams play most of the game. No Coach likes to "hang it on" another team, especially an inexperienced squad, but as he said, "You can't do anything about it. If a guy's out there carrying the ball, you can't tell him to drop it or run the other way."

Kittens Hope To Equal 1961's Perfect 5-0 Record

The 1962 edition of the UVM "Kittens", under the direction of coaches Fuzzy Evans, Ralph LaPointe, and Denis Lambert, is preparing for its first combat against Norwich. The team is faced with the task of equaling the 1961 Frosh record of 5-0 and two touchdowns scored upon.

Among the Frosh are several captains of high school or prep school teams and many all-state and all-prep players. The kittens are generally a small squad although several big men appear in the lineup. The interior line features "big" Rusty Brink, John Stickney, and Dick Van Alstine as center. At guard, John Sullivan, Harvey Bazarian, Bob "the toe" Zakhar and Irving Salkovitz, provide speed and agility which is lacking at the other line positions. Highlighting the tackle slot are Dick Sears, Pat Connelly and Boyd Tomasetti.

Standouts at end position are Bill Van Bennekum (6'3"), Steve Ross (6'6"), little Mike Ingham and Dave Hosmer.

The freshmen squad is fortunate in having two skillful quarterbacks in Scott Fitz and Jack Og'Dea. Power is the word at fullback. Two boys, Terry Lynn, and Lefty Harrington will provide forward power which should guarantee short gains. The halfbacks have all been clocked at around ten seconds in the hundred. Tom Gagliardi, Ed Denning, Jim Manning, and Bob Plato are the standouts at this position.

In two scrimages against the varsity, the freshmen team displayed hardnose defense which has surprised many observers. But there is a definite lack of strength on offense. On the whole, the team is looking for a repeat of last year's fine record, although there is a lack of depth.

Fleming Art Exhibit Honors Professor Francis Colburn

by Steven D. Adler

On Friday evening, October 5, a preview and reception was held at the Fleming Museum in honor of Professor Francis Colburn, chairman of the Department of Art. The event was a farewell party for Professor Colburn who is soon departing for his first sabbatical leave after two decades at UVM. Well over two-hundred guests were present, including students, faculty and other local residents. Refreshments were served by faculty wives, and guests were greeted by students of Professor Colburn.

The exhibit displayed thirty-four of the artist's works, consisting mainly of natural scenes and portraits. Mrs. Colburn, the artist's charming wife, expressed a partiality to two of the paintings -- a portrait of her son David for sentimental reasons, and a scene entitled "Summer Grasses" for its simplicity. The paintings were admired by all, and many were sold at the preview.

During the coming year, Professor and Mrs. Colburn will travel extensively through the United States and Europe. Their first stop will be at their summer place in Craftsbury Common, Vermont, where -- in the words of the artist -- they will stay "until the flush toilet freezes." From Vermont they will head across country to California and vacation there until mid-February. After they are thoroughly relaxed and have golden tans, it's back East again to New York City. For the last leg of their journey, the couple will "learn to live on fish and rice" in order to preserve their money for a tour of Europe. However, Professor Colburn's roots are here down East and he will once again join the UVM family come September.

European Tour Planned By Student Association

Everyone has the desire to see the beauties of Europe, but, because of a lack of funds in most cases, very few ever make it. The average costs of commercial, round trip flights range from 400 to 450 dollars.

Now, the UVM Student Charter Association is making available to any university faculty, students and members of immediate family, a spectacular round trip flight to Europe for the minimal cost of 260 dollars. (A savings of nearly 200 dollars).

The group will board a non-stop Flying Tiger Super H Constellation at Burlington Municipal Air Port on or around the first of July and, ten short hours later, land in glamorous Paris, France. From here everyone will be free to do as he or she pleases for the rest of the summer. Some will rent bicycles or scooters and tour the whole of the continents. Some will visit friends or relatives and perhaps attend school. Others, who are endowed with the spirit of adventure, will travel from town to town and from country to country, using the universally known "thumb" as a ticket.

At the summer's end the group will reassemble at Paris for the return trip around September first.

In order for this trip to become a reality, it is imperative that all interested persons contact Richard Esposito or James Adams at 318 Buckham Hall (Ext. 355) or Dr. W. Schmokel (Phone 878-5750) as soon as possible.

When the minimum required number of passengers is reached, exact dates and times will be published and every applicant will be contacted so that the financial arrangements can be made.

Swim Coach Meeting Planned

Many Collegians have become aware through campus talk, newspapers, radio and television in the last couple of years, that certain of their number have been coaching in the highly successful winter-spring co-ed age group competition swimming program sponsored in the Greater Burlington area by the Chamber of Commerce and the YNCA. The 60 member Lake Champlain Swim Club is sending swimmers all over New England and to Canada to compete and also conducts the increasingly popular local meets between its three "home" teams.

Ken Whitman, Administrative Director for "Chamber-YMCA" competition swimming has announced that there will be an organizational meeting for coaches Thursday, Oct. 18th at 7 P.M. in room 248 Waterman which men and women of UVM who would like to coach competition swimming are welcome to attend. The meeting will last at least an hour and will consist of a short outline of the past achievements of the team and plans and methods to be followed for the coming season, thus enabling prospective coaches to determine whether and how they will participate.

Coaches from UVM last year were Chris Cresci, Nancy Farr, Sue Scoble, Mike LaBush, "Jeff" Geckler, some of whom will be coaching again this year. Ken Whitman, program director is also a UVM student.

Young Republicans To Meet Candidates

Campus political activity will go into high gear tonight when the University of Vermont Young Republican Club holds its first "Meet the Candidates" meeting. The club will present Vermont political leaders at an informal coffee hour in the Memorial Lounge on the main floor of the Waterman Building.

This will be the first in a series of political programs designed for what club president Joel Posner calls "A well informed student body." Early in November, the club will present Governor Keyser in one of his last Burlington area appearances before the elections.

Posner revealed tentative plans for a lecture by a member of the John Birch Society. He was quick to point out that this "in no way indicates our approval of the far right group. But," he added, "there seems to be enough student curiosity about the Society to warrant such a program."

Posner said he hopes students will take an active role in state and local politics. "Political activity is exciting, it is the Life's Blood of any democracy. The Young Republicans will try to provide the information and the opportunity for students to make their desires felt through intelligent and effective political action," Posner said.

World Service Offers Foreign Scholarships

"World University Service is an organization in which the whole of the University of Vermont should participate," So spoke Miss Sandra White, chairman of WUS, at the October 4th meeting of this group. Miss White went on to explain that WUS is a sub-committee of the student Association, whose purpose it is to earn money. This money is used to help educate foreign students in foreign countries, who otherwise, through lack of funds, would be prevented from obtaining an education. By emulating the achievements of such schools as Harvard, University and Smith College, which have both participated actively in the direction, the members of WUS feel that we are helping to train the important leaders of tomorrow. They have also stated that this is a very worthwhile cause, since 95% of WUS money earned actually goes to the students involved. While only 5% is kept for those who work for WUS. This is possible because most service is rendered without charge.

On the agenda was the announcement that there will be an International Social on October 10th, from 4:10 P.M. until 6:00 P.M., in the Waterman Memorial Lounge. Guest speakers will be Paul-Denise, New England Regional Executive of WUS, and Colin Connolly from Cambridge University, England, who will speak about WUS at Cambridge. Refreshments will be served.

The results of elections which took place are: Treasurer, Bill Pinkham; Secretary, Carol Lange; Program Chairman, Robert Lampke, Social Chairman, Peggy Remington; Publicity Chairman, Paul Schoonmaker; Funds Chairman, Colin Connolly.

Prestige Or Principles

by James Cicarelli

The time will soon arrive when a prodigious decision must be made. The perplexing problem that must be resolved pertains mainly to male independence on campus, and particularly freshmen. The decision: whether or not to join a fraternity.

For a narrowminded freshman who believes Negroes and Jews are inferior to white Anglo-Saxon protestant, the question is easily answered. He will simply join the reactionary fraternal organization which in his opinion has the kind of people he would like to be around. There he will remain with his new associates, in their small isolated world, unspoiled by inferiors, content as cows with the intelligence to match.

However, for a freshmen guided by rational thought, for one who judges individuals not races, the answer to the pressing question is difficult in finding. Most fraternities which discriminate have a higher prestige rating than the fraternities that do not. Members of a fraternity that discriminates find many social doors open to them, which members of progressive fraternities are forbidden to knock at. And so some freshmen will have to decide which it will be, prestige or principles. Whether they should compromise their convictions for social position, or remain true to their ideals?

There is no universal answer. Each must decide for himself, and after doing so, must have strength to stand by his decision.

Regional Graduate Courses Offered

New England students who want to take specialized graduate courses not offered at their own state university are able to enroll in eight new regional programs this year at other state universities without paying out-of-state tuition.

Graduate programs open to Vermont students are law, at the University of Maine (Portland branch), sanitary engineering at the University of Maine (Orono), geological oceanography at the University of Rhode Island, microbiology at the University of Massachusetts, and theater at the University of Connecticut.

The regional Cooperation Program of the six state universities makes available to New England residents a wide choice of professional programs at low cost while saving the cost of duplicating expensive facilities at each university.

SA So Moves

A motion was made that any UVM undergraduate be qualified to attend any conference sponsored by S.A. if approved by the Executive Committee and the S.A. Senate. The motion was passed.

A motion was passed that any member who attends an S.A. sponsored conference be required to distribute a written report to the S.A. Senate and file a copy in the S.A. office.

Role Of Colleges Analyzed

The genius of a republic is that the ~~laster~~ ^{laster} of its citizens will emerge partly from an inner light, with civilization coming out of, rather than being merely poured into each person. This is a dominant concern of education in a republic. To emphasize manpower utilization as a protective device and disregard the development of the individual as such produces but one kind of national strength and can bring a nation power without motivation toward the "finer human hungers." Yet, a modern nation that disregards manpower utilization as a protective device courts national suicide. The simple fact is that no modern nation is disregarding either of the above objectives. We seem at last to have reached the time when each country, rather than being content to manufacture definitions about the other, must strengthen its own goals and techniques in a season of self-criticism.

The creation of the mere "organization man" would rob a republic of initiative among its individuals and thus change it from a republic or a democracy into a mere nation, one that exists primarily for the purpose of survival. As desperation psychology and desperation oratory make their inroads into modern cultures and tend to reduce education to that of furnishing manpower, in the protective sense alone, men face in all countries the need to create new opportunities for the development of services to society through individual initiative and the motivation of citizens who are not mere reflectors of the social scene around them, mere pawns whose primary concern is social acceptance.

To contribute substantially to our government, our homes, our churches, our schools, or our economic system, each individual need be partially self-propelled; he will replace much of the social mechanism in which he has become immersed and gain the satisfaction coming from voluntary action. He will not be the second-class volunteer who enlists in any cause to avoid being drafted, but the first-class volunteer who finds new and creative ways to serve others and himself.

In all communities we may find those whose loyalties to their families, their friends, their church and their country are shown through free and unpressured service. They work without desperation and often without disappointment. They are easily and naturally, not desperately, motivated, for the cause in which they serve as their cause, self-chosen and genuine - chosen not as an escape from something worse, but representing a positive side of living, a kind of dividend paid by the stamp of integrity.

Men and women thus motivated are the modern pioneers charting roads to the future; they are educated in a new dimension not known to the person who is merely trained. Not repudiating the established order nor seeking the role of dead heroes of reform, their faith is born of suspended judgment rather than of oversimplification. Often they become the eyes and the ears that help to lead long-established social agencies to new patterns of service and to new vision for the future. Their work permeates and enlivens the institutions into which they are born, the voluntary agencies through which they

Science Hall Undergoes Extensive Renovation

WILLIAMS SCIENCE HALL

The facilities in this building have not been renewed since the building was constructed. Many additions had been made to the plumbing and electrical facilities as well as extensions of the heating plant, until the systems were in very poor condition. It was decided that the basic facilities of the building should be completely renewed and as extensive changes as possible made to improve the space assigned to the Departments of Chemistry, Zoology and Physics. In the summer of 1960 the heating plant was renovated, and in the summer of 1961, all five floors in the north wing were renovated for the Chemistry Department. Because of high costs most of the south wing and the east wing were left unchanged. The large lecture room on the second floor in the east wing was renovated and the south end of the fourth floor modified for the needs of the Zoology Department. Additional space was gained in this building by the removal of the Herbarium from the fourth floor to the Air Science Building.

The Departments of Physics and Zoology made small gains. Discussion of the Department of Zoology's needs is covered in the UVM Self Study Report. The Department of Physics has indicated in its Self Study the need for additional laboratory space, a stockroom, storage and workshop areas.

In spite of the changes within the Science Hall the laboratories for the Chemistry Department's undergraduate teaching program are filled to capacity, and attention must be given in the not too distant future to an addition to the Science Hall to relieve congestion for Chemistry, Physics and Zoology. The nature of the addition will depend on further study of the needs of Zoology and Physics. An addition to the Science Hall incorporating a large lecture room seating at least 400, plus undergraduate laboratories for Chemistry and Physics, is one possible solution to their needs. This large classroom would also serve to satisfy the requests of other departments for adequate lecture hall space for large, beginning classes.

Boulanger To Speak To SAM And ASME

This Thursday evening, Oct. 11, Mr. David Boulanger will speak to a joint gathering of members from SAM and ASME in the Waterman student lounge at 8:30 PM. Mr. Boulanger will speak on Program Evaluation and Review Technique, or PERT. Members of the Faculty and Student Body are cordially invited to attend.

Mr. Boulanger is a member of the UVM Class of '52 and received his M.S. in Economics from UVM in 1962. He began working for General Electric in 1952 and in 1957 was promoted to Specialist on Missile Budgets and Measurements. He is currently utilizing the PERT system for Research and Development at the Burlington G.E. plant.

PERT is an evaluation system utilizing linear programming and statistical probability. This field is one of very rapid expansion. Its full usefulness is still unknown. Every day new uses are being found for this method. Basically, its function is to analyze given projects and attempt to iron out "trouble spots" before these projects are undertaken.

Editor's Scrapbook Phys. Ed. Major

When President Fey came to UVM, he established the precedent of keeping UVM whirling forward at a blinding rate. Thus far, many new programs have been initiated, new buildings are mushrooming around campus, and new academic goals have been conceived. Now is a good time for a brief pause and a moment of reflection.

To date, one of the most expensive and most controversial buildings erected on campus is the new gym. The CYNIC would now like to add its two cents worth to the 2.9 million dollars already spent. There is to be a major reconstruction of the Physical Education program, as outlined in previous issues of the CYNIC. Concurrent with these plans, but still in the embryonic stages, are plans to bring a Physical Education major to UVM in the College of Education. The initiation of such a program would be undesirable and disadvantageous to the proper development of this University as an academic institution.

At present, there is a Physical Education minor offered. It consists of a minimum of 18 hours credit in the field of physical education. Individuals desiring to participate in this minor must demonstrate a proficiency in sports in order to efficiently teach such skills to students. The courses in Physical Education now offered are:

- History and Principles of Physical Education.
- Organization of Physical Education.
- School Health Education.
- Dance Techniques.
- Methods of Teaching Sports.
- Teaching of Physical Education in Elementary and Secondary Schools.

This program is adequate. It is not necessary to go one step farther and initiate a full Physical Education major. It is questionable as to whether there is a need for such a major at this University, both from an academic and a practical standpoint. The development of such a program would be an enticing device to begin drafting football and hockey players. It seems plans are already in the making for an individual or individuals to go to Canada and start looking around for some promising hockey players. This is not the way to build a team at the University of Vermont. It is fine when you are in the Big Ten or Big Eight, and can draw enormous crowds and make money. Sports is not a business at this school. It is, theoretically, a form of education. But it is not a MAJOR portion of the individual's academic background, and it does not require a major in Physical Education for him to pursue the subject.

The drafting of athletes, athletic scholarships, and a Physical Education major necessarily go hand-in-hand. More needs to be said on this subject, and more will be said on this subject in later issues.

Although no date has been set for the initiation of this program, it is expected to begin sometime between 1963 and 1965. The future of these plans depends on both the funds and the teaching personnel available. It is hoped that neither become accessible until either the Administration or the Athletic Department issues a definitive and public statement, first as to their intentions concerning the drafting of athletes, and second, the relationship between the three previously mentioned topics.

The University Of Alabama Speaks

To the Editor:

The enclosed article appeared recently in the Crimson-White, student newspaper of the University of Alabama. It reflects not only the editorial opinion of the Crimson-White, but also, I believe, the opinion of many University of Alabama students.

It might be well for a few finger-pointing "Yankees" to read it, and then look around. This "Yankee" read it and found that she was not such a stranger in thought here after all.

Sincerely,

Marilyn J. VanGraber

A BELL RANG . . .

If I had a bell,
I'd ring it in the morning,
I'd ring it in the evening,
All over this land,
I'd ring out justice,
I'd ring out freedom,
I'd ring out love for my brother and my sister,
All over this land.

. . . . American Folk Song.

A bell rang this week in Oxford, Mississippi.

It tolled not the ending of segregation, as had thought it might. Its message was rather the seeming success of Gov. Ross Barnett, who literally "stood in the schoolhouse door" and denied admission to James Meredith, Mississippi Negro.

We are concerned that Meredith did not gain access to the University of Mississippi. We think he should have been admitted.

Morally, there is no justification for his rejection.

Logically, there can be no doubt he is entitled to become a student at Mississippi.

But this is not our prime concern.

James Meredith's rights have been denied before, and will, no doubt, be denied again. This is not to suggest that these denials are justified, for they are not. But it is to suggest that he probably has been forced to rationalize his existence in the society to which he was born.

We are more concerned with the precedent that has been set at Oxford, and the trend that may have been established.

People say that Meredith should not be allowed to attend the University of Mississippi if a majority of the people there and throughout the state do not want him.

This argument has frightening implications in terms of where it might lead. Does freedom of speech mean that the majority is to vote to determine whom they wish to hear? Is freedom of religion to be extended only to those persons whose beliefs conform to what the majority has decided is orthodox?

More specifically, if the bigot or the demagogue can muster a majority to turn on the Negro, will he necessarily stop there? Or will he next turn to the Catholic, and the Jew, or the member of any other minority group?

People who have studied prejudice attribute most of it to the necessity of the individual to have a tangible scapegoat upon whom to vent his wrath. The Federal Government makes a mistake and it's because the damn Catholics are in control.

And the sheer necessity of having to have someone to look down upon forces the element closest to that of the Negro to oppose any betterment of the Negro's lot.

P. D. East, editor of the Petal Paper and author of the Magnolia

Jungle, puts it this way. "If I were a Catholic in Mississippi, I'd be worried. If I were a Jew, I'd be scared stiff. If I were a Negro, I would already be gone."

This is our point of prime concern. The basis of the democratic system is equality before the law, and the system is but a mockery if the laws are only to extend to a portion of the citizenry.

Every time the rights of one citizen anywhere are denied, every citizen is harmed.

Every time we trim our legal sail to meet the whirlwinds of the times, the course of the Ship of State is altered, and the destination toward which we have steered for 170 odd years grows more remote.

Bias is a force that strikes at one and all. We have come much too far, and fought far too long, to abandon our democratic system to appease the great god, Expediency.

We lost something American in Oxford this week, and every American citizen is the less for it.

John Donne said: "No man is an island, entire of itself; every man is a piece of the continent, a part of the main; . . . I am involved in mankind; and therefore never send to know for whom the bell tolls; it tolls for thee."

There was no need to send to Oxford this week, to see what bell rang. It wasn't the bell of justice and freedom; it rang for you and me.

Pro-Lane Series

To the Editor:

For more than two years now, I have been reading the various dramatic critiques of the Lane Series written by the CYNIC.

Over that time, I have read few commendations and many condemnations. The recent evaluation of the "Sound of Music" was an obvious condemnation of another Lane Series production.

I agree with the CYNIC evaluation that the "Sound of Music" was not up to par with its current Broadway counterpart, but so what? Obviously, it could never meet Broadway specifications in Memorial Auditorium's poorly acoustical environment augmented by an amateur stage crew.

Far remote from Broadway, Jeanne Carson and company brought a very welcome enlightenment to the hearts of those in attendance. The dedicated efforts of Mr. Trevithick and his committee were appreciated by those in attendance, except the critic, Miss Mable. More attention should be given to the overwhelming attributes of the Lane Series and the enjoyment it frequently projects to the university family and the Burlington community. It augments our education far more than the other media of paid entertainment in this area.

Here's hoping that the CYNIC will not be so critical of the Lane Series in the future. If the majority of those in attendance enjoy the show, then why can't the chosen few the CYNIC selects to evaluate the various programs do the same?

Sincerely yours,
Jeff Graham

Now is the time for . . . the first round of hour exams, and the initial shock of flunking exams for the first time or the ? time . . . but students of America, the truth is out . . . we compare favorably to our fellow-Russian students.

It was reported in the September 25 issue of The Varsity News (University of Detroit) that "Teachers in Russia may have tougher methods, but the results aren't as good. Five percent of all school children in the Russian Republic failed to advance to the next grade because of poor achievement."

" . . . In New York, only 4.5% of the pupils in the junior high schools and 3.8% of those in the elementary schools were retained in the same grade."

"Could it be that eliminating the manual labor in the U.S. results in a better student?" No comment!

Since a tragic accident that happened on the Vermont roads two years ago when seven Winooki youths were killed, there has been increased discussion in the legislatures of the states that border New York to urge them to raise their drinking age from 18 to 21. As a result of these discussions a series of articles appeared in the Rensselaer Polytechnic (RPI), which brought letters to the editor from Governor Hughes of New Jersey and Governor Dempsey of Connecticut. The following is an excerpt from Governor Hughes letter.

" . . . There are many things that can and are being done, including education and law enforcement by the various agencies having responsibility."

"However, this is not the solution to the problem. The teenagers involved can best eliminate the condition by respect for law and parental guidance, the maintenance of high standards and ideals, and a sense of moral obligation to themselves and to their community."

Governor Dempsey's letter was as follows:

"I think you should know that Connecticut is now taking every step that you recommend to bring home to Connecticut teenagers the tragic consequences which can follow driving after drinking."

"I remain convinced that in addition to these efforts, the removal of the discrepancy between New York's minimum legal age and those of New York's neighboring States will prevent slaughter on our highways."

Vermont, being one of those states that borders New York, should also give serious consideration to this problem. And, UVM students in particular should be constantly mindful of the potential tragedy that the proverbial mixture of alcohol and gas has.

"There appears to be no relationship between starting salaries and academic averages among baccalaureate graduates, according to the statistics on 1962 U-D (University of Detroit) graduates . . ." This enlightening piece of information comes from the September 25 edition of the Varsity News. The article continued:

"The same executive positions may be acquired by a graduate with either a 4.0 or a 2.0 average if the right leadership qualities are present . . ."

"College students are growing more sophisticated about business and industry in relation to career opportunities."

Among the other results of the survey were: The average age of seniors has dropped almost one year since 1960. In the Arts and

THINKING OUT LOUD

by Kim Boriskin

STATES, RIGHTS AND LIBERTIES

(I do not want to belabor the Mississippi situation any more than is necessary, but I think that what I say this week is something that too many people tend to forget, and so I am writing it. It deals with a very different aspect of the situation than last week's column, so you won't have to read all that again.)

There has been a lot of talk lately about "States' Rights" and "Civil Rights," two closely allied subjects that will be with us as long as we have demagogues with us. The only trouble with all this talk, aside from the fact that most of it is only talk, is that most people apparently don't know what Civil Rights are, for they talk more about Civil Liberties than about Civil Rights, and almost exclusively about States' Liberties, not States' Rights. And there is a very real distinction.

In his excellent book, One Man's Freedom, lawyer Edward Bennett Williams states the distinction very clearly. Rights, civil or otherwise, are something that we should have by the very fact of our existence — a birthright, so to speak — and that everyone, including our government, is morally and ethically bound to let us have (though governments are rarely bound physically or legally to do so) and exercise. A liberty, states' or not, is merely something that a higher power, such as a government, lets us have out of magnanimity, if you will. Freedom of speech, travel, religion (Yes, and freedom from religion, too), freedom to choose our leaders and governors for ourselves, and so many others, are indeed rights every person ought to have. Freedom of the press is not a right but a liberty, since it is an extension of the spoken word, in essence, and has only permanence and easy and extent of distribution to distinguish it from the spoken word. It is certainly not anyone's birthright to have permanent and easily distributable records of events and opinions. It is the beneficence of the government that allows the press its existence.

Many things may be argued over. Is the right to choose our own leaders really a right? It would seem that if an electorate were apallingly uninformed, misinformed, or apathetic, and did not trouble, or even desire, to remedy the situation, then the right to indulge its fancies would be a liberty, given it by the ones elected. But this is not so; if a voting public does not trouble to find out who it elects to office — whether he is a good man or incompetent, honest or a thief — then it deserves whatever it gets. It is our inalienable right to ask to get it in the neck.

But to end the digression and get to Mississippi. Mr. Barnett has completely forgotten, it would seem, the elementary assumption that formed the basis of our Constitution. That assumption, and it is a true one, is that the greatest number of rights and liberties must be reserved for the smallest possible unit of a society: the individual. As the social unit gets larger, starting with the family and ending with the overall governing body, the rights and liberties allowed should diminish proportionally. Not only that, but each unit, no matter what its size, should be allowed to exercise these rights and liberties to whatever extent it so desires, but only so long as nobody else, especially a smaller, and therefore probably less powerful, social unit, is not hurt by such exercise, (unless it is a still smaller unit that must be protected) and so long as one does not make a nuisance of himself by exercising his rights.

Mississippi, then, should indeed have more freedom over its affairs than Washington should have over the state. But by the same token, James Meredith should have more control over his affairs than Ross Barnett, or any other man, should have over James Meredith. Barnett, by the very nature of his refusal to integrate Ole Miss, is violating the most elementary basis of the Constitution he so very often pretends to be defending.

Assuming that Meredith is qualified to take the courses he needs, which he most certainly is (more so, undoubtedly, than a vast number of his white fellow students), he has a right (not a liberty) to the education, if anyone at all is going to be educated. The right to possess the knowledge of one's choosing, within certain wide limits, is just that: a right. No higher power has any right at all to deny him an education for any reason other than that the person is not qualified, which is pure baloney in the case of Meredith.

The Constitution says that the states shall have basic control over the establishment of schools, among other things. Mr. Barnett, and every other citizen of Mississippi, more or less, knows this, and rarely hesitates to say so. It is part of his ridiculous theory of Interposition (nee Nullification) on the whim of the state. But he does not know, it seems, that very same Constitution does not give the individual citizen even more basic liberties, such as it gives the state and federal governments liberties, but actually guarantees that the individual has certain very basic rights, and makes all government — municipal, state, and federal — bound to protect these rights for each and every citizen (and non-citizen, too), even at cost to the government.

Though Mississippi surely should have more final power over the state university than the President should have, if the state refuses to uphold the basic rights of every and any one of its citizens, then the President, if he is to uphold his oath of office, and therefore the Constitution, is bound, not only morally, but also legally, to make any move he thinks is necessary to protect these rights and the exercise thereof. Mr. Barnett, if he does not uphold these rights is unfit for his office, which is also true if he does not know the rights exist, not as liberties, but as very basic rights to which every human being, de facto, is entitled, and that whatever power his state has is not its right, but a liberty granted to it by the framers of our Constitution. That is also true of our President, and even more so, for if he can not protect the rights of the individual, there is simply nobody else. He, too, must realize that his powers are only liberties, not rights, and be very careful in exercising them. But rights or liberties, it is the individual who ultimately comes first — always.

Assistantships Offered At Indian Universities

A special program has been established by the United States Educational Foundation in India whereby Fulbright-Hays awards have been made available to American college and university graduates for the teaching of English at Indian universities. The eligibility requirements and the stipend are the same as for the regular Fulbright awards.

The teaching assistantship involves approximately 12 hours of classroom instruction in English language and usage and the grading of papers and some assistance in informal conversation sessions. The assistants work under the direction of a professor of English and are not required to have had previous teaching experience or to have majored in English. The holders of these grants are permitted to follow courses or to carry on research in their own field of special interest at the university to which they are attached.

This program would have a special appeal to students interested in an opportunity for service abroad in the field of international education and a living experience in an Asian society but who have not as yet committed themselves to specific area studies. Students interested in the political and social sciences and in the humanities are especially encouraged to apply.

Grantees will receive special training in India on the teaching of English as a foreign language. They should have a voice which carries well and good diction free of any marked regional accent. The regular Fulbright application form may be used. However, the statement of purpose must specify that the application is for a teaching assistantship in India.

UVM Senior Wins Award

A Springfield, Vt., senior at the University of Vermont has been awarded the Western Electric Scholarship given annually to outstanding engineering students.

Abraham N. Daudelin, Jr., '63, has won the scholarship for the second year in a row at Vermont, where he is majoring in electrical engineering. He is president of Tau Beta Pi, engineering honorary society at UVM.

Presentation was made at a banquet in the Hoettl Vermont by Robert W. Anderson of Kearney, N.J., assistant superintendent for the Western Electric Co., Inc. In addition to the scholarship to Daudelin, the Western Electric

According to the Daily Orange (Syracuse University) the administration has adopted a new policy for who may and who may not have cars on campus. It is very similar to UVM's and is based on grades rather than "on an indiscriminate seniority basis." In an editorial that appeared in that school paper it was suggested that this type of merit system be extended to other phases of college life.

OVER LIGHTLY

by Joel Posner

The crisis over integration at Ole Miss is like a rape: exciting, horrible, and — especially — damaging. The horror is with a society, viewed from a distance, that will so fight to keep subservient so obviously a superior person as James Meredith. The excitement is the excitement of blood and violence, of human conflict and disaster. And the terrible damage is the damage done by intemperance and intolerance.

This intemperance comes not only from the Southern Segregationist. It comes as well from the blithe Northern Liberal who, now seemingly in control of the political destiny of America, finds it easy to dismiss all who oppose him as insane or dishonest.

This is the man who assumes he is right and who can label the refusal of Segregationists to comply with Federal integration rulings as mere cussedness.

THE SOUTHERN VIEW

The fact is that the Segregationists find themselves faced with a society, a legal system, and an irresistible tide of change which deny their view of reality about a vast area of life. The cowards and the extremely reasonable men among them bow to the flow of change. The bravest among them stand and fight.

Despite my feelings about the merits of his cause, my admiration for Barnett — if he had thumbed his nose at the Federal forces assembled at Memphis — would have been like my admiration for Ghandi who faced armed British troops with empty-handed conviction, for Martin Luther King and his followers, who are this day facing the scorn of southern mobs in points all over the Old Confederacy.

The American Revolution was illegal and bloody, the Hungarian Freedom Fighters gunned down captive policemen in distinct disobedience of Hungarian law the French underground slaughtered Nazis by the thousands.

These men were heroes. If Barnett had stood fast, he would have been "insane."

A RECOGNITION OF PARTISANSHIP

We would do well to realize that Barnett has a particular outlook and that it disagrees with our particular outlook. In this context, we will soon see that the major problem is with ends rather than means. We do not condemn the illegal activities of South Africans like Albert Lutuli because we agree with their ends. We oppose what Barnett attempted because of the ends he tried to achieve.

If we can realize that, as opposing partisans, our main argument is with the basic issue of goals, we can get to the basis of disagreement and we can move to gain the best ends.

In the case of integration, such a recognition of partisanship will have a number of good results.

First, we may find that our view of the whole situation is not quite accurate. We may find that there is more to this complex social situation than merely the submission of a few unruly and maniacal southerners.

Second, we can stop wasting energy on the superfluous and can instead aim at recognizing and solving the problem itself.

Third, we can meet the Segregationist as an equal (as he has failed to meet the Negro) and can perhaps use the best combination of force and persuasion to coax him from his unbending position.

Our ultimate goal, after all, is to see the Negro integrated and accepted as a full member of society. The danger is that we will mistake school integration as final success. Even a cobra and a mongoose can live together if they are paralyzed by outside forces.

HOOD FOUNDATION AWARDS SCHOLARSHIPS

Four University of Vermont students have been awarded full tuition scholarships for 1962-63 by the Hood Dairy Foundation. Vermonters received four of the 15 scholarships awarded by the Foundation.

UVM recipients are Donald W. Burton, Middlebury; Donald J. McFeeters, Sheldon; Nathan K. Drown, St. Johnsbury, and Earl L. Stanley, Enosburg Falls. Burton and McFeeters are seniors

Scene And Heard

by Sue Milman

The season of "fiestas" has once again reached the UVM campus. A large gathering enjoyed the Phi Mu Delta's Volcanic Blast a week ago Saturday evening and danced to the music of the Flaming Grater. Joining in on the festivities were a number of Phi Mu Deltas from Nu Epsilon at Orono, members of the U. Maine football team. A "hot" time was had by all. The Twist Party given by the ADPis and Kappa Sigs also turned out to be a great success. The AEPis held their intriguing Jungle Party last Saturday night. Hoots and howls were provided by The Rockers. Everyone had a "wild" time.

Many dessert hours have been on the social calendar. An enjoyable dessert hour was held at Alpha Gamma Rho with the ADPis and their housemother as guests. A twisting good time was had last Wednesday night by the AEPis and Phi Sigs at the AEPi house. Thursday night the Pi Phis played hostess to the Delta Psis. There was a twisting contest with Jack Stewart and Fran Brickman winning awards for the Worst and Best Dancer respectively. Dave Strassburg received a special prize for being "The Guy That Danced So Hard He Ripped His Pants!"

Word has it that the Brothers of Acacia had to sing for their pillows at ADPi last Monday evening. Is that true, fellows? More busy doings at ADPi. The girls entertained the Baroness Von Trapp, the cast, and members of the Lane Series Committee.

Pi Phi would like to welcome their new housemother, Mrs. Duke, and hope that she stays with them many years.

Best wishes for a very successful year to the newly elected fraternal offices of Phi Mu Delta. They are Dave Willis, Vice President; Ed Zuccaro, Secretary; and Wallv Renfrew, Treasurer. Congratulations to Alpha Gamma Rho's thirteen new brothers: Edmond Petit, Richard Croft, John Pillsbury, Baldwin Hislop, Robert Bassett, Charles Bentley, Fred Burnett, James Drown, Russ Kinerson, Frank Lamb, Robert Taylor, Calvin Walker, and Howard Wilcox.

PINNINGS

In a special ceremony, the Gamma Phis were surprised with the news of two recent pinnings: Jean Luck '64 to Bob Bergman '64 of SAE and Kathy Utendorfer '63 to Pete Busick '63 of U.S. Coast Guard Academy. Jan Wightman '62, also of Gamma Phi, was recently pinned to Bill Leech '63.

Congratulations to Pi Phi's Pat Warren '65, who just became pinned to Chip Waite '64 of Dartmouth. Best wishes to AGR's Harry Sommer and his pinmate Peggy Frisbee of William Smith College.

MARRIAGES

Best of luck to Pi Phi's Sally Herschede Duval '63, who was the June bride of Al Duval, Delta Psi, '56. And congratulations to AGR's brothers who have joined the ranks of their married brotherhood: James Amode, '63 to Ruthan Lawrence; Lucian Zelazny, '64 to Layel Parker, '63 to Donna Rotunda; Earl Stanley, '64 to Susan McNall, '65; and Edwin Walker '64 to Anne Perry.

Mathematics and Skiing

Reprinted from SKIER, October, 1962.

by John W. VanErp

How can such a subject as dry as mathematics ever successfully be blended into the art of skiing?

Because of the present day trend towards a more exact approach to things generally, we dare the attempt even though all the prerequisites for an exact mathematical analysis are not as yet available.

For instance, the particulars of the exact behaviour of snow under moving skis are not known. Physically speaking, snow is a rather mysterious subject as many skiers will agree. But, for our purpose, some generalizations will be made and the theories drawn remain valid for the conditions encountered by the average skier.

Details of the mathematical methods pursued in this investigation will not be explored and, generally, formula and figures will be omitted as far as possible. And if the outcome proves entirely contradictory to whatever your favorite ski instructor has been telling you, be not too disturbed. Ski instruction dicta has been revised and altered during the years.

Your interest is: "How can I improve my skiing?"

The method of "intuition and feeling", so largely the basis of our present ski techniques, even if supplemented by careful observation cannot yield the right answer to the "why" and "how" of skiing. Possibly the use of such tools as the high-speed movie camera, electronic recording of the movement and deflections of skis under actual running conditions, will sometime yield more exact answers. For the time being, the results obtained by analysis by means of the slide rule, and a lot of paper, are worthwhile.

About Snow

In the first place, about snow. Snow is a more or less compacted granular mass, the granules varying from the finest crystalline flakes (powder snow) to solid ice globes of .1 inch diameter or even more. Its behaviour under load is somewhat similar to that of earth under a building foundation load.

However, things become a little complicated because skis are extremely flexible, the load on them keeps constantly shifting, and the pressure distribution under a pair of skis is not simple. Besides, the pressure distribution is widely variable for different snow conditions.

According to research carried out by the author, the pressure distribution can be roughly generalized as shown in Fig. 1. This figure shows the pressure distribution for an average pair of skis on powder snow and on very hard packed snow. In this last case, it is evident that only about the middle two-thirds of the skis carry any load, the front and rear parts carry no load at all; they don't touch the snow!

These conditions are shown for skis at rest. What happens when skis are running?

A combination of the two takes place, the skis move from soft snow to hard snow, compacting as they go, and the rear of the skis are always on somewhat packed snow, even while running in soft snow (Fig. 2).

This alters the position of equilibrium because the resultant of the snow pressure P (pressure centroid) is moved forward quite a few inches. This is of prime importance as it influences the way to make turns in the parallel ski technique. In the first place, it shows why the "forward lean" is necessary.

AISCF Begins Campaign

LITTLETON, N.H., October 3, 1962 - Preluding an all-out fund campaign this fall, the United States Eastern Amateur Ski Association is directing effort towards familiarizing sports-minded citizens with the initials AISCF.

They stand for American International Ski Competitions Fund, a money chest used by the United States Ski Association to provide physical training for American ski competitors and to cover the expense of sending them to international meets.

Alternating every two years are the Olympics and the World Championships (FIS). The United States teams entered in these meets, not subsidized by Government as in most foreign countries, depend directly on the generosity of the public for the needed funds for participation.

The AISCF provides these funds as well as those necessary for prior training.

National chairman for the AISCF drive is Ralph DesRoches, Ligonier, Pa., treasurer of the USEASA.

Eastern chairman is Mrs. Paulie Hannah, Franconia, a USEASA alpine champion in the early 1940's.

Frosh Look Forward To New Gym

by Bertie Sprague

When the University of Vermont unveils its new 2.9 million dollar gymnasium, late in November, the freshman class will be treated to an experience in physical education that they will never forget. For the first time freshmen will be able to pursue fields of interest which were formerly offered only to varsity athletes, or not offered at all.

A total of twenty-seven fields of interest will be available to freshmen. Events such as squash, lacrosse, archery, and hockey, plus the old standards such as football, basketball, and volleyball will be open to the individual student. Because of the immense size of the Gym it will be possible for 1,500 students to carry on a bi-weekly physical education program. This is about three times as many as last year.

HAPPINESS CAN'T BUY MONEY

Can education bring happiness?

This is a question that in recent years has caused much lively debate and several hundred stabbings among American college professors. Some contend that if a student's intellect is sufficiently aroused, happiness will automatically follow. Others say that to concentrate on the intellect and ignore the rest of the personality can only lead to misery.

I myself favor the second view, and I offer in evidence the well-known case of Agathe Fusco.

Agathe, a forestry major, never got anything less than a straight "A", was awarded her B.T. (Bachelor of Trees) in only two years, her M.S.B. (Master of Sap and Bark) in only three, and her D.B.C. (Doctor of Blight and Cutworms) in only four.

Academic glory was hers. Her intellect was the envy of every intellect fan on campus. But was she happy? The answer, alas, was no. Agathe—she knew not why—was miserable, so miserable, in fact, that one day while walking across campus, she was suddenly so overcome with melancholy that she flung herself, weeping, upon the statue of the Founder.

By and by a liberal arts major named R. Twinkle Plenty came by with his yoyo. He noted Agathe's condition. "How come you're so unhappy, hey?" said R. Twinkle.

"Suppose you tell me, you dumb old liberal arts major," replied Agathe peevishly.

"Have you ever smoked a Marlboro cigarette?"

"All right, I will," said R. Twinkle. "You are unhappy for two reasons. First, because you have been so busy stuffing your intellect that you have gone and starved your psyche. I've got nothing against learning, mind you, but a person oughtn't to neglect the pleasant, gentle amenities of life—the fun things. Have you, for instance, ever been to a dance?"

Agathe shook her head.

"Have you ever watched a sunset? Written a poem? Smoked a Marlboro Cigarette?"

Agathe shook her head.

Well, we'll fix that right now!" said R. Twinkle and gave her a Marlboro and struck a match.

She puffed, and then for the first time in twelve or fifteen years, she smiled. "Wow!" she cried. "Marlboros are a fun thing! What flavor! What filter! What pack or box! What a lot to like! From now on I will smoke Marlboros, and never have another unhappy day!"

"Hold!" said R. Twinkle. "Marlboros alone will not solve your problem—only half of it. Remember I said there were two things making you unhappy?"

"Oh, yeah," said Agathe. "What's the other one?"

"How long have you had that bear trap on your foot?" said R. Twinkle.

"I stepped on it during a field trip in my freshman year," said Agathe. "I keep meaning to have it taken off."

"Allow me," said R. Twinkle and removed it.

"Land sakes, what a relief!" said Agathe, now totally happy, and took R. Twinkle's hand and led him to a Marlboro vendor's and then to a justice of the peace.

Today Agathe is a perfectly fulfilled woman, both intellectually and personalitywise. She lives in a darling split-level house with R. Twinkle and their 17 children, and she still keeps busy in the forestry game. Only last month, in fact, she became Consultant on Sawdust to the American Butchers Guild, she was named an Honorary Sequoia by the park commissioner of Las Vegas, and she published a best-selling book called I was a Shippery Elm for the FBI.

Two approaches to the "man's deodorant" problem

If a man doesn't mind shaving under his arms, he will probably find a woman's roll-on satisfactory. Most men, however, find it simpler and surer to use Mennen Spray Deodorant. Maine Edges Vermont 9-6 In Yankon Debut

UVM's Football Fathers

by B. Zaccaro

Each Saturday afternoon, as the Vermont football team surges onto the gridiron to meet their opponents, how many of us realize that among these bruisers and speedsters are five married men, three of whom are fathers? Very few, outside of their teammates and their wives. Besides attending classes, studying for exams, practicing and traveling with the team, and keeping up with the many other requirements of college students, they must also devote time to their family life.

Bill Burke, Tom Mongeon, Den Burton, Ted Jzyk, and Jeff Harvey are the five individuals who live this triple role.

Senior Jeff Harvey is a resident of St. Albans, Vermont. Majoring in History, his curriculum primarily consists of Education courses. Jeff, a 22-year old, 190-pound guard, was married during the past summer. Also from St. Albans is Tom Mongeon, whose wife is now expecting her second child. Tom is in the College of Technology, where he is a major in Secondary Education. Tom is a 21-year old, 205-pound tackle, in his sophomore year at UVM.

Another block-busting lineman is Ted Jzyk, a 220-pound tackle from Manchester, Vermont. He is a Civil Engineering Major.

Vermont Is Synonymous With Skiing

by Prentice Phelps

The name, Vermont, brings to mind only one thing: skiing. Any school as close as we are to the most superior ski centers in the east, should have the best in this field. We have looked at what our ski team is doing at present. Now let's look ahead at the difficult schedule facing them.

No Eastern ski team will have an easy schedule this season, as the competition grows tougher each year. Although UVM will improve from last year, they will oppose some of the fastest college teams in the nation in the form of Middlebury, St. Lawrence, U.N.H., and the current Eastern Intercollegiate Champions, Dartmouth. With a full team this year, instead of only seven, as was the case last year, and with new strength in the Nordic events, it will be safe to rate UVM as the dark horse of the winter carnivals. With the same drive and spirit that they are now showing in practice, they just may step into the winner's circle before the season is over.

Team competitions are not the only plans Coach Stewart has for the boys. There are many U.S.E.A.S.A. individual meets scheduled. The tough competition does not stop here, however. UVM does have its stars. Out of over fifty racers in the Eastern Championships last year, a Vermont Senior, Bob Lutz, took 1st place. At tenth place, and back again with us this year, is captain Rick Hubbard.

SUPPORT?

When the final results of the Eastern Intercollegiate Championships came out last year, it was noticed (by a few) that the University of Vermont finished tenth out of eleven competing teams. Why should this have happened? Was it because we didn't have a good enough team? When a team can finish third in the overall downhill as we did, it proves them capable racers. In my opinion, it was the lack of support from both the student body and the athletic department. Lutz's first place went almost unnoticed while the Basketball team was cheered on by the whole school. Why should any athlete work his heart out to receive little or no recognition for the best that can be done.

As a result of this tenth place, UVM lost its rating as an "A" team. This year as a "B" team, we must sacrifice the Dartmouth Winter Carnival to attend the required B team Championships at St. Michael's College. The Dartmouth Carnival is to a ski team, what Homecoming is to a football team. If the team does well at St. Mike's, they may get their A rating back, but without your support, this loss of prestige may hinder them. Show them you are behind them, and I guarantee an "A" team for Vermont next year.

Know your team; show your team; support your team. Give them a chance and they will show you what Vermont again is synonymous with skiing.

Basketball Meeting

There will be a meeting of all varsity basketball candidates with Coach John C. Evans in the Old Gym at 7:00 p.m. Monday, October 15, 1962. All lettermen, last year's frosh squad and all new candidates are requested to attend.

Long Pass Topples Cats

Cats smother a Black Bear.

(Credit: M. Friedman, S.P.S.)

The Catamounts deserve nothing but praise for their fine exhibition of football gallantry before an enthusiastic State Day Crowd of over 6,000 people last Saturday at Centennial Field as the Cats proved themselves to be a worthy Yankee Conference contender by giving Maine a tough time, but losing the contest 9 to 6.

Those Catamounts who deserve special praise are Dave Sequist, who played the greatest game of his college career. Sequist was picked for many pre-season honors and has now proven himself to be one of the best linemen in New England. His partner, a tackle, Merrill "Ollie" Thorsen, also played an outstanding game, as did Frank Bolden.

Sophomores George Oelze, Jim Brennan, Richie Reynolds, and especially speedster Dean Kent, who put on a fine exhibition of punting under pressure, also excelled.

Again it was the UVM ground defense that took the spotlight as it stopped many Maine drives short of the goal-line. They took advantage of every Maine fumble by recovering six Bear bobbles and consistently holding while deep in their own territory. It was regrettable how the Bears scored their winning touchdown. Vermont's pass defense let Maine's halfback Dave Crabtree sprint down the middle and into the open to receive a Ray Austin pass that proved to be the game clincher for Maine. It was a similar long pass play that lost the American International game for the Cats. Adjustments have been made to counteract this sad situation by UVM's new coaching staff.

The Green and Gold travel to Kingston to play the University of Rhode Island this weekend, looking for their first Yankee Conference victory. Rhodey has defeated Maine 14-7, and tied New Hampshire 6-6 thus far in Conference competition.

Shades of RPI

It took UVM only 44 seconds of the game to grab a 6-0 lead and make the chilled hearts of ardent Vermont fans beat faster as they anticipated an encore of the week before's scoring barrage of 82 points against Rensselaer. On the opening kick-off, left-end Bill Burke rambled down field to the Maine six, where he tackled the receiver who was trying to pick up the pigskin. The ball was fumbled and alert co-captain Dave Sequist promptly smothered it to give Vermont possession on the six with just 39 seconds gone.

On the first play Deane Kent went wide and put-raced the Maine defensive right end into the end-zone for the score. The Vermont fans, sensing a great afternoon of football action, applauded wildly. Dave Baker's try for the point-after went awry and the score stood at 6-0 within the first minute of the game.

The Black Bears, a two-touchdown favorite, realized they were in for a rough afternoon from the start, and would have to pull out all stops to beat the fired-up Catamounts. The Bears did not get started til late in the first period when they moved for four successive first downs, only to be stopped on the UVM 12 by the Cats' stubborn trenchmen.

The second period was a battle from tackle to tackle with neither team making much headway. The half ended with Vermont still holding a big 6-0 edge in a tightly fought first half.

The third period action took place deep in UVM territory. But again Vermont was able to stymie the Maine drives til they took to the air lanes late in the period.

A sixty-yard gain and a 15-yard penalty against the Bears put the ball on the UVM 49, but Austin hit Dave Brown on the 21 for a first down. With the ball on the 9, after two running gains, Maine looked as if they were going to score but Catamount end Frank Bolden fell on a Maine fumble in the end-zone to give Vermont possession on the 20.

The Cats could not muster-up an offensive drive and fumble the ball back to the Bears on the UVM 30. The defensive line stopped Maine on the 14. The Cats took over, and again they couldn't get started, so after an exchange of fumbles, the Maine miscue being recovered by Jim Brennan, the Catamounts tried to go from their own 10, but got bogged down on the 8 where they had a Kent punt blocked. The ball rolled out of the end-zone for a safety. Vermont still led 6 to 2 til the next series of plays.

Vermont kicked-off from the 50, and on the second play of the final period Austin faded back and connected with Crabtree on the 20. Crabtree raced the remaining 20 yards unmolested. Roger Boucher booted the extra point to raise the score to 9-6. That ended the scoring and Vermont's hopes for a victory.

Frosh Top Norwich 14-0

Two 50-yard touchdown dives enabled Vermont to defeat Norwich 14-0, in a freshman football game at Northfield, Vermont. Unfortunately the game was greatly slowed down because of the incessant rain throughout the game.

A pass interference penalty set the stage for the visitor's first score in the second period. With the ball on the one-yard line, Terance Lynn, 190-pound full-back from Mills, Mass., bucked over for the touchdown. A two-point conversion followed on a pass from John O'Dea of Jersey City, N.J., to Steve Ross of Orange, Conn., an end who is 6'5" and 225 lb.

The Vermont defensive line led by Rusty Brink, Harve Buzzarian, John Sullivan, Dick VanBennekum, and Steve Ross played tough ball the entire game. They not only held the Norwich freshmen scoreless, but also held them four times when they were on the Vermont 3-yard line.

Late in the fourth quarter, The Vermont Kittens scored their second touchdown on a 10-yard pass from Ed Denning of Union City, N.J., to Tom Gagliardi of East Haven, Conn. The pass for the pat was incomplete.

COACHES CAN'T PLAY

It's too bad that Coach Clifford could not have somehow suited-up incognito and put himself in Saturday's game as a wild card substitution, but he had already used up his five years eligibility twenty-two years ago. He knew what to expect from Maine and diagnosed most of the running plays correctly. His Colby team beat the Bears twice during his six year reign at the Maine college. Vermont has only beaten the Black Bears two times in 19 tries.

It was most exasperating for the Catamounts' mild-mannered coach to call the pass play moments before it became reality, and the margin of victory for last year's Yankee Conference Champs. He tried to alert his pass defenders from the sidelines to watch number 14, a new man who was sent into the game by Maine's coach, Harold Westerman, with a special play, but he could not be heard over the cheers of the surprisingly spirited Vermont home crowd. Clifford anticipated the up-the-middle pattern, but could do nothing about it except throw his hands up in the air and futilely gesticulate along the sideline as number 14 crossed the goal line untouched for the game's winning touchdown.

SATURDAY NIGHT REFLECTIONS

As Coach Clifford sadly related to the team Monday afternoon, there was a defensive weakness on the scoring play that cost Vermont its first Conference win. It seems that no one missed his assignment, but that Maine luckily picked the only weak spot in the Cats' solid defense. Adjustments have been made to simplify UVM's defense, and Clifford is hoping to activate Vermont's latent offensive punch, which exploded for 82 record breaking points against RPI two weeks ago, against the Rams of Rhode Island at Kingston, R.I., this Saturday.

While reliving the game Saturday night, as many players and fans do, Coach Clifford discovered a bit of strategy that was not premeditated, but saved Vermont four points. His Saturday night reasoning went like this: As the Cats were ready to punt from their own 13-yard-line, he sent two substitutes into the game, which cost the Catamounts a five-yard delay-of-the-game penalty. So the punt had to come from the eight-yard marker, which forced Deane Kent to kick out of his own end zone. Unfortunately the punt was blocked, but it rolled out of the end-line just as a burly Black Bear lineman pounced on the ball. If it was not for the penalty, it would have been a six-point TD rather than a two-point safety.

BOTTLED SPIRIT

Congratulations to the whole student body for their exceptional display of school spirit at Saturday's Maine game. And congratulations also to the new Campus Security Patrol for tactfully controlling those few students who had to resort to bottled spirits to bring out their over-zealous school spirit.

But are congratulations in order? This is the CYNIC so, by nature, it is our policy to be cynical. Social drinking at college football games has become a red-blooded American tradition in the past fifty years. College level adults should be intelligent enough to control their habits and live lives of moderation but as all the generations of the past, our generation in the "space age" is entitled to have a blast sometime. Some of us see fit to drink spiritus fermenti in order to momentarily increase the speed of our bodily functions and some of us see fit to do this at football games. That's our prerogative. Should the new Security Patrol have the power to suppress all forms of this red-blooded American tradition in an overly military manner, walkie-talkies and all, as they displayed last Saturday?

Julius Rudel To Conduct New York City Opera Company In Red Lane Series

Julius Rudel rehearses for ensuing Lane Series Concert.

by Joan Klonsky

On Monday evening, October 22, at 8:30, the Red Lane Series will host the New York City Opera Company, conducted by Julius Rudel. It will be the seventh consecutive appearance at Lane Series for the Company, which has played every year since the 1956-57 season.

Two of Alacomo Puccini's one-act operas, "Il Tabarro" and "Gianni Schicchi," will be presented. Usually a third one-act opera, "Suor Angelica," is presented along with the other two under the title "Il Trittico." However, this year only the first two will appear, nevertheless providing a full evening's entertainment.

The brutally realistic "Il Tabarro" (The Cloak) is considered to be among Puccini's most successful works. Although it was at first slow to find favor with the public, it recently seems to have come into its own. The core of its appeal is directness of expression coupled with melodic interest, included in the cast of "Il Tabarro" are William Chapman, Robert Williams, Richard Krause, Spiro Malas, Arlene Saunders, Evelyn Sachs, and Joan Kelm.

"Gianni Schicchi," Puccini's only comic opera, was an immediate success. It is often played singly, apart from the "Il Trittico." Appearing in the cast are Norman Treigle, Doris Yarick, Evelyn Sachs, Frank Porretta, Richard Krause, Patricia Brooks, and Herbert Beattie.

Julius Rudel, who in 1961 was given an honorary Doctor of Music degree at UVM, is the Company's leading conductor and also administrative head of the opera house. Founded in 1943, the New York City Opera Company was placed under Mr. Rudel's direction in 1957. Possessing renowned skill for reproducing the works of the masters, he has wisely used the talents of veteran artists, instrumental in bringing fame to the Company. In addition, he has discovered many new voices, all of which have augmented his prestige and stature in the musical world. For this season alone, Mr. Rudel has introduced thirteen newcomers.

It was under his leadership that the New York City Opera presented three seasons using only the works of American composers, a successful endeavor aided by the Ford Foundation. In two seasons, four new American operas have been commissioned by Rudel through Ford grants. This past summer he opened the Spoleto Festival in Italy and appeared at Trieste, Philadelphia's Robin Hood Dell, New York's Lewisohn Stadium and Chicago's Grant Park.

Jack Trevithick, executive secretary of the University of Vermont's Lane Series, has announced two change of dates in Red Series attractions.

Trevithick announced that pianist Van Cliburn, originally scheduled to appear on Nov. 19, will now appear on Dec. 3.

The other change finds the Olatunji and Company of African dancers, drummers and singers, moving up from Dec. 3 to Nov. 5.

Lewis Replaces Cone As President Of IFC

At the Tuesday afternoon meeting of the IFC, elections were held to fill the position of president, vacated by the resignation of Lauriston Cone, Lambda Iota. The Council elected Willy Lewis, Sigma Phi Epsilon.

Cone's resignation was announced at the October 2 meeting of the IFC. In a letter to the Council, he stated that because of his recent marriage he would not be able to carry out his duties as they should be. At the election meeting, Cone expressed his pleasure in having been able to serve the IFC.

No other offices were elected at this meeting. The present executive board of the Council, in addition to Lewis consist of, Vice President, Joel Bauer, Phi Sigma Delta; Treasurer, Neil Fink, Tau Epsilon Phi; and Secretary, Peter Franz, Acacia.

Lewis, a resident of West Rupert, Vermont is a senior in the College of Arts and Sciences, with speech and political science majors. He is president of Sigma Phi Epsilon fraternity, and a member of the Advanced ROTC program. Upon graduation he plans a career in law or in the military service.

Also voted upon, and ratified at the October 16 meeting were several amended sections of the constitution. According to Lewis, the main part of the amended sections gives the Council a new format for representation. "The Intrafraternity Council, as of today (Tuesday), consists of

Gym Dedication Is Postponed

University of Vermont hopes for a November 1 completion date for its new gymnasium—physical plant have been dimmed by a delay in the expected date of arrival and installation of the gym's bleachers.

The delay, which may put off completion date for the $3,000,000 plant for another month, has also washed out plans to dedicate the facility on Saturday, Nov. 3, as a feature of UVM's traditional homecoming weekend for alumni and parents.

A University committee planning the dedication will meet this week to consider a new date for the dedication ceremony.

Paul V. Mravlag, Jr., director of alumni relations at UVM and a member of the gym dedication committee, said the committee was particularly disappointed at not being able to proceed with the homecoming dedication, since it would have been "ideal from the standpoint of giving alumni an opportunity to help celebrate the gym's opening."

Vermont alumni and friends have contributed nearly $800,000 of the cost of the new gym, Mravlag noted.

house presidents, a first and second representative, with each house now having two votes," said Lewis.

The new amendment "changes the body of IFC to a certain extent, in that house presidents are now required to sit on the Council. We feel that the house presidents can best indicate the desires of their respective houses. We also feel that they will work more for the promotion of the fraternal system than has the IFC, as a body, in the past."

Elections at Tuesday's meeting followed the rules of the old constitution, thus giving each house one vote, instead of the newly-approved plan of two votes per house.

Speaking of plans for the IFC, Lewis stated that "work will continue on the ... constitution revision. The combination of this work on the constitution and, the house presidents sitting on Council is a step forward in giving the IFC the position on this campus which it has so long deserved."

"I was pleased to learn, today," continued Lewis, "as I am sure was every fraternity man on campus, that some 80% of this year's freshman class has indicated a desire to rush. While this figure of 80% pleases me, I personally can not be satisfied until every freshman indicates a desire to make fraternalism part of his life."

"In my opinion," said Lewis, "fraternalism is the most tremendous experience a man can have during his college years."

Class Of 1927 Presents Ceremonial Mace To UVM

President Fey receives a ceremonial mace from the Class of 1927.

A ceremonial silver and ebony mace has been presented to the University of Vermont as a memorial of the Class of 1927.

As a symbol of power and leadership, the mace is carried by the chief marshal in all university academic processions and ceremonies.

It is displayed on the platform at official functions such as opening convocation, Founders' Day, and commencement.

The mace is 47 inches long. The sculpture head has four faces. Two of the faces on opposite sides depict "Knowledge" and "Friendship."

The other two faces show the tower of Old Mill with Mt. Mansfield in the background, and Ira Allen Chapel.

At the top of the mace is a medallion with the seal of the university.

The designer was Richard W. Simpson who attended UVM two years. He is the son of Carl and Doris Griffith Simpson, Class of 1927.

President Fey wrote to Dr. Charlotte C. Brown, Paterson, N.J., class reunion chairman, that the mace "will add a special note of authority and dignity to our ceremonial occasions."

"It will serve as a lasting tribute to the loyalty and devotion which has marked the Class of 1927 for special distinction."

Cost of the mace was about $800, contributed by members of the class.

Prior to being named to his new position, Averill was executive assistant general sales manager.

Since his graduation from Vermont in 1927, Averill has never worked for anybody but Chevrolet. Starting as a dealer, he moved up the trail until 1954 when he was made manager of fleet sales. In 1955 he became Eastern regional manager. This was followed by his appointment as assistant general sales manager then executive assistant.

Averill and his wife, Margaret, also a UVM graduate, reside in Bloomfield Village, Michigan. The couple has three children, two sons and a daughter. The elder son is a lawyer while the other is in law college.

A trustee of the University of Vermont has been named general sales manager of Chevrolet.

William's Trustees To Take Action Against Fraternities

Reprinted from
The Boston Sunday Herald
October 14, 1962

of Williams College are determined to carry out their edict for elimination of the 129-year-old fraternity system at the college, starting next September. Protests have been heard from both alumni and from undergraduates, but they do not appear strong enough to change the announced policy.

Official announcement of the trustees' decision was contained in the campus newspaper, The Williams Record. It reaffirms the stand taken by the trustees last June after an 11-member committee, appointed to examine the fraternity system, reported that the fraternities were playing a "disproportionate role" in undergraduate life.

GRADUAL APPROACH

The trustees plan to utilize the existing fraternity facilities as they become available to the college. In September, the college would begin taking over from all 15 Greek letter fraternities their role of providing room, board and social accommodations for students.

A committee of nine alumni and two undergraduates, headed by J. B. Angevine of Boston, a member of the Class of 1911, drafted the report on the fraternity system at Williams. It found in part that the role of the fraternities was "so all-encompassing that their influence tends to interfere with the broader, more inclusive ends of the college itself."

The study found that 44 per cent of the students in the upper three classes lived in fraternity houses and 94 per cent of the upperclassmen ate meals there.

TIME TO STOP

The committee maintained that, despite the efforts made to erase the "rigors and humiliations of the caste system," too much "otherwise useful energy has already been wasted in wrestling with the fraternity problem and that the time has come to put an end to the pressure build-ups that for so long and to so large an extent have monopolized the attention of many alumni and most of the undergraduates."

A student petition in opposition to the plan was signed by 524 students, or 74 per cent of the fraternity membership. Total college enrollment is 1,130, of whom about 300 are freshmen.

First Rushing Begins At IFC Dance

On October 13th from nine to midnight the Waterman Dining Hall was the exciting scene of the Interfraternity Dance sponsored by the members of the Council itself. Freshmen men eagerly signed their name tags and eagerly at the same time signed away their evenings to the animated pep talks of upperclass fraternity men.

As the Night Riders played a succession of twists, waltzes, and hully gullies, the men tried to be attentive to their dates and at the same time attentive either to the giving of or to the receiving of important fraternity rules and regulations.

Fraternity men vied for the attention of the individuals, who comprised the now most sought after group on campus, and between the dance exhibitions of the upperclassmen and the numerous important introductions to be made, the room buzzed with activity.

After refreshments, dancing, and a continual stream of chatter the dance came to a happy and successful close. The independent members of the Freshmen class were well on their way to becoming the united fraternity brothers of the Sophomore class.

Dairy Industry Is Complex And Technical

The staff of UVM dairy busy themselves on a daily routine of making ice cream. (Credit: Haeseler, S.P.S.)

by Janet Hadda

Possibly the most misunderstood department at the University of Vermont is the Animal and Dairy Science Department. This may be because many people do not realize that an agricultural course really is technical. Dr. A. M. Smith, chairman, explained that in the Animal and Dairy Science Department the main emphasis is put on teaching students in technological rather than the manual skills of agriculture. Students learn not only that something happens, but also why it happens.

The part of the department which directly concerns all students living on campus is Dairy Industry. According to Dr. Henry Atherton, assistant professor of Dairy Industry, and teacher of Dairy Bacteriology, Dairy Testing, and Quality Control, this is the section which deals with the business, management, and sales end of dairy products (processing and bottling milk, for example). In Dairy Industry, courses in the manufacturing of cheese, milk, ice cream, etc., are given. Dr. Atherton hastened to again emphasize the fact that these courses are not as simple as they might appear to be; "These courses are on the scientific side in many respects. They are essentially applied chemistry and bacteriology." He also stated, "Many courses are readily allied to the whole food industry, not just to the dairy industry alone."

When asked what part the students play in Dairy Industry and how it affects UVM students, Mr. Alec Bradfield, professor of Dairy Industry, replied, "We pasteurize and bottle milk for the (UVM) cafeterias and the Mary Fletcher hospital. In addition, we make cottage cheese, cheddar cheese, and ice cream, and provide cream for coffee and cereal. The products made are sold only on campus." Dairy Industry ice cream is the only product which is not served in our cafeterias. Production goes on six days a week. Students participate in two ways: in laboratory work, they learn to make cheese and cream and also learn how to run the machinery used in these products. Then, in

Student Teachers Train In Area Schools

One of the necessary and most interesting parts of the education curriculum here at UVM is student teaching. For the seniors in elementary of secondary education, these seven weeks of practical experience are the culminating point of their college preparation. Here they get a preview of what their careers will really be like.

Optional R.O.T.C. At Rutgers Is A Success

Homo Americanus, especially the adolescent American male, is a contrary critter. Tell him he must do something, and he'll refuse. Tell him he can't do it, and he'll insist he can. Something to exemplify this has taken place at Rutgers the State University since it decided to abandon compulsory military training. Training will never work on a voluntary basis, critics said when the idea of option was inaugurated in 1959. But it has, outstandingly.

All land-grant colleges, of which Rutgers is one, were until 1959 compelled by charter to give military training the first 2 years after enrollment. After that, on a limited and selective basis, students who wished to pursue military training could continue under the Reserve Officers Training Corps program and if successful get a Reserve commission. The advance courses, voluntary, were generally crowded. The basic courses, compulsory, were as popular as measles.

Because of the draft and other military manpower developments, the Defense Department decreed in 1959 that land-grant colleges need no longer make the military-training program compulsory. So Rutgers adopted the voluntary concept, amid dire warnings.

The report this fall is that for the third consecutive year the enrollment in military training has increased. The enrollment in the Army phase of the program is higher than in 1959. Oddly, taking glamour into consideration, the enrollment in the Air Force phase is a little off, but the total in both exceeds the 1959 enrollment by 175.

The figures would seem to demonstrate that there is no lack of interest in military training, and it could be reasonably assumed that the officer material thus created would be superior to any cultivated under compulsion.

courses which last twice as long as the regular class period. For the next two weeks, they will attend classes at their assigned schools. By working with the co-operating teachers, they will find out the plans for instruction for the next two months. They will then return to the campus for a week of preparation for their experience. Finally on November 5, they will return to the schools for five weeks. At the end of this time, they should be in full command of the elementary classroom.

For the fifty secondary education majors, the "big moment" occurs next semester. February and March are spent in accelerated courses here on campus. Then on March 4 they move off campus to one of seven or eight of the larger communities in Vermont. During these seven weeks, they must pay for their room and board in a private home or hotel. The first two weeks, the students spend observing. Then they actually teach for the remainder of the time. On April 29, they will return to campus and spend the last four weeks of the semester in accelerated courses.

At various intervals during the field experience, supervisors from UVM visit the co-operating schools and observe the student teacher in action. By conferring with the regular teachers, they are able to keep up on the student teacher's progress. At the end of the seven weeks, the college student is evaluated by the co-operating teacher as to his ability to cope with the teaching situation.

These seven weeks of their senior year are an invaluable experience for the education students. They not only learn to apply their textbook knowledge, but also they get an opportunity to adjust to the demanding routine of working with children and juveniles in the rewarding profession which they have chosen.

The student in education is given a good basis for his student teaching through previous field experiences. In the sophomore year, secondary education majors "participate" in classrooms in the Burlington area. Here, they can observe teaching methods and student attitudes, and get a general idea of the teaching process. By the end of the thirty sessions, the "participant" is actually taking over a part of the class period. For the elementary education majors, this part of their field experience comes in their junior year. For those students who have never worked with youngsters before, a course in child communication is required. Here, the students work with Scout troops, youth groups, and other children's clubs in order to observe the child in many situations.

During the first semester, approximately forty seniors majoring in elementary education will be student teaching in schools in the Burlington area. For the first three weeks, they took accelerated courses -- three

FORMER UVM PRESIDENT HONORED AT WESTERN RESERVE UNIVERSITY

A former president of the University of Vermont has been honored by the institution of which he is now president.

A $6,270,000 science center at Western Reserve University in Cleveland has been named in honor of John S. Millis. Dr. Millis was president of the University of Vermont for eight years before accepting a similar position at Western Reserve in 1949. A native of California, Dr. Millis was educated at the University of Chicago where he received his Ph. D. in physics. He is the first president of the Cleveland school to have an educational background in science. Under his guidance, Western Reserve has gained national renown in the fields of science and medicine.

HIGH TEST, LOW TEST, NO TEST

Just the other night I was saying to the little woman, "Do you think the importance of tests in American colleges is being overemphasized?" (The little woman, incidentally, is not, as you might think, my wife. My wife is far from a little woman. She is, in fact, almost seven feet high and heavily muscled. She is a full-blooded Chiricahua Apache and holds the world's hammer-throw record. The little woman I referred to is someone we found crouching under the sofa when we moved into our apartment several years ago, and there she has remained ever since. She never speaks, except to make a kind of guttural clicking sound when she is hungry. Actually, she is not too much fun to have around, but with my wife away at track meets most of the time, at least it gives me somebody to talk to.)

But I digress. "Do you think the importance of tests in American colleges is being overemphasized?" I said the other night to the little woman, and then I said, "Yes, Max, I do think the importance of tests in American colleges is being overemphasized." (As I have explained, the little woman does not speak, so when we have conversations, I am forced to do both parts.)

To get back to tests—sure, they're important, but let's not allow them to get too important. There are, after all, many qualities and talents that simply can't be measured by quizzes. Is it right to penalize a gifted student whose gifts don't happen to be of the academic variety? Like, for instance, Gregor Sigafoos?

Gregor, a freshman at the New Hampshire College of Tanning and Belles Lettres, has never passed a single test; yet all who know him agree that he is studded with talent like a ham with cloves. He can, for example, sleep standing up. He can do a perfect imitation of a scarlet tanager. (I don't mean just do the bird calls; I mean he can fly South in the winter.) He can pick up B-B's with his toes. He can say "Toy boat" three times fast. He can build a rude telephone out of two empty Marlboro packs and 100 yards of butcher's twine. (Of all his impressive accomplishments, this last is the one Gregor likes to do best—not building the telephone, but emptying the Marlboro packs. Gregor doesn't just dump the Marlboros out of the pack. He smokes them one at a time—settling back, getting comfortable, savoring each tasty puff. As Gregor often says with a winsome smile, "By George, the makers of Marlboro took their time finding this fine flavor, this great filter, and by George, I'm going to take my time enjoying 'em!"

Well, sir, there you have Gregor Sigafoos—artist, humanist, philosopher, Marlboro smoker, and freshman since 1939. Will the world—so desperately in need of talent—ever benefit from Gregor's great gifts? Alas, no. He is in college to stay.

But even more tragic for mankind is the case of Anna Livia Plurabelle. Anna Livia, a classmate of Gregor's, had no talent, no gifts, no brains, no personality. All she had was a knack for taking tests. She would cram like crazy before a test, always get a perfect score, and then promptly forget everything she had learned. Naturally, she graduated with highest honors and degrees by the dozen, but the sad fact is that she left college no more educated, no more prepared to cope with the world, than when she entered. Today, a broken woman, she crouches under my sofa.

Editor's Scrapbook

Let's Get Hip!

The CYNIC would like to extend its welcome to a new and powerful organization: the G.G.G. This new group is rather exclusive. Perhaps you have seen some of its members strolling about in yellow-sticker areas, dark and dangerous passageways and even at football games. The officers of this elite wear uniforms; their trainees wear badges to indicate their membership. They have a car, (radio equipped), and a two-way radio system. (They happen to be a very fraternal bunch and like to keep in close touch with one-another).

What does G.G.G. stand for? But doesn't everybody know? "Good Guy Gestapo". Yes, the high-powered, ultra-organized, super-modern, advanced, accelerated, polished, fastidious, meticulous, methodical methods of the COPS have appeared on this peaceful, lovely, serene campus situated one mile from the beautiful shores of Lake Champlain, (and just five minutes from downtown Burlington).

Why are they "Good Guys." Because these individuals have been hired for a reasonable purpose and they are making a conscientious effort to accomplish this purpose. The CYNIC in no way questions the need for, nor the desirability of having such individuals on campus. They both safeguard the general security of the university and aid in the training of our own university police force. They are skilled and intelligent individuals, members of a nationally known and respected agency - The Burns Detective Agency.

But what are they, in their cold and cruel scientific way, doing to the college football game at UVM? Between the State Liquor Control Board representative at the game, several members of the Burlington police force, three Burns' detectives, and more than 15 university policemen a fella doesn't even have a chance to curse above a whisper at a game. Between the 15-20 "spotters" in the stands and the walkie-talkie carrying, uniformed detectives a guy could scarcely even think about the unthinkable - a quick sip from a hip flask. Why, these super-scientific methods take all the fun out of it. You just can't get that feeling of getting away with something and feel well about it anymore. As a matter of fact, you just can't get away with it, period. Several students were hauled out of the stands at our last home game for un-hipping hip flasks. The CYNIC has not been able to verify just what the fate of these poor lads was, but reports indicate that no action has been taken to date.

To get serious for just one moment: It is true that drinking is illegal at UVM. It is true that it is illegal to drink in this state until you have reached the age of 21. It is true that there have been many embarrassing incidents in the past, due mostly, to insufficient police enforcement at football games. (Also due mostly to St. Michael's rabble-rousers.)

Moment of seriousness is over. Now to get tongue-in-cheek again. Obviously, we have a conflict. Superior police enforcement effectively accomplishes its purpose at football games - to maintain the law (no drinking) and order. The students are faced with a problem. How to combat this superior enforcement so that their rights and privileges (illegal drinking) are not taken from them. (After all, what is a football game without "a few" to keep one's throat clear to cheer and one's spirits high when the score is low?)

The CYNIC will now propose a solution. (A few strains from "The 1812 Overture" please.)

(Thank you.)

Let the hoard of G.G.G.'s converge on the stadium each home game. Let them use their radio network to halt any incidents which do happen to arise. If the administration feels that the cost is worthwhile, leave them to their task. However, let them not encroach upon every student's inalienable and illegal right to "sneak a few."

THE SUGGESTION - Bring a hip flask to the Homecoming game. Fill it with water (which just may look like gin), fill it with tea (which just happens to look a bit like whiskey), or fill it with coke (which bears a basic resemblance to rum and coke). If all cooperate, this can be one of the most successful Homecoming games in the history of UVM. Let those individuals foolhardy (continued on page five)

Letters To The Editor

Physical Ed. Major Defended

To The Editor:

Concerning your October 11th "Scrapbook" article, dealing with the proposed physical education major, I have listed several points that should have been considered before writing that article. I believe there is a definite need for a physical education major at UVM, based on facts. I therefore recommend that you consider the following points as a start toward a better understanding of the physical education profession and the responsibilities of this institution to the residents of the state, and its students in general.

1.) Is there any connection between the needs of the elementary and high schools of Vermont and the responsibilities of its state university?

2.) Is there a need for qualified physical educators in Vermont, or more generally, is there a need for good physical education programs in this state?

3.) If there is a need and the university has a responsibility to eliminate this need, are there students (resident or non-resident) who might be interested in physical education as a career?

4.) Assuming that the first three questions are answered in the affirmative, is the present minor program adequate to fill the needs of the state and the students who might be interested in this area?

5.) Having considered whether or not there is a need for a physical education major here at UVM, let us see if there is any real connection between the drafting of athletes, and a physical education major? Let's attempt to answer this question with two more questions.

6.) What percentage of athletes choose physical education as a major in college?

7.) Do athletes necessarily need an easier curriculum than other students?

8.) In connection with the previous three questions, let's ask what courses the proposed physical education major will consist of. You might be surprised.

9.) Finally, how does the physical education offering at UVM compare to that of other state universities?

In the October 11th article the above points were either mentioned directly or inferred, and presented in a negative way. I, therefore, suggest that if you reconsider these points on the basis of fact, you will come up with an entirely different concept of the proposed physical education major.

Sincerely yours,
Paul Henry

Pro Athletic Program

To the Editor:

Your contention in your last editorial that the initiation of a Physical Education major in the Department of Education "would be undesirable and disadvantageous to the proper development of this University as an academic institution" will have to be substantiated, if at all, by more carefully reasoned and informative arguments than those you attempted to present.

The first weakness of your editorial is that you fail to make a distinction between the sports program of the university, be it a varsity or intramural program, or both, and the academic program for physical education majors. Physical education majors may or may not participate in varsity sports. Certainly all varsity athletes need not be physical education majors. A program for a major in physical education is not solely - if at all - a device for recruiting or subsidizing varsity athletes or the type of high-powered varsity sports program you evidently dislike. It is not true that "the drafting of athletes, athletic scholarships and a physical education major necessarily go hand-in-hand." It is obvious that many schools give athletic scholarships and do not have a program for physical education majors. In other cases there are such programs and they have practically no influence on the varsity sports program. I taught at one university in an athletic conference noted for its "professionalism" in sports and this university had a major in physical education. Very few varsity athletes were enrolled in it for the simple reason that it was too strenuous an academic program for them to cope with and still retain their varsity posts. The control of the program was not in the hands of the coaches of the major sports and there was no tampering with academic standards, no favoritism, and no list of "gut" courses. The program for physical education majors was aimed at developing teachers of physical education (in the broadest sense of the term) for service in our high schools and colleges. They did a good job, too. They also trained recreation workers for public and private agencies. Their faculty members also provided excellent leadership in the physical education program for undergraduates. This experience of mine is not unique. I have taught at another university which also had an excellent program for physical education majors. It was staffed by people with an interest in physical education, not a career in commercial sports at the college level. They developed graduates with similar ideas and many of them are now outstanding teachers in schools in that state.

The second weakness of your editorial is that you don't understand that a decision to institute a new curricular program is not one which is made solely by the department in question. Such a decision involves the considered judgement of large numbers of faculty and administrators. It is not apt to be made hastily or on insufficient evidence. This is not to say that all such decisions seem wise, either at the time or in retrospect, to all of us. Neither to say that all such decisions seem wise, either at the time or in retrospect, to all of us. Neither you nor I would agree to all of them were we making the choice. But they are still considered judgements and a goodly sum of evidence and logic supports most of them. You must realize, also, that decisions on a new curriculum and decisions on scholarships - athletic or otherwise - are two separate and distinct matters. In many cases they involve different committees and different individuals. The same people are not necessarily - nor usually - instituting new curricula, awarding athletic scholarships and "looking around for some promising hockey players" up in Canada, all at the same time. Perhaps I have more faith than you that each of these matters will be handled appropriately by the different people concerned with them and that the actions of all of them will be carefully considered by the faculty as a whole and the administration, including the President. Perhaps I don't look in the same places you do, but I haven't yet noticed any significant tendency among the faculty or administration to subvert the pursuit of academic excellence as a worthy goal and to turn this university into a sports-mad circus of athletic "spectaculars". I must say, however, I am delighted to see that some students are concerned and watchful about such things. Personally, I don't think you have much cause for alarm. And I for one feel that this country of over-fed and over-fat people can use an army of dedicated physical educators to teach us something about physical conditioning and wise use of leisure time in active recreation.

Lastly, if the physical education major program is to be in the College of Education I think you are doing an injustice to said College if you assume that anything but a program of superior quality and academic purpose would be tolerated by the Dean and faculty of that division. You certainly do not have in your editorial any evidence to the contrary. The proposed program in Physical Education is not a plot to sell the academic virtue of the University for a covey of athletic victories. And I suspect if you will discuss the matter in the spirit of honest inquiry with the faculty in Physical Education you will find their intentions are reasonable and sensible.

Sincerely yours,
Gordon F. Lewis

THINKING OUT LOUD

by Kim Borlaskin

COMMUNISM AT UVM

Today practically everybody is an expert on Communism. (Very few people have any real idea of what it is, but they're experts nonetheless.) Almost anyone you meet on the street can give you a long lecture about why Our System is Good and the Red System is Bad. They get what little they know from the newspapers they read, from the speeches they hear given by politicians of one sort or another, from condensations in Reader's Digest and editorials in our overwhelmingly right-leaning press, and from what they hear from high school history teachers. In short, they know extremely little about the subject.

One remedy for this has only lately been taken seriously: give courses in Communism in school, preferably in college. To be sure, this is not a universal remedy, but it is a good start. Or at least it would be a good start if more colleges had these courses, which they don't. A surprising number of high schools have started giving such courses, and some have even made passing a test in Communism mandatory for graduation. The only thing wrong with the majority of these courses -- or of the courses I've heard of -- is that they tend to be taught subjectively, as if by carefully screened apologists for the American Way Of Life. The end result is that we still get experts on why We are great and why They are scum, only now they can really speak authoritatively; they've had a course in it, after all.

The remedy for that situation must come from the colleges, since it is almost impossible to get a school board to hire high school teachers who can treat the subject objectively. The school boards hire teachers on Communism simply because the teachers agree with them. And the community at large backs up the school boards, so the answer does not lie there, either.

The answer, as I said, is in the colleges. Very few colleges, however, have responded. UVM, I am happy to say, is one of the few. Nonetheless, UVM still hasn't gone far enough.

History 243 is a course on Soviet Russia. Although the instructor, Dr. Daniels, is an expert on communist political theory and practice, and the course takes in much of this theory, it is still predominantly a history course. Even so, with the proper background, the course can be an extremely valuable one.

Unfortunately, the proper background includes taking History 12, which, Dr. Daniels has said, is undoubtedly the hardest course on campus. Still, a good many students could conceivably take the basic course just to be able to take the course on Communism. But what of the people who can not, for one reason or another, take History 12, or who will have a hard time fitting it into their schedule?

What we should have is a course to accommodate these people. Such a course need not be as extensive or as intensive as History 243. Instead of requiring that the background material be given in History 12, the course could include the background material as it was needed. The course could start off, for instance, on some basic history, then study Marx, and go on from there, showing how Communist thought and practice evolved from Marx to Khrushchev. As I said, it needn't be the most complete of courses, but it certainly would provide a better-than-decent working knowledge of Communism. If there were then some people who wanted a more thorough course, they could start with History 12 and 243 right off, and skip the more general course. Or the course could be extended to a second semester, where the first semester's work could be expanded upon, and perhaps current developments could be taken apart in detail.

Professor Daniels has said that he would be willing to teach such a course as I have outlined if it could be shown that it was necessary, and in great enough demand. I maintain that the necessity of such a course has been very amply demonstrated time and again all over the country. The amazing, and appalling, lack of even basic understanding of Communism, the number of people who have never even had an inclination to read anything as basic as Das Kapital, or any of Marx's other writings, or any of the writings of Engels or Lenin, for instance -- that, plus the fact that so many of these people fancy themselves experts on this very vital subject, makes some sort of basic course, available to everybody in the college, not only necessary, but almost mandatory. Undoubtedly it would be asking a little too much, but the course might even be made a requisite, just as English 1 and 2 are now requisite.

The necessity, as I say, has already been amply demonstrated, but what about the demand? Accompanying this issue of the CYNIC there is a pre-addressed questionnaire. All that is necessary is to check one of the four choices, fold the sheet in three (with the address on the back showing, please), and either (1) drop it in any University Messenger Service box (there is a convenient one in the rear of the Information Office in Waterman, one inside the front door of East Hall, one in the Engineering Building, and a few others all over the campus); (2) drop it off at the CYNIC office, 7 East Hall, or in the CYNIC's box in the west wing, East Hall; or (3) put a 3¢ stamp on it and drop it in any letter box (if you feel rich at the moment). It's as simple as that.

Your answers would be very greatly appreciated, as would any extra comments you care to make. Not only would they be appreciated, they are also important. The results of this may be more important than you think.

enough to create any "incidents" be caught and brought to justice; let the others enjoy their water, tea, and coke. Certainly the G.G.G. would not stoop to searching each and every individual as they march through the gate. Why, they probably won't even think of it.

Dateline: College

by Betty Bergman

"Clifford received a standing ovation from the group after an address outlining the duties and defects of campus government." This quote comes from a September 27 edition of the Daily Orange (Syracuse), and the subject of the quote was ex-Dean of Men of UVM, Earle W. Clifford. In this same address, Clifford spoke of university apathy.

"He defined apathy as 'Lack of passion', noting it exemplified by poor ... classroom attendance.

"Apathy was missing though, at the SU-Pennsylvania State University game last year, the two panty raids last year and in students' reaction to the university liquor policy (!), Clifford said."

Clifford made the Daily Orange again on September 28 in connection with an article that reviewed the probation status of several houses on the Syracuse campus. The article is as follows:

"Last year Dean of Men Earle W. Clifford tightened up enforcement of university regulations affecting fraternities. Nine houses were hit by either suspension or probation penalties, but 30 houses remain on the Hill. The strong policy, coupled with the appointment of James P. McMurray as fraternity administrator and the announcement of a fraternity survey next month, were all part of a program aimed to prove Syracuse University is interested in the fraternity system. Two of the houses remain on pro; the three suspended ones have been reduced to probationary status."

The Kingsman (Brooklyn College) of September 21, covered a story involving a boy who was refused admission because his average was .7 per cent below that which is required for entrance into Brooklyn College. The student's mother brought suit against the college, his high school and the board of education. She based her "argument on the fact that at high school her son took part in a special 'scholarship program' limited to superior students. She contended that had he not been involved in this more difficult program he might have received higher grades and thus have been able to meet the standards for admission. Furthermore, she argued that his high school did not notify BC of the fact that he participated in this program and that the college, had it known of this, should have taken this information into account ...

"The judge concurring with this argument, stated, 'It appears that the high school was remiss in failing to give due credit for, and in indicating on the college transcripts, the petitioner's son's enrollment in the ... scholarship block ... If the colleges do not give special weight to honors courses, and this fact becomes generally known, why would a young man or woman want to enter upon such a program?'

The court thus ordered that the student be accepted.

While killings, bombings, riots, and other forms of violence were taking place at the University of Mississippi at Oxford, recently Dean of Men Rader Grantham of the University of Southern Mississippi in Hattiesburg applauded the students of his campus "for sound judgement and lack of violence shown during the tense week of racial classes in Mississippi.

OVER LIGHTLY

by Joel Posner

Comedians are still lazy. They used to be able to get a laugh out of "Brooklyn", now they use "Madison Avenue." They are riding the newest wave of snobbery, the reverse snobbery of The Intellectual. The Liberal Intellectual has taken over where the old time High Hatted D.A.R. Conservative left off. The American success symbol used to be a long black limousine and a private pullman, the new one is a small beetle shaped automobile and a wife who doesn't wear lipstick. It was once fashionable to spout phrases like "My country, right or wrong...." It is now a vogue to demand "Algeria for the Algerians."

Some things haven't changed, but others have. It is still the horror of most parents that their offspring will move to Greenwich Village, it is the horror of the Intellectual Community that they will, instead, move to Westport, Connecticut.

The real change is that the second view is becoming dominant, that the Thinkers are finally being heard, that many of the once heretical ideas of the Intellectuals are now accepted. The unfortunate thing is that the new snobbery is just as stereotyped, just as shackling as the old.

This can be seen on many levels: the artistic, the political, and the personal. In each vast area, the snobbery of the newly enthroned is suffocating.

Publishers, for example, have replaced Horatio Alger with Willy Loman, but with a new passion. I remember reading about the trouble Keats had with a leading British journal called Blackwood's. He was the victim of constant attack because he was a Liberal Whig and Blackwood's was as Tory a journal as one would wish to find. No one hid the fact that Blackwood's literary judgement of Keats was based on political disagreement, and Keats went on writing poetry as if nothing was amiss.

In a very real sense, partisan disagreement today means suffocation. The work of fiction telling of the greatness of man is met with jeers and knowing smiles. It is rejected on partisan grounds really, but no one recognizes this fact. The work is ostensibly inferior, perhaps lacking in theme, and its author either learns to conform or is quietly discouraged from further efforts.

The difference is that we have forgotten partisanship, we assume our view of the world is the right view.

This is true on a more personal day-to-day level. I can imagine a young man fighting the heroic fight to be creative, turning his back on the family dry-goods store, and heading to Paris to write poetry. But, where would this same man turn if today he wanted to be a mechanic and his parents wanted him to go to college. Advertising men are not revolutionaries, they are laughable villains.

I have a friend who is now a college-senior. He is studying to be a high school teacher. He doesn't really want to teach in a high school, but he does want to fight the heroic fight, the fight of the underdog. He is a reverse snob. His mockery of the embryonic businessmen among his friends is as disgusting as the hounding of the turn-of-the-century union leaders in America.

He is, of course, hurting only himself. His snobbery, the snobbery of the intellectual, is forcing him into a career he will probably not be happiest in.

Real damage is also done when this snobbery hits the political scene. The Liberal has taken the theoretical throne, he assumes he is right. I remember seeing a debate between Kenneth Galbraith and the Editor of Harper's about Federal aid to the arts. Galbraith, and the entire audience, were very much in favor of such aid. The interesting thing is that at no point did the two really debate the question. Galbraith simply rejected everything his opponent said, the audience cheered, and the beleaguered editor, faced with such God-like opposition, was reduced to embarrassed and half hearted disagreement. No one ever thought of asking Galbraith to back up his stand, it was considered sufficient that he discounted whatever was said against the Right View as wrong.

This summer my sister went to a summer camp owned by an academic Liberal. He teaches at a New York City college. When she mentioned to him that I am a Republican he made the amazing statement that he wanted to "talk to this Republican for a few minutes so I can straighten him out."

Perhaps the best example of this type of narrowness is displayed by young Intellectual Agnostics. I spent a few hours recently discussing the Catholic view on birth control with one such seeker-of-truth. It was his astounding contention that the whole Catholic hierarchy opposed artificial birth control because they wanted Catholics to have more children so that the Church could increase its power. I am not a Catholic, and I do not agree with the Church's stand on birth control, but I found this statement highly offensive. It would be inconsistent with the fundamental beliefs of Catholics for them to practice artificial birth control. This pompous Intellectual had no more ability to recognize his own partisanship than the men who threatened to burn Galileo for his scientific observations.

We must realize that we each have a view of the world and that it is one view. Whole lives are devoted to political conservatism, to Catholicism, and, yes, even to maintaining a home in Westport and a job writing television copy. None of us has the right or the vision to play God. None of us can pass ultimate judgement on any of these things. We can disagree, disagree quite strongly, but we can not dismiss. As sure as we might be that Federal aid to higher education is right, as certain as we are that football scholarships are evil, just so sure were scientists that the world was flat.

Mixes And Matches

by Sue Milman

The dreary Vermont autumn hasn't hindered any of the festivities on campus. In fact, the pace of social events seems to have accelerated. Despite the rain and a football defeat by Maine, the Alpha Chi house was crowded last Saturday afternoon. The Norsemen really set a good beat for dancing -- if you could find two square inches to dance in! The Sigma Nu house was also the scene of an open house after the game. The crowds gathered in Sig Nu's new combination dining-party room. Music for dancing was provided by the Cyclones, a five piece band from New York. In addition, one room on each floor was open for inspection during the afternoon. In keeping with the autumn theme, cider and doughnuts were served. The Pie Party held at Gamma Phi was one of the most successful it has been in many years. Pie-eaters and twisters had a rousing time. If anyone has seen three borrowed kerosene lanterns around the campus... please return them to the Gamma Phis.

Dinner parties and guests galore for the Thetas. Last week the KATs were the guests of Sigma Nu for dinner. Likewise, the Thetas were pleased to have Dean Harris and Dean Patzer as their dinner guests. An extra special guest this week was Miss Marberger, a new member of the Music Department, who has consented to become Theta's New Adviser. Welcome to Theta. Theta Chi played host to the Gamma Phis at a dessert hour last Tuesday. More doings at Theta Chi --- there will be a Harvest Dance at the house with none other than the Craters on Saturday, October 20 from 8-12 p.m. No freshmen men allowed -- sorry guys! The Sigma Nu house, which has been the home of the Sig Nus for thirty years, has built a new extension. The Pi Phis were guests at the housewarming.

There is a great deal of excitement at the TEP house. A new television room has been added, several of the rooms have been repainted, and all the halls were recently repainted. The Night Riders, led by Rick Nalin, '63, and Chuck Lowenstein, '63, both brothers of TEP, are doing a great job on campus. They have just returned from a Homecoming Weekend at Colgate where Neil Yeston, '64, was guest vocalist. Best of luck from the Brothers of TEP to Milt Goggan, who is eating at the house of scholarship. Word has it that El Tigre needs more confidence before he tackles the big "A" from second floor!

The Alpha Chis enjoyed being hostesses for their providence president. The girls were excited to learn that the providence convention will be held at Alpha Iota chapter, here at UVM next spring. The Alpha Chis were also pleasantly surprised by two alumnae guests, Ester Colburn, who recently returned from Germany, and Bonnie Burgess MacLean, who was on her way to her husband's new army post. Monday the sorors celebrated their founding, which was on October 15, 1885.

Best wishes to Bob Helstein and Howie Meridy, both of TEP '62, who are now freshmen at UVM Medical School.

There seems to be no end to busy weeks. The Thetas acted as alarm clocks for the Delta Psis one morning by escorting the whole fraternity to Theta for breakfast. On October 20 the Pi Phis and Acacia are sponsoring a show by the Tarriers, a well known singing group from New York, for the benefit of the Community Chest. Tickets are $1.50 now and $1.75 at the door. Tau Epsilon Phi played host to nine transfer men for dinner. Good luck at UVM Boys!

The brothers of AGR would like to welcome their new adviser, Dr. Bruce A. Gaylord, Assistant Prof. of Agricultural Education.

NEW PLEDGES

Congratulations to Steve Goodman, '65, who recently pledged Tau Epsilon Phi. The Gamma Phis are pleased to welcome two new pledges, Judy Amend, '65, and Sara Simpson, '64.

Congratulations to Penny Carr and Lyn Powell who became Theta sisters last weekend. An extra pleasure was having Mrs. Powell present at the installation, for she, too, is a Lambda Theta.

PINNINGS

The sisters and pledges of Gamma Phi Beta were serenaded by the brothers of ATO in honor of the recent pinning of Sue Rex, '63, and John Mello, '63. Best wishes to Barbara Brothers, '65, also of Gamma Phi, and Albert Stevens, '64, of AGR. Congratulations to Joel Bauch, '64, of TEP who recently pinned Arlene Zarett of Queens Village, New York. Cupid has also been visiting the KAT house. Both Kay King and Sherry Hartford are wearing Delta Psi pins. Kay is pinned to Ralph Guiduli, '62, and Sherry to Dennis Morrisseau, '64.

WEDDING BELLS AND THE STORK

Best of luck to Bruce MacDonald and his bride the former Barbara Billings.

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Smith have announced the arrival of a baby girl, Jennifer. Mrs. Smith is the former Dale Warner, a soror of Theta. Have fun painting everything pink for your new little bundle of joy.

IN MEMORIUM

The Brothers and pledges of Tau Epsilon Phi would like to express their sympathies in remembrance of their late Brother, Edward Rutner.

Reflections of Telstar

Remember the picture above? It flashed across your television screen on a hot night last July. Perhaps you remember that it originated from France. And that it reached the U.S. via Telstar, the world's first private enterprise communications satellite.

Since that summer night, the Bell System's Telstar has relayed electronic signals of many types -- television broadcasts, telephone calls, news photographs, and others.

But there's one Telstar reflection you might have missed. Look into the faces of the Bell System people below and you'll see it. It is the reflection of Telstar's success that glowed brightly on the faces of all who shared in the project.

Their engineering, administrative and operations skills created Telstar and are bringing its benefits down out of the clouds to your living room.

These Bell System people, through their talented, dedicated efforts, make your phone service still better, more economical, and more useful.

The reflections of Telstar are many.

UVM COED CUTS RECORD

Sharon Strauss is a young University of Vermont coed who is determined to make the Dean's list.

Away from the classroom, this peppy, 18-year-old freshman from Oceanside, N.Y., has another desire -- to be a successful singer. Her chances for success in both goals look good.

Sharon, who was an honor student at Oceanside High School, will have to wait until January to see how successful she is in her first aim but from all indications she is already a giant step down the path towards her second ambition.

The granddaughter of a Vermonter who ran a general store in Danby for 50 years, Sharon currently has a record that has been tabbed as a "best bet" by Cashbox and "one of the top 10" by Variety, both entertainment trade papers.

The record is "Don't Keep Our Friends Away From Me." The Ray Charles singers provide the background vocal support while a 31-piece orchestra supplies the accompaniment. Sid Feller, who conducts for Eddie Fisher and Edie Gorme, conducted the record. While the song is definitely geared towards the younger set, Sharon frowns on tabbing it strictly rock and roll. The record was released to 5000 disc jockeys in September and Sharon toured the East Coast plugging it before coming to Vermont in mid-September.

She cut the record in June at the same time she was taking her final exams. "It's funny. I made trips to New York City practically every day for a couple of weeks and between rehearsals I'd study. And you know what? I got better grades." In the record, Sharon sings a duet with herself.

There's quite a story behind how Sharon happened to cut the recording. Sharon, who has been singing ("never had a lesson in my life") since she was 12, had previously made four regional records (released only in a particular area). This spring, she was appearing in a nightclub in the Catskills and in the audience one evening was the president of ABC-Paramount Records. He liked what he heard, signed Sharon to a three-year contract, and had his song writers go to work on a special song for her. Thus was started what may lead to a hit record for this UVM coed. Sharon has been described by a national syndicated columnist as having the "delivery of Ethel Merman" and the "sound of Kay Starr."

At Vermont, she plans to major in speech and music. She likes to play the piano and ski. During vacations she hopes to be able to do more recording. In addition to singing, Sharon has appeared in summer stock and on television.

Her mother, who was born and brought up in Danby where the Strausses still have a summer home, is a speech coordinator with the New York City Board of Education, while her father has been a sports writer with The New York Times for 32 years.

What do Mom and Dad think about her singing career? "They think it's fine, but they've told me at least a thousand times that my education comes first," smiles Sharon.

The ice cream produced in Dairy Industry supplies the ice cream used in the Dairy Bar. Located in the Dairy Building, the Dairy Bar is open from 9:00 A.M. until 5:30 P.M. six days a week. Anyone who has never tasted this ice cream is missing a real treat. One can obtain larger than standard size sundaes, banana splits, cones, and the like at standard prices. For this reason, the Dairy Bar is essentially a non-profit organization. Whatever small profit is made goes into replacing old machinery. Mr. Bradfield stated, "The greatest problem in the dairy industry is that machinery becomes obsolete before it wears out. This means that a lot of so-called profit has to be turned back to purchase new machinery."

Thus, it is hoped that a least some of the misconceptions concerning the Animal and Dairy Science Department have been cleared up, and, particularly, that Dairy Industry will be recognized as a more complex and technical campus are strong in both directions, but we likewise praise students for lack of any demonstrations' ... He urged students to remain on campus and not try to help what ever cause they were for, by going to Oxford. This admonition by the Dean appeared in the Student Print of October 5.

Since that triumphant moment (at least for the freshmen) when Vermont made her first touchdown for the 1962 season, the green and gold stigma of the freshman - the beanie - has long been buried. But, according to The Vista (Central State College, Edmond Okla. of October 4, the freshman of that campus have a "Kangaroo Court" to answer to. "Freshmen were tried and found guilty of ... many offenses Tuesday night as Kangaroo Court held its annual session.

"Held once a year to punish incoming freshmen" for their blunders to mankind and more specifically against upperclassmen, the court and its panel of judges listens to the charges brought against the "lowly ones." After careful thought and consideration the judges try to fit the punishment to the offense. "Freshmen queen candidates were accused of wearing too much make-up, but then the charges were changed to that of not wearing enough. In order to remedy this situation the Sigma Tau Gamma fraternity pledges were called to help the queen candidates apply the make-up. Sigma Tau Gamma's pledges quickly lost their cooperative spirit, however, when the girls were granted permission to make-up the boys.

"Alpha Omicron Pi sorority pledges were accused of walking on the grass in front of the library and as everyone knows that privilege belong only to upperclassmen. Fortunately a punishment fitting of such a crime was finally sound and Kangaroo Court ... carried on as the Alpha Omicron Pi pledges munched on bits of grass.

"The entire freshman class was charged with not wearing their 'fashionable and gaily colored beanies' even after being told that the whole purpose behind wearing them was so it would set them apart in order that upperclassmen might help them if they were in difficulty.

"In an effort to right this wrong the judges asked the class to demonstrate the bunny-hop. Records were not available to discern the originator of the dance but without a doubt he or she would have been deeply touched. Such grace and form has never before been seen."

With news closer to home ... it was reported in The Campus (Middlebury College) that the IFC is tightening its dirty rush policy. One fraternity was penalized $100.

"The charge stemmed from an advertisement which appeared on a desk blotter which has been distributed widely in the dormitories.

French National Orchestra Performance Marks Successful Beginning Of Red Lane Series

Lane Series committee welcomes conductor Charles Munch (3rd from the right). (Credit: M. Adress, SPS)

The 1962-1963 George Bishop Lane Red Artists Series started off on a perfect note Saturday night, October 6, with the performance of the French National Orchestra. Ably conducted by Charles Munch, the orchestra gave a performance which will probably stand out as one of the finest of the series.

Chosen for the presentation was an all-French concert. Presented were "Le Corsaire" (Overture) by Hector Berlioz, "Serenade" by Darius Milhaud, "Bacchus et Ariane" Suite No. 2 by Albert Roussel, and, after the intermission, "La Mer" by Claude Debussy and "Daphnis et Chloe" by Maurice Ravel. After returning to the platform four times to receive the applause of the enchanted audience, Mr. Munch consented to play an encore --- and a better selection could not have been chosen. It was the "Rakoczy March" from the "Damnation of Faust" by Berlioz, and played to a "T" by the distinguished group of musicians.

Certainly the second part of the concert was received with greater enthusiasm than the first part. The reason for this fact was probably "Le Mer", a favorite with concert audiences throughout the world. And speaking of audiences, UVM and Burlington can truly be proud of an audience which received the concert graciously and appreciatively.

UVM Music Faculty Gives First Concert

by Roberta Levy

On Thursday, October 11 at 8:00, in Ira Allen Chapel, the Music Department presented its first departmental concert. This recital, which consisted of three excellently performed numbers, was the first of a series of concerts to be given throughout the year.

The first number was Sonata #3, by Johann C. Pepusch, in four movements -- Adagio, Allegro, Adagio and Allegro -- performed by Jane Perlis on the flute. Miss Perlis, who is a graduate student here at UVM, was accompanied on the piano by Mill Nola Marberger, a member of the faculty.

John Park then performed Concerto #3 in E flat for the French Horn, by Wolfgang Mozart. Mr. Park is a graduate teaching fellow. He also was accompanied by Miss Marberger.

Miss Marberger, a graduate of Eastman School of Music, has a master's degree from Indiana University. She will give a concert on November 4.

The third number was Intermezzo in E. Opus 116:6 by Brahms, played on the piano by Sandra Sterns, Class of '63.

The three who performed are pupils of Dr. Kinsey and Dr. Lidal.

The next departmental concert, after Miss Marberger's, will be on Thursday, November 8, 1962. The students of the university will perform again. All who wish to attend are invited.

1963 Ariel Announces Policies

The 1963 Ariel needs well-posed informal photographs of any activity off and on campus! If you submit black and white photographs or 4x5 colored negatives which are used in the yearbook, the Ariel will pay you for your time and effort. Please place all photos in an envelope with your name and address and put them under the door of the yearbook office, Room #8, East Hall.

All students who bought 1962 Ariels last year and have not picked them up yet may obtain them from the yearbook office on Tuesday, Oct. 23rd and Thursday, Oct. 25th between 3:30 and 4:30 p.m.

The Ariel staff wishes to announce certain policies for the coming year. Each sorority and fraternity must submit 8 black and white candid pictures to the Ariel office by Nov. 11, 1962. If no pictures are turned in, the particular sorority or fraternity page will remain blank in the yearbook. Groups who do not appear for their pictures to be taken when scheduled will have to pay $3.00 to have it re-scheduled. Men should wear jackets and ties for all photographs unless otherwise notified. Your cooperation on all these policies is necessary to insure the success of this year's Ariel.

to just football, Jim has been outstanding on defense so far this year. He is studying to be an accountant. Halfback Foerster is from Union City where he attended Emerson High. Frank was voted Hudson County's best of-the-year in 1960. Frank also is a three sport man but is concentrating on football presently. He is in the College of Arts and Sciences.

Halfback Al Brown, from Flemington, has the athletic distinction of attaining the highest score in the University's Cozen Test. Brown was a track star in high school and is a really fleet back who can break away at any time. Fullback Reynolds is from West New York where he went to Memorial High. He was an all-state baseball player and batted .624 for last year's frosh. Richie has done a great job of power running this season.

Most of the boys from the New York City area were introduced to UVM by Mr. Nick Mastorelli, a Vermont alumnus. These boys have helped UVM and plan on continuing to do so in the future. Keep them in mind for they are destined to bring Vermont a fine reputation in athletics that UVM has never known.

Harriers Win

In their first cross country meet of the season the UVM harriers split with Union College. The varsity won 17-46, over a 4 1/2 mile course, while the freshmen were defeated 27-30, over a 2 3/4 mile course. It was the first loss for the freshmen in 23 meets.

Tim Simpson, Harold Billings, and Chris Myrick finished 1-2-3 for the varsity, while Russell and Stowell finished 2-3 for the freshmen.

Sig Nu Leads In Football

Intramural football activity, as in previous years, is focusing on the inter-fraternity contests. Though early in the season, it is evident that Sigma Nu will continue its domination of this sport, already possessing a 2-0 record. Last years runner-up has defeated TEP, 27-12 and squashed ATO 35-6. Other scores include: ATO 19 - AGR 2; KS 13 - AEPI 6; SPE 41 - SP 13; DP 6 - PSD 2; PDT 48 - LI 8; SAE 27 - TC 4; AGR 8 - TEP 6; and SPE 19 - KS 18.

In the dormitory independent contests, Chittendon "A" defeated Converse "A", 4-2 and the Leftovers triumphed over Buckingham "A", 14-6. Though other games were scheduled, they were postponed because of rain. Cancelled games will be played at a later date.

Upcoming games will include contests between: AEPI and SPE, SN-AGR, DP-SAE, TC-PSD, LI-A, KS-SP, and ATO-TEP. No IFC games will match: Chitt "A" - Buck "A", Chitt "B" - Buck "B", Burners - Mats and the Leftovers against Wills "A".

Pall Mall Presents- GIRL WATCHER'S GUIDE

BATON-TWIRLING HIGH-STEPPER

CAMPUS TYPE I

The High-Stepper is an ideal choice for Campus Type #1 for two reasons. First, she is a fairly common species—and second, she is easy to identify.

Just as the bird-watching beginner should concentrate on the Robin, Sparrow and Cardinal before moving on to more exotic species, the girl watching beginner should master the observation and identification of types such as the High-Stepper before progressing to rarer (and usually more difficult to identify) types.

As in all fine arts, the mastery of fundamentals is the key to girl watching success. This mastery of fundamentals is just as important in the art of cigarette making. Taste Pall Mall and see what we mean!

Pall Mall's natural mildness is so good to your taste!

So smooth, so satisfying, so downright smokeable!

New Jersey Boys Add Depth To Football Team

Kent Leads Cats With Two Touchdowns

Garden State Boys: linemen, Jim Meredith, Den Blanck, Fred Boese, Ray Bello, George Oelze, Ron Hertel, Ed Fudgit, Mike Rosenbaum; backs: Al Brown, Dick Reynolds, Jim Brennan and Frank Foerster.

One-third of Vermont's football squad this year calls New Jersey its home. Among the twelve boys from the Garden State there are three starters and much of this year's depth. Most of the boys are up from last year's undefeated freshman team, which was the Kittens' first perfect season in the past decade.

The starters include hustling George Oelze at center, big Richie Reynolds at fullback and defensive safety Jim Brennan. The other Jersey boys are ends Jim Meredith, and Mike Rosenbaum, tackles Fred Boese, Den Blanck, and Ed Fudgit, guards Ron Hertel and Ray Bello, center Oelze, and halfbacks Frank Foerster and Al Brown along with Brennan and Reynolds.

End Mike Rosenbaum, a senior letterman who comes from Maplewood, is a student in the school of technology who plans to become a lawyer. Meredith is a 6-5 end from New Milford, who is studying engineering. The tackles include converted end Fred Boese who is one of the five men from Union City. Fred went to Union Hill High where he was captain of the basketball and football teams. He is in the College of Education. Blanck, a 220 pound, 6-4 tackle, is a pre-med student from Hackensack, where he attended Hackensack High along with end Meredith. Both boys starred in track also. Blanck was the state discus champ and Meredith the county discus champ. Ed Fudgit, who hails from Rutherford, was the starting center for the Kittens last year. Ed is a political science major.

Guards Hertel and Bello are both from Union City where they attended Emerson High. Hertel is a 200 pounder who was an all-county griddier during his high school days as were most of the other boys. Ron is in the College of Arts and Sciences. Bello was also an all-county operator at Emerson where he was voted MVP in his senior year. Ray is a mathematics major. Center Oelze is also from Union City where he went to Union Hill. He too was picked as MVP as a senior. George is a terror on defense and has helped the team a great deal this year.

Quarterback Brennan, who is from Teaneck, was an all-conference player in three sports. Here at UVM, Jim has played football, basketball, and baseball as a freshman but feels it is too much to continue playing all three sports, so he may limit himself

The best pass defense is a rushing line. This old but true football maxim is proven by Vermont linemen, Dick Reynolds (24), Bill Davidson, (hidden by 24), Paul Toussaint (86), and George Oelze as they rush Rhode Island's Frank Kapusinski (39). Tony Tetro (34) stands idly by.

Six years is a long time to wait for a Yankee Conference victory, but the dividends were well worth it as the UVM Catamounts upset the high-riding Rams of Rhode Island, 21-12, before a sparse, but stunned crowd at Kingston, R.I.

Coach Bob Clifford was all smiles after the biggest Vermont victory in many years. After riding off the field on the shoulders of his jubilant players, Clifford praised the entire team, but pin-pointed the line once again. "Again we had a great defensive performance on the line, and this was the key factor," said the new Catamount leader. He was especially praiseworthy of the defensive ability shown by Frank Bolden. Frank should receive "All Yankon recognition by the way he's been playing," were Clifford's exact words.

However, nothing should be taken away from the play of Co-Capt. Dave Sequist and Paul Harris. Both these boys put out to the best of their ability, against the Rams, and seem to play their best games when the chips are down. Last week against Maine they were great, against Rhody even better, and next week they will be ready for UNH.

George Oelze, Jeff Harvey, and "Ollie" Thorenson were the defensive stars. They did a whale of a job against much bigger but less determined Rhody line.

The offense, unlike in other games, started off early in this one and never did let up throughout the entire contest. After trading punts, the Cats got going behind the sure ball handling of Harris, great blocking of Reynolds, and the tremendous running of the two native Vermonters Ken Burton and Dean Kent. Kent ended the 55 yard drive by sweeping right end for the T.D. Quarterback Harris threw out of a modified shot-gun to end Paul Toussaint for the two point conversion and the Cats led 8-0.

The Rams then took over, displaying some good running backs themselves, in Jerry Cato and Frank Kapusinsky. But each time the big third down came up, the UVM defense held, and continually frustrated the Rhody men. The great green and gold held the Rams on the two yard line, and the one yard line, before Rhody scored on a deflected pass from quarterback Mike Pariseau to halfback Vic Mancini. This was actually a freak T.D. as Pariseau threw the ball to his end Paul Boudreau, but it was deflected by Dean Kent into the hands of Mancini. The try for the extra points was missed, however, and the Cats left the field with an 8-6 halftime advantage.

Not looking forward to a repeat of the 2nd half of the Maine game, the UVM offense continued to roll. Harris completed successive passes to Kent Foerster Kent continued to run beautifully, and Burton bucked into the end zone to cap a 52 yard sustained drive. A Harris to Bolden pass failed but the score now read 14-6 in favor of UVM.

As the fourth quarter started, the Cats displayed their prettiest play to date. With the ball on the Vermont 33 yd. line, Harris pitched out to halfback Burton. Burton, seeing that he had no running room, looked down field and fired a 12-yd. strike to Dean Kent. The halfback displayed his broken-field running ability excellently for 55 yds and the third UVM touchdown. Dave Baker kicked the extra point and the Cats had a commanding lead of 21-6.

Rhody scored its second T.D. in the waning minutes of the game on a pass from Pariseau to Mancini, but it was too little, too late, as the cats were a determined group of ball players and were not to be denied.

Hats off to the Green and Gold and to Bob Clifford in particular for their great showing at R.I. The boys are not resting on their laurels, however, as they are sharpening their claws with the anticipation of another Yankon victory against the Wildcats of New Hampshire this Saturday.

Catamount Clippings

By Ray Bello

WILL ANYBODY BELIEVE IT?

The Catamounts upset the University of Rhode Island 21-12 last Saturday, but will anyone outside the state of Vermont believe it? A nation-wide wire service somehow sent out the score to all forms of sports media as URI 21 - UVM 12.

This hard fought Yankee Conference victory was the Cats first since they butt the Rams 39-13 in 1956. It was quite a significant win for Vermont for they now assume the role of "spoiler" and become a feared opponent to Yankon foes. The Catamounts, little UVM, doormats of the Yankee Conference for years, are finally awaking from their winless nightmare of the past and starting to show their claws, but does anybody know of Vermont's awakening? It seems the only way we can gain recognition in the Y.C. is to rout a conference foe 82-6.

LEARN BY MISTAKES

A football team learns by its mistakes and Vermont has a great deal from its two losses to A.I.C. and Maine. Both games were won on long passes by the opposition. Even in their sparking upset win Saturday, the Cats let a pass go over their heads and into the arms of a Ram receiver for a touchdown.

The Cats are going into Saturday's New Hampshire game with a heads-up pass defense and an offensive team that wants to open up. The backs are blocking finally and if the line plays as well as it has thus far, UVM should have their second Yankon win this weekend and maybe then the score will be reported correctly.

Kittens Tie Williams

by Harvey Bazarian

The University of Vermont freshmen and the Williams College yearlings battled to a 14-14 tie last Saturday at Williams.

Although Vermont scored in the first minute of play on a quick pass by Scott Fitz to Steve Ross, they were outplayed in the first half by the larger Williams team. The Williams Frosh, running two platoons against the UVM eleven, tallied a safety and a touchdown to take a 8-6 lead at the half.

Rising in the second half, the Kittens led by game captain John Sullivan, controlled the play in the third quarter. Williams countered with a quick touchdown around left end to forge ahead 14-8. Speedster Ed Denning and hard hitting Terry Lynn pounded out yardage as the Kittens drove to the Williams two yard line. Twice they were held by the stunting Williams defense. Taking to the air, the Kittens scored on another pass to big Steve Ross, but failed to get the conversion. The defensive lineplay of Mike Ingham, Bob Zakhar, Dick Sears, Russ Brink, Harvey Bazarian and Bill Van Bennekum controlled Williams till the end of the game to ensure the 14-14 tie.

UVM Decrees Today As Peace Corps Day

by Janet Hadda

October 25th is Peace Corps Day at the University of Vermont. On that day and evening, UVM will have as its guest Mr. Elmer Skold, Assistant Director of the University of the Peace Corps.

During the afternoon, students will have an opportunity to speak with Mr. Skold and find out more about the Peace Corps. Between 1:30 and 3:30 P.M., there will be a continuous, informal discussion meeting in the Waterman Student Lounge for interested students. In the evening, at 7:00 P.M., a movie, "The Peace Corps" will be shown. A talk and discussion are to follow and all students and townspeople are welcome. This meeting, held in the Student Lounge, Waterman Building, is sponsored by the Student Association.

During the earlier part of the day, Mr. Skold will meet with President Fey, Dean Thomas A.

King, Dr. Andrew Nuquist and Dr. George Little. He will speak at a luncheon, held in Marsh Hall at 11:30 P.M., with Residence Hall Counselors and representatives of the staff and administration.

Dr. Jack Little, Director of Instruction, College of Agriculture, and the UVM representative for the Peace Corps has stressed that all interested students should make a point of seeing Mr. Skold on this day; it may be the only important meeting of its kind this year.

When asked what purpose Skold's visit is to achieve, Dr. Little stated that Mr. Skold will answer any questions students may have about the Peace Corps: what it is presently doing, how big it is, how good it is, what its objectives are, and what training is needed for the performance of specific occupations.

UVM Debate Team Gets Flying Start

The Lawrence Debate Club of the University of Vermont opened its 1962-1963 intercollegiate season on two fronts this past weekend.

At Middlebury College a unit of four varsity debaters entered the Edwin W. Lawrence Tournament. Interestingly enough, it is this same Edwin W. Lawrence who strongly underwrites the forensic program at UVM.

The Catamount "Growlers" tied for second place with Middlebury College and compiled an overall six victory and four loss record. The affirmative team of Dan Newcomb and Betsy Lisman defeated Siena, Dartmouth, and Bowdoin, while dropping debates to Middlebury and Williams.

The Vermont negative unit of Carmen Wessner and Lynn Baier likewise posted three victories and two losses with wins over St. Michael's, Dartmouth, and the University of New Hampshire. Losses were against Amherst and Middlebury.

Bowdoin College of Brunswick, Maine, won the Tournament with an 8-2 record, with Vermont handing them one of their two losses. Dr. Norman T. London of the Speech Department was the coach on the trip.

UVM also sent a team of four freshmen to the Dartmouth Novice Tournament at Hanover. Not to be outdone by their varsity colleagues the kitten debaters "scratched" their way to a second place finish with an overall record of five victories and only one loss in six rounds of competition. The one loss came against Brandeis University, which won the Tournament. Their overall record, like Vermont's, was 5-1, but a one-point edge in speaker ratings broke the tie for first place.

The UVM negative team of Dave Waite and Jim Sanderson went undefeated in compiling victories over Holy Cross, St. Michael's and M.I.T. In addition,

Library Director Meets With College Librarians

On Thursday, October 18, Director of Libraries B.C. Bowman met with librarians from St. Michael's, Trinity and Champlain Colleges to discuss the use of Bailey Library by students from these colleges.

In line with previous suggestions, it was decided that Bailey Library would be available to non-UVM students only if they had a note from the Dean of their school stating that the information needed is not available anywhere but at UVM. The Bailey librarians will, at their own discretion, spot check the students using the library in order to see that unauthorized persons are not using the facilities.

Mr. Bowman said that the reason for these measures was that students from other colleges do not pay the library fee that UVM students pay each semester, and that they might tend to be a little too negligent about property not their own. Also, there is not enough seating space to accommodate everyone. He added that he was trying to avoid checking identification at the door at all costs.

He also stated that he was trying to emphasize the need for UVM students to maintain quiet when using the library, and that it was to be used for study purposes only when it is necessary to get information from the library, but not otherwise.

PERIODICALS AND EXAMS

The lack of old exams for reference purposes was noted, and Bowman said that a collection of such exams for student use would be started, but that it was necessary for the individual professors and instructors to support the program. There are, however, unofficial files of old examinations for student use, but these are not extensive.

It was pointed out that the periodicals sold in the book store are not adequate for a good university. There is a special lack of magazines and newspapers from Britain and other foreign countries, as well as from other universities, both here and abroad.

PANEL DISCUSSIONS PROPOSED

A proposal was put forward to initiate a panel or discussion group to be run along the lines of Vermont Conference. Each discussion would deal with a certain book, and participants would be required to read the book carefully before being allowed to take part in the group. The book chosen would be analyzed quite thoroughly, and all points, good and bad, would be subject to critical analysis.

Library Director Bowman said that the proposed panel is by no means a definite thing, but that plans were still taking shape. He stated that the group would be especially effective if it could meet weekly. He expressed a hope that the panel could eventually become an accredited course, available as an elective.

AWARD FOR STUDENT LIBRARIES

Some plans, though rather sketchy, were made for the Lowman Award. This award would go to the student who collected the best private book collection during the year.

On Sunday afternoon, October 21, at 2:30, Southwick Ballroom was the scene of the PanHellenic Fashion Show. The models, attractive representatives from the seven sororities on campus, displayed fashions for both informal and dressy wear. The audience, consisting of faculty members, and freshman and upper-class women, focused its attention on the excellent figures and poise of our sorority-girl models, and the diversified collection of slacks, skirts, sweaters and dresses from the Hellen-Marion Shop on Pearl Street in Burlington. Each member of the audience found herself sighing after viewing the exceptionally attractive outfits.

Banquet

Sunday, October 21, the Hotel Vermont was the sight of the Student Association banquet and workshop. The purpose of the meeting was to outline the goals of SA and its function on the UVM campus. At this time the new senators were informed of their responsibility as representatives of the student body.

An analysis of SA on this campus was presented by Rusty Taylor, a student from Harvard College. His suggestions for a more worthwhile association will aid in making UVM government a more efficient and beneficial organization.

Other speakers included Dean Rowell, Paul Chervin, Marty Singer, and the heads of the various committees.

New committees were formed for each one of the respective branches of SA and each outlined its plans for the coming year.

The main objective is to make SA an "outgoing and potent organization." This can be achieved only through communication with the individual students in order to make each feel that SA is a vital part in the functioning of the university.

It was emphasized that apathy is the major deterrent in many UVM activities. This must be overcome so that the students will realize the vast intellectual, social, and cultural opportunities.

The SA is representative of the entire student body. Therefore, it is up to the individual student to express his wishes to his representative in order that they may have a chance to materialize.

Minutes

by Ira D. Feirstein

The question of how much power a Student Association Senator has to represent his living unit has come to the forefront in a recent debate in the Senate.

At the October 17 meeting of the Student Association Senate a motion to send a letter to the Student Association of the University of Mississippi condemning segregation and sympathizing with James Meredith's case, was reintroduced.

The week before, the same motion had been defeated mainly on the basis that the Senators had no right to vote on such matters as segregation for their constituents. At the most recent debate opposition continued to argue along the same line and also questioned whether such a letter would have any effect. However, supporters of the motion pointed to the fact that in choosing their representative to the Senate, students supposedly pick the person they feel will best be able to ascertain their views and vote in their best interests. If it is necessary to go direct to the student body on any important issue the Senate loses its effectiveness and the entire SA becomes inefficient. It was also pointed out that the idea of sending such a letter to Ole Miss was suggested by the National Student Association and therefore have an effect in that it would arrive along with letters from many different colleges. As to the opinion expressed in the letter, there was one lone dissenter who voiced the opinion that as northern students we were unable to understand what goes on in the South.

A final compromise was reached when SA Secretary Sue Chagnon proposed a motion to table the discussion until the next meeting. She asked Senators to return to their living units and get a clear mandate on the issue. The original motion had been introduced by Marty Singer, SA Vice-president.

A revised and enlarged edition of "State and Local Government and Politics," by Robert S. Babcock, has just been released by the New York City publishing company.

In the second edition, Babcock, former State Senator and Lieutenant Governor, has added a new chapter on metropolitan government and has completely rewritten and considerably enlarged the chapter dealing with the country. In addition, all tables in the book have been revised and updated to include the results of the latest census returns. Also, all factual references have been brought up to date as since the publication of the first edition (1957), Hawaii and Alaska have joined the union.

Mums?

Will your date be the only glum lass on campus, looking drab at the Homecoming game? Will your mother be the only disappointed parent on this gala occasion? Not if you hurry out and order your MUM from the Mortar Boards at their traditional Homecoming Mum Sale. You say you just don't know where to order one. Well, if you wait until Monday, October 22nd, about dinner time, one of the Sophomore Aids will be glad to take your order at your fraternity house, or sorority house, in Waterman Cafeteria, or in Simpson Dining Hall. And if you just can't get away from the books at that very hour, they'll be around at the same time, the same places the next Monday evening. You say you have an hour exam that Tuesday at 8:00 A.M. too. Well, I have the solution to your problem: the girls will be taking late orders in lower Waterman from 9 to 4 Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday, November 1st, 2nd, and 3rd. Now you have no excuse, for you can find a dollar in your back pocket!

Decision Making Stessed For Home Economics Seniors

by Betsy Stern

The 1962-63 academic year is the second year of existence for the Blundell Home Management House. The house was designed and built according to plans established by efficiency studies so that students would have an opportunity to have many different experiences in a more home-like environment.

Every senior in Home Economics is required to live in the laboratory for eight weeks, and take part in its operations. Eight students and a resident instructor, who this year is Miss Wilson, of the Home Economics Department reside in the house at one time. The purpose of this course is to put into practice classroom theory, especially time, energy, and money management.

The actual management of the house is planned by the students, and each particular responsibility is rotated each week. Decision-making is stressed. A sample of the kinds of jobs that each girl might have follows: The manager has charge of repairs in the house; entertainment for the week, such as card parties, or teas; closes house at curfew and serves as general hostess for the week. It is her job to hold the weekly evaluation meeting and make sure things are going smoothly. The food manager may very well be the most popular person in the house, for it is up to her to plan and prepare all the meals. But behind the scenes it is she who must shop and keep the kitchen "spic 'n span."

The assistant food manager serves as a relief for the food manager, especially in time of conflict of schedule. —Classes? A mere trifle! —The waitress has the pleasure of setting the table, serving the meal, complete with finding an appropriate centerpiece, and clearing up the debris at the end of the meal. Her assistant is present for those times of emergency, and sees to it that there are flower arrangements in the house. The housekeeper lives up to her name. She is there to keep the actual living area in tip-top shape. (Each girl is responsible for keeping her own room in order.) The keeping of the bed linens, towels, and the like is up to the laundress who has her "office" in the shiny new and modern laundry room.

Word has it that these girls have become the world's biggest bargain hunters, once they are obligated to stick to a rather small budget. They have proved that it is possible to serve 150 meals for $40,000! Aside from running the house the girls also have their regular schedule of classes and extracurricular activities to maintain.

Honors Program In Operation

A very successful honors program, which many UVM students are unaware of, has been in operation for the past few years in the College of Arts and Sciences.

Designed for "the superior student with unusual initiative and intellectual curiosity," the program provides an opportunity to pursue a special project without the restriction of the classroom routine. In actuality, the honors student selects a field or topic, with the approval of the academic department he chooses, and follows a program of research, reading, or creative writing. If at the end of the year he presents an accepted paper, he receives, not only the 3 to 6 semester credit hours, but also recognition at graduation time.

A student in the College of Arts and Sciences who has an average of 85 or above for his sophomore and junior years may apply for special honors in a particular subject. Students are accepted for the program by the department they have chosen and the Committee on Honors. This committee, headed by Professor Long of the Department of English, also decides whether a paper presented is of high enough quality to deserve the special recognition at graduation.

A distinction must be made between graduating with "honors" and graduating with "special honors." A student who graduates with honors receives a diploma with cum laude, magna cum laude, or summa cum laude, and is so designated on the commencement exercises program. A student who graduates with "special honors" is listed as such, along with the name of his paper.

An aspect of the honors program of which even fewer students are aware of is the junior honors program. It is considered introductory to, but distinct from special honors. Juniors who have sophomore averages of 85 or above and have the approval of their department chairmen are eligible.

Don't let this girl's costume fool you. She's not really a mad scientist. She's a girl—a real, live girl. It's just that she has to prove something—to herself and to her family.

She has to prove that she has a brain and that, if she ever has to compete with men on their own terms, she can do it—and win. But she really doesn't want to compete with men. In her heart she wants to attract men and eventually, marry one. The girl watcher should not let this situation disturb him, however.

If the girl is watchable, she should be watched, no matter what her motives or ambitions may be. The same thing is true of a cigarette. If it's smokeable, it should be smoked—and Pall Mall is the most smokeable of all!

Editor's Scrapbook A Real Service

The manner in which supposedly mature college students make plans for the future is astounding. No admonishment is sufficient enough to stimulate the greater majority of students to make some definitive, if tentative, plans for after graduation. There seems to be an aura of security which lulls the student into this lackadaisical attitude and at long last thrusts him into the unwilling arms of the outside world. Bewildered and dazed, the student too late is remiss, and ponders why he did not make better plans for the future.

After graduation, there is no one to lead the neophyte into the world; he must do it on his own. But college, as a portion of a total education, aids in preparing the individual to take this step.

Unfortunately, up until June of 1962 little was accomplished at UVM in guiding and counseling the student in locating proper jobs after graduation. This unfortunate situation arose as a probable result of locating the Placement Service under the auspices of a more or less part-time director within the Dean of Men's Office. This was an ineffectual method of handling an exceedingly important aspect of an individual's college, if not future, career.

The recently revised Placement Service is an outgrowth of the UVM Self Study Report. Mr. Douglas Hanau was hired as of June, 1962 to be director of this new service. Mr. Hanau was previously associated with Bell Telephone Laboratories and was primarily concerned with technical employment and the recruiting of college graduates. Education Placement now comes under the auspices of the general Placement Director, in contrast to its previous administrative headquarters under the College of Education and Nursing.

The "Service" portion of title Placement Service must be emphasized. Its major role is the assistance of students in obtaining the finest employment possible. Several reorganizations have been initiated. The office will keep a permanent record of pertinent facts relating to the individual. Personal references will be put on file prior to the student's leaving school to eliminate the various difficulties which would be encountered in attempting to obtain recommendations at a future date.

The new director is stressing the fact that it is important for all individuals to register, whether he is going onto a job or into a graduate school. It takes but a few moments to register, and to have on permanent file information for the future.

Apparently, present trends indicate that although there are interruptions in a woman's career, she is returning to the job market, and so it is just as important for the woman to register.

Last year less than half the graduating class registered for job placement. It is hoped that the energetic efforts of the new placement director will not go to waste and that registration will be close to 100% this year.

This is an exceedingly important responsibility of the University as a cooperative adventure with the student, and the CYNIC is carefully regarding the future developments of this administrative office.

Letters To The Editor

Intellect

To the Editor:

There are a number of UVM students, and I shall include myself, who constantly complain about the lack of intellectual stimulation on this campus. In order for an intellectual conversation (or one about something other than one's weekend date) to take place one needs something to talk about. Topics for conversation, or thought, are often provided by clubs, speakers, films, etc. But here is the problem - one must search awfully hard; publicity is usually very poor. One means of publicizing an event are the bulletin boards in Lower Waterman, but unfortunately not everyone has classes in Waterman. There are bulletin boards in other buildings, but a club often has trouble organizing a poster-making brigade. The CYNIC has the "Note Bene" column, but most events are not listed. It is up to the people responsible for all events to make sure that the CYNIC knows of all plans well in advance. There is a listing, "Today and Tomorrow on Campus" but here again many events are missing and the list often is not posted far enough in advance. This list is printed through the Alumni Office, which has no direct connection to either the D.O.S.A. Office or to the S.A. Office, both of which have some knowledge of campus activities. One solution might be the publishing of a weekly calendar listing all events, on and off campus, listed one week in advance. This could be done through some centrally located and well-known office where anyone could easily leave notices. The most important solution, however, is the effort and cooperation of every student on campus. All club leaders should use every means of publicity available to them. All students should look for these notices, spread the information further by word of mouth, and actively support these activities. If everyone makes the effort maybe there will soon be more on this campus to be proud of than a few new buildings or a snow covered mountain.

SA Senate

To the Editor:

On October 3, 1962, a day that will live in infamy, our beloved S.A. Senate defeated two motions that took a stand on a significant issue. Apparently, taking stands is contrary to current S.A. policy. The first motion asked that the Senate send a letter to "Ole Miss" condemning segregation there and sympathizing with James Meredith's cause. The letter was to have been prefaced with "We, the students of UVM..." The second motion, a compromise suggested after the first motion was defeated, requested that the Senate itself send a letter to Meredith applauding his actions. This motion also failed. From statements by Paul Chervin, S.A. President, we learned that the "argument" which defeated the first motion was that the Senate could not speak for all student opinion on a matter of this nature. The excuse for the defeat of the second motion was not made as clear. It would appear that the Senate was incapable of taking a stand on its own. One wonders what effect this had on the earlier vote.

Now, for the moment, we shall forget all the legal, moral, social, and economic justifications for integration. We shall neglect the fact that a James Meredith needs the proper complexion in addition to a decent high school record in order to be accepted at his college. Let us pass over the precedents established by our S.A. Senate in this area; telegrams sent to senators last spring urging the passage of the Maynard-Dirkson bill which dealt with the lifting of unjust voter registration tests in certain southern states and the proposed establishment of a subcommittee to be a chapter of a national civil rights organization, the Northern Student Movement. In short, we shall assume that the Senate has no basis for opinion vis-a-vis integration. Let us now concern ourselves with but the representative aspect of the Senate's actions.

The "reasoning" that defeated the motions clearly shows that the Senate has little understanding of its functioning or of the operation of any comparably constituted body. In a representative body such as the S.A., men are elected to make decisions and establish policy for their constituents. If the decisions and policy are unpopular, the representatives will (hopefully) be voted from office. Furthermore, in a student senate, issues are not merely restricted to questions of fund allocations, redistricting of representation, and administrative policy. As thinking individuals and human beings, college students are called to have concern with the vital national and international issues of our times. A misunderstanding of representative responsibility to the University, to its students, and to the concerns of mankind has once again made the S.A. an ineffective tool of government.

Many familiar words in the college student's vocabulary have assumed a new meaning. Some of the new definitions that appeared in the October 5 issue of The Whitworthian (Whitworth College, Spokane, Washington) include the following:

EXEC - Easily Excited over Extra Curricular activities
BA - Barely Allowed to graduate
MA - Maladjusted Aesthetic
ALUM - All Leave Us Money
PROF - Pretty Racy Old Fellows
FROSH - Frustrated Recipient of Senior Hostility
SOPH - Society Of Pesimistic Heroes
JR - Just Right
SR - Sympathetic to Reactionaries

It is reported in the Temple University News, of September 21, that a seatbelt selling campaign to "promote automobile safety" is under-way. A member of the committee said that Temple University "is the first to undertake the project on a campus-wide basis."

"Because of the nationwide publicity given seat belts" the project was considered a worthy one. Ten fraternities are in competition to see which will sell the largest number of seat belts which are being sold at a minimum cost and will be installed free by members of the committee.

It seems to this reporter that this is a worthwhile project for a group to undertake and to carry out on a competitive basis.

While our UVM Student Association is in the process of debate as to a letter of sentiment concerning the James Meredith case and 'Ole Miss, several other schools have already made moves to air their feelings on the situation. According to the October 3 Beacon (University of Rhode Island), the Student Senate sent a telegram of protest to Mississippi officials. The telegram read:

"The University of Rhode Island Student Senate deplores the abrogation of federal law as delineated in the United States constitution and further deplores the conduct of Mississippi state officials and other parties contrary to federal law."

"We condemn the actions of those state officials and other parties who have participated in this demonstration of the flouting of legally constituted federal authority."

"We hope that in the future resistance to court orders will cease and that Mr. Meredith and others of the Negro race, who follow him, will be able to pursue their studies in peace."

At BU, 1221 students and faculty signed a 10-word telegram that was sent to the Merediths. The telegram read, "We at Boston University send you our support and encourage-

THINKING OUT LOUD

by Kim Boriskin

AN APOLOGY

I would like to start today by making an apology for a most unwarranted mistake. The mistake was that I did not put some sort of statement on last week's questionnaire that indicated plainly that there was a column to be read before the questionnaire was answered and returned. It would have been easy enough to include the statement, but it somehow slipped my mind; and as a result several people took the questionnaire to mean that there was no course on Communism at UVM at all, which is not true, of course, and which was covered in the column. Some of the answers I've already gotten indicate that a few people just sent the questionnaire back without reading the column, which I don't really like. But in any event, I am sorry about the omission, and I shall know better in the future.

The results at the moment are inconclusive, since there are not enough returns to indicate anything too substantial. If there is anyone who intended to send the questionnaire in and hasn't gotten to it, I would appreciate it if you could get them in. For those who did not intend to reply, I would also be most appreciative if you would reconsider. I could say that the answer doesn't matter, but obviously it does matter. The important thing, however, is to get enough returns to get a fair indication, and a reasonably valid one, of what people think of the course. That goes for anyone who might want to reply, not just the students; all comments are more than welcome. (Please don't answer more than once, no matter how strongly you may feel either way. I'd like this to be as fair as possible.) If anyone needs a questionnaire, there are still a few left at the CYNIC office, 7 East Hall.

In a few weeks I'll let you know how the results are looking by then, and I'll also publish some of the comments I've received, both pro and con, salient and idiotic. They will all be anonymous, so don't worry about exposure, or anything like that.

What follows would ordinarily have been in last week's issue, but the questionnaires came back from the print shop just in time to get the column on the Communism course in, and that was printed. Bearing in mind that the column is a week late, I submit that the points raised are still reasonably open to discussion, and not too dated as yet.

I'm sure it will come as no great shock to anyone when I say that quite a bit of rain has fallen on Burlington since the first of October. (Some Weather Bureau statistics: the sun did not shine on Burlington from sunset of October 3 to mid-afternoon, October 10. There were 9 consecutive days of rain from the 4th, and 10 days of rain, totally, from the 1st.) Were it not for the occasional break in the rainfall, which allowed the ground to absorb some of the water and a little to evaporate, UVM would have been the proud possessor of a full-fledged swamp. Had there been an extended period of heavy rain (all ours was mostly heavy drizzle, with occasional heavy rain), the whole campus might have been a swamp.

The worst place was in front of the Engineering building, in what used to be a parking lot, behind Ira Allen Chapel. Because of the construction going on, a great many students were forced to trudge around a fence and through the mire to get to math class, as well as some M.E. classes, in the Engineering Building. It was not easy to get through the bog without getting the feeling that any minute you were going to sink in.

This situation would have kept getting worse had the builders not put up a little board walkway from the front of Engineering to the grassy ground between Billings and the chapel. It was there one day, gone the next, and then put back again, where I hope it is to stay if it decides to rain again. As I say, the walk was probably due to the consideration for the students exhibited by the builders; it would surprise me if the university itself were responsible for the boards, unless Buildings and Grounds took it upon themselves to put it there.

I'm certainly not one to argue with the current rash of new buildings, and especially not a new engineering building (being an engineer myself), but why was the inconvenience necessary? With all the loose dirt, the first rain had to turn the whole area into a bog, and all the rest of the rain only compounded the trouble. It would have been so easy for some official to ask, on behalf of the university, to have the walk put up immediately, as a matter of course, but apparently the university didn't even think of the students. We were only lucky that someone didn't lost his footing and break his neck.

The excuse for all the mud was that the school is growing, and it's to be expected. I'll say we're growing; every time someone sank into the quagmire, the level of the swamp was raised half an inch.

Dr. Nyborg Receives Grant

Research conducted by a University of Vermont physics professor while in England under a special grant is written up in the current issue of Science, a weekly publication.

In the fall of 1960, Dr. Wesley L. Nyborg of the UVM department of physics, was awarded a $21,355 research grant by the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare for a year's study at Oxford University. While there, Dr. Nyborg collaborated with Dr. David E. Hughes, of Oxford, in the study of physical mechanisms for biological effects of sound. Their findings of cell disruption by ultrasound are reported in Science.

One eventual use of ultrasound may be in surgery. Drs. Nyborg and Hughes report that with regard to the surgical use of ultrasound for producing brain lesions and destroying the labyrinth, there is still no agreement about the mechanism of the disruptive effects which result in the death of the cells, generally after some delay following application.

In summing up their findings, they said that experiments showed that cell rupture, normally associated with "gaseous cavitation," can occur in the absence of the collapse phenomenon and at surprisingly low power. This finding is important for its practical application in preparing extracts of microorganisms and other cells with ultrasonic vibrations, and important for the further insight it gives into the disruptive action of sound on free cell suspensions and on cells in tissue aggregates.

ment.' ... 'Students and faculty members...lined up...to sign the message and contribute to a small fund to defray its cost.'

"In an exclusive interview with NEWS Editor-in-Chief ... Mrs. Meredith stated that 'she was happy that 'People thought enough of us to send us messages in our behalf and give us support.' 'She also stated that 'the students of the Eastern and North-Western college students were helping their cause by bringing it to public attention.'"

According to the Connecticut Daily Campus, UConn has taken an active step in promoting the White Arm Band Movement which is "a movement in sympathy with James Meredith, Negro student at the University of Mississippi. The White Bands were organized at Texas Christian University for the purpose of stressing civil rights and academic freedom for all. Since its organization, the movement has spread to Mid-Western and New England Universities."

Another Texas college, North Texas State University, has also made a positive move in backing Meredith. It was reported in the October 3 edition of the Campus Chat that the Student Assembly of that college dispatched a telegram to Meredith. The message read:

"We salute your courage and perseverance in facing overwhelming opposition to stand up for your constitutional rights. Your struggle is exemplary of the principle that individual rights can only be achieved through uncommon valor."

In a reprint that appeared in the October 2 Daily Orange (Syracuse University), with an Oxford, Mississippi dateline, it was stated that:

"The editor of the University of Mississippi student newspaper told her fellow students... that they are bringing 'dishonor and shame' to their university and state by participating in riots."

She continued, "This is a battle between the State of Mississippi and the United States Government. The university is caught in the middle. The Civil War was fought 100 years ago over almost the same issues and the United States of America prevailed. The Federal government is once again showing its strength and power to uphold the laws of our country..."

Back to the lighter side of the college scene... Appearing in the Vidette of the Illinois State Normal University of September 20 was an article, of which the following is an excerpt...

"Probably everyone on campus has taken notice of the pre-hours congestion near the dorms. This congestion, referred to by some as the Passion Pit, is a real hazard to anyone passing in the area at that time.

"I have a suggestion, however, that may relieve the problem. Girls would simply sign up for spots under the lamps at certain hours. Time limit would be five minutes." ...What say you, men!

Over Syracuse-way, Dean of Men, Earle Clifford's name seems to frequent the Daily Orange a good deal. The following appeared in boldface of the October 3 issue:

"Dean of Men Earle W. Clifford, Monday afternoon, issued a warning to all fraternities and men's dormitories concerning a group called 'The National Students Agency,' believed to be selling magazines to individuals and houses.

"Clifford said that the group does not have university approval (sound familiar?) He is therefore 'discouraging any negotiations of contracts or payments of funds by students to any individuals

OVER LIGHTLY

by Joel Posner

"LOVE ON CAMPUS"

A few nights ago, I heard a psychologist explain her feelings about love. It was her theory that we fall in love with a particular girl because we are envious of some trait of hers and, to relieve this envy, we "incorporate her" into ourselves. I must respectfully disagree. After long and careful study of the mating habits of the college students, as seen on the UVM campus, I have come to very different conclusions.

It seems to me that the act of choosing a partner is the act of playing a game. The game strategy is much the same as the strategy of a successful Monopoly player. It is the strategy of the market place.

You've got to try to get the most for your market value. It takes some cool bidding, some real poker-like bluffing, and an ability to curb some very pressing human feelings; but the rewards are well worth the effort.

The first thing to remember when you play the game is that you must never, never, NEVER show true feelings for the target of your maneuverings. This is the cardinal rule. It is the first one any good game strategist learns. No clothing salesman worth his salt shows he is anxious to make a sale, and no really sharp buyer indicates any real perfunctory interest in the clothes.

It is permissible to fake emotion, but this must be done smoothly and with only a limited degree of subtlety. No point in blowing the whole bit by making the girl of your dreams think you actually like her. (This is not really too great a problem because any girl naive enough to believe your protestations is not worth worrying over. Also, if she thinks you like her, she probably likes you; anyone who allows himself to do this has violated the first rule of the game, show her no mercy.)

As a corollary to this first rule, I should point out that the novice must avoid girls who really appeal to him. It is not easy to play it cool with a girl you really like. Two things work against you in this. First, there are -- despite extensive public education -- certain vestiges of genuine human feelings in some of the best of us. These can cause all manner of trouble; it is best to avoid people who can arouse them. Second, if the girl is that nice, if she is worth that much on the open market, her value may overwhelm you. This could well be fatal.

The veteran can ignore this corollary. A true player has successfully rid himself of any feelings at all; he is in no danger.

KEEP YOUR DEFENSES WELL DISPERSED

Despite what you may have learned about principles of warfare, it is not a good idea to concentrate your efforts, at least not at first. To do so would be to commit yourself too early in the game; this is not good.

A well distributed attack, one that allows you to keep three or four objectives under assault, has three beneficial results.

It allows you to play it safe (perhaps the greatest boon of all.) You will never be without a date, because of the whims of a single girl. Also, if you are moving against a number of girls, you will not get unduly attached to any one of them.

A second benefit of this type of plan is that it will make you more desirable. As you may have guessed by the first rule, people want what they cannot have.

There is also a humanitarian reason for following this rule. Any true game player knows his own worth. It would be selfish not to spread a good thing around.

KNOW THYSELF

In line with keeping your market value high, it is important to know your weaknesses and strengths. With a cool, calm, objective eye, appraise your position. You must look at yourself as though you were someone else.

If you are the proud possessor of a hairy chest, an evil leer, and bulging muscles, you must play that role. Choose girls with a tinge of the masochist in them. Resist all temptation to be kind. (Don't overdo the caveman bit, even the worst masochist doesn't want to go overboard with the thing. It has something to do with an instinct for self preservation, I think.)

Instead, if when you look in a mirror, you see boyish rosy cheeks and a body that would make a good "before" picture for a Charles Atlas ad, use these strengths. Let your hair grow too fantastically long. Leave one shirt button pathetically undone. Learn to smile in a sweet, boyish, "I've been hurt" manner.

There is, of course, more to your appeal than the physical. Part of your strength is cranial. It is important to find your proper position on the intellectual ladder. You may decide that your intelligence is of the practical variety. This is not always for the best since things have changed since the practical was admired. It would be best for you to avoid the commonplace practicality. Try politics or science. Learn the names of some prominent local political leaders and use those names often and with a moderate degree of familiarity.

Otherwise, watch for the names of the Nobel prize winners in chemistry, physics, and allied fields. Always express disappointment at the final choices.

If your nature leans towards the artistic, exploit your strengths with confidence, yours is the wave of the future (at least on most college campuses.) Take up chess. (You need not play the game, just display a set or two -- with pieces properly scattered prominently about your lair.) Buy books in a variety of foreign languages. Quote Indian poets. Leave unframed prints lying carelessly about.

Once you gain complete self knowledge, you will know which girls are within your grasp and which ones you must avoid. You will also avoid fatal inconsistencies within your character.

BE SEXY

Having sex appeal is not nearly as difficult as it seems. It need not involve rigid diets and long hours of exercises. Only some need what is often called a "good body." (See the above to find where you fit in.)

If you are the he-man type, learn to growl. Avoid taking too many

UVM Seeks Budget Increase

The University of Vermont will ask the 1963 Vermont Legislature to assume an increased share of the University's operating budget, it was announced here today (Oct. 20) following a meeting of the UVM Board of Trustees.

The budget adopted by the Board will be presented to the Department of Administration. It asks a 1963-65 biennial state appropriation of $9,478,314. This is a 58 percent increase, or $3,481,097 more than the $5,997,217 appropriated by the Legislature for the 1961-63 biennium.

The state appropriation requested for the 1963-65 biennium amounts to 44.7 percent of the University's total estimated operating budget of $21,228,310. The state provided 34.7 percent of UVM's total 1961-63 biennial budget of $17,326,730.

The total budget includes: $17,860,563 for the General University budget operation; $3,297,747 for operation of the agricultural service and research divisions;

$50,000 for retirement of debts obligated under authorization of the Legislature for the payment of annuities.

The requested state appropriation, which amounts to 44.7 percent of the proposed total operating budget, represents the single largest source of income available to UVM. Most state universities receive more than half of their income from state appropriations.

Tuition, which is expected to produce over $6,250,000 in the 1963-65 biennium, is the University's second largest income source. It accounts for 29 percent of the proposed biennial budget. UVM's out-of-state tuition, the highest charged by any state university, was increased from $1040 to $1200 this fall. The $416 tuition charged Vermont residents is the third highest resident tuition charged by any state university.

Lane Series Is A Success

On Monday, October 22, Burlington opera lovers enjoyed an evening of Puccini at his best, as the New York City Opera Company, conducted by Julius Rudel, performed two one-act operas, "Il Tabarro," and "Gianni Schicchi." These two operas are usually presented along with a third, under the title "Il Trittico," by Giacomo Puccini. However, the first two, as performed, provided a colorful and sensitive spectacle which lasted a full evening.

After a rather slow start the tragedy, "Il Tabarro," (The Cloak) impressed the audience with its directness and realism and the typical melodic interest of its composer. Aside from existing acoustical difficulties, the presentation of "Il Tabarro" was one of sensitivity and skill. Noteworthy in the role of Giorgetta was Arlene Sanders, who did much to support the realism and credibility of the entire opera. William Chapman as Michele and Robert Williams as Luigi, brought the male lead roles to life with both vocal skill and expressive acting. The presentation of the opera was a fine example of the tragic tradition of Puccini.

By far the more appealing of the two operas presented was the comedy, "Gianni Schicchi." In every way this production was a miracle of color and humor. The brilliant costumes and set won applause as the curtain went up, and the audience's enthusiasm lasted through the entire opera as laughs and refreshing melodies followed one after another. Outstanding in the title role was Norman Treigle, whose dynamic acting and expressive singing did much to assure the success of the entire performance. Doris Varick, Evelyn Sachs, and Frank Porretta, other stars in the cast, played their roles with capability. The entire opera was successful in its maintenance of Puccini's intended mood of levity and color.

Although the operas performed might have been better appreciated in one of the fine existing English translations, certainly the entire program as presented was a credit to the New York City Opera Company and its conductor Julius Rudel, and a pleasure to attend as part of our Red Lane Series.

EAT, SLEEP, AND MATRICULATE

The trouble with early morning classes is that you're too sleepy. At late morning classes you're too hungry. At early afternoon classes you're too logy. At late afternoon classes you're too hungry again. The fact is—and we might as well face it—there is no good time of day to take a class.

What shall we do then? Abandon our colleges to the ivy? I say no! I say America did not become the hope of mankind and the world's largest producer of butterfat and tallow by running away from a fight!

If you're always too hungry or too sleepy for class, then let's hold classes when you're not too hungry or sleepy: namely, when you're eating or sleeping.

Classes while eating are a simple matter. Just have a lecturer lecture while the eaters eat. But watch out for noisy food. I mean who can hear a lecturer lecture when everybody is crunching celery or matzo or like that? Serve quiet stuff—like anchovy paste on a doughnut, or steaming bowls of lamb fat.

And kindly observe silence while lighting your post-prandial Marlboro Cigarette. Don't be striking kitchen matches on your jeans. Instead carry an ember from the dormitory fireplace in your purse or pocket. Place the Marlboro against the ember. Light it quietly. Smoke it quietly. Oh, I know I ask a great deal! I know that one's natural instinct upon encountering Marlboro's fine flavor and filter is to throw back one's head and bellow great, rousing cries of joy. But you must not. You must contain your ecstasy, lest you disturb the lecturing lecturer. You can, if you like, permit yourself a few small shudders of pleasure as you smoke, but take care not to wear garments which will set up a clatter when you shudder—like taffeta, for example, or knee cymbals.

Let us turn now to the problem of learning while sleeping. First, can it be done?

Yes, it can. Psychologists have proved that the brain is definitely able to assimilate information during sleep. Take, for instance, a recent experiment conducted by a leading Eastern university (Stanford). A small tape recorder was placed under the pillow of the subject, a freshman named Glebe Sigafos. When Glebe was fast asleep, the recorder was turned on. Softly, all through the night, it repeated three statements in Glebe's slumbering ear:

1. Herbert Spencer lived to the age of 109 and is called "The Founder of English Eclectic Philosophy."

2. The banana plant is not a tree but a large perennial herb.

3. The Archduke Ferdinand was assassinated in 1914 at Sarajevo by a young nationalist named Mjilas Cvetnic, who has been called "The Trigger of World War I."

When Glebe awoke in the morning, the psychologists said to him, "Herbert Spencer lived to the age of 109. What is he called?"

Glebe promptly replied, "Perennial Herb."

Next they asked him, "What has Mjilas Cvetnic been called?"

Replied Glebe, "Perennial Serb."

Finally they said, "Is the banana plant a tree?"

But Glebe, exhausted from the long interrogation, had fallen back asleep, where he is to this day.

...for a life of pride and purpose

Among the young people being graduated from college in these times, there are some who think and feel—perhaps a little more deeply than the others—about the world we live in, the future we face. They ask, "How can I make my career really meaningful? More than just personally rewarding?"

And many of today's most successful young people are finding a fulfilling answer to these questions as officers on the Aerospace Team—the United States Air Force. They can tell you that no career could better combine the opportunity for achievement—and the deep inner satisfaction of knowing that they are helping preserve the very future of America.

How can you become an Air Force Officer?

If you are a college senior and not currently enrolled in ROTC, Air Force Officer Training School provides an opportunity to qualify for a wide variety of career fields. The graduate of this three-month course receives a commission as a second lieutenant. As the Air Force continues its technological advance, officers with college training will move into positions of increasing importance.

For full information—including the opportunity to earn graduate degrees at Air Force expense—see the Air Force Selection Team when it visits your college, visit your local Air Force Recruiting Office, or write: Air Force Officer Career Information, Dept. SC210, Box 805, New York 1, New York.

The never-ending cycle of notetaking, quizzes, papers, and exams hasn't stopped the whirl of excitement on campus. Two weeks ago, Vermont Beta of Sigma Alpha Epsilon received news of winning the William W. Paddock Cup. This Cup symbolizes overall chapter excellence in the fields of scholastic achievement, spirit, and sound chapter management. In winning this coveted award, Vermont Beta had to compete with the 143 other chapters across the country. The Brotherhood takes great pride in accepting this award for the years 1960-62. This certainly is an incentive to make the next two year period as good, if not better. Congratulations SAE!

Whistle while you work, was the Theta motto recently when the Thetas in group effort had their alum-faculty work weekend. Any odd job that needed to be done the girls did, in order to raise money for Logopedics, a speech correction center in Wichita, Kansas. The weekend served a two-fold purpose. The Thetas were able to observe some of their professors out of class... sure was fun...probable too.

Busy doings at the AEPH House. Last week the sisters and pledges of AEPH held a tea in honor of their new housemother, Mrs. Roy Meyers. It was certainly an enjoyable evening entertaining head residents and sorors of the other six sororities.

Dinner guests have been frequenting many of the sorority houses on campus. The Gamma Phis were pleased to have Mr. and Mrs. Averalli as their guests last week. The ADPIs held a very successful Alumnae Banquet last Thursday. In addition, the girls were hostesses to their Province President, Mrs. James Savory for four days. Held in Mrs. Savory's honor was a tea, a token of the ADPIs pleasure as having her as their guest. Many thanks to the pledges of Theta Chi who were superb waiters for the ADPIs. The Thetas were glad to play hostesses for Dean Eyske and his wife.

After twisting away Saturday night at the Theta Chi House to the great music of the Craters, the Gamma Phis spent a fairly quiet week getting back into shape. Last Saturday the sorors of Gamma Phi were sporting brown and beige ribbons in celebration of the founding of two new Gamma Phi Beta Chapters.

Big doings at the Theta Chi house. The boys want to graciously thank Denise Plunket "fo" promised to marry 3 or 4 of de boys who's are not yet married as'n yet. Also, the brothers had a successful dessert hour with Delta Delta Delta. Excitement at ADPI. The ADPIs wish to extend a big get well wish to Linda Atiyeh who is recuperating at Mary Fletcher after falling down the stairs a week ago Friday and who is now incapacitated with a broken leg.

The Thetas are anxiously awaiting Parents Weekend on October 27.

NEW PLEDGES

The sisters of Alpha Chi welcome their five new pledges: Donna Lee Merrill, Carol Brown, Polly Dimick, Daren Howe, and Leslie Blanchard. Alpha Delta Pi is proud to welcome their new pledges, Helene Sideris and Nancy Wearne. And congratulations to Judy Schroeder, '65, who is wearing a shiny new Theta pledge pin.

PINNINGS

Theta Chi's Hank Dubois did all de courage he'n could muster up, pinned Penny Betourney from Jeanne Mance School of Nursing. Best wishes to SAE's Pete Sarno for his pinning of Joan Washburn and to Bob Bergman for his pinning to Jean Luck of Gamma Phi Beta. Congratulations to Sue Aronaur, '64, who recently became pinned to Bill Klugman, '62, of AEPI.

ENGAGEMENTS

Heartiest congratulations to AEPH's past president Linda Leffel, '62, who recently became engaged to Arty Abrams, '61. Best of luck also to Maureen Seiler and Al Saroff, '61, who are now engaged.

Best wishes to Audrey Cohen, '65 and Stu Rauch, '63, and to Toby Wagmeister, '64, and Steve Skiglitz, '63, of Northeastern.

Word has it that Theta Chi's Raleigh White tripped on one of de dar love bugs and plans to skip on a huney moon in June wid Mary Ann Johns from Champlain College. Don Steele fell over de same bug and he got engaged to Lois Palmer of Burlington.

MARRIED

Congratulations and best wishes to Linda Buffum Cone and her bridegroom Laurie.

UVM Seeks Budget Increase

REASONS FOR INCREASE

University of Vermont President John T. Fey outlined four basic reasons for the $3,901,000 increase budgeted for the coming biennium:

New positions authorized during the 1961-63 biennium, and new positions anticipated in the 1963-65 biennium;

Salary increases authorized during the current biennium and planned for the 1963-65 biennium as follows: average faculty salary increases of seven and eight percent in 1963-64 and 1964-65, and average administrative salary increases of five percent in each of the two years of the coming biennium;

Increased expenditures for wages, largely due to new physical plant facilities including the new gymnasium-physical education facility, the recently completed medical phase two, and the new engineering building;

Increased operating expenses anticipated also include a normal five percent increase; additional fringe benefit expenses including retirement, social security, insurance, library books, and operating expenses for the new engineering building, the new gymnasium, and medical phase two.

THE STORK

Margie and Billy Douglas are anxiously awaiting their new arrival. The Theta Chis hope it'n is a goll that don't look like its pa.

UVM Theater To Present "Rashomon"

At 8:30 PM on the 17th and 18th of November the University Players will present Rashomon, an ancient Japanese folk tale adapted for American stage by Fay and Michael Kanin. It is based on stories by Ryunosuke Abutagawa.

Directing the play is Mr. Fred LaBelle, a senior majoring in speech and fine arts. Mr. LaBelle has been very active in the theater since his freshman year at which time he played a role in a very successful studio production of Arsenic and Old Lace. He was a technician in last year's Champlain Shakespeare Festival and is now Assistant Production Manager for the Lane Series.

The cast is comprised of nine UVM students. Ivan Karp will play the role of the priest. Karp is a sophomore. He was very active in the University Theater throughout his freshman year. David Scherk, in his first role with the University Players, will take the part of the wigmaker. The woodcutter will be played by sophomore Robin Shore.

Army veteran Earle Dunphy will become the deputy in the play. The bandit will be acted by Dick Lemm who played in a successful production of West Side Story in Burlington last year. He is now a junior. Ron Morgan, also a junior, will play the part of the husband, a Samurai Warrior. Ron, a marine veteran, is particularly qualified for this part for while stationed in Japan he studied the Martial Arts (Jujitsu, etc.).

The part of the wife is played by Lee Owens. Lee performed in the fairy tale "Beauty and the Beast" produced by Fred Great. She is a professional model and has studied ballet under Michel Fokine. She was an active member in the cast of last year's Champlain Shakespeare Festival. Lee is a junior in the College of Arts and Sciences.

Judy Guernsey, a newcomer to the theater, will play the difficult character role of mother. She is a music major and a talented pianist. Sally Buermann, who will play the role of the medium, began acting in her freshman year in a Chinese children's play for the "Play-timer's" tour. Later she appeared in "Six Characters in Search of an Author" and in the 1961 presentation of Vermont Varieties. Last year Sally was awarded a scholarship to the Connecticut College School of Modern Dance. She attended last summer.

The backstage crew consists of Frank O'Brian, Creg Boardmann, Chris Nichols and Barry Beckerman. Frank O'Brian is the stage manager. Frank has worked with the University Players in several one-act plays and in "Six Characters in Search of an Author." Nichols is in charge of lights. Beckerman is make-up chief, a position which entails achieving oriental facial structure and Japanese make-up conventions.

Crew jobs are open to any persons interested in working with scenery, stage construction, lights make-up or sound. Anyone willing to help in obtaining and/or constructing costumes will be especially welcome. Rehearsals are held nearly every weekday night at the Arena Theater. Those interested should feel free to attend.

Tickets for "Rashomon" may be reserved by calling Mr. Fiedner or Mr. Ackley at ext. 236.

Random House publishes seven political science books and, of this number, two are by UVM faculty members. In addition to Babcock's, the other book is "People, Power, and Politics: An Introductory Reader" by Lyman J. Gould and E. William Steele. seven sororities worked together to produce the show demonstrates one of the main aims of the Pan Hellenic Council: to promote co-operation among all the members of every sorority.

The models were: Juliette Banguis, Penny Carr, Mary Louise Dente, Martha Gardner, MaryLou Haskiewitz, Pam Harlhurt, Jan McLaughlin, Lee Langley, Lyn Powell, Sue Rex, Sue Ridder, Kay Sanderson, Linda Sharfstein, and Laurie Weidman.

The fashion show was divided into two main parts. The first selection of clothing included sporty clothes: short kilts, classic pleated skirts, the new tweedy wrap-arounds, and A lines. All of these were perfect for toning down sophistication -- for coffee dates, classes, and the numerous meetings on campus. One of the most popular outfits was a turtle-neck sweater, which could be coordinated excellently with slacks, skirts, and ski parkas. The classics, such as Bermuda-collared blouses and crew-necks, were worn by many of the models. Each number was more eye-catching than the previous one, and everything shown was appropriate for casual activities here at UVM. During the intermission, while the guests chatted about the clothing and models, refreshments were served -- another co-operative sorority effort. Each sorority baked six dozen cookies for the cookie and punch interlude.

"Sorority girls are also party girls," Betsy Lisman, the narrator, had stated. We then were shown a collection of more dressy date clothes. There were brocaded cocktail dresses, ideal for Kake Walk and holidays, as well as versatile three-piece suits, coordinates, and jumpers. Suede dresses and shifts, perfect for dinner dates, and even dresses for twist parties were shown in abundance.

The Marion Shop caters to clothing that college girls love to wear. All UVM coeds, the sophisticated or the all-American girl, could find clothes to please at the fashion show. The Marion Shop is located on Pearl Street, across from the Federal Building. The first Pan Hellenic Fashion Show, a sorority-girl freshman event, was a huge success, from the point of view of all who attended.

If you fit into the pink cheeks class, a tendency to the more retiring sexual image is necessary. Take to resting your head on girls shoulders. Learn the subtle oral manipulations which will tell the maternal girl that you are for her.

There are many varieties and exceptions under this rule. The major thing to remember is that everyone is sexy to at least one other person. Learn your strengths in this area as in all others and your rewards will be many and gratifying.

REMEMBER THE RULES

The main thing is that you must never forget the rules. Never be carried away by your emotions; this is an unforgivable mistake and your punishments will be well deserved.

Love is a serious matter, you must enter its dark halls with a clear head. Remember, emotion has no place in the act of falling in love.

FACTS ABOUT PHYSICAL EDUCATION

Vermont will soon have one of the best, most complete physical education plants in the nation. We all know that. But, are we all aware of the limited scope of our Physical Education program?

Much has been said about Physical Education in previous editions of the CYNIC. Much of it was true, while a lot of it was opinion. The sports staff feels it is time that some facts be presented to the student body concerning a major in P.E. We feel that it should definitely be added to the University's curriculum in the near future, especially with the coming of the 2.9 million dollar athletic complex on Spear Street.

At present there is a minor offered in Physical Education in the College of Education. With the constant need for well qualified physical educators, most notably right here in the state of Vermont, this program should be expanded to meet the growing need of our growing population.

Many of us are unaware of the courses required for a major in Physical Education. Misconceptions concerning so-called snap courses, stem from stories of the stereotyped football player with an I.Q. of 80 whose semester work includes courses in fly-casting, basket weaving, skin diving and remedial English. In reality not all football players are Physical Education majors and the required courses include vertebrate zoology, anatomy, physiology, bacteriology, kinesiology and, of course, some classes in the proper techniques of various athletic proficiencies. To meet these standards a student in a Physical Education program will have it just as rough as many pre-med students.

Steps are being taken to expand the present program. The Zoology Department is in the process of initiating new courses that will eventually become part of a P.E. major. Such fields of study as mammalian anatomy and physiology, emphasizing human structures and functions, are soon to be started.

JFK ON PHYSICAL FITNESS

"The strength of our democracy is no greater than the collective well-being of our people.... The level of physical, mental, moral and spiritual fitness of every American citizen must be our constant concern." These are the words of President Kennedy, taken from his presidential message on the physical fitness of youth. In stressing the need for a physically fit nation, the President states, "...we look to our schools and colleges as the decisive force in a renewed national effort to strengthen the physical fitness of youth. Many of our schools have long been making strenuous efforts to assist our young people attain and maintain health and physical fitness. But we must do more. We must expand and improve our health services, health education and physical education. We must increase our facilities and the time devoted to physical activity. We must invigorate our curricula and give high priority to a crusade for excellency in health and fitness."

Vermont is answering this challenge, but it is up to each student to improve himself physically as well as intellectually during his college years. Qualified and dedicated men are needed to guide those willing to learn the correct techniques of physical fitness. UVM can do its part by supplying these men through a P.E. major.

New Gym: Just A Matter Of Time

Whenever a large-scale construction project is undertaken by a group or an organization, there are bound to be troubles. The University of Vermont, in its attempt to meet the deadline date of November 3 in its opening of the new Gymnasium and Field House, have come across a number of these problems.

Although most of the work has been done in order to complete this enterprise, the date of opening has been postponed indefinitely. One adversity which has entered the picture is the delay in the arrival of the bleachers which will seat over five thousand in the gymnasium, and over four thousand in the hockey rink area.

Another disturbing factor, which has been occurring for some time now, falls into the category of labor disputes. There have been a number of strikes held by the various groups of workers, such as the electricians, painters, and masons. Each time one group strikes, the entire operation is slowed down.

The last and most distressing problem lies in the fact that the Vermont State Inspection of the new structures will not take place until November 15. Should anything be disapproved by the inspectors, an even greater enigma will be presented. The first Basketball game, scheduled to be played in the new gym, is on December 11, thus giving only a month to the workers for any necessary alterations. The Physical Education Department also plans to hold a ceremony to commemorate the inauguration on that date.

It is now only a matter of time. Let's hope that the construction crew develops some teamwork, and the state inspectors are in good spirits on November 15, so that the entire student body will be able to attend the first "real home basketball game."

Greer's Passing Accounts For Vermont's Only Score; Cats Plan To Claw Norwich

UVM's passing game went well last Saturday at Durham, New Hampshire, but that was about all, as the Cats lost to the Wildcats of UNH, 19 to 6, before a Homecoming Day crowd of over 8,000 fans.

The Catamounts are looking forward to getting back in the winning column this weekend as they tackle the Cadets of Norwich. Coach Clifford is working the team hard in preparation for the game. He plans on wearing down the Cadets physically and really opening up his offense.

This rigorous preparation is also being held with next week's homecoming game with powerful Massachusetts in mind. The Redmen from Mass. are currently leading the Yankee Conference and sport a 4-1 overall record, 3-0-0 in Conference play.

Vermont passing attack gained 135 yards on 12 completions in 27 attempts. Chris Greer was the most effective Vermont quarterback. He engineered a drive just before the end of the half that ended with a scoring toss to fullback Dick Reynolds. It took Greer only two and a half minutes to get the score.

First Greer hit halfback Pete Weiss, then he connected with Frank Bolden, who caught the ball with a defender on his back and ran it to the 24-yard line. Another Greer to Bolden aerial put the ball on the 12. Fullback Frank Amato bucked into the line for a short gain before Greer tossed to Reynolds for the T.D.

Dave Baker's kick was off the mark and the score stood at 6 to 6 at the half. The Wildcats scored their T.D. in the first period on a 53-yard pass play from quarterback Lloyd Wells to Dan Serieka. Bob Towse missed the PAT. The Catamounts proved themselves just as good a team as the Wildcats, but finally succumbed to their own mistakes as they let New Hampshire score two more T.D.'s.

The stalwart Vermont defensive line had the Wildcats stymied on the 40-yard line when on a long pass to UNH end Ed Edgerly a pass interference penalty was called on the UVM 7. This led to an easy UNH touchdown. The Cats bounced right back to hold on the two-point conversion try.

After exchanges of punts, the last Vermont kick going only four yards, New Hampshire moved the ball to the UVM 19-yard line, where Wells fired a strike to end Paul Marro. Towse kicked the extra point, making the score 19-6.

Towards the end of the game the Wildcats were threatening again from the Vermont 9-yard line where a Vermont pass had been intercepted. This is where sophomore safety Jim Brennan picked off a wild "Cat" pass and out raced everybody on a 97-yard dash to the goal-line. There was a clipping violation on the play and it was nullified, but it was the most spectacular play of the game and it electrified the SRO homecoming crowd.

Paul Harris and Greer did an outstanding job of passing. Ken Burton punted exceptionally well as one of his boots went 65 yards in the air.

Donnelly Finishes Second In ECAC Golf Championship

"Nice going son" - Golf Coach, J. Edward Donnelly has just reason to be proud of his son, John, who finished one stroke off the pace in the ECAC Golf Championship finals.

(Credit: Audio Visual)

John Donnelly, son of the University's Athletic Director, J. Edward Donnelly, took second place honors in the third annual ECAC golf championship last Saturday at Farmingdale, New York.

Two UVM golfers qualified for the tournament two weeks ago. Mike Fay, a promising sophomore, carded a 79 to qualify along with Donnelly. In the qualifying round Donnelly finished one stroke behind the New England medalist, Steve Liebman of Connecticut.

Donnelly, captain of the team, shot a 76 over the 18-hole Beth Page Gold Course to again come in a stroke of the pace set by medalist, Charles Karboske of the University of Rhode Island. Fay turned in no card in the tournament that had eight of the top golf teams in the East represented. Nearly 80 golfers competed for individual honors.

Vermont finished fourth in the New England team standings with a team score of 326. Rhode Island took top honors with a 318 total. Other teams that competed included Dartmouth, U Conn., Providence, Boston College, MIT, Stonehill, Brown, and St. Michael's.

Union Beats Frosh 28-20

The UVM Kittens lost their first game since 1960 when Union College defeated them 28-20 at Schenectady, N.Y.

The game was highlighted by long runs and long passes. Union drew first blood when a bad hike from center resulted in Union taking possession on Vermont's 20 yard line. In three plays they managed to score. The Kittens came right back to score on a three yard plunge by Terry Lynn. The try for the extra point failed on a fake kick pass play.

A long pass in the second period put Union in the scoring column. The Kittens answered with another drive which resulted in another tally. Scott Fitz, a quarterback who fills in at halfback, was on the receiving end of a Jack O'Dea pass. Things looked good for Vermont when Steve Ross caught the two point conversion pass to tie the game 14-14.

On the following kickoff, Union scored on a 80 yard gallop. Again in the fourth quarter, when the Kittens dominated play, Union managed to score on a short pass to go ahead 28-14. With five minutes to play, Scott Fitz, playing one of the finest games of his career, plunged over from about three yards out to narrow the gap, but not in time for victory.

This Friday, the Kittens play Middlebury at Centennial Field during what has been proclaimed "Freshmen Homecoming" by the freshmen dorm presidents.

UVM Welcomes Guests, Alumni Annual Vermont Varieties To Contain Old And New Student, Faculty Groups Plan Week-end Events

The sixteenth annual production of the Vermont Varieties is on the agenda for Saturday evening of Homecoming Weekend. It will be on the same idea as previous years, highlighting the "best talent on campus."

Top on the list of "old pros" from previous years is UVM's own Jon Tenzer, Class of '62. He just couldn't bear to stay away, so he is coming all the way from Philadelphia to be with us. Other veterans of the stage (Memorial Auditorium stage, that is!) are Steve Frankel and Jules Shrage on the guitar and piano, Sumner Silverman, Jean Connor, and others.

This year there will be some fresh new talent in the performances of Lorean Coutermarsh on the accordion; the folk singing duet of Pete Walcott and Ed Malozzi who made such a big hit at Klub Karnival; two numbers by the new dance workshop choreographed by Miss Norma Albert, the new dance instructor; and a new singing group, the Madrigals, under the direction of Francis Weinrich.

This year the Catamounts have Ben Becton with them, as soloist. They will perform two original numbers written by Ben. On the lighter side will be a series of skits of campus life written by Frank DeCavalcante and Scott Astel.

The settings will be designed by Bob Ackley of the Speech Department. The opening theme and the finale will be the traditional one written by Jack Overt '59. Bill Kingsland will be the accompanist.

The performance will begin promptly at 7:30 P.M. in Memorial Auditorium and will conclude at 9:00. Admission will be $1.25 per person.

Hundreds of alumni and parents will be flocking to the UVM campus this weekend for the 1962 UVM Homecoming. The Alumni Association along with the University Administration and student groups have planned activities that will make this a memorable Homecoming.

Saturday morning at 8:30 AM there will be a registration and coffee hour for all parents and alumni. Planned for the time right before the big game was the dedication of the new gymnasium, but because the building is not yet completed this event had to be cancelled. Right before the football game cafeterias in Marsh, Simpson, and Waterman will be open for all guests for the weekend.

Just about the biggest event of any Homecoming is the football game and Homecoming 1962 will be no exception. This year the sharp Catamounts will face a tough team from the University of Massachusetts.

After the game alumni will go to the Cupola Motel for their annual "Happy Hour". At the same time there will be student receptions at Marsh, Converse, and some Redstone dormitory. There will be Fraternity Open Houses for all Alumni at 4:00 to 6:00 PM.

Saturday evening alumni and parents will join UVM student in Memorial Auditorium for Sixteenth Annual Vermont Varieties. The Alumni House reports that this year's advanced sale to see the show of student talent far exceeds those of any previous Homecoming.

The next morning, Sunday, November 4, alumni, parents and students will head to the Waterman Dining Room for the annual President's Breakfast. The speaker will naturally be John T. Fey, president of the University. The breakfast will start at 8:30 AM. After the breakfast it's homeward for parents and alumni with remembrances of Homecoming '62 and hopes of Homecoming '63.

Junior Co-ed Wins Homecoming Contest

by Bennett Machanic

Homecoming spirit can truly be felt on the campus with the gala event only a week away. This spirit is personified in the eye-catching posters of Sue King, the winner of this year's poster contest.

Sue is a junior from North Haven, Connecticut. She is currently enrolled in the College of Agriculture and is majoring in Clothing and Textiles. She is both House President of Coolidge Third, and Publicity Chairman of the Home Economics Club.

Since her freshman year, Sue has been interested in poster making. Previously she had entered Kake Walk poster contests, but until now her talent has gone unnoticed. Her work can now be seen throughout the campus. In addition to her winning poster, she has also painted the mum poster advertisements for Mortar Board.

Some mention should also be given to the judges who sacrificed their time on Monday, Oct.

Olatunji Jazz Troupe Brings Beats Of Africa To Memorial Auditorium

On Monday evening, November 5, Olatunji will appear in Memorial Auditorium for the Red Lane Series, accompanied by his fourteen-member troupe of singers, dancers and drummers. They have previously performed for Columbia Records, the major jazz festivals, and numerous concerts. Olatunji has also appeared at leading jazz clubs with an instrumental group of six musicians.

Included in the evening's repertoire will be: "Uhuru" (Freedom Song), a moving number concerning the universal struggle for freedom; "Ebo," a solo acrobatic dance; and "Paddle Song," a work-song of canoe paddlers.

Today, Olatunji, as both a performer and a composer, is the leading exponent of authentic African music in the United States. A native of Ajido-Badagry, Nigeria, he attended the Baptist Academy in Lagos. Having been awarded a Rotary International Scholarship, he came to the United States in 1950 to pursue his studies at Morehouse College in Atlanta, Georgia. While there, he was impressed by the students' "tremendous curiosity about African culture, and," he adds, "I was unhappy about the distortion and misinterpretation of African music that I heard in Hollywood movies."

Discovered at a party in Greenwich Village by Radio City Music Hall choral director, Ralph Hubbard, Olatunji made his professional debut soon afterwards at the Music Hall in September, 1958. Although he is well on the way toward a prolific musical career and has made successful appearances on various television shows, Olatunji remains, by his own choice, a student. Currently he is a candidate for a Ph.D. in public administration at New York University.

Thus far, Olatunji considers his two Columbia recordings to be his most gratifying accomplishments. He says, "The two albums, 'Drums of Passion' and 'Afro-Percussion,' have generated a lot of interest among musicians, who are getting a fuller appreciation of complex African rhythms. Also, I hope the records can be valuable as source and reference material. But probably most important, the acceptance of the records by the public helps to justify my contention -- that rhythm is Africa's contribution to that phenomenon which is jazz. And in 'Afro-Percussion' I have attempted to merge the two idioms, authentic African and modern jazz."

Work Relates Education To Military Service

Everything the student needs to know about military service -- and how to make the most as well as the best of it -- is set forth in a complete and authoritative book published today.

THE STUDENT'S GUIDE TO MILITARY SERVICE by Michael Harwood (Channel Press, Manhasset, N.Y.; hardcover $5.95, paperback $2.95) brings together for the first time detailed information on the hundreds of alternatives open to draft-age students, in addition to answering such questions as:

How can a student continue his education while in service?

How will the government help him to obtain a degree or specialized or professional education?

How can he decide whether deferment or present service is the wiser choice?

Facts that previously could be obtained only by consulting scores of references, many of them not generally available, are brought together for easy and quick comparison. Sample contents from some of the 17 chapters include:

The Selective Service System -- the law and how the system works; classification and deferment; arguments for deferment; how to appeal.

Hundreds of Choices -- descriptions of the seven services and programs within each.

Regular Enlistment -- twelve different programs; pay and promotion; subsistence and quarters allowances; living conditions; dependents.

Guaranteed Training or Assignment -- enlistment options; specific jobs; opportunities to travel abroad or learn a skill; opportunities for musicians.

The Draftee -- limits on his training; programs for draftees only.

Reserves and National Guard -- seventeen programs; new developments.

Officer Programs -- qualifications; ROTC and expected changes; Officer Candidate Schools and courses.

Other chapters cover Pilot Training; Clergy; Physicians, Dentists and Allied Specialists, and The Public Health Service and Coast and Geodetic Survey.

A special chapter on education describes government-paid college education and college completion programs; correspondence instruction; tuition assistance, and early discharge to return to school.

Graduate Student Aids Men's Dean With Housing

Bob Birney, graduate student, serves as advisor to off campus housing and IFC. (Credit: S.P.S.)

Robert Birney is a young man with a split personality and he is keeping each half very busy.

Bob is a graduate student at the University of Vermont, working toward a Master of Public Administration degree in the department of political science. Away from the classroom, he is an assistant to Roland Patzer, Dean of Men. In his second capacity, Birney is in charge of off-campus housing and works with fraternities.

Commenting on housing, Birney says that the University expects to have a continued need for some time to come for off-campus housing for undergraduate senior men.

Anyone wishing to house students may contact the Dean of Men's office and ask to be placed on the approved housing list which the Dean's office maintains. "To be approved, an apartment or house must meet the minimum code of housing as determined by the city," says Birney. "The code is primarily designed to protect the welfare and safety of the individual. In addition, we want to provide the best environment possible for our students."

The dean's office has a list of approved housing which seniors, married students, medical students, and faculty and staff may make use of when seeking living quarters.

"Without the help of landlords, we could not provide education for many of our students. Landlords have provided an important service and some day we hope to be able to help them," adds Birney.

In working with fraternities, Birney helps with rushing problems, pledge training, and assists Dean Patzer in advising and counselling.

Birney is a graduate of Kent State University, having received a B.S. in journalism in 1962. While at Kent, he was a member of Blue Key, a scholastic leadership fraternity; was president of the Interfraternity Council; was vice president of the student council; was a founder and charter member of the Kent State chapter of Phi Gamma Delta fraternity, and was named outstanding senior.

AT PRATT & WHITNEY AIRCRAFT...

YOUR EYES CAN BE ON THE STARS BUT YOUR FEET MUST BE ON THE GROUND

The glamour and excitement of space age programs often obscure a fundamental fact. It is simply that farsightedness must be coupled with sound, practical, down-to-earth engineering if goals are to be attained. This is the philosophy upon which Pratt & Whitney Aircraft's position as a world leader in flight propulsion systems has been built.

Almost four decades of solid engineering achievement at Pratt & Whitney Aircraft can be credited to management's conviction that basic and applied research is essential to healthy progress. In addition to concentrated research and development efforts on advanced gas turbine and rocket engines, new and exciting effects are being explored in every field of aerospace, marine and industrial power application.

The challenge of the future is indicated by current programs. Presently Pratt & Whitney Aircraft is exploring the areas of technical knowledge in magnetohydrodynamics . . . thermionic and thermoelectric conversions . . . hypersonic propulsion . . . fuel cells and nuclear power.

If you have interests in common with us, if you look to the future but desire to take a down-to-earth approach to get there, investigate career opportunities at Pratt & Whitney Aircraft.

To help move tomorrow closer to today, we continually seek ambitious young engineers and scientists. Your degree? It can be a B.S., M.S. or Ph.D. in: MECHANICAL • AERONAUTICAL • ELECTRICAL • CHEMICAL and NUCLEAR ENGINEERING • PHYSICS • CHEMISTRY • METALLURGY • CERAMICS • MATHEMATICS • ENGINEERING SCIENCE or APPLIED MECHANICS. The field still broadens. The challenge grows greater. And a future of recognition and advancement may be here for you.

For further information regarding an engineering career at Pratt & Whitney Aircraft, consult your college placement officer or write to Mr. William L. Stoner, Engineering Department, Pratt & Whitney Aircraft, East Hartford 8, Connecticut.

Former UVM Army Officer Donates Books To Library

A retired Army officer, who taught military science at the University of Vermont during the 1930s, has made a gift of several hundred volumes to the University library.

Col. Elbridge Colby of Washington, D.C. has given the University books that, for the most part, deal with modern military history. The gift also includes memoirs and biographical material of many important figures of World War II.

Col. Colby's interest in the University apparently stems from the time he taught at UVM. A Civil War "buff", Colby was at Vermont from 1933 to 1938 and during that time became especially interested in the University's fine Civil War collection, particularly the Gen. Rush C. Hawkins collection. Hawkins, a native of Pomfret, left nearly 3,000 titles to UVM, this representing the "heart" of his Civil War collection.

In 1943, Colby made his first gift of books to the University and just recently he made another gift which Ben Bowman, director of library, calls "a significant contribution for our fine collection of military history and science."

A native of New York City, Colby was graduated magna cum laude from Columbia College. He received his Master of Arts and Doctor of Philosophy from Columbia University. His career has included research writing, teaching, journalism, and military service. During World War II, Col. Colby served on the First Army staff in the European Theatre.

He spends his summer months in Vermont and this past summer he spent a considerable amount of time appraising the Hawkins and Gen. Oliver Howard Civil War collections now housed in the Bailey Library. Colby has been anxious that UVM students be made aware of the University's outstanding Civil War collection and he was delighted to discover that one graduate student is working on a Master's in history.

A war fought 100 years ago continues to hold a special part in the lives of many Americans, including a "Vermonters by adoption."

Debaters Triumph In Brandeis U. Tournament

The Lawrence Debate Club of the University of Vermont entered two teams in last weekend's First Annual Brandeis University Debate Tournament at Waltham, Mass. Nineteen schools from all over the United States were represented at this high powered Debate Tourney. Three schools, including the University of Vermont entered, two teams bringing the total number of competing units to twenty-two.

Bill Germain and Gil Tornabene, serving as one Catamount unit, and Elaine Zak and Mike Cronin, serving as another, carried UVM through six rounds of grueling competition into the tournament finals. In these preliminary rounds Germain and Tornabene defeated the University of Maine, Boston College, Pittsburgh University, Miami University (Fla.), and Army while losing only to Georgetown University.

Zak and Cronin held victories over Ohio University, St. Peter's College, and Ohio State University while dropping decisions to Harvard, Brandeis, and Fordham.

The quarter-finals found both Vermont teams still in contention.

Bill Germain and Gil Tornabene defeated St. Anselm's College while Elaine Zak and Mike Cronin lost a squeaker to Georgetown University, two votes to one.

The Catamounts were still in the fights, with Bill and Gil advancing to the semi-final round against Dartmouth. Georgetown met Holy Cross in the other semi-final round. When the dust had settled, Vermont by nature of its victory over Dartmouth and Georgetown by its victory over Holy Cross emerged as the Brandeis Debate Tournament finalists.

In a room filled with representatives from each of the other twenty teams in the tourney, Vermont met Georgetown in a final clash. The debate was so close that the five judges split their decision, with three voting for Georgetown and two dissenting in favor of UVM. Professor Robert B. Huber, Chairman of the Speech Department was the coach on the trip.

This weekend the Catamount "growlers" send a varsity unit of four to the Rosemont College Tournament in Philadelphia, and a kitten unit to the Hamilton College Novice Tourney.

MEMBERS OF JUNIOR HONORARIES CULMINATE WORK ON HOMECOMING

Above are the junior honoraries who have made it possible for UVM to have Homecoming, 1962. To the left are some of the girls in Staff and Sandal and to the right, Key and Serpent. (Credit: Ojanen, S.P.S.)

Homecoming Committee, made up of the members of the Junior Honoraries, "Key and Serpent" and "Staff and Sandal", has been working since May to prepare for UVM's annual Homecoming Weekend, held this year November 2-4.

Under the co-chairmanship of Fred Weisberg and Jean Lawson, the committees include Publicity, William Haugen, Janice Cole, Susan Lurdvall; Treasurer, Larry Bender; Posters, Nancy Glenn, Kathy Bloom; Tickets, Ronald Oliver, Bernadette Steen; "Peerade", David Strassburg, Kathy Uttendorfer, Regina Cichy, and Nancy Parr.

Also, Moms and Pops, Gary Karch, Brenda French; King and Queen, Harry Dickerson, Susan Griesenbeck; Halftime, William Perlon, Meredith Hoyd; Ball, David Maichuk, Suzanne Chagnon, Helen Lott, Rosemary Leetner, and Kathy Allenby.

The weekend begins with the freshman football game Friday afternoon. Providing entertainment for the Homecoming Ball at Memorial Auditorium, Friday evening, will be the "Shirelles," a vocal group, and Bert Orr and his instrumental combo.

Saturday morning's events include the early-morning registration of parents and alumni at the Waterman building, the later judging of the sorority poster contest on the steps of the town hall. Saturday afternoon begins with the annual "peerade" of floats at noon. At one-thirty the UVM Catamounts meet the University of Massachusetts at Centennial Field. During half-time, Dr. Torch will present the Homecoming King and Queen, and will present awards for the best poster, the best float, the parent who has the most children at UVM, and the alumnus who has traveled farthest to be at Homecoming. Following the football game are several open houses for the parents and alumni. Saturday evening "Vermont Varieties" will be presented, followed by a freshman-sponsored dance.

1962's Homecoming Weekend officially ends with the president's Sunday morning breakfast for students, parents, and alumni. According to Fred Weisberg, the emphasis of Homecoming will this year be placed on student participation. "The importance of Homecoming has been waning and for the sake of tradition and student activity it should be strengthened. The only way this can be done is with good student support."

SNA, Gold Key Hold Blood Drive

by Sandy Flaster

On Monday, November 19, the Student Nurses Association and Gold Key Society will sponsor a blood drive. This is the first drive co-sponsored by these two organizations. With University support the groups are hoping that 250 pints will be filled. As in previous years, the quota should be achieved.

This past Monday and Tuesday, there was a booth in lower Waterman for the express purpose of handing out pledge cards and permission slips to students under 21. These slips have also been handed out in the dorms, fraternities, and sororities. Any student who wishes to give blood and who did not receive a slip, contact Jim Foley at 4-9768 or Carl Frattini at 4-4511 ext. 580. These slips must be sent home and returned with parental approval in order to give blood.

The drawing will be conducted by the American Red Cross. Under their Volunteer Program, more than 400 drawings are held each year in Vermont and New Hampshire. The blood collected is distributed to hospitals and also kept for emergency purposes. A little known fact is that every student of UVM and any resident of the State of Vermont may receive free blood no matter where he needs it in the United States or Canada. For this reason a large turnout is hoped for on November 19th. The Red Cross needs thousands of gallons of blood to carry on such an extensive blood plan each year. It is true that there has been a quota of 250 pints designated. With maximum support from students and faculty this figure should easily be surpassed.

"Stone walls do not a prison make, nor iron bars a cage."

To Althea from Prison - Richard Lovelace

Beautiful words written by a famous poet. It is, however, unfortunate, that in the case of a college student these words do not hold true. Four years is a long time to spend at a university, and antiseptic "cells" nor drab classrooms are conducive to either study or recreation.

The student, out of necessity, lives in a microcosm. Perhaps it is with this thought in mind that expansion was initiated at UVM. A physical plant is important. It need not be shiny and new, but it must be adequate. Facilities must be supplied before the student can embark on any sort of intellectual or recreational stint. Certainly the expenditure is necessary, not only to improve, but also in anticipation of an increase in enrollment.

It is, therefore, not too difficult to justify the enormous sums now being spent to demolish the "four walls" and replace them with proper and substantial facilities, and perhaps divert the student's attention from the all-too-plentiful "iron bars" to a profitable expenditure of time within these "confines."

It is with the future in mind that the CYNIC dedicates this issue to the individual most responsible for UVM's vast strides and myriad accomplishments within the past five years: President John T. Fey.

The building program is due, in large part, to the liberal and progressive attitudes maintained by the by the faculty and administration. It is also due in part to beneficial state and national legislation enabling UVM to take plans off the drawing board and make them a reality.

There must be a motivating force, an initial push from someplace and somewhere, to start things moving on their way. This responsibility rests with President Fey. It is a certainty that he expects no pats on the back for the political maneuvering and organizing that he has done. It is a sure bet that he expects no accolades for the vitality and energy which he has managed to inject into the lethargic system of UVM.

Homecoming is probably the most appropriate time to reflect upon the vast progress made within recent years, and to accord credit to all concerned.

One ponders just how good the "good old days" were after pausing for a look around campus. True, the "good old days" cannot be brought back, but then, who really wants them back. Homecoming is the time for both revelry and reflection, but a brief moment of the weekend should be devoted to a hasty preview of things to come. Certainly the expansion is not going to stop at the level of the physical plant, and it is not going to stop with the acquisition of new professors.

Progress is not a sometimes thing. It is a necessary and inevitable venture undertaken by dedicated and judicious individuals whose sole interest is the betterment of the individual and this individual's increased attainment of knowledge.

To President John T. Fey go the first laurels in this never-ending race into the future.

Letters To The Editor

Politics On Campus ?

To the Editor:

Is it true that representatives to the student association are elected from both the fraternities and the Dorms? And is it also true that men elected from the dorms can be members of one of the fraternities already represented in that body?

I know that this university is varied in its scope of activities and harbors many wonderful extracurricular laboratories in every day living, but I did not know that we had our own small-scale potential for power politics and misrepresentation in the student government. And all this time I thought that we were too idealistic up here.

It makes me feel good to hear that people are also being taught to observe the use of opportunity and the minor (?) results of misrepresentation.

Grad Student Expresses Pleasure

To the CYNIC:

My compliments on "Communism at UVM."

I recall that even at Harvard College in the introductory history and philosophy courses communism was given only token treatment. It seemed to me, at the time, that the section men were mostly scared of the topic, and the administration was worried more about public and alumnus relations than our education in this matter.

DISCUSSION PROGRAM

The UVM Discussion Program is preparing to open its 1962-1963 season this coming week. Last year 21 students participated in 21 discussion programs serving 17 Vermont communities and one New York community. In the course of these programs, the discussants reached a total audience of 2,500 persons, including Rotary Clubs, Church groups, P.T.A.'s, high school assemblies, League of Women Voters, Optimist's Clubs, Women's Clubs and Granges.

The Discussion Program is designed to serve the participating University students by giving them an opportunity to express their views on important problems of the day before adult audiences throughout the State of Vermont and neighboring communities.

The program is open to all interested students regardless of prior experience in public speaking. This season the discussion topics include: (1) How can the United States Best Meet the Challenge of Communism in the Western Hemisphere? (2) What are the Advantages and Disadvantages of Abolishing Capital Punishment in the State of Vermont?

Students desirous of expressing their beliefs on one or both of the above mentioned topics should contact Dr. Norman T. London in Pomeroy Hall any afternoon between 4:00 - 6:00 P.M. The Discussion Program will be offered to the public from October 1962 to May 1963 except for Thanksgiving, Christmas, Intersemester, and Spring recesses. Exam periods are also excluded. Programs are usually presented in the evening with students returning to campus that same night.

THINKING OUT LOUD

by Kim Boriskin

TRADITIONS

Every institution has its traditions, and UVM is certainly no different. This present weekend of festivities, Homecoming, is one of them, and there are many others, of course. There is nothing wrong with these traditions, and I'm not going to attempt to find things wrong with them. But there are other traditions that are not so good, and one instance will be discussed here.

UVM students have a way of starting things and then letting them drop unfinished. It has been going on for so long, and has happened so often, that it seems to have turned into a tradition. Whenever someone gets fed up with compulsory ROTC he starts to make a fuss. But then you hear no more; the thing is, as far as anyone cares, dead and gone. There was a perfect instance of this last semester, when a group of frosh marched on Waterman cafeteria singing and carrying posters. But that was it; just one week later, nobody even knew it had happened.

Another example, and possibly a more important one, is a civil rights organization that formed on campus last spring. It was affiliated, in some way, with a larger and very much more active and enduring group called the Northern Student Movement. The UVM group got a large write-up in the CYNIC one issue, and its notices, such as they were, got printed from time to time. This organization even had a table in lower Waterman where they sold buttons, tried to recruit members, and did other such prosaic things. This was a going concern, or so it appeared at the time.

Now, however, it looks like the organization has emulated its numerous predecessors and bitten the dust. In a way, I'm not surprised. Even though they were trying to proselytize the campus, they were still a rather oddly operating organization. They asked for members, but when one volunteered without being propagandized by them first, they didn't want him. It happened in at least three cases I know of; one case was mine.

I met with one of their representatives, and was told that there would soon be a general meeting, and that I would be informed of its time and place. When I didn't hear anything in a week, I called the person I had spoken to and asked what had happened. I got a load of excuses, but no answer, other than that I would be called. That was all I ever heard. I later gave a piece of information to the president of the group, since I had no use for it, whereas someone in the group might have had. I also wrote him a letter asking just what was going on, but got no answer. This year I have tried to contact him any number of times, if only to find out why the group was disbanded or dropped, or whatever. He had been making himself mighty scarce. I begin to wonder if he might not actually be a fictitious character.

In any event, just another example of how UVM keeps going. If anyone finds an abandoned civil rights group lying around somewhere, I would be very grateful for any information I could have concerning the corpse.

While I'm on the subject, I notice that the theme of this last poster contest was "Tradition Looks Forward," which happens to be the name of an official biography of UVM from 1791 to 1904. This title, I submit, just about sums up what is wrong with this university: it speaks nonsense.

I should like to know how Tradition can look forward. A single tradition might well look to the future (such as the tradition of being a forward-looker), but the body of Tradition makes the idea simple nonsense. Tradition is simply the way things have been done, or how people think they've been done, for a hundred, or a thousand, or even ten thousand years. What Tradition is is the past, which generally bears no relation to the present or the future. History may present lessons for the future, but the stagnant and dead past is just that: stagnant and dead. Tradition, almost by its very definition, looks only backward, not forward.

UVM may be moving forward at an almost dizzying pace, but until it stops publishing biographies called Tradition Looks Forward, and having poster contests with that as a theme, without even batting an eyelash -- much less realizing the complete absurdity and contradiction -- UVM will never make a heck of a lot of progress. It is possible to expand without going anywhere, and that, at the moment, is just what the University of Vermont appears to be doing, and set on continuing to do.

In this, the twentieth century, there are two powerful socialist republics which together dominate the destiny, and certainly the mere existence, of every country, government, and individual on the face of this sphere. The first makes no attempt to hide its identity as a socialist power. Indeed, one could not be more aware of its foreboding intentions for the future of the free man. The other, however, is more subtle. Its acquisition of socialist principles and ideals is more catlike, as her citizens do not readily submit to such a form of government that would at least impair, if not completely eliminate, the freedoms which constitute a democracy.

This weeks studentes is by David Hornberger, who comes from Montpelier, Vermont. David is a Freshman in the College of Agriculture in the forestry unit. Some of his other interests are playing the guitar and writing.
(Credit: M. Slater, S.P.S.)

The countries of which I speak, as by now you may have already discerned, are the U.S.S.R., or the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, and the U.(S.)S.A., or the United (Socialist) States of America. Don't be alarmed at the name which I have thoughtfully dubbed this great faltering country. You, as an American, will, no doubt, become all too familiar with its ominous meaning within the not too distant future.

Not two hundred years since the signing of the Declaration of Independence and the formation of this democracy, socialism has taken root in the foundation of our government, and as a cancerous growth is spreading unchecked into the superstructure of that body, and into the lives of every American citizen.

Two major socialist reforms instituted by the government, though intensely controversial at the time of their inauguration, are as readily accepted today by the American peoples as automobiles, super sonic jets, and manned orbital flights.

The first and most drastic of these reforms is the Graduated Income Tax. Do not misconstrue my position on the income tax, for I am of the firm conviction that it should be as much a part of us as is the American flag. However, I challenge the democratic validity of a tax, which, by its graduated system, plunders the monetary accumulation of an individual who, by his own resourcefulness, determination, relentless drive, and superior intelligence, has been successful in procuring the highest material gains; while, adversely, merely scratches at the income of an individual whose social mediocrity, listless, undesiring characteristics, or limited intelligence have not greatly profited him materially.

This writer is ardently opposed to any tax, such as the present income tax, which seeks to distribute the national currency more equally among its citizens. I contend that the percentage deducted from each citizen's annual income shall be uniform regardless of the income bracket; that the individual who earns $6,000.00 yearly will contribute the same percentage of his income as the individual who earns $6,000,000.00 yearly. Obviously, 12% of $6,000,000.00 is considerably more than 12% of $6,000.00; thus, the greater the income, the greater the tax deduction. But again I emphasize: the deduction percentage must be uniform for all income brackets. This is the only way that an income tax can be democratically acceptable in a capitalistic nation. Any form of income taxation which seeks to increase the deduction percentage with every proportionately higher income bracket is purely socialistic in design. I say to the members of the United States government, and to all Americans who favor the Graduated Income Tax: if you haven't got what it takes to make a million, then, by damned, don't penalize the man who does.

Social Security represents a second major socialist ideal adopted by the government. In essence, this mandate requires the compulsory deduction of a certain percentage from every citizen's yearly earnings to be withheld as monetary security for retirement. In instituting social security, the government must have senselessly assumed that the governed were not capable of saving sufficient funds for retirement. Granted, some would not have enough foresight to realize the necessity of providing for the future, when age prohibits the maintenance of a vocation. But why should a mandatory social security tax be maintained for the benefit of a few ignorant people?

I have absolutely no objection to the 12% Federal Tax being deducted from my paycheck, for I realize that as an American, I must contribute to the defense of this country and all the democratic freedoms therein; but nothing offends me more than that 3% deduction for social security. The government is taking two or three bucks out of each week's paycheck and putting it in a "piggy bank" so I won't starve when I retire or am too old to work. Very gracious of them, I'm sure; but I damn their unwarranted consideration!! I am the only authority of my personal finances, and I alone should say whether or not I'm going to set that two or three dollars aside for the future. The government has no more right to withhold a percentage of your paycheck for retirement security than does your local savings bank.

More recently, the government has conceived a third and highly controversial socialist reform which would appear to be well on the road toward becoming law. The reform to which I refer is, of course, Socialized Medicine. The Kennedy administration and the American Medical Association have recently been at each other's throats, hotly disputing certain technicalities concerning the proposed bill. Primarily, the two afore mentioned parties have been debating whether or not the funds necessary for socialized medicine should be provided by an increase in the social security tax. Any way you look at this utterly preposterous bill, it is still socialized medicine; and anyone advocating its adoption should be shipped over to Great Britain where Her Majesty's subjects are already suffering from long delays on major and minor surgical operations, loss of mutual understanding and sincerity between doctor and patient, and the helpless feeling of being "cranked off" in a ponderous medical machine.

Since the turn of the century, our government has relentlessly strived to provide substantial increases in personal benefits for her citizens. She is like the doting mother who spoils her children by incessantly heaping gifts upon them; by being overly protective; and

With the seriousness of the recent world developments, it seems only proper to dedicate a greater share of this week's column to the lighter aspects of college life. From the Visto (Central State College, Edmond, Oklahoma) of October 2, came the following "human interest" story...

"Freshmen at Central State aren't any different from freshmen at any other school. A freshman at Oklahoma University went to pick up his date at the dormitory. He didn't know that he was supposed to stop at the desk and have the girl buzzed down. So he proceeded to walk up to the fourth floor and knock on her door." Needless to say, the implications are many!

From the same issue of the Visto, the following story also came: "Government teachers have a big job on their hands this year. They must teach freshmen something about politics. An upperclassman was having coffee with a freshman girl the other day and he asked her what she had heard about the Right Wing Party. She replied, 'I haven't. When is it?' As a follow-up to last week's extensive coverage of The White House vs. The Ole Miss Rebels, the Erskine Mirror (Erskine College, Due West, South Carolina) covered the play-by-play of this big league "game".

"... It seems that the White House boys brought their single wing power offense down to Ole Miss for a game. The visitors were led by All-American Jack Kennedy at tailback and Robert Kennedy at blocking back. In front was the great White House line, nicknamed The Marshalls.

"The game was a test of the White House offense against the Mississippi defense. After the Rebs held the visitors (some prefer intruders) back a couple of times, the White House team put up a sustained drive, wearing down the defense by calling in their shock troops, better known as the Paratroopers.

"But folks! Wait! On a play up the middle tailback Kennedy fumbled! The officials (commonly known as the voters) refused to give a signal as to which team recovered the ball.

"We'll just have to wait until November of 1964 to find out what they decided."

No doubt during this first big week-end of the college year there are several co-eds who would like to adopt Radcliffe College's liberalized signout requirements. We have learned via The Campus (Middlebury College) that "Radcliffe juniors are now allowed to sign out until any hour! Seniors have enjoyed this privilege for several years, but until this September, all girls except seniors had to ask special permission to remain out later than 1 A.M. Sophomores may also be granted this privilege, if the system is successful." ... Anyone for transferring?

From the Yale Alumni Magazine comes the following entrant. "A group of students at Yale play the Harkness chimes four times daily. Paid 50 cents per ring, a man is barely rewarded for the long climb up the tower. But he has considerable latitude in his choice of music, often adapted to the occasion, such as playing another school's Alma Mater on football Saturdays.

"On such a day last fall, a bellringer found himself locked in the tower after his noon concert. With tickets in his pocket and his date waiting to go to the

by Robert V. Daniels

As a specialist who has been studying and teaching the subject of Communism for almost a decade and a half, I find it constantly intriguing that the public sees fit to debate periodically whether Communism ought to be educationally recognized at all.

The international events of the past few weeks have happily absolved me of the necessity of demonstrating that Communism is a major problem and that the student and the public ought to know something about it. The only problem we have in this respect is the practical one of how to go about teaching on Communism.

It is perfectly natural to wonder whether Communism can be studied objectively. Communism is a movement which aroused powerful emotions of either support or hostility. Communism represents a definite creed which directly challenges most of the political, economic, and religious beliefs prevailing in the United States. Many people assume that "Teaching Communism" means simply to preach the Communist doctrine and thus to attack the prevailing American beliefs. So insecure are they about those prevailing beliefs that they would like to suppress the whole subject of Communism rather than allow those beliefs to be called into question.

Other people -- including even some state legislatures -- have become convinced that the danger of Communist propaganda to the prevailing institutions and beliefs in America is so great that it must be answered by counter-propaganda that indoctrinates a blind hostility to Communism and an uncritical acceptance of the institutions and beliefs that now prevail (or that the counter-indoctrinators would like to have prevail). Needless to say, the counter-indoctrination approach would contribute nothing to the understanding of Communism. It would merely copy the stultifying sort of thought-control which fetters the Communist regimes themselves. It would begin to undermine the freedom of political belief and discussion which is one of the main reasons for resisting Communism in the first place.

The proper alternative is the truly objective study of Communism. Not only is this possible, but it is the only sort of study that deserves a place in any educational system. Objectivity does not mean, of course, that you leave your feelings and values behind when you begin to study. It means that you try as best you can to face the facts as they are, without distortion or suppression, whether they are pleasant or unpleasant, whether they support your preconceived notions or not. Then you can make a value judgment on the basis of the facts as they are, not as you would like them to be.

As far as the ideological appeal of Communism is concerned, objective study is the best way to neutralize it. Objective study makes clear the inconsistencies in Communist belief -- such as the revolution occurring in Russia where Marx thought it least likely -- and the contradictions between theory and practice -- such as the theory of the classless society and the practice of sharp social stratification and wage differentials in the Communist countries. Even for the person with the most radical values, the objective study of Communism will make it impossible for him to give his allegiance to the movement, because Communism doesn't really represent such values. For all concerned, objective study will reduce irrational fears and enhance the possibility of a rational and effective response to the Soviet challenge.

There is no question that the subject of Communism, objectively approached, deserves a substantial place in the college curriculum as well as in the social studies offerings in the secondary schools. Here we run into a major problem of arranging all the basic and special parts of the curriculum so that they make the most sense. "Communism" is not -- repeat not -- a "subject" in itself like language or chemistry or history. It is a particular social and historical phenomenon which can only be studied within the context of those disciplines -- the social sciences -- that deal with social and historical phenomena. There is a problem here in that Communism falls within the purview of a number of different disciplines -- history, political science, economics, sociology, and philosophy. To get a comprehensive view of the topic one has to use the background and perspective of all these fields at the same time -- in other words, to take an interdisciplinary approach. The same holds true, however, for all manner of other social phenomena, ranging from war to juvenile delinquency. All this only points up the need for greater inter-disciplinary cooperation among the social sciences as a whole.

While there is obvious need for an interdisciplinary approach to Communism, this does not justify the separate-course approach at the beginning. Before a student can be inter-disciplinary he has to know some disciplines. In particular he must have a historical background, for history provides the essential framework of specific people, places, events, and the time dimension within which the other social sciences operate. For high school students, the important thing is to get a firm historical background, which naturally should include appropriate attention to Russia and Communism; rather than take a special course on Communism that proceeds without historical perspective. The same holds true for college students, unless or until they have acquired the appropriate historical background and the conceptual tools of one or more of the social science disciplines. It should be remembered that college courses in the social sciences are not supposed to be just current events talks, but serious steps in the intellectual training of the student toward the insightful analysis and comprehension of major problems in human affairs. In short, the subject of Communism is too difficult to be presented meaningfully as college material until the student has gotten beyond the basic level.

At UVM as elsewhere there are a variety of basic courses in the social sciences which take up the subject of Communism in context and analyze it from their particular point of view. In History 12 (European Civilization from 1815 to the present) two to three weeks are directly devoted to the study of Russia, Marxism, and Commu-

Oh, sure, you've been busy, what with going to classes, doing your homework, catching night-crawlers, getting married—but can't you pause for just a moment and give thought to that dear, dedicated, lonely man in the big white house on the hill? I refer, of course, to the Prexy.

(It is interesting to note here that college presidents are always called "Prexy." Similarly, trustees are called "Trixie." Associate professors are called "Axy-Pixy." Bursars are called "Foxy-Woxy." Students are called "Algae.")

But I digress. We were speaking of the Prexy, a personage at once august and pathetic. Why pathetic? Well sir, consider how Prexy spends his days. He is busy, busy, busy. He talks to deans, he talks to professors, he talks to trustees, he talks to alumni. In fact, he talks to everybody except the one group who could lift his heart and rally his spirits. I mean, of course, the appealing, endearing, winsome group in the entire college—you, the students.

It is the Prexy's sad fate to be forever a stranger to your laughing, golden selves. He can only gaze wistfully out the window of his big white house on the hill and watch you at your games and sports and yearn with all his tormented heart to bask in your warmth. But how? It would hardly be fitting for Prexy to appear one day at the Union, clad in an old rowing blazer, and cry gaily, "Heigh-ho, chaps! Who's for sculling?"

No, friends, Prexy can't get to you. It is up to you to get to him. Call on him at home. Just drop in unannounced. He will naturally be a little shy at first, so you must put him at his ease. Shout, "Howdy-doody, sir! I have come to bring a little sunshine into your drear and blighted life!" Then yank his necktie out of his vest and scamper goatlike around him until he is laughing merrily along with you.

Then hand him a package and say, "A little gift for you, sir." "For me?" he will say, lowering his lids. "You shouldn't have."

"Yes, I should," you will say, "because this package is a carton of Marlboro Cigarettes, and whenever I think of Marlboro, I think of you."

"Why, hey?" he will say curiously.

"Because Marlboros have taste, and so do you," you will reply.

"Aw, go on," he will say, blushing furiously.

"It's true," you will say. "Moreover, Marlboro has a filter, and so do you."

"In my swimming pool, you mean," he will say.

"Yes," you will say. "Moreover, Marlboro has a soft pack, and so do you."

"My limp leather brief case, you mean," he will say.

"Yes," you will say. "Moreover, the Marlboro box has a flip-top, and so do you."

"But I don't have a flip-top," he will say.

"But you will," you will say. "Just light a Marlboro, and taste that tasty taste, and you will surely flip your top."

Well sir, you will have many a good chuckle about that; you may be sure. Then you will say, "Goodbye, sir, I will return soon again to brighten your lorn and desperate life."

"Please do," he will say. "But next time, if you can possibly manage it, try not to come at four in the morning."

Prexy and undergrad, male and female, late and soon, fair weather and foul—all times and climes and conditions are right for Marlboro, the filter cigarette with the unfiltered taste.

game, he tried in vain to break his way out. Failing, he climbed up the tower again and played one more tune - "Take Me Out to the Ball Game" - over and over. Finally a campus policeman showed up and let him out, just in time.

"Glad you got my message," said the student, pleased with his ingenious call for help.

"What message?" asked the tone-deaf policeman. "I thought the thing was stuck."

On Monday we will all be back to the old routine of studying, exams, and the soberness of the world situation. The following editorial seems to say a lot of the things that have often been thought. This editorial appeared in the October 19 edition of the Whitworthian (Whitworth College, Spokane, Washington).

"Don't bother me with talk of world events and politics. I am too busy concentrating on my education. I came to college to study and get a degree and that is what I must do. I don't have time to read the newspapers; I must study for a journalism test."

"Politics can wait until I get out of school. After all, with my political science major I should be able to do something constructive then. I came to Whitworth to escape this rat race on the outside and dedicate myself to study so that I will be able to live when I graduate."

"Don't tell me what's going on in the South and don't discuss the idea of non-violence because that is too far removed from me. When I graduate I will take an interest in those affairs."

"... I can't afford the time to get into discussions with dorm members. This is my education and, although I must be selfish now, I will change when I graduate. These four years are a time of preparation."

"I cannot be bothered with the commandment to love my neighbor because it requires too much effort." This was not meant to apply to college students. "We are a special lot of people - secluded and sheltered from the world and all its troubles. We and close ourselves off in a room and prepare for the years ahead."

"Don't bother me with life - I haven't time to live."

On that provocative note, this reporter rests, until next week when we shall once again, Dateline: Colleges.

Homecoming Welcome

By President Fey

John T. Fey, President of the University of Vermont.

Welcoming alumni and parents at Homecoming is one of those pure pleasures of the University's academic year.

If the privilege cannot always be personal, it is always genuine, and the spirit manages to pervade the campus with that special enthusiasm and vitality that go hand in hand with the customary briskness of Vermont's autumnal season.

If homecoming is, for the University, a chance to show off some of its more visible signs of growth, it should also be a time when it is pointed out that much of the sound and vigorous growth of the University lies beneath the surface.

Alumni returning after very many years may recognize something of this in terms of the increased ranks of the University's faculty, or in terms of new course offerings listed in the catalogue, or in a classroom, laboratory or office visit to a faculty or staff member with whom they enjoyed special friendship as students.

For parents, the process is and should be even more personal, for the growth they seek to measure is very often the growth or change which benefits the son or daughter who has gone out from the home to embark upon the process of college education.

Assuredly, the growth of each individual student at Vermont is, and cannot help but be, a reflection of the quality and character of the University, but parents may also be assured that the development of the individual as a result of his or her college experience is growth which first is built upon the basic values the student brings with him to college.

Thus, in its essence, the growth of the University is truly personal. The success most truly solicited and enjoyed by any university is the individual success of its students which, in turn, is a blending of the potential the student brings with him and the contribution to his individual development which is made by his teachers and by the many other individuals who share with him the experience of education at The University of Vermont.

But Homecoming is not distinguished in memory or publicity as a time for prolonged discussion of serious tones. Therefore, it is with great pleasure that I welcome and extend to you every good wish for a pleasant Homecoming.

UVM "DREAMS OF THE FUTURE" REALIZED

by President John T. Fey
Reprinted from UVM Prospectus

Seven years ago the University announced bold and challenging plans for development.

The greatly-increased enrollments which followed the end of WW II saw urgent new demands placed upon the University's physical plant. Imagine, as many of you can from personal experience, the sudden jump from 1300 students before the war of 3300 immediately after it, with virtually no increase in classroom or residence hall facilities to accommodate the many qualified young men and women who sought and were given an opportunity for college education at Vermont.

To be sure, we managed to acquire and press into service a noble old lady of the war, a wooden frame naval hospital which we installed as East Hall and called "temporary." Only now does she bow before new construction.

In charting a plan to meet the immediate needs created by post-war growth, the University envisioned a "long-range development program" (you may remember the rather handsome brown development brochure) spanning ten, possibly fifteen, years in which the University announced it would seek to find the funds to make possible three new residence halls for women, a new classroom building, the first phase of a new medical building program, a new library and, finally, a new gymnasium.

Counted as dreams of the future were a new engineering building, a building for the fine arts, additional residence halls for men and women, additional classrooms. That bold new development plan announced seven years ago is now complete, and a number of the "dreams of the future" are also completed.

In short, the University and those who believe in its goals and ambitions have completed in seven years a physical plant development program which has required nearly $15,000,000 in funds. Moreover ten to fifteen years were plotted for the fulfillment of the program.

The University's early success cannot be attributed solely or even primarily to the gifts of alumni and friends. But a significant part of it is their work, and their contribution greatly influenced each of the other sources which has helped to make possible the continued growth of an institution which has always had to bring great ingenuity to the task of finding operating and building funds to serve the needs of a vigorous and imaginative program.

Let me now outline briefly what has been accomplished in these past seven years, and how it was made possible. Then I shall outline the goals which have been charted for accomplishment in the remaining years of this decade.

The first step outlined in UVM's post-war building program was not too difficult to accomplish for, while every college and university would be delighted if it could build new residence halls from outright gifts, most must content themselves with borrowing money which students repay through rents for use of the halls. This was the case with Mason, Simpson and Hamilton Halls, completed in 1957 at a cost of $1,800,000, providing fine new housing for 400 women students with dining facilities for 600. But the University was aided in obtaining a favorable rate of interest by the willingness of the State of Vermont, through the 1955 Legislature, to guarantee the residence halls bond issue.

At the same time, the University turned to Alumni and friends for the funds needed for a new classroom facility and, in 1957, Lafayette Hall was completed, with the accompanying thorough renovation of historic Old Mill at a cost of $600,000.

During the same period, the University's 1500 medical alumni were approached for help with the first phase of a major medical building program. Their response in matching a federal grant made possible completion of this first phase unit in 1959 at a cost of $1,200,000.

More than that, they gave in the first year of a three-year pledge period, more total dollars than the alumni of any other U.S. medical education institution. So impressive was this response that it attracted the interest of private philanthropy which has now provided funds to match a second federal grant to make possible completion of the $1,500,000 second phase unit.

One of the most pressing of the University's bricks and mortar needs was accomplished last fall with dedication of the Bailey Memorial Library. This fine new building was made possible when the State, through the interest of then Governor Stafford and the members of the 1959 Legislature, approved a $2,100,000 bond issue to permit early start of construction. Major share of the bond issue will be repaid to the State by students through an annual $30 library fee.

Three new residence halls for men - named to honor the distinguished names of Austin, Marsh and Tupper - and another new residence hall for women, named to honor former Dean Marian Patterson, have been dedicated, made possible by a federal loan of $2,370,000 to be repaid by the students who will live in them.

And a most important dream, that of a new engineering building, is now taking concrete shape, rising as the old and "temporary" East Hall gives way. The engineering building is doubly significant to Vermont's future development plans, for it not only provides badly-needed new facilities for engineering, but frees important space which can be counted for use of other programs expanding to meet the continued enrollment increases which may be expected in the years immediately ahead.

The engineering building marks a special step in University development also because the $1,895,000 structure will be the first UVM building to be made possible solely by State funds since completion in 1950 of Hills Agricultural Science Hall, the Terrill Home Economics Building, and the Dairy Science Building. Prior to that the record goes back to 1904 when the State gave funds for its first UVM building, Morrill Hall.

Two other buildings not charted in that first post World War Two development plan have also been accomplished: the Blundell Home Management Laboratory, and the Blasburg Horticultural Field Laboratory.

Counting what was planned and what was only dreamed, this seven-year accomplishment has added more than $15,000,000 to the value of the University's total physical plant - a considerable, a worthy and a proud accomplishment.

The future will ask an equally worthy challenge, and I believe the pattern of support which has made possible past progress offers an invitation to success in the remaining years of the 1960's.

The University's enrollment has continued to advance following World War II. Currently about 3700, it will grow in the years ahead to 4,000 or more. It is expected that most of this increase will be accounted for by the increasing number of qualified Vermonters who may be expected to turn to their state university as enrollment pressures meet their peak in 1964, 1965 and 1966. Yet, for those Vermont alumni and friends from outside Vermont's borders, it should be pointed out that the University has traditionally provided an opportunity for college education for substantial numbers of non residents, and will continue to do so.

To meet the needs of its students and to serve its responsibilities as one of the nation's oldest institutions of higher learning, the University of Vermont must continue to develop academically and in those administrative and physical structures which support the teaching programs of a modern university.

The University already enjoys one of the nation's fine collegiate artists series, the gift of an alumni family. Together with a growing quantity and quality of activity in the arts, the George Bishop Lane Artists Series gives to University and community the kind of rich cultural opportunities which make the absence of adequate academic facilities for the creative and performing arts especially frustrating.

Perhaps the largest single development challenge facing the University in the 1960's will be the task presented by the need to find the funds for completion of the third and final phase of the major medical building program begun in 1955. The University's Board of Trustees has already authorized application for federal funds amounting to $5,000,000 for this major third phase unit, and the Board has also authorized a fund campaign which will seek to raise from $2 to $3 millions from medical alumni and private philanthropy.

The Board of Trustees has also authorized application for federal loan funds for construction of two additional residence halls and a new dining hall for women, and it is hoped that these new units can be ready in September of 1964 to help meet the peak enrollment pressures expected then and in 1965.

On another front, the University will turn to the State of Vermont, through the 1963 Legislature, to match federal funds which it is hoped will be available for construction of a Vermont Educational Television Network to serve all the educational interests of Vermont. Cost of constructing the Vermont network is estimated at $1,500,000. A comprehensive study of the program was made possible by a Ford Foundation grant to UVM.

These are the plans of the University's second post World War Two development program. As was the case for the first program, there are dreams which stretch beyond. There are yet needs for new facilities in the life and physical sciences, needs for additional classroom facilities, needs for additional residence hall facilities for men and women.

New buildings require dramatically large sums, and the University will find them for future needs as it has found them to meet the

Billings Library Ready As Student Center Soon

Emil R. Spees

Director, Student Activities of the Billings Center

With the completion of Billings Center later this year the many campus student organizations will be brought under one roof. The new facilities available will permit them to do a better job of providing out-of-class experiences in keeping with the educational goals of the University.

The interior of Billings will look and sound a great deal different to the returning alumnus than it did when he knew it as Billings Library. However, he will find that Billings is still Billings - her interior will have been adapted without any loss of its warmth and beauty dating from its conception of Richardson. In fact, many of the Richardsonian features lost during the period when Billings was an over-crowded library will have been regained by careful selection of period furnishings and colors. The restoration of such features as the huge fireplaces will permit her to be the cheerful, warm and friendly campus center of yester-year.

As in the past, students will come to Billings to learn, to meet other students, to talk with faculty, to be introduced to new areas of knowledge, to be intellectually awakened, and to enjoy themselves. The means by which students accomplish these goals will be quite different in Billings Center than it was in Billings Library but, as always, Billings' first role is that of an educational facility.

The building lends itself well to three major types of campus space needs. The first is that of general lounge areas which can also be used for large active events. The second is that of office and conference rooms for student groups. The third is that of individual reading-study areas and small groups discussion rooms.

The general lounge, formerly "the stacks", will provide a place for individual lounging, for cards, chess and checkers, for television, and will have four music booths equipped with the latest hi-fidelity turn tables. In the evenings, this lounge can be used for large meetings, movies, skits, dancing and a variety of other activities which take a great deal of room.

The balcony around the lounge has been divided into offices for the major campus representative councils - Student Association, Women's Student Government Association, Panhellenic, Interfraternity Council and Men's Residence Hall Council. On this floor, there will also be a file room for the smaller student groups' records. An office will be provided for these groups to use jointly. There will be a conference room at the north end of the balcony and two additional conference rooms in the basements. These conference rooms will use the original Billings Library tables.

The basement will also house the offices of The CYNIC, The Ariel, The Student Photography Staff, "Kake Walk", and the snack bar. Although all the items in the snack bar will be new, the decorative scheme is within keeping with the rest of the building.

The Marsh Room will retain much of its formality. With its huge fireplace, high-paneled walls and beamed ceilings, it becomes the perfect place to entertain visiting campus lecturers, to give afternoon teas and evening coffees, to have chamber music programs or maybe during a busy day to just escape to for moments of quiet.

Another quiet area will be the apse. This circular room has changed only in its furnishings. The high ceiling, balcony, and reference alcoves have remained. The reference alcoves will become study alcoves - 2 desks, with individual lighting have been built into each. The Richardson chairs, long a distinctive part of Billings, will be used in these alcoves. In the center of the room will be a large circular library table with chairs for studying. There will also be individual reading chairs and a few twosome couches in this room.

There are two committees actively engaged in preparing for the opening of Billings Center. A faculty committee which knows its fabrics, colors, antiques, furniture styles and periods and is knowledgeable in the history of Billings is in charge of furniture, drapes, and rugs for the Center. Dr. Virginia Trotter, Home-Economics Department Chairman; Dr. James W. Marvin, Botany Department Chairman; and Dr. Richard Janson, Director of The Fleming Museum, began their duties on this committee in July.

The other committee has both faculty and student members. Dean Harris, Dean Patzer, Dr. Betty Boller and Dr. Donald Moser have served with this group since it was established last year. The student members are the presidents of Women's Student Government Association, Panhellenic, Interfraternity Council, Men's Residence Hall Council and a representative from Student Association. This committee is responsible for establishing a workable governing structure and some policy guidelines for The Billings Center. The Temporary Governing Board has as its major objective the drawing together of student and faculty opinions about the ideas for Billings, in order that all elements of the campus are considered. In this way the concept of Billings Center as a university center has taken root and the framework, which will permit it to retain this characteristic in its governing and programming, has begun.

Alumni representation on the Billings Center Board is being considered in order that it can truly be a university center, serving all members of the university family. It is hoped that in the future the Alumni will visit The Billings Center, not only on Alumni Days and Homecomings, but also during the regular academic year -- and often.

needs of its students since its founding in 1791.

As plans for the library took shape, plans also were unfolded for a new gymnasium-physical education facility which we dedicate this November. The University believed a substantial share of the cost of a first rate facility would have to come from alumni and friends, and a three-year fund program was organized. In the three years since its inception, over 4,000 of Vermont's 17,000 alumni have participated. Together with business, industry and other friends of the University, they have contributed nearly $800,000 of the cost of this new facility which will be valued at nearly $3,000,000.

This record of giving helped to influence the interest of the State, through the cooperation of Governor Keyser and the 1961 Legislature, in providing a $2,000,000 bond issue. Sharing a considerable part in the successful completion of the project, as in the case of new residence halls and the library, will be the students who will benefit from the new Gymnasium, for they will pay off the $2,000,000 gym bond through an annual $30 athletic fee.

Directory Ready!

One of the most widely used books at the University of Vermont is just off the press.

The publication is the 1962-63 Directory which lists all faculty-staff members and students.

The book runs from "a" to "z" for staff and students alike - the first staff listing being

Dr. John Abajian, professor of anesthesia in the College of Medicine and concluding with Mrs. Constance Zolotas, Alumni Secretary, while for students, the "a" is represented by Stephen W. Abbott, a sophomore from White River Junction and the "z" by Maureen Zwerling, a senior from New York City.

In addition, the directory lists office hours, faculty organizations, campus organizations with the student leader and faculty adviser, the presidents and advisers of fraternities and sororities, resident hall counselors and head residents, university offices, and all academic departments and chairmen.

The directory is prepared and issued by the office of the Dean of Administration while the data for students is collected and assembled as a project of Gold Key Society, men's sophomore honorary.

Mixes And Matches

A hearty welcome to all visitors to UVM's annual Homecoming Weekend. Besides our exciting football game, poster contest, float contest and whirl of parties, many other social events have filled the datebooks of sororities and fraternities. The brothers of Sigma Phi Epsilon recently held an "atmosphere" party in their new party room. Needless to say that the party was quite unique! The new brothers of Sig Ep also provided stimulating entertainment at a dessert hour with Alpha Chi -- how about sharing some of your poetry with the rest of us? To add to all this excitement, the Sigma Phi interfraternity football team remained undefeated! The "Sig Ep Seven" sewed up the title by defeating AEPi 19-0 and by defeating last years champs Kappa Sig 40-1. To top off all this enthusiasm Willie Lewis, President of Sigma Phi Epsilon, was elected President of Interfraternity Council - congratulations!

The AEPi's enjoyed the dessert hour with Kappa Sig - thank you for the guided tours, boys.

Another busy and happy week for the sorors of Gamma Phi Beta. They had the pleasure of entertaining Dr. and Mrs. Crooks, Mr. and Mrs. Aberalli, and Mr. and Mrs. Haugen at dinner - last Wednesday evening. It was a rewarding moment for everyone when the sorors presented Mrs. Haugen with a check to help aid the New School for Retarded Children. The money was raised at Gamma Phi's annual Pie Party, held for philanthropic purposes. Also Gamma Phi's Denise Plunkett, with much embarrassment, would like to retract her "very impulsive" statement concerning the "Three of four unmarried Theta Chis." That was supposed to be a secret, fellas!

During this past week Theta Chi and ADPI were engaged in two water fights with ADPI soaring victorious, of course. The ADPI-Theta Chi football game was also most exciting. It was a hard battle fought well by both sides. The ADPIs are having their Parents' Weekend in conjunction with UVM's Homecoming. Following the football game, a "Cider Sip" will be held at ADPI, after which a meeting of the Mothers' Club and a "Pops' Boudoir Tour" will take place. Both of these events will be followed by a buffet dinner in honor of the parents.

Parents' Weekend was enjoyed by the Thetas and their parents this past weekend. Needless to say the fathers did look funny playing "One finger-one thumb" - seems they were reverting to their second childhood.

PINNINGS

Congratulations to Alice Wilkins who recently became pinned to Richard Agney of ATO. Best wishes to the brothers of Sig Ep and their pinmates - Sharon Newton, '64, and Joe St. Onge, '64, June Marchegiani of Elmhearst, L.I., and John Echer, '64, Bonnie England, Newport, Vt., and Gerry Lithway, '64, and Margaret Werner, Portland, Maine and James Jealous, '65.

POTPOURRI

Congratulations to the newlyweds of Sig Ep and their new brides: Sally Pollard, Montpelier to Albert LaBounty, '63; Lorraine Lehouiller - Johnson to Bob Easton, '63.

Best wishes to Wendell E. Carr '62, Delta Psi, who recently became engaged to Elizabeth Ann Lemon, who also attended UVM.

Congratulations to Sig Eps newly elected officers: Vice-President, Jay Harding; Secretary, Chris Collins; Recorder, Steve Bloom; Social Director, Harvey Demmler; and Publicity Director, Roger Potter. Sig Ep also has seven new brothers - Dutch Cassani, Bill Hall, Dave Hebert, Ed O'Hare, Roger Potter, Robert Rasmussen, and Dick Spenello.

Melvin E. Robinson, Stephen Abbott, Philip Bushey, and Raymond Rowley are now proudly wearing AGR pledge pins.

"THE MOST DANGEROUS GAME."

President Kennedy has played a game with the lives of all of us. He has done it for many reasons. He attempted to establish America's determination and courage; even her irrationality. America stood to gain an important cold war victory; she stood to lose her whole population. I'm not at all sure the gamble was not worth it, was not - in fact - mandatory.

The gamble itself was a simple one. Kennedy set this country on a collision path with the Soviet Union. He ordered the United States Navy to stop every ship headed toward Cuba. He did this while fully aware that Russian ships were under orders not to stop for anyone.

The collision course was a particularly dangerous one. It allowed Khrushchev plenty of time to decide to oppose us. We were not planning a quick invasion that would be accomplished in a short time. We were not crushing a revolution in a few days. We were instead setting up a blockade that would be ready for the Soviets to test anytime they wanted to.

We were, in fact, leaving them no choice other than to oppose us or to back down. Khrushchev could not avoid the issue by letting things pass.

Kennedy did one other thing last week. He made Khrushchev understand that any temperate action would have to come from him. He let everyone know that we could not be reasoned with. In short, Kennedy left the choice between war and peace up to the Soviet Chairman. If the Russians gave in, trouble would be avoided; if they maintained their position, conflict would surely result.

THE ODDS

The odds in this deadly gamble were in our favor. Whenever one of the powers has entered irrevocably into a conflict, the other power has kept out of the way. Neither of them has shown any desire for an armed confrontation. When the Russians committed themselves to crushing the Hungarian revolt, we stood painfully aside. When America made it clear she would support Berlin in 1948-49, Russia withdrew her blockade.

It would have been especially difficult for the Russians to oppose us in the Caribbean. First, they would have had real difficulty fighting us that close to our shores. The outcome of any confrontation there would have hinged on sea power, and the Soviet Navy is not as strong -- by any means -- as ours.

Russia would have had to use this Navy to defend bases which are unimportant to her. She would have had to do so in a hemisphere which is uncomfortable about Soviet missiles in the Caribbean. It was, all in all, the best test case we could have hoped for.

THE STAKES

Nonetheless, we took a terrible risk, but we had much to gain. At a time when the Russians face us on many potential battlefields, at a time when they must decide whether we will stand up for our rights or buckle under their pressures, there could have been nothing more valuable than a solid demonstration of our determination. The Soviets will push us if they think we are weak; they will not if they feel we are strong.

This has been shown time and again to our disadvantage. The Russians have been able to take the offensive, to push us into repeated crises. Their courage, their unreasonableness, has been taken for granted. Our lack of will, our pliability, has been assumed. Things may never again be quite the same.

Now, the Russians have shown their nervousness, and we have proved we can sweat out the threat of war. The East will have to think twice before it creates a crisis. It can no longer assume we will be responsible enough to give in. We can be as irrational as they. Our whims must be taken into account now.

Of course events may prove me wrong. Khrushchev may be planning a retaliatory move. But even at this, we can be certain that any such move will not be as easy as it was before Kennedy's proof of his determination.

IN THE BALANCE

The real question is whether Kennedy had the right to gamble an open armed conflict for a change in the cold war climate. I think he did.

I think he had not only the right, but the responsibility to do so. If things had continued as before, we would eventually have been faced with a situation which would have forced us to take a stand, but it might not have been as favorable as this one. And, it might have led to war.

Let us never lose sight of the fact that everything Prime Minister Chamberlain did, he did for peace; but his policy of appeasement led inexorably to all out war. Perhaps Kennedy, by risking conflict, has made war unlikely.

Campus Radio Station Serves UVM For 15 Years

by Nancy-Lord

For approximately 15 years, the University of Vermont's radio station, "operated by students for students" has been sending news, sports, music, and special events coverage into the university residences. Broadcasting at 570 kilocycles, WRUV is affiliated with the Columbia Broadcasting System and is run in conjunction with the speech and public relations departments at UVM.

The station is operated by approximately 35 students who have an interest in radio or television. Although no course credits are given for working at the studio, two courses, Introduction to Radio and Television and Radio-Television Production, are correlated with the available facilities at the station.

WRUV broadcasts on a closed-circuit which directs the programs only into the university dormitories. The station is on the air from 7 P.M. - 1 A.M. Monday-Friday, 2 P.M. - 1 A.M. Saturday, and 12 noon - 1 A.M. Sunday. The schedules are arranged so that each announcer works at least two hours or more Hidden among the many edifices on this campus stands the WRUV building, dedicated solely to the arts of music.

a week. His program usually consists of newscasts, sports reports, weather coverage, national and local commercials, and the music of his choice. In addition, "Spotlight UVM", a report of activities at the University, is presented weekly. Other programs of special interest to students are scheduled at various times (for example, interviews with faculty members about the Cuban crisis.)

The station has its studios and offices in the radio-television center behind Pomeroy Hall, and contains modern radio equipment similar to that of the commercial stations. The record library is a "music-lover's paradise," containing over two thousand LP albums. The selections include pops, jazz, classical, and folk music, ranging from Dave Brubeck to Johann Bach.

Station manager is Ken Nalibow, a junior in the College of Arts and Sciences. Other officers include Bill Symmes, assistant station manager; Robert Piper, station engineer; Peter Parks, assistant engineer; Vic Lesperance, program director; Steve Lutzker, treasurer; and Diane Galloway, station secretary.

After working at the station, all announcers have a basic knowledge of proper announcing and production techniques. In addition, they are required to know how to operate the control room. With this information, many students are able to acquire jobs in commercial stations upon graduation. Consequently, WRUV-the voice of the University of Vermont - not only serves to entertain the general student body, but also furnishes an opportunity for practical experience for those interested in radio and television.

Olympic Photographer Presents Ski Movie To Outing Club

The French Alps make a magnificent setting for a ski scene. Part of the feature, "Stars in the Snow" was shot here.

On the 9th of November 1962, at 8:15 p.m. promptly, the UVM Outing Club will present John Jay's ski film "Stars in the Snow". John Jay will personally narrate his film with his charming flow of dry Yankee wit. The Outing Club is hoping to have President Fay introduce John Jay.

John Jay has been appointed official U.S. Olympic photographer three times. One of his yearly films was nominated for an Academy Award. Lowell Thomas has said, "I get more laughs from John Jay's shows than almost any production on Broadway."

After being shown twenty three times in ten days on the Hawaiian islands the Honolulu Star Bulletin reported, "John Jay's film is pure from start to finish—outstanding photography—not just for skiers, but the kind of humorous, rhythmical picture that comes along once in a great while for the enjoyment of all."

"Stars in the Snow" was filmed at the World Ski Championships (FIS) in Chamonix, France on the top of the highest mountain in Europe, 15,789 foot Mt. Blanc; behind the Iron Curtain in Zakopane, Poland; on the slopes of the Swiss Alps where a ski school for experts has a run down steep powder slopes using 100 foot trees for slalom poles; and in many other locations all over Europe. Over six miles of original film were taken by John Jay last winter and he has taken the best 4,000 feet, put them together, and calls it "Stars in the Snow".

Tickets will be sold at the door to adults at $1.50 and to children under 12 at $1.00. Proceeds will be put towards the construction cost of the new UVM ski shelter in Jeffersonville, Vermont. Watch WCAX-TV and the Burlington Free Press during the week of November 2-9 for more information.

Frosh Represents UVM In GM Competition

Olof Johnson, Jr., (second from the right) is being presented with the General Motors Scholarship award. (Credit: Audio-Visual Services)

The University of Vermont has been named one of 182 colleges and universities to participate in the College Scholarship Plan of General Motors, and a Castleton, Vt., freshman has been named by the University to receive the award this year.

He is Olof Johnson, Jr., son of the Rev. and Mrs. Olof C. Johnson of Castleton, and a freshman in the College of Technology of UVM, where he is majoring in electrical engineering. He is a graduate of Rutland High School.

Under the General Motors College Plan, entering freshmen of outstanding merit may be selected to receive a scholarship award ranging from $200 to $2000, as determined by the individual student's need.

Participating institutions, including 111 private and 71 public institutions in 50 states and the District of Columbia, are selected "on the basis of the number and caliber of graduates employed in General Motors." Participating colleges have "full discretion in the awarding of the scholarships," according to Reed Saunders, director of the Financial Aid Office at UVM, who called the scholarship a valuable addition to University of Vermont aid funds.

He noted particularly that the scholarship provides continuing support throughout the four years of undergraduate study for recipients who maintain satisfactory academic standards.

The plan provides a scholarship for one entering freshman each year.

Col. Blanchard Addresses ROTC Cadets At Smoker

"The Russian Threat" was Colonel Blanchard's topic of discussion at the ROTC department's annual smoker for MS III and IV cadets. The smoker was held Wednesday night, October 24, in the Waterman Student Lounge.

Colonel Blanchard pointed out in his address that Communism is a definite threat to world peace and that it should be met and dealt with to keep world peace.

Cadet Commander Brodie initiated the business of the meeting with a few jokes and an introductory speech. Robert Walsh followed. Mr. Brodie with the introduction of all the new ROTC regular commanders. Beforehand, Brodie had introduced the MS IV leaders to the MS cadets. Mr. Walsh volunteered a few more anecdotes of his own.

Mr. Walsh spoke about the deprivation of freedom, the ugliness, the hate and the death caused by the erection of the Berlin Wall. Following a short introduction, Mr. Walsh presented a film featuring the widespread wastefulness, anxiety, and destruction caused by this needless construction. Stirring shots of freedom-hungry people barely escaping the exploitive grasps of the fiendish East Germans made the film especially moving.

Following the film, the cadets broke up into groups and chatted about the world-pressing problems with the ROTC department personnel. Coffee and cookies highlighted the conversation time. Mr. Brodie reminded everyone not to forget the upcoming Military Ball in November.

HISTORY OF CENTENNIAL FIELD

It was a cold, windswept day, about 3:30 in the afternoon. An intercepted pass in the fourth quarter game Springfield College a 7-0 decision over the University of Vermont. The date—October 7; the year—1922; the occasion—the dedication of the "new" Centennial Field.

The short, informal ceremony which preceded the game was applauded by a record-breaking crowd of over 2500 spectators. Lieutenant Governor Abram Foote, the guest of honor, represented the state. After a short speech, the game began. It was a close one, and probably a very tough one to lose for the Catamounts on such an auspicious day.

Before the Physical Education Department of the University provided the school with Centennial Field, all outdoor sport events and competitions were held near the Stanley Bros. Brickyard, just off Riverside Avenue in Burlington. After construction of the field, and up to the present date, there have been numerous worthwhile improvements made. At one time the South stands, better known as the visitors' side, were one-third higher than they are now. It seems that their safety and reliability became as shaky as their physical make-up, and they were trimmed down to their present height. The old barn which helps to support the baseball stands, and, at the same time, is aided by them, was at one time a storage room. Here the equipment of the football, baseball, and track teams was kept. It was also used by the football teams as a rest area for half-time intermissions before the Centennial Field House was built. Besides complete excavation, there are not too many other plans for this structure in future years.

Up until the late 1930's the area, which has now been used for the construction of Lafayette Hall, was primarily utilized for tennis courts. Then, in the early part of 1940, the addition of new courts near the field enabled the boys on campus to put up basketball courts in place of the old tennis courts. At this point things were beginning to expand in a likable fashion. Only one problem was brewing in the air—World War II. When this came about, much of the field was damaged. Trailer shacks decorated the field on all sides, thus crossing out much of the progress which had become so evident.

In 1951, a great appendage was added to the field in the form of night lights. This $27,000 job was undertaken by the Burlington Lighting Company. This has proven to be a very beneficial move on the University's part. Now, UVM sporting events don't have to be restricted to the daytime. Just ten years ago the Centennial Field House, now the players' locker rooms, was built. Before that the members of all sports squads had to dress in the "old gym", run down to the field, hold their practice, and return to the gym in order to shower and dress. Any athlete will verify that this was a truly wise investment.

One aspect which has always been an asset of the field is its drainage of water. Since the field lies on a layer of sand loam, there has never occurred the problems of puddles or "little oceans" located on any part of the field. However, difficulties have arisen from time to time in that there are only two drains through which water can be fed to the field, so as to keep the grass thick and green. Consequently, one may find a number of yellowed areas about the field whenever there is a shortage in precipitation. Just in the past few years top dressings have been applied to the land in hope that the soil will become enriched. Thanks to this method the football field is in fine shape.

In the past there have been many changes made, and there will be many more in the future, but nothing will ever detract from the charm which is projected by Centennial Field.

nism, Communism receives comparable attention in Political Science 11-12 (Introduction to Political Science) and in Economics 11-12 (Principles of Economics). In other courses of a general nature Communism receives extensive treatment; in Dr. Staren's Political Science 52 (Governments of Continental Europe), Prof. Evans' History 251-252 (Contemporary), and Prof. Hall's Philosophy 206 (Social Philosophy).

Apart from these offerings we have a broad range of advanced courses specifically devoted to Russia and/or Communism. Prof. Dellin of the Economics Department is a specialist on Communist economics. In this field he teaches Economics 290 (the Soviet Economy) and Economics 291 (Economic Patterns and Policies of Eastern Europe). Prof. Paganuzzi offers three years of study in Russian language and literature, and it is hoped that a fourth year will be available soon. I myself give a basic treatment of Communism in History 243 (Soviet Russia, including history, theory, institutions, and foreign policy). I concentrate on Tsarist Russia in History 253. I also give two advanced courses under the joint sponsorship of the History and Political Science Departments: History 277 and Political Science 277 (Government of the USSR), and History 278 and Political Science 278 (Foreign Policy of the USSR, including the international Communist movement).

For students wishing to concentrate their studies in the area of Russia, East Europe, and Communism, UVM now offers, through the Center for Area Studies (of which I am chairman) a program of area studies on Russia and East Europe (as well as a parallel program on Latin America). These programs are acceptable as meeting the requirements for concentration towards the degree of B.A. in the College of Arts and Sciences. Apart from the usual distribution requirements, the program on Russia and East Europe includes the following: Background — History 11-12, Political Science 11-12, Economics 11-12, two semesters of geography, one semester of sociology (Cultures of Man). Specialized Courses — History 243 and 253, History/Political Science 277 and 278, Economics 290 and 291, three years of Russian language, and two semesters of senior research. The program is thus designed to give a thorough interdisciplinary competence on the area, together with language facility. It is hoped that the program will be a valuable foundation for further work not only in business, governmental, or academic work dealing with Communism or Eastern Europe, but also for general graduate study or teaching in any of the social science disciplines. Students interested in taking the Russian and East European Area Program should consult Prof. Dellin, who is in charge of the program (Old Mill 231).

by constantly bowing to their every demand. By such action the government has made a mockery of American individualism. We are no longer the rugged, proud, self-reliant Americans who fought for independence in the American Revolution; who fought to preserve this nation in the Civil War; and who migrated westward, enduring innumerable adversities, to establish a new life... and these United States. We are now a nation of "gutless wonders". We are a people who have been so pampered, that we are incapable of undertaking any great project without federal assistance.

Let the government defend, levy taxes, and maintain order; but let her do all these without introducing socialist methods, and without interfering with the private lives and businesses of her citizens.

Opinions Please

by Betty Bergman

Do you think that the stand the United States has taken to date on the Cuban situation has improved our image in the eyes of the world?

Dan Newcomb, '65, Arts and Sciences, "Yes, because the United States has been able to enforce a long-standing U.S. policy with force and determination without the appearance of being a war-monger or the colossus of the North, as we have been accused of on previous occasions."

Frank Bolden, '63, Arts and Sciences, "Definitely. Our stand showed the world that we are willing to back our principles. The Communist world knows our capability from our past and by showing them that we're still willing to back these principles all the way we've discouraged them from active aggression and gained the support of our allies."

Charles Rosenbaum, '63, Chemistry major, "No. The enforcement of the blockade only serves to increase the image of the United States as imperialistic giant to the North. However, not to have taken any action would have damaged America's prestige abroad, to a far greater extent."

Steve Pell, '65, Pre-Law, "Very definitely. I don't think that there's any question as to President Kennedy's actions. He had no choice. To the non-Western and the Communist satellite countries the picture of Khrushchev backing down from the blockade is one of lack of prestige. It would have been expected by those countries that Khrushchev would have at least verbally shown a strong, lengthy protest, rather than a one-day stand, followed by a meek backing down. The fact that his first statement was that these ships would go through no matter what the cost, he followed almost immediately to talk of negotiations, summit conferences, and the like. Although he so diplomatically stated that he would not allow the United States to push him into rash action, it would appear that not only is he not taking rash action, but he is instead backing out of Cuba, missiles in hand. All this would lead the most disinterested observer to see that for the time being at least, the United States will not be buried."

by Bertie Sprague

The 1962 edition of the UVM cross country team is doing well despite the fact that there is only eight members on the varsity club and only seven on the freshman club. In the past it wasn't unusual to have as many as 15 or 20 runners on the freshman club but now it is a problem just finding managers let alone runners. This creates a problem for coach Archie Post since he will be losing Capt. Steve Russell, as well as Tim Simpson, Harold Billings, and Tim Grant due to graduation. Chris Myrick, '65 and a couple of flashy freshmen Walt Stowell and Phil Russell (Steve's brother) figure to take up some of the slack but it appears that future teams will lack depth.

Coach Post sees a lack of initiative as the reason for the size of the teams. He related that 160 freshmen claim cross country experience and he sent invitations to 40 of them. Only 28 of his letters were answered and of that number only one man has remained with the team. The fact that there is only one manager would also seem to support the fact that there is a lack of initiative.

Despite the lack of depth, this years teams have been doing well. The varsity owns a 1-2 record and has meets remaining with Yankee Conference teams on Nov. 3, Bowdin Nov. 9, and the New England meet a Boston on Nov. 12. The freshmen team owns a 3-2 record and has meets remaining with Vergennes and Williamstown on Oct. 30, Paul Smiths Jr. College Nov. 7, and the New England on Nov. 12.

The following are the complete rosters of both the varsity and freshmen clubs.

Varsity: Stephen Russell, '63, capt.; Tim Simpson, '63, Harold Billings, Tim Grant, '63, Michael Gerity, '64, Chris Myrick, '65, Richard Ashton, '65, and Stephen Lozinski, '65.

Kake Walk Ski Carnival

by Prent Phelps

For the past few years, the UVM Ski Team has been asking a question that has been avoided by both the Athletic Department and the student body. This unanswered inquiry is: "If we travel to as many as five winter carnivals that are held by other colleges, why can't we have one of our own"? There have been scattered and incomplete plans for a Vermont Carnival, but nothing definite has every been established. At the rate we are going now, nothing ever will be established unless some sort of action is taken.

The action proposed is a petition or poll taken of the students, to find out whether or not they are interested in holding a carnival such as Middlebury or Dartmouth does. The Ski Team is anxious to be among the tops in the East, and a carnival at UVM would help them a great deal towards this goal. But how would we go about holding this carnival?

There is talk of adding these races to Kake Walk as another event. Those in favor of this proposal, do not wish to change Kake Walk, they only wish to add to it. However, with ski races as an added event, there would be another thing to do during those four fun-filled days.

It is suggested that the races take place on two of the four days at Stowe. This would be a feather in the cap of UVM as we would have the finest ski area in the east at our disposal. It would certainly outshine all other carnivals because of the excellent accommodations available for racing.

Many UVM students have never seen their team race, nor have they ever seen a ski race at all. A carnival here would give them a chance to do both. It provides for a lot of fun and excitement, and for some it can turn out to be quite an experience. A carnival such as this would be a booster team and school spirit.

Big Turnout For Hockey

The University of Vermont Hockey Team is ready to go. At the first meeting called this year, a turnout of 50 men was reported. Coach William Ruffer said he was proud of the student reaction. The freshman class had a turnout of 26 men; the sophomores 7; the juniors 10; and the seniors 7.

The equipment, which is extremely expensive, is now on order. Mr. Ruffer stated that the equipment the team will use is the finest to be had.

Coach Ruffer explained that the rink is in fine shape and is ready for inspection, along with the new gym and field house which is to be held on November 15. Should he get the "o.k." the team will start its practice immediately. Along with other progress at the site of construction, the new rink freezing method will be put to test this week.

Leftovers Are Not Left Out

For the first time in the recent history of Vermont intramural football, an independent Residence Hall team has captured the all-campus championship. Last Thursday, the undefeated Leftovers concluded a successful season with their seventh consecutive victory, a triumph 25-0 over fraternity champion Phi Delta Theta.

An outstanding aspect of the team was the fine play of the defensive squad, known as the "Checkmates".

After two preliminary playoff games, which they captured by a score of 52-12 and 53-0, this powerful squad entered into the campus finals. In this contest they engaged I.F.C.-favored Phi Delta Theta, conquerors of Sigma Nu 7-0 the previous day.

The game was close at half-time with the Leftovers leading by a slim 7-0 margin. However, in the second half the Leftovers overcame their first half sluggishness and clinched the victory with three second half touchdowns to win 25-0.

Their only touchdown came on a passing attack engineered by Chris Greer. Greer, on passes to Pete Weiss and Frank Bolden moved the ball to the UNH 12. Greer then tossed to Reynolds for the sole TD. The Wildcats scored in the first period on a 53 yard pass play, Wells to Serika. A Vermont pass interference set up their second tally. On a poor UVM punt, going only four yards, UNH moved the ball to the Vermont 12-yard line. Wells then fired to end Paul Morro for the final score.

With the victory over Norwich, the Cats are looking forward to meeting the Redmen of the University of Massachusetts. Mass. is currently leading the Yankee Conference with a 3-0-0 record and an overall record of 4-1-0 with their only loss coming at the hands of undefeated Dartmouth.

The Norwich score came when Bob Mirabelle caught a 3 yard toss from Cadet quarterback Marsh in the second period. A Mirabelle and Marsh pass accounted for the two-point conversion also as the score now stood at 14-8.

Norwich never threatened, but they did hold the Cats twice within the 10-yard line. The final Vermont tally was scored by Kent who capped a drive that started on the Norwich 30. Dave Baker split the uprights for the extra point to make the score 21-8.

The Cadets took to the air, but could not gain much against the improving Vermont secondary. Time ran out with the ball on the Vermont 20.

Piqskin Review Yankon Vermont

The University of Massachusetts Redmen, rolling high in their quest of the Yankee Conference football championship, will attempt to take another giant step this Saturday when they meet the University of Vermont Catamounts at Burlington.

It is one of two conference games scheduled but the other is of equal importance as it sends the two runners-up, Connecticut and New Hampshire, together at Durham. Both will be keeping an eye on the developments at Burlington for if the Redmen should stumble, the winner of this clash would be in a position to move back into contention.

A glance at the statistics to date indicates why the Redmen are undefeated after three conference games. Sam Lussier, explosive halfback, has a net of 426 yards on 63 carries for an average of 6.9 yards per carry and a decided edge over the other backs. Frank DiQuattro of New Hampshire has the second best average with a net of 5.3 yards per carry while in overall yards, Tony Tetra of Rhode Island, is runner-up with a total of 194 yards in 48 carries.

Lloyd Wells of New Hampshire and Jerry Whelchel of Massachusetts are the leading passers. Wells has completed 18 of 35 for 295 yards and three touchdowns while Whelchel has hit on 15 of 26 tosses for 229 yards and two touchdowns. Dan Sereika of New Hampshire leads the punters who have kicked at least 15 times with an average of 37.3 yards per punt. Hank Kapusinsky of Rhode Island is second with an average of 36 yards and Deane Kent of Vermont is third with an average of 35.6.

Sereika, Kent and Vic Mancini of Rhode Island are tied for the scoring lead with 18 points. Although he has not scored a touchdown, George Pleau of Massachusetts is in second place with 15 points, fashioned on nine extra points in 10 attempts and two field goals.

In non-conference action on Saturday, Maine opposes Colby in a state series game at Orono and Rhode Island travels to Springfield.

Kitten Korner

The UVM Kittens routed the Middlebury College Freshmen 37-0 at Centennial Field last Friday. This win coupled with the 14-0 victory over Norwich has secured the Freshmen State Title for the Kittens.

Early in the first period Vermont blocked a Middlebury punt. They then marched 52 yards for their first score. Jack O'Dea threw to Captain Mike Ingham for the two point conversion.

Later in the period, Vermont recovered a fumble on the 18-yard line. With Scott Fitz at quarterback, Vermont scored on a 37-yard pass to Roland Delfausse. Tackle Bob Zakar kicked the point after to make the score 15-0.

In the second quarter, speedster fullback Terry Lynn sprinted through the Middlebury defense for the third score. The half ended with the Kitten defense defending a 21-0 lead.

The second half found UVM gaining yardage on short pass plays from Fritz to ends Bill Van Bennekum and Steve Ross. In the line bruising Rusty Brink, big John Sullivan, and shifty guard "Lefty" Harrington contained the Middlebury offense.

Late in the fourth period Middlebury intercepted a Vermont pass on its own four yard line. On the second play from scrimmage, Dave Kemp, tackled ball carrier in the end zone for a safety. This ended the Vermont scoring at 37 points.

by Martin Wolf

Though they possess only a 3-3-0 record this season, the UVM Catamounts of Bob Clifford have smashed their way to a new all-time University scoring record and achieved their first Yankee Conference victory in six years. The Cats eclipsed the previous record by 27 points, defeating Rennselaer Polytechnic Institute 82-6. The Conference victory was an upset win over Rhode Island, 21-12. This win provided coach Bob Clifford with his finest birthday present in many years.

The Cats opened the season on a sour note, losing to American International College 14-8. The score, however, does not tell the whole story of the game. On various occasions the Catamounts had opportunities to break the game wide open. In the first quarter, Frank Bolden, end, had his hands on an AIC misthrow but could not handle the ball. Ken Burton had the same opportunity in the third period, but failed to hold the pigskin. Vermont scored its lone TD on a short pass from co-captain Paul Harris to back Ken Burton, Burton, with phenomenal faking, went 38 yards for the score. Harris drove from the three yard line from the conversion.

The outlook was considerably brighter as the Cats took on RPI. The final score of 82-6 is evidence of the offensive punch of the Clifford eleven. The final periods were played by the Catamount second and third teams. Frank Amato scored three touchdowns, as did Ken Burton. Deane Kent added two more of his own. RPI scored its lone tally after recovering a Vermont fumble on the UVM 42 yard line. They marched upfield, culminating in a three yard sweep by Ron Tocci.

In first Yankee Conference debut, the Cats ran up against the Black Bears of Maine. Though the Catamounts lost, 9-6, the game was not decided until the final period. The Cats ground defense took the spotlight, recovering six Maine fumbles, and stopping Bear drives just short of the UVM goal line. The only flaw in the Vermont defense, a fault that proved fatal in the AIC encounter, was pass coverage. This factor allowed a Maine back to get into the clear for a long pass in the fourth quarter, clinching the contest. Vermont opened their attack against Maine in a fashion similar to the RPI fiasco, taking only 44 seconds to score. A Maine fumble on the Vermont kick-off set up the scoring opportunity. The Cats held firm until the third period, when the Bears blocked a UVM punt in the end zone for a two point safety.

The Cats bounced back the following week and upset Rhode Island 21-12. Among the many heroes of this sparkling victory, Frank Bolden, Ken Burton, Deane Kent and co-captains Paul Harris and Dave Sequist. Scoring began in the first period on a 55 yard drive capped by Kent sweeping right end for the TD. Harris then threw a modified shot-gun to end Paul Toussaint for the two point conversion. The Rams came back in the second period and scored a pass deflection. At halftime, the score was Vermont-1, R.I.-6.

Early in the second half, Burton ended a 52-yard Vermont drive by bucking into the end zone for the second UVM score. A Harris-to-Bolden pass failed, but the score now stood at 14-6. In the fourth quarter, with the ball on the Vermont 33-yard line, Harris pitched out to halfback Burton. Burton fired a twelve yard strike to Deane Kent, who ran 55 yards for the final Catamount tally. R.I. scored one more TD, but it was too little and too late.

The Cats then went on to meet the University of New Hampshire at Durham, where they lost 19-6.

MEET THE COACHES

Robert E. Clifford Head Coach

Bob Clifford takes over as head football coach at Vermont after a six-year stint at Colby College where he won 23 while losing 19. Clifford led the Mules to two Maine state titles and one co-championship. After graduating from Western State College of Colorado ('40) and serving as a P.T. Boat Commander in World War II, Clifford was varsity line coach at Northwestern University.

John Coons Line Coach

John and Bob Clifford are not strangers to each other as Coons was an assistant to Clifford at Colby from 1956-58. A graduate of Springfield College ('46), Coons has also been an assistant coach at RPI and Springfield. From 1960-62, John was athletic director and head football coach at East Longmeadow, (Mass.) High.

Les Leggett End Coach

Les comes to Vermont after pulling the strings as head coach for Adrian College (Michigan) for the past three years. A graduate of Maine and former grid player, Les has also coached at Whitman (Wash.) College and Portland (Ore.) State.

Cy Theobald Defensive Back Coach

Cy is being put to work by his football coach of last season while he does graduate work at UVM. Cy was a defensive standout at Colby.

John Evans Freshman Coach

"Fuzzy" begins his 25th year with the Vermont coaching staff. The Illinois graduate ('32) is also varsity basketball coach and freshman baseball mentor. Since 1952, his Kitten footballers have posted a 31-7 record with the 1961 edition going undefeated.

Ralph LaPointe Freshman Coach

Ralph is in his eleventh year as a Vermont coach. The former major league infielder with the Cards and Phils will also assist with the varsity backfield. The Vermont grad is better known for the Yankee Conference baseball champs he produced last spring. Ralph also handles frosh basketball.

Denis Lambert Freshman Coach

Denny was a fine athlete at Vermont and was a very successful football coach at Winoski High, winning several state titles. Denny will be in his second year as a college coach and will also assist with the varsity ends.

Harriers Win 3 Way Meet

In a triangular meet last Saturday, the UVM cross country team won its second victory in four outings by defeating teams from Williams and Tufts at Williams College in Williamstown, Mass.

Mike Ogola of Williams, an exchange student from Africa, almost broke the course record when he covered the 3.75 mile course in 20.29. Vermont, however, took four of the first seven places, and the win was clinched when Dick Ashton, a soph from Lyndon Center, finished 17th.

Vermont edged Williams with 34 points to 37 for the home club. Tufts came in last with 55.

Tim Simpson, a senior from Lyndonville, came in second, nine seconds behind Ogola, the winner. Harold Billings of N. Clarendon, captain Steve Russel of Hinesburg, and Chris Myrick finished fourth, fifth, and seventh respectively.

This meet was the first since World War II between UVM and Williams in cross country. Tufts had previously been rivals only in the New England's.

Learning never stops for engineers at Western Electric

There's no place at Western Electric for engineers who feel that college diplomas signify the end of their education. However, if a man can meet our quality standards and feels that he is really just beginning to learn... and if he is ready to launch his career where learning is an important part of the job and where graduate-level training on and off the job is encouraged - we want and need him.

At Western Electric, in addition to the normal learning-while-doing, engineers are encouraged to move ahead in their fields by several types of educational programs. Western maintains its own full-time graduate engineering training program, seven formal management courses, and a tuition refund plan for out-of-hours college study.

This learning atmosphere is just one reason why a career at Western Electric is so stimulating. Of equal importance, however, is the nature of the work we do. Our new engineers are taking part in projects that implement the whole art of modern telephony, from high-speed sound transmission and solar cells to electronic telephone offices and computer-controlled production techniques.

Should you join us now, you will be coming to Western Electric at one of the best times in the company's history. In the management area alone, several thousand supervisory jobs are expected to open up to W.E. people within the next 10 years. And our work of building communications equipment and systems becomes increasingly challenging and important as the communications needs of our nation and the world continue to increase.

Challenging opportunities exist now at Western Electric for electrical, mechanical, industrial, and chemical engineers, as well as physical science, liberal arts, and business majors. All qualified applicants will receive careful consideration for employment without regard to race, creed, color or national origin. For more information about Western Electric, write College Relations, Western Electric Company, Room 6206, 222 Broadway, New York 38, New York. Cats Run Over Cadets 21 to 8

Ken Burton, who led the UVM ground attack with 147 yards, goes around end for ten.

(Credit: Free Press)

It was a cold, snow-swept day at Northfield, Vermont, last Saturday as the Catamounts of Coach Bob Clifford warmed-up for their homecoming battle with the University of Massachusetts this Saturday.

The Cats won the State Series game 21-8 with little trouble. They scored two touchdowns in the opening period and one in the last quarter. The Cadets scored on a short pass late in the second period but did not have many other scoring opportunities as the Vermont defense held the Cadets in check.

If the Cliffordmen can put together four periods like the first at Norwich and the fired-up defense that repelled the Rams of Rhode Island, they might very well pull off a major upset in New England football, and warm the hearts of many returning alumni and parents for Homecoming.

The Catamounts have a few surprises in store for the Redmen of Mass. A few new plays have been added to Vermont's offensive repertory that will keep the UMass defense on their toes.

The UVM offensive attack is difficult to analyze. Coach Clifford does not stereotype his strategy, but adjusts to his opponent's weakness. Two weeks ago, the University of New Hampshire, the Cats passing game went well as they gained 135 yards in the air. Last week at Norwich, they stayed on the ground and amassed 252 yards with Ken Burton gaining more than half of the total yardage.

The shifty-junior, halfback rushed for 147 yards in 11 carries to lead the ground assault. Burton scored the first two touchdowns for the Catamounts on end sweeps in the first quarter.

The first time UVM got its hands on the ball, it scored. Burton carried the pigskin 33 yards around the right end on a beautiful broken field jaunt. Late in the period Deane Kent intercepted a Norwich aerial and ran it back to the 34. Frank Forester picked-up five yards and Kent went for 17 more - for a first down on the Cadet 12. After a penalty, Bill Burke caught a Paul Harris pass to put the ball on the 3 yard stripe. Burton busted into the end zone untouched for the second TD of the period. A Harris to Kent pass brought the score to 14-0.

Catamount Clippings

THE LONGEST RUN OF THE DAY

The Cadets of Norwich are known as the Horsemen; a name that goes back to the days of the Army Cavalry at Norwich. Nowadays the cavalry is a thing of the past and a novelty at Norwich. This was proven last weekend. At the fear of sounding corny, we honestly feel that a few cadets did not use much "horse sense" during the game Saturday. They had planned an exhibition of horsemanship but as it turned out, it was a horse of a different color. To give a true picture of what really happened, we feel a little background should be given.

The corps of Cadets marched out onto Sabine Field. They displayed the precision of West Pointers, then amassed in the stands and encouraged their team with spirited cheers. They carried all this military falderal even further by shooting off a cannon after the Cadets scored their only touchdown, and again again they shocked freezing spectators with a loud blast from their cannon when they successfully completed a two-point conversion.

It seems that all the noise from the cheering cadets and the artillery excited the Norwich mascot, an "old grey mare," who was prancing around the sidelines. Mid-way in the third period, the horse and its rider dashed onto the playing field in full gallop. Luckily both teams were in their respective huddles when the horse streaked down the field and across the line of scrimmage. The horse shed its rider on about the thirty-yard line, and continued running wild, right out of Sabine Field. This amazed the audience and startled the two football teams. The rider escaped serious injury, but suffered a bruised "pride" and a broken tooth. The horse was last seen galloping through Northfield.

Besides being the longest run of the day, it was by far the worst play of the day. It was a good thing that there wasn't any action going on at the time, for, some player could have been seriously injured as he tried to tackle the horse, thinking it was the Norwich fullback. Let's hope that the next time we play the Horsemen, there'll be no horsin' around.

How Charlie Got His Name

Charlie Catamount in his $500 suit! (Credit: Coleman)

Although it is general knowledge that the catamount (short for cat-a-mountain) is any of the various wild animals of the cat family, most of us are not aware of how it came to play such a vital role in UVM life.

It all started on Feb. 6, 1926, when an article appeared in the CYNIC asking the students whether they wanted a mascot, and, if so, what they wanted. A ballot was offered with the choices: lynx, wildcat, other suggestions, or no mascot at all.

Later in the year, a vote on the mascot was taken at a general election for men students. Competing against the Catamount were the camel, the cow, and the tomcat. In the May 15, 1926 issue of the CYNIC, the result of the vote was reported -- the Catamount was chosen by a margin of 138 to 126, with 51 against any mascot at all.

The first to proudly bear the name "Catamounts" was the UVM baseball team of Spring, 1926. In the fall of 1926, the football team assumed the title.

The Catamount is the traditional symbol of UVM school spirit. It is personified in Charlie Catamount, who struts around the field at football games, and whose antics add to the general excitement of an activity.

Charlie is chosen each year by the president of the Student Association. He appears at basketball games, pep rallies, Varieties, and charity drives. His job is not to distract attention from the function itself, but to provide an entertaining sideline.

The Catamount has a new costume this year. Such an outfit costs approximately $500. (This is more than a real catamount would cost.)

No matter how active Charlie is, however, in order to have any semblance of school spirit, students must attend school games. For the big Homecoming game with Massachusetts on November 3, Chuck Grutman, this year's Charlie Catamount, has promised a special "gimmick" for those attending the game. He said, "Bring your tea in flasks and expect a real wild time in the tradition of old UVM."

Joan Baez To Draw Crowd At Lane Series

by Joan Klonsky

On Tuesday evening, November 13, the Blue Lane Series will proudly present Joan Baez. The most popular attraction of the series in its eight-year history, Miss Baez has been dubbed by Life magazine as "the best folk singer of them all."

Of Mexican-Irish descent, the twenty-year old folk singer has travelled with her family to such places as Paris, Rome, Switzerland, and Baghdad, where she discovered an amazing gift for memory and mimicry.

Her talent is deceptive in its apparent simplicity; her beautiful voice is "underscored by the subtly effective manner in which she presents it." Different from other folk singers, Joan Baez seems to stand aside from the song as she sings it, appearing to detach herself and her personality from the audience as well as from the song. Nat Hentoff, of The Reporter magazine, captures the essence of her talent: "When she sings, Miss Baez, who is as spare with gestures as she is with smiles, draws the audience to her as if she were about to foretell the future. She communicates uncommon intensity through a penetratingly beautiful soprano voice over which she has complete control." In the January 4, 1962 issue of The Reporter, Mr. Hentoff credits Joan Baez with having sold more copies of her album "Joan Baez, Volume I" than any other female folk singer in record history.

Renowned folk singer, Joan Baez, will perform at the Lane Series.

It seems that UVM has been rather fortunate to contract Miss Baez for her engagement on the Lane Series. Determined to guard herself against the various temptations which have come with her sudden success, she strictly limits her appearances in night clubs and concerts. She likes to work at leisure without the pressures and conformities of show business. Preferring to sing for the "folk crowd," she has thus restricted her recent performances mainly to colleges and universities.

Her career actually began in coffee shops in Cambridge, Mass., where she sang to college students and "troubled intellectuals" especially, and the Club 47, Mt. Auburn Street. Her first big splash was at the 1959 Newport Jazz Festival. Since then, Miss Baez has appeared at the 1960 Boston Arts Festival, CBS-TV "Folk Sound," the Ballad Room in Boston, Gate of Horn in Chicago, as well as Harvard, Wellesley, Yale, Brandeis, B.U. and the University of Massachusetts.

WSGA Honor System In Jeopardy

Hundreds of university women flocked to the Ira Allen Chapel, Wednesday evening, for the first WSGA mass meeting of the year. The filled Chapel reigned with anticipation and silence as Miss Terry Siegel of New York City, addressed the women student body. Miss Siegel is a 1958 UVM alumna.

WSGA President, Phyllis Levine introduced Miss Siegel, who spoke on the history of the university and the long-standing traditions that have always spoken well for the University of Vermont coed.

Miss Siegel, who was invited to speak by the president of the Council, expressed deep concern in the lack of respect and adherence to the honor system by women students on this campus. The honor code which each university woman pledges herself to when she becomes a freshman has been in effect since 1951.

Miss Siegel outlined the history of the university and the role of the woman student on this campus, through the years. She emphasized the fact that WSGA was formed in order to give the woman student a voice in decisions that affect her. The development of the honor system placed the burden of responsibility upon the student herself, as well as her fellow women colleagues.

Growing disregard for the honor system was placed not only with the guilty, but also with the silent observers.

Concluding comments of Miss Siegel's address came as an appeal to the women students to return completely to the honor system. It is "unfortunate" if a campus can not have an honor system. But, it is "tragic" if a campus with an honor system loses it, said Miss Siegel.

Also addressing the assembled was Nancy Davis, Chief Justice of the WSGA Supreme Court. Miss Davis spoke about particular breaches of the honor code, such as liquor in the living units, and the use of peach cards.

"It simply is evident," she continued, "that the honor system is not playing the integral part it should in our self-government."

"It is now either time to do something to reaffirm and reinstate the system by returning to its highest standards, or time to be honest to ourselves and others, and admit we do not choose to live under this system," Miss Davis concluded.

Each woman student was charged with considering the problem seriously. President, Phyllis Levine announced that a "joint conference" would be arranged to "hear views and find solutions to the situation."

Girls Will "Wear The Pants" For Approaching MERP Week

by Betty Fuchs

(Sing to the tune of "Mother")
M, boys, is for money you'll be saving,
E, girls, is for early — get a date,
R means that Rick Nalin they'll be having,
P is for the party — should be great,
Put them all together, they spell MERP Week,
Which means Inverse Economy.

Beginning Monday, November 12, all eligible males on campus take warning: that quiet, shy little girl who huddles like a kitten in the back of your math class will suddenly turn into a man-eating tigress! She'll stalk you from your class to the coffee shop, to your dorm, to the library. You'll feel her gleaming eyes boring into you, watching, staring. Finally, when she makes you so jumpy you can't stand it, you turn around to tell her to get lost, and that's it boy — you're hooked.

That first day she'll ask you to the coffee shop. There you'll stand, loading your tray with two sandwiches, three doughnuts, an apple, four cookies, two cartons of milk and a cup of coffee. And there she'll be, loading her tray with change — you're eating, but she's paying.

As you fill your face with her food, she invites you to watch the "Powder Puff" football game.

I guess the fifth king candidate had "to use the facilities" — at least that's where the finger is pointing. (Credit: Maestro, S.P.S.)

There'll be lots of boys there, she tells you — the five Merp Week King Candidates, for example; Larry Bender, Chris Mumford, Bill Perkins, John Mello, and Willie Lewis. They'll be acting as referees as the two all-girl football teams, the "Powders" and the "Puffs" meet in front of Southwick on Tuesday. And she's got you nailed for that, fella. How can you refuse when you've got two sandwiches, three doughnuts, an apple, four cookies, two cartons of milk and a cup of coffee in your mouth?

Wednesday she takes you to the coffee shop again. This time she only buys you a cup of coffee which you nurse through the sorority skits.

ROTC Forum

The S.A. Central Research Committee met last Tuesday to lay the groundwork and make tentative plans for an open forum on the University of Vermont's compulsory ROTC program.

The forum is presently scheduled for Thursday, November 29. There will be a formal panel discussion by members of the administration and Military Science department and representatives of the four classes. After the panel will answer questions from the floor.

Another meeting will be held next week to help complete the plans.

LAWRENCE DEBATERS COMPETE FOR HONORS

The Lawrence Debate Club of the University of Vermont has turned the corner on its first semester schedule. Competing in their sixth and seventh debate tournaments, this past weekend, the "growlers" marked the midpoint of their fall season. Thus far the debaters have brought home 35 of 56 decisions for a .625 win record. The team scored first place victories at the UVM and Norwich Round-Robin Tournaments, while finishing second at the Middlebury, Brandeis, Dartmouth and Hamilton Tournaments.

Only this past weekend, the Kitten debaters placed second behind C.C.N.Y. at the Hamilton College Novice Tourney in Clinton, New York. Twenty teams representing sixteen different colleges and universities were in competition.

The Vermont affirmative unit of Craig Nelson and Norman Snow went undefeated in securing victories over Pace College, Utica College and Union College. The negative unit of David Waite and Jim Sanderson won two of their three debates, defeating New Paltz State College of New York, and Rochester Institute of Technology, and dropping only to Rutgers University. Professor Norman T. London was the coach on the trip.

Another Catamount team of four debaters encountered stiff competition at the Rosemont College Tournament in Rosemont, Pennsylvania. Twenty-one teams from all over the eastern seaboard attended this tourney. St. Joseph's College of Philadelphia took first place.

The UVM affirmative unit of Dan Newcomb and Betsy Lisman defeated the University of Maryland and New York University, while dropping decisions to Kings College, Penn State, and Rosemont. Sharon Call and Carmen Wessner on the negative defeated New York University, while being stopped by Randolph-Mason, LaSalle, Georgetown, and Johns Hopkins. Professor John C. Travis was the coach on the trip.

This weekend the debaters head back to Philadelphia for a meet at St. Joseph's College. A second unit may be sent to the Amherst College Tournament in Massachusetts.

UVM Students Die In Canada

Vermont's annual Homecoming weekend was marred by an automobile accident that took the lives of two UVM students and University of Bridgeport coed. Killed in the head-on collision early Saturday morning were James E. Bugbee, a senior from Bellows Falls; Howard M. Solomon, a junior from Bayside, New York; and Judy Zalon of White Meadow Lake, New Jersey.

Miss Zalon is reported to have been driving at the time of the accident, which occurred near the Montreal suburb of La Prairie. Two Quebec youths were also injured in the mishap. Miss Zalon was Solomon's date for the weekend.

Bugbee was an English major in the College of Arts and Sciences, and Solomon, also in Arts and Sciences was a Sociology major. Both were residents of Marsh Hall.

'62 Homecoming: A Success For Students, Alumni

Students were back in classes on Monday and more than 2000 parents and alumni were back home after attending Homecoming at the University of Vermont over the weekend.

The weekend festivities got started on Friday evening with the Homecoming Ball. At the ball, Stu Eldred of Bennington and Lois Dodge of Grand Isle were crowned king and queen.

On Saturday morning, Lyman Rowell, Dean of Administration, spoke at the meeting of the Family Associates. Speaking as a former student, as an alumnus, as a former teacher, as the parent of a UVM graduate, and now as an administrator, Dean Rowell told of the role that Family Associates can play at a university.

During halftime ceremonies Saturday afternoon, three alumni awards were presented. The award for the alumnus coming the longest distance went to Jon Kaplan, a 1962 graduate, who is doing graduate work at Duke University.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Owens of Franklin, Michigan received the award for the parents coming the longest distance. Their daughter, Marilyn, is a freshman.

Dr. and Mrs. Jay Keller of Burlington received the award for the parents with the most students currently attending UVM. They have three, David, a junior, Dolores, a sophomore, and Patricia, a freshman.

Sunday morning found more than 300 persons attending the President's Breakfast. Dr. John T. Fey, UVM president, spoke on the role of the Parent's Association.

Other than for Saturday afternoon's snow storm, Homecoming 1962 turned out to be one of the most successful ever.

Fleming Museum Opens Displaying American Art

On Friday evening, October 19, the American Gallery of the Robert Hull Fleming Museum reopened. The completely rearranged room, which displays mostly 19th century American Art, possesses new cases and improved lighting facilities. Kenneth Wilson, curator of Old Sturbridge Village, Sturbridge Mass., spoke at the opening of the gallery. His topic was "Decorative Arts of Early 19th Century New England."

The museum director, Mr. Janson, said that many pieces that had been in storage could now be brought out and displayed. The room not only shows the style of the age, but also the imagination of New Englanders.

The items are American-owned gifts and contributions from Vermonters, especially local families, to the Fleming Museum. Furniture, paintings, and pottery are arranged in an interesting manner throughout the room. In particular, there are five glass cases in which are displayed various styles of women's clothing from 1800-1900. Each case depicts American fashions from a particular period in history. One case displays a rare 1800 calico maternity dress. "Usually the ornate dressy satins and silks are preserved," Margaret Holzimer, the museum's curator, had stated. She herself arranged these cases. In addition to the costumes, in the cases are jewelry, hair ornaments, samplers, and even a patchwork quilt. Another case contains a wooden cradle of the 19th century, which had belonged to the Waterman family.

The exhibits of the 18th century Steigl glass, Victorian silver, German and English china, and beautifully decorated 18th century French fans were of course not of American origin, but were items that New Englanders themselves had used.

The American Gallery of the Fleming Museum displays many treasures which were owned and contributed by New England families.

UVM Date Bureau I

Once there was a little girl (or boy) who sat behind a handsome blonde in Poli Sci (or French 3) class. Naturally she (or he) did all in her (or his) power to meet this fascinating person, but all tactics failed. At last one day as she (or he) was reading the local newspaper (ye CYNIC), what did she (or he) spy but a small blank entitled "Date Bureau." "Aha," she (or he) yipped, to the great dismay of the gray-bearded professor who was diligently lecturing to the little cherubs whom he had inveigled into his course on "How to Dunk Your Doughnuts IIIa." "This is just what I've dreamed about." So she (or he) busily took out her (or his) little blue fountain pen and filled out the little blank as follows:

Name: Susie Ann McDoddle; phone ext. 000; address: just call me "Susie;" Lady, I hope. Height: 8ft., 2 in. Blonde, at present. Prefers blondes, of course! I am: peppy but intellectual, and I like serious people. This little gem of information she deposited in the box in the Bookstore, and hopefully waited her chances.

To be specific, we state: all of you lads and lassies who would like something new and different, a bit of excitement before the long cold winter, please patronize our date bureau. Should it prove successful, we assure you it will be continued throughout the year. This trial flight is to see how people feel about things and just for fun. Both men and women are to sign up -- it takes everyone to make it a success. Heigh ho, everybody -- see you there.

Have you realized how dangerous it is to cross Main St. from the back path to main campus? The Central Research Committee of the Student Association is looking into this matter and would like to effect a solution. We propose that the city of Burlington put a manually controlled stop light at this crossing and a sign warning of the light. When the interstate is completed, there will be many more cars entering Main St. via Rt. 2 at a higher rate of speed. In order to protect you, as students using this crossing, we would appreciate your filling out and returning the below questionnaire to the Information Office in the Waterman building.

1. Do you use this crossing?
Yes No
2. Approximately how many times per day?
3. Do you think such a light would be effective? If not, please comment.

Never A War?

RUSSIA DECLARES WAR

Two days after the din has died away and the holocaust has passed on, police walk among the ruins of UVM attempting an estimate of the dead. Nurses walk down the corridors of Mary Fletcher and DeGoesbriand Hospitals and into the rooms trying to locate students and faculty members who have not reported to Waterman within 48 hours.

The phones have been destroyed or disconnected. Communication between parents and their sons or daughters is impossible.

Amidst the rubble, the smoke seems to drift in a peculiar shape - a question mark. It seems to query: "Why?" Why were there so many casualties; why was the death toll so high?

It almost appears as if the populace of UVM was caught unprepared for the catastrophic events, as if no one knew where to go or what to do. There was no direction and no leadership. As mayhem prevailed, panic was the rule.

A morbid hypothesis, but after consideration, perhaps a very real possibility. As students of UVM, we are the wards of this University, and it is responsible for our welfare. To this date no attempt has been made at instruction regarding the proper methods of protection and safety during an enemy attack. The student body remains uncounseled and unaware of the conduct and precautions necessary during this critical time.

What does an individual do when the sirens sound if he is sitting in a classroom?

What does a student do if he is sitting in the coffee shop and there is a blinding flash of light?

What does a co-ed do if she is on her way back to the dorms when the sirens scream?

What does the couple do if they are driving home from a date some Saturday evening and the night becomes day?

There are very few who can answer these questions and be sure of themselves. What guidance have the dormitory counselors given the freshmen on this topic? What counsel have the housemothers given their girls? What advice have the fraternity presidents given the fraters? The answers are: NONE.

Has any attempt been made to publish a brief booklet for the student's use on this subject? Has the administration initiated any programs or surveys to deal with this problem? Has the Student Association formed a research committee to look into the matter? NO! NO! NO!

The world is in a turmoil about us. We discuss and ponder solutions to world problems, but we turn our backs on a very real possibility. There are none among us who can question the wisdom of ample preparation for future possibilities. There are none among us who would dare say: "It is the sign of a weak nation which realizes the full potential of a threat."

Perhaps we are being kept in ignorance on the subject for a very specific reason. Is it possible that any measures which would be undertaken would be valueless? Are we all to be sacrificed without even trying because of the proximity of Plattsburgh Air Force Base? If Burlington is obliterated, UVM goes with it. We must sit idly by contemplating the results of such a disaster without knowing what to do about it.

Many students learn some of the fundamentals pertinent to this type of safety in high school. Lie flat against the curb. Get down under your seat. Lie flat under the dashboard of your car.

Certainly a good many individuals have forgotten. It is a certainty that not everything previously learnt is presently applicable. There is a definite need for information of the type proposed, and somewhere along the line someone must assume the responsibility for its dissemination.

If a boxer fakes a jab, the opponent's guard nevertheless, goes up. It is time to put up our guard. It is time to make sure that the attempted jab to the chin does not turn into a mighty blow to the heart and there is no guard up to minimize its effects.

Letters To The Editor Campus Calendar

To the Editor:

The Public Relations Office was glad to note the interest expressed, in a recent Vermont CYNIC, by Barbara Lawrence, '65, in the campus calendar known as "Today and Tomorrow on Campus."

This Office, Public Relations, rather than the Alumni Office, is charged with the gathering and disseminating of calendar items of interest to the campus. Student organizations, as well as all other University groups who are scheduling lectures or other special events, are invited to make use of the facilities of "Today and Tomorrow on Campus."

This can be done by notifying the Calendar, Public Relations, at least two days in advance (longer notice is even more helpful) of the time and place of the event, the name of the speaker, subject, and any other necessary data. The new public Relations extension number is 548. The office is located on the second floor of the Alumni House.

JOINT STATEMENTS BY THE PRESIDENTS OF MIDDLEBURY, NORWICH, AND THE UNIVERSITY OF VERMONT

We are agreed that pride in alma mater, college spirit, and friendly rivalry between colleges are healthy and desirable, and should be encouraged; however, we are also agreed that the damage of property, either on a rival campus or elsewhere, is not a proper manifestation of college spirit. We condemn such actions, and any student who is apprehended may expect to be subjected to disciplinary action. We also wish to announce at this time that the possession or consumption of alcoholic beverages is not permitted at football games held under the auspices of the colleges we represent.

The month of October seems to have seen a spread of vandalism on several university campuses. From the Campus Chat, (North Texas State University). "More than $160 and two watches valued at over $125 were taken from the Sigma Phi Epsilon fraternity house. Twenty-one persons reported losses."

The New Hampshire (UNH, Durham, N.H.) reports that within a two week period, damage was inflicted to dormitories and other campus buildings. Part of the vandalism has been attributed to students from other campuses. Other markings and markings were apparently done by the members of the freshman class who left their class numerals behind as souvenirs. "The action that drew the most criticism from the students of the UNH campus was the writing of '66 in red paint on the front of the president's house."

THINKING OUT LOUD

by Kim Boriskin

RESULTS!!!!

Before I give any results, I would like to clarify a few points that several people seemed confused about. First, some people, especially faculty, have accused me of trying to "dictate" to the university. What I can and cannot teach. A few have even gone so far as to suggest that it was out of place for me even to suggest that a course -- any course -- be given, to do it publicly, and to be serious about it. Another mistake people made was to think that the course I suggested was just to be a simplified course on how to be an expert on Communism in one easy semester -- a course, in other words, to turn out batches of "thirty-day wonders."

On the first point, I was not, and am not, trying to dictate anything to the university. I was merely talking about a course, and not formally suggesting it. I know very well that there is a mechanism for getting new courses into the curriculum, and I was not trying to circumvent it. Why should I bother the school if nobody wants to take my proposed course? I was trying to ascertain the degree of demand for the course, and nothing else. If, after all the returns are in, the results show some demand for the course (and those are the indications right now), then I will try to get the course instituted, working through the proper channels.

It seems that a lot of teachers have the idea that courses are given just so that they can teach. I humbly submit that this is just the reverse of the true situation; courses are given for the students to take, and teachers teach so that students can learn. Students do not take classes so that a teacher will have a job. Since the classes are for the students, it seems to me that it is not only a student's right to suggest courses, but that it is incumbent upon him to do so if he thinks the need exists for his proposed course. It is the place of the college newspaper, it also seems to me, to make the suggestion public -- whether in a column, letter, news story, or whatever -- and to be, to some extent, a forum for discussion of the proposal.

My course, finally, is not meant to be a class for mass-producing experts. For anyone interested enough in Communism there are, as Dr. Daniels pointed out last week, several courses in the politics, economics, history, and mechanism of Communism, and these are readily available, assuming one can take them all (political science majors, for instance). But for those of us who can't, there is almost nothing. We have just so many elective hours, and of those, many must be in required courses, which limits us even further. That leaves only one or two free electives, and it would be extremely difficult to take all or even enough of the current courses in just a semester or two. That is why a single semester course, with a possible second semester extension, is necessary. The subject is too important to let so many people pass through college ignorant because they simply couldn't get the courses and their prerequisites into their programs. It would be easy enough to give a one semester course available to everybody.

But to get back to the point. The one semester program would not be for turning out experts, first because that would be a sheer impossibility, and second because there already are classes for budding experts. The rest of the student body is, for the most part, fundamentally ignorant and ill-informed, misinformed, or just uninformed, let alone experts. This situation is deplorable, and should be remedied in such a way as to make the remedy available to as many people as possible. I suggest that about the only way to do this is to have a single semester course in Communism that has no prerequisites except, possibly, junior standing. It will not turn out experts by any means (nor need it do so), but it will give the people who take it at least a basic understanding of what Communism is and isn't, and how it works. From there it might be fairly easy to learn more on one's own, and what one does learn thereafter will not be grounded on false assumptions and a general ignorance of the subject. That is the important thing; to have a decent understanding of the basic principles and workings of Communism on which to build, and to have some idea of the actual nature of Communism even if one does not build on it. A little learning may be a dangerous thing, but in this case it is far, far better than none at all.

Now for the results of the questionnaire. At the moment there are 162 returns. Of these, 130 have checked off the first question (desirable, if not necessary), many with some degree of qualification or amplification of one sort or another. Eight (8) have answered number two (not so necessary, but would like to take the course anyway), four (4) have checked number 3 (would not take course, but do not object to giving it), and ten (10) have had some objection to the course being given at all (number 4), although this includes someone who sent in two answers. In addition, there are 7 that are unclassifiable, mostly because the person involved checked two answers.

It is gratifying to note that, of the people who objected to the course, most did not object on the basis that it would turn into Red propaganda (although some did), but that it might risk turning into extreme right, John Birch propaganda. It is also pleasing that the percentage who answered number one is staying right around 80%. But the most pleasing thing is that we might possibly hit 200 returns, which is tremendous for this university. Nobody expected more than 75 or 80, and even that many might be considered good for this school. I would like more than 200 returns, of course, but even the 200 is better than was expected. It may even begin to show a valid cross-section of opinion.

By next week all but the last few should be in, and I'll again print the results at that time. Also, I'll begin publishing some of the comments I've received, and possibly continue them in two weeks, if there are enough worthy of note. I'll also try to keep everyone posted on the progress of the course, assuming I decide to go ahead and try to get it into the curriculum. However, that is for another time, and I need the questionnaire results first.

From the Daily Orange of October 30, (Syracuse University): A floor was wrecked at the Phi Sigma Delta fraternity house. "Couches, chairs, tables and curtains were ripped and slashed beyond repair." Estimated damage totaled $3,000. "Swastikas and anti-semitic slogans were scratched into the furniture of the predominantly Jewish fraternity. A bottle was thrown through a picture window in the living room."

It hinted that teen-agers are responsible for the action. According to SU Dean of Men, Earle Clifford, "This kind of destructive vandalism does not occur in any fashion internally." The fraternity is fully insured for the damages.

For the penny-wise: Were's news via the Gomecock (University of South Carolina): "A new, exclusive discount program for students and teachers has been developed by the Student Subscription Service of Los Angeles. Students and teachers throughout the United States may now order books (best sellers, etc.), record albums (all labels) ... at a 10% to 50% discount. "The Student Subscription Service of Los Angeles, California is the official representative of the many companies and is anxious to hear from anyone interested in taking advantage of this discount program. This is offered to any student or teacher in the United States as a free service, there are no membership fees or service charges, and no obligation to buy at any time." Anyone interested may write to 1743 1/2 North Kenmore Avenue, L.A. 27, California for additional information.

For what it's worth: The Connecticut Daily Campus reports that "more than half of U Conn students at the main campus are working part-time to help finance their educations."

The Temple University News has the following suggestion to offer for cutting down studying time. "Too often in education the art of listening is neglected. . . . "Through grade school, we learn by listening to lectures and those few individuals who have learned the art of listening don't even have to crack a book in many pre-college courses. "In college, careful listening can save much time when doing assignments and work of the course.

"The desired end of any instruction is to get certain information into the student's mind. "We think faster than we speak. Therefore, students should organize and review words in their minds before they speak. " . . . If your ideas differ from the instructor's, argue with him by giving evidence After you have the classroom, try to remember the speech in your mind and try to recall the entire speech if possible "Typing out your notes will also fix thoughts in your mind."

From the Maine Campus (University of Maine, Orono, Maine) comes word that a clothing drive was held among the dorms and fraternity houses on the campus. "The serviceable clothing . . . will be used to aid Korean flood victims during the rapidly approaching winter months. "In the later part of September

"ELECTION NIGHT THOUGHTS"

Any "off year" election is a peculiar animal; this one was particularly so. Voters turned out in record numbers to elect 35 governors, 39 senators, and 435 congressmen. This would lead observers to expect some definite voting trend, some driving force which got the voters out. But, upon examination of the results, only one thing seems sure: People felt strongly enough about political matters to come out in unexpected strengths to vote for a conglomeration of officials and to give analysts precious little to base sweeping generalizations upon.

As I write this, the most obvious trend in the election is the prevalence of ambiguity. The Democrats have gained control of the Senate quite handily. The Republicans now seem to have no chance of capturing the upper house until 1966. Many Kennedy people have won, but the balance between "New Frontiersmen" and non-supporters of the Kennedy program seems essentially unchanged.

At the same time, the incomplete returns that are now available show only small Republican gains in the House, but the GOP has managed to gain or hold control of at least four important states: New York, Ohio, Michigan, and Pennsylvania.

However, certain generalizations can be made.

THE END OF SANCTUARIES

Among the most interesting of these is that one-party sanctuaries seem on their way out. Democratic control over many of the largest cities has been out considerably. On the other hand, the Republican rural areas have not treated Democrats as badly as might have been expected.

Here in New England, Democrats have performed some real political feats, and the Solid South is not nearly as solid as it was last week.

I think we can begin to look for a real lessening of definitive geographical and urban-rural political divisions.

THE CHANGING FACE OF THE GOP

A second development which is worth noting is the change that may be taking place within the Republican party. Party victors have tended to be of the liberal wing of the GOP. Conservative victories are limited indeed. Where California's Kuchel, New York's Javits, Pennsylvania's Scranton, and a host of other liberal Republicans delivered stunning victories, their conservative colleagues, from New Hampshire to California, found themselves defeated.

The Republicans may be losing their ponderous old men.

THE PRESIDENCY, 1964

But this loss has not, I think, put them within striking distance of the Presidency in 1964. The Republican heroes have clearly been tarnished.

Governor Nelson Rockefeller suffered a real defeat at the hands of a colorless political unknown. His margin of victory was not nearly as great as it should have been considering his fine administrative record, his large political war chest, and his almost pathetic opponent.

Yet Rockefeller looks like the only likely GOP Presidential candidate for 1964.

Richard Nixon, in losing the California election, has probably consigned himself to political obscurity. He is not in the running in 1964.

Nor -- despite their gubernatorial victories -- are the other two now-leading names in the Republican party. Romney's Michigan victory was altogether too close to be nationally impressive and Governor-elect Scranton is too young, too unknown to be considered serious 1964 Presidential timber.

So, unless some surprising developments arise between now and 1964, President Kennedy will be present at his own reinauguration.

CLOSER TO HOME

Vermont is one of the areas where many of these many election trends were visible. Vermont's election of her first Democratic Governor in over a hundred years will bring many changes in the Republican party here. Keyser's nomination in 1960 was won in a close fight with Robert Babcock, who was then leader of the party's liberal faction. Babcock refused to oppose Keyser this summer, it may have been one of his wisest choices.

Victory in the struggle for the leadership of the Vermont GOP will go to liberals like Babcock. And this has real meaning for the whole nation. I think what will happen in this state will be repeated all over the country. Control of the GOP will be determined in the state capitals not in Washington. That control will go to young vigorous Republicans.

This election may have been the best thing that could have happened to the party of Lincoln.

a violent storm caused seawall dikes along the Tongchon River to break. The flood which resulted in undated two thirds of the city" which included 12,000 victims.

According to the University Hatcher (George Washington University), it is reported that at the University of Sydney (Australia), "The University librarian . . . walked out in protest against the "desperate shortage" of books in the library. Students are shocked by administration apathy which has brought about such a deplorable state of affairs. Some "lecturers have advised their students to hide any book they find if they ever want to see it again. Book stealing has become self-preservation. The books necessary for courses are simply unavailable. Dr. Fisher is off to the United States to become Professor of Library Science at University of Pittsburgh. There's definitely a revolt in the offering!"

Homecoming was the most exciting weekend of the semester. TEP's Kate Walkers, Steve Bernstein and Terry Finkle, heightened the thrill of the football game with a demonstration of walkin' to de' kake. TEP also had a very successful Homecoming Party. Festivities galore at Sig Ep this past weekend - an open house after the game with folk singing, entertainment provided by the Wayfaring Strangers, followed by a buffet, and then a house party. All the parties were great successes and gave the remodeled Sig Ep "Atmosphere Room" its second christening.

Recently Tri Deltas spent a very enjoyable evening with their favorite professors at an annual Tri Delta "Apple" Polishing Party. The Pi Phis have also been very busy. Mr. Hanan, placement director, and Dean Patzer have visited with the girls and spoke informally at their meeting. The Pi Phis would also like to thank all those who helped support their Community Chest Project by spending an enjoyable evening listening to the Tarriers. Foreign intrigue at the TEP house. The Mirsk has a new roommate. What will El Tigre say?

Olatunji Hailed As Superb

by Eve Salomon
Once again the George Bishop Lane Series has presented a superb program. On Monday, November 5, Olatunji and his company provided a colorful and exciting evening of African music and dancing.

brotherhood. Congratulations to Jeff Lewenda, Steve Ratner, Fred Cahan, Don Grossman, and Dave Kauder. Sue Verrier is proudly wearing a Pi Phi Pledge pin. Alpha Gamma Rho also has a new pledge, Kirwin Flanders. Congratulations to Tri Deltas three new pledges - Marty McSweeney, '65, Maureen Foley, '64, and Jeanne Grasso, '65. Congratulations to Pi Phi's Jean Beckley, '64, who just became pinned to Mike Crane, Sigma Nu. And best wishes to Peter Hallis, '65, who recently became pinned to Sarabeth Lipson of Lasalle Junior College.

The highlight of the evening was the dance of strength called "Ebo." It was breathtaking to watch the soloist, Mario Timmons, show excellent muscular control and isolation of parts of the body in his movements. Another outstanding dance was the "Chants of Hope" in which the two dancers conveyed the emotions of the mystery of love beautifully. By successfully conveying the emotions or feelings of their dances, the troupe was able to hold the audience entranced. The backdrop and lighting helped set the mood successfully for the sense of these primitive dances.

The musical compositions were very interesting, especially fascinating was Olatunji's drum solo and his demonstration of a few African musical instruments.

The final dance, a challenge dance, with its intricate steps and movements, was delightful and ended the evening on a perfect note. It was the culmination of the sense of African music and dancing.

MISS MARBERGER PLAYS IN FACULTY CONCERT

On Sunday, November 4th, Miss Nola I. Marberger, pianist and Instructor of Music at the University of Vermont, presented the first of six faculty concerts. The recital, held in Ira Allen Chapel, began a new series which is sponsored by the University's Music Department. The program included Fantasiestücke Op. 12 - Schumann (Des Abends, Aufschwung, Warum, Grillen, In der nacht, Fabel, Traumes Wirren, Ende vom Lied), Sonata in A (flat) major Op. 110 - Beethoven, and Le Tombeau de Couperin - Ravel (Prelude, Forlane, Rigaudon, Minuette, Toccato).

Miss Marberger attended the Eastman School of Music, where she received her Bachelor of Music degree in piano and Music Education with distinction, and Indiana University, where she received her Master of Music degree in piano and harpsichord with honor. She held a graduate teaching assistantship at Indiana University from 1960 to 1962. She is a member of Sigma Alpha Iota, National Professional Music Sorority, and Pi Kappa Lambda, National Honorary Music Fraternity.

She has played the Beethoven Third Piano Concerto with the Reading, Pennsylvania, Symphony Orchestra and has played in recitals in Rochester, New York, Bloomington, Indiana, and Evansville, Indiana. This past summer she accompanied Adele Addison, Agnes Davis, Jenny Tourel, Josef Gingold, James Pellerite, and Janos Starker at the Aspen Music Festival in Colorado.

Pall Mall Presents - GIRL WATCHER'S GUIDE

HORN-RIMMED BOOKSTACKER

CAMPUS TYPE III

The Bookstacker serves the cause of classical literature in various ways. Perhaps the least of these is in keeping the rows of books properly aligned and the jackets free of dust.

Her most important contribution is in improving the environment for study, enhancing the halls of learning with her own classical form. Many a college man has discovered a previously unfelt craving for knowledge simply because he received his copy of Homer from the hand of a deep-breathing redhead who sighed, "I think Homer is the most!" Yes, it pays to take a good look at the classics now and then.

Among cigarettes, Pall Mall is a classic - famous length, fine tobacco... no flat "filtered-out" flavor, no dry "smoked-out" taste. Try Pall Mall and see!

Pall Mall's natural mildness is so good to your taste!
So smooth, so satisfying, so downright smokeable!

MERP WEEK

Thursday you're together again in Waterman, pitching coins into the glass jars in front of the pictures of the King candidates. Every penny counts as one vote; the lucky guy with the most money in his jar gets to keep it all. The rest of the money goes to the Panhellenic Society. As you watch her filling some other boy's pocket with money she could be spending on you, you're already planning a way to be nominated for King next year. (Greedy boy!)

No need to worry though, she's saved enough to take you to the TGIF (Thank God It's Friday) Dance the following night. From 8:30 to 12:00 you dance to Rick Nalin and the Night Riders on the admission she paid. As you walk her home you find you're waiting for her to ask you to something else the next day.

But you're already at her dorm and she still hasn't mentioned Saturday. Could she be taking you for granted? Only five minutes to curfew; she's cutting it awfully close. Did she say good night? Hey, wait a minute -- would she like to go to the movies with you tomorrow? She'd love to. When will she pick you up? What? You mean Men's Economic Recovery Period is over? Already? Oh, well, it was great while it lasted, but let's face it, buddy, all good

Library Committees Meet

The library committee met with the University Senate Library Committee and the following points were discussed:

1) There will be a program initiated to control the use of the library with librarians making intermittent checks of I.D. cards when deemed necessary.

2) The students were again things come to an end, and once again WERP (Women's Economic Recovery Period) has taken over for another year.

asked to be more quiet in Bailey.

3) An all-university exam file may be set up in Bailey.

4) Mr. Bowman would like to see an expansion of the periodicals that are sold in the University Store.

5) A program to hold discussion groups on a selected book each semester is being discussed.

Merp Kings

This year's candidates for MERP Week king are representatives of five fraternities. They are Larry Mender, Phi Sigma Delta, hailing from Forest Hills, New York; Willy Lewis, Sigma Phi Epsilon, from West Rupert, Vermont; John Mello, Alpha Tau Omega, from New Bedford, Massachusetts; Chris Mumford, Sigma Alpha Epsilon, from Rutland, Vermont; and Bill Perkins, Phi Delta Theta, from Beverly, Massachusetts.

Each of the seven sororities submits to Panhellenic Council the names of two of their favorite men, kingly types, of course. Panhel then puts these names in a hat, and a very unbiased member of the council - their advisor, to be exact - pulls out five names.

The student body will make the final decision. Election will take place in lower Waterman on the Wednesday of MERP Week, when the girls will cast their votes for their favorite guy and the guys will support their pals. The newly elected king will be crowned at the MERP Week Dance of Friday night.

MFH Sponsors Sports Show

The Mary Fletcher Hospital Auxiliary is sponsoring a winter sports show on Saturday, November 17. One of the features is a "Miss Stretch Pants" contest with the lucky winner receiving a pair of stretch pants of her choice.

Requirements are:

1. Wear stretch pants or your own or borrow a pair.
2. Pay $1.00 admission to Winterfest which entitles you to see Vic Coty's latest ski movie, meet Clef Taylor of "Shortee" ski fame, and view all the various booths.
3. Sign up inside the door of Memorial Auditorium.

The Contest starts at 2:00. P.S. There are many wonderful door prizes also.

New Gym To Be Dedicated Cake Walk

The University of Vermont will dedicate its new gymnasium-physical education plant during the Cake Walk weekend in February.

Delay in arrival and installation of bleachers forced postponement of earlier hopes for a dedication during the Homecoming Weekend which opened Friday, (Nov. 2).

Paul V. Mravlag, Jr., director of alumni relations at Vermont, said the gym dedication committee hoped the choice of Cake Walk Weekend would provide an opportunity for many returning alumni to "enjoy a first hand tour of the new gym."

He noted also that it was hoped availability of the new facility for the staging of the Cake Walk carnival would make it possible for all interested alumni to obtain Cake Walk tickets.

He also noted "with regret" that the University was unable to invite alumni or other visitors to tour the gym, since the contractor has asked the University's cooperation in keeping the new facility closed to visitors until it has been formally accepted from the contractor.

Frosh Review

Once again the Kittens have completed another successful season under coach Fuzzy Evans. Although this year's squad consisted of only twenty-five fellows, the boys who were out there really wanted to play.

This year's forward line was headed by the fine all-around play of big Rusty Brink. Brink was both a defensive and offensive standout for the frosh in all five games. The guards on this year's team were Harvey Bazarian and John Sullivan. Both of these boys possess tremendous power and speed as was demonstrated by their crisp blocking and hard-nosed tackling. To the left and right of these boys, playing the tackle positions, were Dick Sears, Richard Holt, Bob Zahkar, and Boyd Tomassetti. All four of these boys worked hard throughout the year, not only on Saturday but during the daily practices. Sears was one of the biggest boys on the team this year, weighing in at 230. Our ends not only played fine ball for the Kittens this year, but they saved quite a few games for the freshman when they could not get their ground attack going. Holding down the end positions this year were Steve Ross - 6'6", 225 lbs., Bill Van Bennekum - 6'3", 215 lbs., and Mike Ingham - 6', 190 lbs. Throughout the season many of the fine catches made by these boys often accounted for the only scoring of the day. At the quarterback slot were two very versatile boys, Scott Fitz and Jack O'Dea. Both of these boys demonstrated their ability to not only pass but also to run. Many comments have been made about the pin-point passing of these boys, especially in the last game when Fitz, who was hampered by a bad leg, constantly hit his receivers against a strong Dartmouth defense. The yardage was ground out by the hard-nosed fullbacks, Terry Lynn and Lefty Harrington. Lynn is 190 lbs., 5'10", and has a great deal of speed to go along with his power. Harrington, despite his small size, was not only a fine offensive player this year but was also a terror on defense. Playing in the halfback slots this year were Ed Denning, Tom Gagliardi, Chip Plato, and Rolly Delfausse. All four of these boys helped to grind out the offensive yardage for the Kittens. Unfortunately, during the middle of the season the Kittens lost the services of Denning and Plato due to injuries.

This year's team clinched the State Title for the fourth consecutive year, with a 3-1-1 record, scoring 91 points offensively and holding their opponents to 40 points. This year's wins came over Norwich, Middlebury, and Dartmouth.

Sport Notices

Freshman basketball tryouts will be held Monday, Nov. 12, at 6:00 P.M. in the old gym.

Intramural bowling has begun. All games are played in the Waterman Building on the "Duck-Pin" lanes in the recreation room.

After a turnout of 106 candidates and selection of 60 members, the co-ed (9-18 yrs) Lake Champlain Swim Club is ready to begin training at the "Y" pool starting next week. UVM students acting as coaches are Bob Clifford, Jr., Bill Bishop, Dave Stover and Carmyn Somes.

There are still opportunities for UVM students, men or women to participate as coaches in this fast growing program, which sends swimmers all over New England and to Montreal to compete. Prospective coaches should either call Ken Whitman, Administrative Director, UN 2-8405, stop by and see him at Lambda Iota, 440 Pearl, or drop him a card.

Amidon, Slamecka, Grant Are Vermont's No. 1 Fans

by Bernie Zaccaro

Each Saturday afternoon, when the Catamounts' stands are being filled, one may notice hundreds of strange faces. Among these are four persons who have become more of a familiar sight on the field than some of the players themselves. They are there for every game rendering their support in cheering the team on to victory.

Professor Norman Slamecka of the Psychology Department is one of the most consistent supporters the team has ever had. He believes that football is one of the finest sports for developing an individual's responsibility. Professor Slamecka believes that any boy who is able to understand and carry out his assignment on a football field is mentally "on the ball".

This avid fan has missed only a few practices this year. He has attempted to note the manner in which the new coach, Robert Clifford, handles the squad. Professor Slamecka feels that it is necessary to employ sound psychological factors in treating a team in any sports. Coach Clifford uses psychology on the Catamounts by applying positive conditioning. He often praises his players and offers a secondary reinforcement of a $2.50 tie for an exceptional effort during the games.

Doctor Richard Amidon, the Director of Student Health Service at the Wasson Infirmary, is the team's physician. Doc is always present at the games, and checks in every day at the field for any possible injuries. He and Bob Grant, the new trainer for the team, go hand in hand in keeping the squad physically fit and alert on the gridiron.

Last but not least, is Lyman "Shorty" Cote. Shorty has been here at UVM since 1938. In his younger days, he was a Golden Gloves Champ, and still gives the appearance of being one. Shorty is Equipment Supervisor of the Athletic Department and takes a sincere interest in the team's activities.

Besides having outstanding players, there are many other aspects which make up a good football team. One which is often disregarded is the support given the team. Professor Slamecka, Doctor Amidon, Bob Grant, and Shorty Cote are the four major constituents of this aspect at the University of Vermont. At this week's game, one is sure to see them, UVM's number 1 fans.

Cats Seek To "Get Even" Against Middlebury

Pool Enhances Gym's Beauty

Swim Team

by Bertie Sprague

As work on the new gymnasium inches toward completion, swimming coach Les Legget is preparing to begin the task of building up a team. He has the most modern facilities at his command, now all he needs is a team. Within the next two weeks he plans to take definite steps toward finding that team. There will be no formal intercollegiate team in '63 but there will be one the following year.

It is important that he receives the enthusiastic support of the student body since the amount of support that he is given will decide on what scale the team will operate. Anyone who is interested in swimming is strongly urged to go out for the team.

The normal season runs from early fall through March, but due to the late start it will probably be late December before actual competition will take place. This will provide Coach Legget and his staff with an opportunity to work with the team and build it up so that in another year it can carry a larger schedule.

Coach Legget is optimistic about what to expect. It will take many hours of hard work but to put it in his words, "We will know more after we get into the pool."

Dedication

The University of Vermont will dedicate its new gymnasium—physical education plant during the Kake Walk weekend in February.

Delay in arrival and installation of bleachers forced postponement of earlier hopes for a dedication during Homecoming over the weekend.

Vermont will play its home basketball schedule at the new gym. The first home game will be December 11 against New Hampshire.

Paul V. Mravlag Jr., director of alumni relations, said the gym dedication committee hoped the choice of Kake Walk Weekend would provide an opportunity for many returning alumni to "enjoy a first-hand tour of the new gym."

He noted also that it was hoped availability of the new facility for the staging of the Kake Walk carnival would make it possible for all interested alumni to obtain Kake Walk tickets.

He said the university was unable to invite alumni or other visitors to tour the gym over this past weekend because the contractor has asked the University's cooperation in keeping the new facility closed to visitors until it has been formally accepted.

Kittens Win VT. Title For Fourth Year

The UVM Kittens nipped the Dartmouth B Frosh 8-7 at Centennial Field last Saturday. All the scoring came in a roughly fought fourth quarter.

Vermont finally broke into the scoring column when Rollie Delfausse crashed over from the four with 6 minutes left in the game. Quarterback Scott Fitz, a standout although bothered by a bad knee, passed to end Bill VanBennekum for two points and it was 8-0 Vermont.

Dartmouth halfback Robin Halle took the ensuing kickoff on his own five, faked a handoff and then streaked down the sidelines for the Dartmouth score. The conversion, a pass attempt by Jim Nutt, failed.

Following the kickoff, Vermont fumbled on its own 29 but held for downs and took over on the 32-yard line. Tony Planski, the tremendous Kitten punter, boomed out a 45-yard punt to the Dartmouth 25-yard line. Nutt then hit Rock Calvano for a 43-yard pass and two plays later Nutt ran to the 11. The Vermont defense held to a 4th down and three yards to go for a touchdown when Lefty Harrington and Dick Holt recovered a Dartmouth fumble to insure the Kitten Victory.

During the entire game the Vermont freshmen kept the play in the Dartmouth end. The three Dartmouth squads were continually stopped by the UVM forward wall of Sears, Holt, Sullivan and Zakhar. Line backers Brink and Bazarian contained the shifty Big Green halfbacks, while deep backs Fitz, Gagliardi, Delfausse, and Harrington covered the Dartmouth ends. Mike Ingham did yeoman service at end while injured fullback Terry Lynn gave moral support from the sideline. Jack O'Dea and Scott Fitz were frustrated the entire day as the Kitten receivers continually dropped their pin-pointed passes.

The game was the final of the year and gave Vermont coach Fuzzy Evans's Kittens a 3-1-1 record. The Frosh secured the Frosh State Title for Vermont for the fourth consecutive year. Coach Bob Clifford will be looking forward to adding many of the talented frosh to his Varsity in '63.

UM Overpowers UVM 34-6

The Catamounts will be going into Saturday's annual battle with state rival Middlebury seeking to even their season's ledger at 4-4 and to even the series with the Panthers at 25-25. The win would also mean a State Series Championship for Coach Bob Clifford in his first year at UVM.

This past Saturday the Cats were defeated by a powerful and experienced University of Massachusetts team that currently leads the Yankee Conference with a 5-0 mark. The Catamounts started the game with fired-up drive that almost resulted in a score for the Green and Gold. The game was played before a Homecoming crowd of more than 6,000 Vermont faithfuls.

Half of the contest was played in a driving snowstorm. By the end of the third period the yard markers were completely obscured and neither team could get solid footing (see cartoon). Players from both teams skid along the frozen turf for their yardage in the waning moments of the game. UVM seemed to be a strong opponent in the first period as they held the Redmen and outplayed them offensively. The way the Cats played in the initial stanza did not indicate that the final score would reach the proportions it eventually did.

Receiving the opening kickoff, Vermont unleashed their speedster Ken Burton for a 17-yard gain around end. On the second play of the game it was Burton again who went for five more. But the UMass trenchmen forced the Cats to punt.

On Massachusetts' first play of the game "Ollie" Thoreson busted in the Redmen's backfield to jar the football loose from quarterback Jerry Wechtel's hands as he was about to pass. Alert Frank Bolden fell on the loose pigskin to set the Cats up on the UMass 19-yard line. But all the Cliffordmen could do from here was gain two yards and incomplete two passes. Paul Toussaint's field-goal attempt was wide and Cats seemed to lose the impetus of their initial surge as they spent the remainder of the day mostly on the defense.

The Redmen scored twice in the second period. Both scores came within three minutes as the big UMass line ripped holes in the UVM defensive line to free their speedy backs. Dan DeRose shot through an opening in the line for a 29 scoring scamper. George Pleau added the extra point with a perfect placement. Pleau is the best place-kicker in the YanCan. He has converted on 19 of 21 attempts and has kicked two field goals. He went 4 for 5 in this game as his last attempt was blocked by hustling Bill Davidson.

The second score came on a four-yard buck up the middle by Leo Biron. This six-pointer was set up by a beautifully executed screen pass. Wechtel concealed the ball on his hip as he bootlegged it around the left end where he stopped and fired a little bloop pass to Loren Flagg. Flagg raced 57-yards to the four before he was caught from behind by fleet Deane Kent. The touchdown ensued and the Redmen left the field with a 14-0 advantage at the half.

In the snowy second half the men from Massachusetts added three more tallies on an 18-yard run by Ken Kezer, a one-yard dive by Biron, and a four-yard plunge by Dick Lewis with only 15 seconds left in the game.

UVM was unable to move against the big UMass line on the ground so it took to the air. The Catamounts' passing game wasn't clicking either as they only completed 7 of 22. But midway in the last period Vermont set up their only score as Bolden recovered a Massachusetts fumble on the 27. From here quarterback Chris Greer moved the Cats to the Redmen's 13-yard stripe, on three running plays and a 10-yard pass to Kent. On the third down Greer connected with Bill Burke for a 13-yard scoring strike. The try for extra points failed as a Greer pass went incomplete.

Vermont showed some sparks of excellent play but could not put them together and warm-up the UVM eleven. Frank Bolden and Bill Burke played very well at the end positions. Tackles Dave Sequist and Thoreson turned in solid performances, but just as all the rest of the Catamounts, they were not consistent. Sequist injured his ankle early in the game and didn't see much action. Seek will be ready for Middlebury this week. All the Catamounts of Coach Bob Clifford will be looking forward to "getting even" this Saturday against Middlebury.

By Ray Bello

EXPERIENCE IS THE BEST TEACHER

Each week the UVM football squad receives a detailed scouting report on their upcoming opponent from a member of the coaching staff. This week's Middlebury resume was given by Coach John "Fuzzy" Evans. This part of the team's Monday night meeting is conducted similar to a lecture course, where the students just sit and absorb knowledge.

Mr. Evans has been a coach at Vermont for the past 25 years. He is currently head freshman football and baseball coach, while also being varsity basketball coach. Fuzzy was also head football coach at UVM from 1940 until 1951. Coach Evans is a graduate of the University of Illinois, Class of '32.

Incidentally, Fuzzy's alma mater surprised powerful Purdue, 14 to 10, last Saturday for one of the biggest upsets of the year. The Illinois had 15 consecutive losses until last weekend, which represented the longest losing streak for a Big Ten team in the past 47 years.

Fuzzy has seen the Panthers of Middlebury play for twenty-five years, thus knowing what to expect from our state rival. He told the team about Middlebury's conservative brand of football, but he also alerted the Catamounts to watch for something radical. After telling the squad all about Middlebury, offensively and defensively, he assured our boys that they have a better team and can beat the Panthers.

Middlebury Leads By One

This Saturday, at Centennial Field, the University of Vermont football team will conclude its campaign with an important game against traditional state rival Middlebury College.

This contest will mark the 56th meeting of the two schools, a rivalry which dates back to 1897, in which Middlebury holds a slim one game edge. There have been six ties.

There are many reasons why this fierce encounter has great significance to new head coach Bob Clifford and his Catamounts. A victory in this game will enable the team to even up the season record at 4-4, and avert a losing season. Also a triumph will give UVM undisputed possession of the State Series Title, the goal to which the team will be striving. A victory by UVM over Middlebury would enable the squad to gain revenge for losses to the Panthers over the last three years including last year's 27-6 drubbing. Middlebury's margin in the series will be cut with a victory so that it is all tied up at 25-25. With the triumph the Catamounts would be in position to regain the series lead which they lost for the first time last year.

40 Schools Participate In Debate Tournament At UVM This Weekend

Friday and Saturday, November 16 and 17 will again see the annual Vermont Invitational Debate Tournament. This tournament, the largest in the country, is not a trophy tournament, its sole purpose being that of practice. Deliberately scheduling it for early in the year helps the teams participating to gain some experience and confidence in themselves.

Approximately forty schools from all over the country will be represented in the tournament. Two of the outstanding colleges to be with us are Holy Cross, which was represented at the National Tournament, and Wake Forest, one of the top debate schools in the country, which will be here for the first time in many years.

Two Canadian Schools will be present, one of which should prove to be an interesting challenge to the American schools. College Militaire Royale is the West Point of Canada. It uses the British, or Oxford, style of debate which involves wit and "what the tongue can do" more than the actual structured speeches.

The other schools to be represented are: Bishops University, University of Pennsylvania, Southern Connecticut State College, Bowdoin College, Cortland State Teachers College Temple University, University of New Hampshire, Boston College, West Point, MIT, RPI, and Georgetown University.

Also Bates College, University of Massachusetts, Dartmouth College, Utica College, St. Anselms, University of Maine, Albany Teachers College, Mt. Holyoke, Hamilton College, Norwich University, Plattsburg State Teachers College, New York University, Rutgers University, and Middlebury College.

Also University of Rhode Island, Washington Square University, Brandeis University, UVM, St. Lawrence University, New Paltz State College, and Hofstra College.

The tournament will be divided into five rounds. They will take place at 7:00 P.M. and 8:30 P.M. Friday and 10:30 A.M., 1:30 P.M., and 3:30 P.M. Saturday. Those on UVM's varsity teams are: Mike Cronin and Elaine Zak, Betsy Lisman and Dan Newcomb, Cheryl Holman and Norm Snow on the affirmative; Gil Tornabene and Bill Germain, Carmen Wessner and Sharon Call, Adam Waite and James Sanderson on the negative. The topic of this year's debates is, "Resolved, that the non-Communist Nations should establish an economic community."

Saturday night the Waterman Cafeteria will be transformed into a banquet hall where all the participants of the tournament will partake of "lining and dancing." Entertainment will be provided in the form of Dr. Huber, leading group singing to the accompaniment of John Travis on the guitar.

Scope To Host Robert St. John

Student Association Cultural Committee
Presents Noted Author

Robert St. John, author-reporter, has spent a majority of his time wandering about Europe, Africa, and the Middle East. He has remained in many areas long enough to understand the hopes, fears and problems of the people. It is the ordinary people about whom he is constantly writing and talking. Robert St. John has traveled more than two million miles while visiting more than 60 countries. He will add to his total by coming here on Wednesday, Nov. 28 at 8 P.M., in Ira Allen Chapel to lecture on EXPLOSIVE AFRICA.

St. John has written thirteen successful books, including "Ben Gurion: The Biography of an Extraordinary Man", published in 1959, and the next year, "The Boss", a biography of Ben Gurion's greatest enemy, Gamel Abdel Nasser. St. John was intrigued with the widely divergent viewpoints of the Israeli leader and Nasser, and spent many months traveling all over Egypt interviewing Nasser himself, his friends and his enemies.

St. John's first literary work, "From the Land of the Silent People," describing his experiences as an American war correspondent in Europe, was called by one New York critic "the best book to come out of WWII."

In 1942 St. John switched from the Associated Press covering East Europe to NBC and did some memorable broadcasts during London's darkest hours. His novel "It's Always Tomorrow", told of his London adventures.

The next few years, while broadcasting from Washington, New York, and various foreign points, he gained a wide audience with a series of colorful radio stories as well as a reputation as a fighter on the air for peace, justice and freedom.

In 1947, St. John returned to Europe and wrote, "The Silent People Speak," a sequel to his first book, which predicted the break between Stalin and Tito.

As if he had timed it perfectly, he arrived in Palestine to see the State of Israel being formed. After many months as a war correspondent, covering the Arab-Israeli battles, he wrote "Shalom Means Peace," a best seller that many critics called the best book written on Israel by a non-Jew. His next book, "Tongue of the Prophets", dealt with Eliezer Ben Yehuda's struggle to revive ancient Hebrew into a language which could be used for ordering groceries and making love. In 1956 he paid a return visit to Israel and the next year studied the Middle East from the Arab side.

Since 1953 he has written two novels describing stories of his adventurous life, "This was My World" in 1953, and "Foreign Correspondent" in 1957.

St. John spent a year in the

Robert St. John

Union Of South Africa where he did his utmost to get close to the real Africans by obtaining a job in a remote trading post in native territory inhabited exclusively by the dark-skinned people. He then wrote his book "Through Malan's Africa," of which four thousand copies of the British edition were seized by the South African Government when they arrived at Cape Town from England. When he returned to Africa in 1957 he reported on the experiment in self-government in Ghana. He terms Ghana "the land of hope," in contrast to South Africa, "land of fear."

In recent years St. John has divided his time almost equally between gathering stories abroad and putting his findings onto paper, and lecturing around America. He has reported and lectured since the early days of WWII and this current year is no exception. He has covered the Eichmann Trial in Israel, Pres. Kennedy's meetings with De Gaulle and Khrushchev, the Evian Conference and has again returned to Africa to survey the Ivory Coast, Ghana, Mali, Senegal and Nigeria before coming here for his annual tour across the country.

Production Of University Players Is Japanese Drama, Rashomon

Players rehearse for ensuing production of "Rashomon". (Credit: Adess, S.P.S.)

The University Players' production of Rashomon, a two act Japanese drama adopted for the stage by Fay and Michael Kenin, will be held in the Arena Theater at 8:30 P.M. on the 17th and 18th of November. Tickets for this very promising production may be reserved by calling Mr. Feldner or Mr. Ackley at ext. 236.

The play, which is based on ancient folk tales by Ryunosuke Akutagawa, develops from the perplexing murder of a Samurai warrior and the rape of his beautiful young wife deep in a leafy green forest near the city of Kyoto. As the play progresses, and each character involved in the crime tells his story, sad and simple and degenerate human motives are portrayed. Why was the murder and rape committed? Why did they all lie? Was it fear that kept the truth hidden? Was it pride? Was it a matter of simple self preservation?

Rehearsals and stage construction for the play are progressing very well. The stage is beginning to lose its identity. It is becoming hidden by the ugly, crumbling Rashomon Gate and the dark forboding forest and the legal court. Each day marks the completion of another pile of huge banana leaves, another length of brown, twisting vines, another clump of grass, another old stone for the Gate. Each rehearsal shows a distinct improvement over the last in the players' abilities to act convincingly and to read the script accurately. Rashomon promises to be a very exciting and rewarding production.

Queen Coronation Highlights Military Ball

On November 30th, the 64th annual Military Ball will be held in the Waterman Cafeteria from 9:00 P.M. until 1:00 A.M. Co-sponsored by the Ethan Allen and Pershing Rifles Societies, the Military Ball has been a tradition since 1899, when Kake Walk was cancelled and the first Ball was held. Tickets cost $2.50 per couple and may be purchased from any member of Ethan Allen Rifles or Pershing Rifles.

Craig Brodie and his Publicity co-chairman, Bill Farber, have stressed that, "... it has been unfortunate that publicity in the past has never made it clear that the Military Ball is open to all students." Appearing will be the eight piece orchestra of Bob Adams. This will be their first performance in the state of Vermont, although they have played at numerous military balls throughout the Eastern United States.

Of course, the climax of the evening will be the coronation of this year's Military Queen. The queen will become an honorary Colonel and her court will be honorary Lieutenants. Bill McGrath who, with Dick Lennon, is co-chairman of the Queen committee, discussed the queen's rewards and duties. Her reign lasts for one year. During that time, she appears at such functions as the Senior Banquet (where the senior cadets get their ranks) and the military reviews. She will receive an appropriately engraved cup and a scrapbook containing press clippings and photos of her activities and those of the brigade.

SGA Aids Prospective Students

The Student Guide Association is a fairly new organization on campus. Consequently, many people are unaware of its existence and its purpose. Many times after prospective UVM students have their interviews at the Admissions Office, they would like a tour of the campus. They may also have questions concerning the University, its social and academic life and possibly its history and its future. The Student Guide Association provides these students with a guide to show them the campus and to answer their questions.

Membership in this organization provides an excellent opportunity to meet all kinds of people and at the same time to do a service to your school. If you are looking for an extra-curricular activity that takes very little time the Student Guide Association should be considered. There will be a meeting of all members and any other interested persons this Friday, November 16, in 260 Waterman at 4:15 P.M. If you have any question concerning this organization please contact Donna Zurbuegg at ext. 523.

Debators Place

The UVM debaters placed second in the St. Joseph's College Invitational Debate Tournament in Philadelphia over the weekend.

UVM compiled an 8-2 record at the 29-school tourney, placing second behind Brandeis University, 9-1.

Affirmative debaters Bill Germain and Gil Tornabene defeated The College of William and Mary, Williamsburg, Virginia; the University of Maryland; Johns Hopkins, Baltimore; and Misericordia College, Dallas, Pennsylvania. They lost to Navy.

The negative team of Michael Cronin and Elaine Zak also compiled a 4-1 record, defeating Temple University, Philadelphia; Harpur College, Binghamton, New York; Army; and LaSalle University of Philadelphia. The team lost to the University of West Virginia.

Language News

The first of three issues of The Vermont Foreign Language Bulletin, edited by the romance language departments of Middlebury College and UVM, is in the mails to Vermont teachers of foreign languages.

The bulletin, which has been appearing three-times yearly for the past four or five years, is published with the assistance of the Foreign Language Program of the Modern Language Association with the cooperation of Miss Marianne Clotti, Vermont State Department of Education consultant in modern foreign languages.

Editor for the current issue is Prof. Malcolm D. Daggett, chairman of the department of romance languages at Vermont.

Co-editor for the bulletin, Dr. Stephen A. Freeman of Middlebury College, is on sabbatical this year.

In addition to the mailing to Vermont foreign language teachers at elementary and secondary levels, the bulletin is mailed to editors of similar bulletins in each of the other states.

Stop, Look And Listen

Have you realized how dangerous it is to cross Main Street from the back path to main campus?

The Central Research Committee on the Student Association is looking into this matter and would like to effect a solution. We propose that the city of Burlington put a manually controlled push-button stop light at this crossing and a sign warning of the light. When the Interstate is completed there will be many more cars entering Main Street via Route 2 at a higher rate of speed.

In order to protect you, as students using the crossing, we would appreciate your filling out and returning the accompanying questionnaire to the S.A. box in the Information Office, 103 Waterman Building, or in East Hall.

1. Do you use this crossing? Yes No
2. Approximately how many times per day?
3. Do you think such a light would be effective (if not, please comment)?

Blood Drive Planned By SNA And Gold Key

The Student Nurses Association-Gold Key Blood Drawing will be held on Monday, November 19, 1962. It is hoped that the quota of 250 pints will be filled by support of students and faculty. The drawing will take place between the hours of 10 and 4. Those who have already pledged and indicated which hour they will attend will be expected to keep to the hour. In this way the program already set up by the Red Cross will be carried out with greater efficiency. Those who did not sign up to give blood last week in Waterman may still donate by going to the Waterman Student Lounge on the day of the drawing. All students under 21 must bring their parental permission slips with them. Failure to do so will prevent them from giving blood.

The drawing will be conducted by the American Red Cross. Under their Volunteer Program, more than 400 drawings are held each year in Vermont and New Hampshire. The blood collected is distributed to hospitals and also kept for emergency purposes. A little known fact is that every student of UVM and any resident of the State of Vermont may receive free blood no matter where he needs it in the United States or Canada. For this reason a large turnout is hoped for on November 19th. The Red Cross needs thousands of gallons of blood to carry on such an extensive blood plan each year. It is true that there has been a quota of 250 pints designated. With maximum support from students and faculty this figure should easily be surpassed.

Is this the only reason for using Mennen Skin Bracer?

Skin Bracer's rugged, long-lasting aroma is an obvious attribute. But is it everything?

After all, Menthol-Iced Skin Bracer is the after-shave lotion that cools rather than burns. It helps heal shaving nicks and scrapes. Helps prevent blemishes. Conditions your skin.

Aren't these sound, scientific virtues more important than the purely emotional effect Skin Bracer has on women? In that case, buy a bottle. And—have fun.

Civil Defense Uses Chapel Siren To Sound From Carillon

The Ira Allen Memorial carillon is to be used for a Civil Defense test on Thursday, November 15, at 5:15 in the afternoon.

Burlington Civil Defense director, Col. John J. Madigan, Jr., said that a second test of the system would be held in view of the fact that very few people heard the first test on Monday, November 5.

In that test Civil Defense has listeners posted at various places around Burlington to determine whether the carillon could be heard. Music and chimes were played for that experiment.

This Thursday the test will be run a little differently. Instead of music, a three minute siren will sound - the standard "Take Cover" warning. The carillon will also be set at a higher amplification for the second test. In both cases, the signal was put on tape, then played over the carillon.

The test will be run by Col. George G. Crooks who is an Associate Professor of Chemistry at UVM, the university's CD coordinator. He will be assisted by Ken Nalibow, student station manager of WRUV.

About 400 people will be listening for the siren at various places around Burlington and the surrounding area. If the test is successful, the siren should be heard in South Burlington, Winooski, and Colchester, and possibly even further away.

The system for use of the carillon was devised last spring by Ray Dilley, then station manager of WRUV. Together with Col. Crooks, he worked out the details of using the carillon atop Ira Allen chapel for Civil Defense warning purposes.

If you hear the "Take Cover" Thursday at 5:15, don't be alarmed. The bombs aren't dropping yet.

Professional Literature To Appear In First Centaur

Did you know that UVM has a literary magazine? The first issue of the current school year is expected to come out in mid-December. This year's Centaur is being headed by Mike Bonneau, who is assisted by Assistant Professor Robert W. Caswell of the English department, and a staff of five.

The magazine originally functioned as a literary outlet for the creative writing of Vermont students. It has now expanded to include pictures of paintings and sculptures, as well as reviews of both books and movies.

Because of lack of student interest, the Centaur will contain articles and poems from professional people, many of whom are of UVM. The staff of the Centaur is interested in combating this student apathy. It has instituted weekly Wednesday meetings to stimulate the students of this campus. All are invited to attend these informal exchange sessions. Anyone interested may contact Mike Bonneau.

Dyson Delivers Paper

University of Vermont comptroller Melvin A. Dyson delivered a paper at a Sunday afternoon (Nov. 11) session of the 43rd annual meeting of the Eastern Association of College and University Business Officers.

He was a participant in a panel on Accounting and Budgeting -- Requirements for the Next Decade. Also on the panel was Harvard's comptroller, Carl W. Janke, a Vermont graduate in the Class of '33.

The meetings were held in Montreal Nov. 10-13.

Game Of Honor

There's a new game at UVM this year. It hasn't been patented yet, but there's a rumor that Parker Brothers may soon add it to their extensive line of children's games. Naturally, like all the others, the title has to be short and catchy. It's to be called "Game of Honor". If you haven't had a chance to play, some of the rules are listed below.

To date the players have just been girls, but that doesn't mean that the men's interest is not there. They usually sit along the sidelines and cheer the girls on.

To begin, each player takes one token which is shaped like a little angel. This is moved around the board the number of spaces indicated on the dice that the girls roll in turn. These spaces are marked with certain bonuses and penalties, as well as safety squares labeled "Home", "Stowe", "Big Weekend at Dartmouth", "Mill", and others. These specific names depend on the mood of the players. The object is to move from the first space, marked "Dorm", to the end, "Graduation". The girl who reaches this square first is the winner. Of course, there are certain pitfalls to slow down the little angels. Typical penalties would be "Move Back 3 - You Reported Yourself to House Committee for Abusing Phone Privilege", or "You Were Caught Drinking at a Party and Your House President Who Was There Didn't Get Caught".

Of course, there are also certain rewards like "Move Ahead 5 - You Successfully Left Dorm at 1:30 While Letting in a Fellow Senior." A special bonus which automatically cancels out all previous penalties is "You Faked Out the Dean. Your Parents Are in Cahoots With You and When the Dean Called Home They Said You Were There".

But don't let the frivolous nature of this game fool you. Its value is rooted in the tradition of UVM. Back in the Victorian Age when there were no college pranks and co-eds were aware of their place in a university society, a forerunner of this game was vicariously played in parlors from curfew 'til dawn. (Since curfews then were at 6:00 in the evening the young ladies had much free time.)

Because of the tradition that goes with this "Game of Honor" there is growing anxiety over the fact that certain bold co-eds are now showing little respect for it by using loaded dice and magnetic angel tokens. Something must be done, or else this new favorite will be banned on campus. Don't let Honor fade from our campus! Do your part in weeding out the magnetic angels who are spoiling it for others!

BONUS You left dorm at 1:30 while letting in fellow senior Move 5	LOSE TURN TO BUY CLORETS	MILL	BONUS scape without Name 1	MOVING BACK Liquor on P	PENALTY You were caught drinking at party & you didn't know what there was

Food ? At UVM

To the Editor:

I am writing the following to you because I have no other means by which I may express myself openly. Perhaps this would be more appropriate to appear in Kim Boriskin's column, "Thinking Out Loud." What I have to say concerns the Saga Food Service in the Waterman Cafeteria. Since the University makes it compulsory for students living in certain residence halls to eat in the aforesaid cafeteria, I feel my complaint, and that of many other students, is justified.

First might be mentioned the health laws involved. It is mandatory that women who work in restaurants, either in the kitchen or serving the food, wear hairnets, and that men wear hats. There are perhaps two girls and no men who obey this law. This might explain the reason for hair which has been found in the food. It is a most nauseating feeling while eating to have to pull a strand of hair from your mouth or off your dinner plate. These plates are another aspect of my complaint.

Not only the plates, but also the glasses and silverware go through a washing cycle which, granted, is not faultless. However, a definite sign of laziness and indifference to his job is shown when a student employee of Saga picks up a knife or plate that has been discarded because it is not clean and puts it back with the clean utensils. This also coincides with the overall service and preparation of food by Saga.

There is no excuse for food being served uncooked and cold. This past week, Saga served us a meal which included the following: uncooked broccoli; cold and raw potatoes; meat which was overcooked, cold, and full of gristle. There are also constant delays because no one has enough foresight to go to the kitchen and obtain more food when the front is low -- they wait until the front has run out and cause a delay of up to five minutes. Meanwhile people are standing fifteen or twenty minutes waiting to go through the line. On this same line of thought is the serving of milk, coffee (along with cups and saucers), and condiments. A student must ask for one or the other and then he still has to wait for five minutes, or sometimes make a second request before there is any reaction from the kitchen.

The last phase of my complaint is the financial aspect of Saga. It is not a non-profit organization, but a business with, of course, the ultimate aim for financial gain. The mark-up of food is extraordinarily high. Saga, or the University, charges each student $220 per semester. Thus, with approximately seven hundred students to feed, there is an estimated collective figure of $150,000 with which to work on a six day basis for four months. On this basis, I feel there should be and could be an improvement of the quality and diversification of the food.

It is therefore my conclusion that the University should take steps in equalizing the quality of their services with the high academic standard which they are improving every year. I also feel that the student body can also help achieve this ultimate goal.

Thanking you for your cooperation in the printing of this complaint, I remain,

Sincerely yours,
James E. Morton

Cuba Hits NSA

PHILADELPHIA (CPS) -- The U.S. National Student Association was attacked Wednesday in a vitriolic telegram from the Federación Estudiantil Universitaria of Cuba. Translation follows:

"FEU Cuba deplores the fascist, irresponsible and criminal action of the Kennedy government in pushing the world toward a thermonuclear war, which has been seconded by the deeds and actions of the USNSA which is following the State Department line. The Cuban people continue to face the threat of North American military intervention, and use their right of self-determination and defense of their sovereign national territory to reserve the right to the help of friendly nations, the Soviet Union and other Socialist countries.

"The military activity in Cuba is the expression of a people armed in defense of their country and revolution as a consequence of the increasing military activity of the United States centering in the Caribbean directed by the Pentagon and the Central Intelligence Agency.

"We salute the noble gestures of the United Nations and the peaceful response in the interests of world peace by the Soviet government as opposed to the obstinate attitude of the Kennedy government and its flunkies. Remembering your suggestion that all foreign military actions in Cuba should cease, we reiterate total, absolute adherence to the plans of the revolutionary government to remove the naval base at Guantanamo, the center of provocations and aggressions by your government against our people. We hope that your pre-occupation includes the dismantling of aggressive thermonuclear bases of the U.S. in European countries, the Middle East, Africa, Asia, and Latin America, including Puerto Rico.

"The Cuban people enjoy the absolute right of self-determination as well as the right to arm themselves against intervention by your government, for we have decided to continue on the irreversible road to the construction of a Socialist society.

"We convey to you that the entire Cuban student community is mobilized and ready for action with its leader Fidel Castro in defense of the revolution. Only effective guarantees against continued aggression according to the five points of the Cuban Revolutionary Government have the unanimous support of the Cuban people and student body. We will resist the blockade, and if we are invaded we shall push you back. Fatherland or death! We shall overcome!"

Daniels Replies

To the Editors of the CYNIC:

The editors of the CYNIC are to be commended for the interest they have shown in a very important question of present-day education, namely the matter of instruction about Communism. I particularly appreciate the opportunity afforded me in the "Professores" column to present my views on the handling of Communism at the university level, and to describe what is actually being done in this regard at the University of Vermont.

There evidently remain a few misconceptions which I would like to clear up. Whereas the CYNIC questionnaire originally gave the inadvertent impression that nothing at all was being done on Communism at this University, I find that my description of our work has apparently created the impression that we are only engaged in training "Budding experts". I would like to reiterate that basic instruction about Communism is available to the general student in a number of introductory social science courses, and that on advanced course (my History 243 - Soviet Russia) is devoted to a general survey of all aspects of Communism - theoretical, institutional, historical, and international.

The whole issue of a special course on Communism really boils down to the question whether I should try to give the content of History 243 without the prerequisite of the freshman course in European Civilization. This makes the entire discussion something of a tempest in a teapot. My own feelings is that the background and perspective afforded by History 11-12 are essential to any more specialized work in social science, including the study of Communism. It is a serious misconception to regard Communism chiefly as a theoretical blueprint that can be taught in a vacuum apart from all the social factors and historical events which have helped make the movement what it is. A course on Communism without History 12 as a prerequisite would have to spend a large portion of its time going over the same material of modern history, in

COMMENTS, SENSIBLE AND OTHERWISE

NOTE:

I guess I spoke too soon when I said we might get 200 returns on the questionnaire. To date there are 178 returned. Question one was checked by 142 people; two by 9 people; number three by 6 people; and number four by 11 people. There were also 10 miscellaneous answers. Again, the returns run about 80% in my favor (79.78%, to be exact).

Here, as promised, are some of the comments I've received. The number in parentheses is the answer checked by the person in question. If none appears, the person just commented without checking an answer. Please notice how completely some people missed the point, or have been taken in by the current wave of super-patriotism and right-thinking.

"My answer (sic) will be found in the letters to the editor column." (I'm still waiting. - K.B.)

"I don't understand the question, but I'm against it."

"I suggest, if anyone is interested in facts about Communism, that he read Masters of Deceit by J. Edgar Hoover. It tells everything an American patriot need know to protect our precious freedom and Constitution." (4) (Everything but what Communism is all about, and everything but what the Hon. Mr. Hoover thinks we ought not to know (just to keep us all warm and safe, with our heads still buried in the ground), such as a few objective facts on Communism. - K.B.)

"I think the reason is obvious. Who in this country needs it? Communism isn't practiced as such anyway. We've got to learn to live as individuals first - right here in this country. To be an 'internationale' is fine - if you are that foot-loose and wealthy." (4)

"I would suggest a series of lectures by qualified persons concerning Communism would be more powerful in that it would attract more students that would ordinarily take an additional course in view of their already filled schedules. (Additional? As an elective? The average student could take it in place of, say, Psych 1, a useless course if ever there was one. - K.B.) I do think it is a timely and necessary subject. But I am also aware that 'Collegé Age' is a rather unfortunate time to be subjected to "pro" Communist speakers. One of the prevailing factors during the rampage of the 30's was the age of 'dis'-reason!!!!"

"Exposure to Communism in any form leads straight into Communism itself. Everyone knows that! (Thank you, Mr. Hoover. - K.B.) I am amazed that such a question could be asked at this fair university. What this country needs is a course in capitalism." (4) (The last statement happens to be true, but it's totally irrelevant. - K.B.)

"My answer to a course on Communism could be stated as such: There are scores of students around here whose knowledge of their own political and economic system can be reduced to thimble size. This is glaringly true in the misconceptions of some about the operation of the American economy, who think the old 'robber barons' of the 1890's are still represented and dominate the American economy, 1962. If a course on Communism were instituted it should be a requirement that the prospective student have a good understanding of his own system first." (3)

(The more astute will notice that a new (reminiscent of such medieval practices as bloodletting) theory of medicine is advanced here. - K.B.) "I think that Communism should be taught in school, but that it should be taught with a moral always in view - that it is evil, just as a medical student is taught that a disease is evil, and that he is studying it to destroy it. Any course in it should fully reveal to the student how Communism acts to destroy freedom and condone its own immorality." (1)

"I agree that the course is desirable, but making it mandatory involves the risk of developing the same negative attitude already associated with the Military Department by many male undergraduates. Basic Communism should definitely be voluntary." (11 - K.B.)

"Ignorance isn't bliss." (1)

"Since there is a compulsory course in ROTC, why not a course in what we are fighting. It takes more than guns to fight the Communist." (1)

"Man, as a general rule, has never been able to fight effectively anything he did not understand. (How is that for understatement? - K.B.) Assuming, then, that the semester course in Communism would give a utile comprehension of the strengths and weaknesses of the Communist systems presently operating in the world, it would have approximately 10¹⁰⁰⁰⁰ times the value of the ROTC program in preserving and propagating our republican (small 'r') system." (1)

"The reasons are obvious." (1)

Finally, there is this classic. I ordinarily do not like jokes when it comes to something so serious, but this one is too good. It is too bad that I can't print it the way it was handed in. It was printed in letters that were meant to look like the Cyrillic letters of the Russian alphabet, which they did. Naturally, 4 was checked.

"Am thinking that capitalistic interpretation of glorious doctrine would be lousy materialistic-infiltrated propaganda.

UNIVERSITY OF RHODE ISLAND

"JFK's Speech Prompts Raid". This headline appeared in the Beacon (University of Rhode Island), however it seems that the spirit of the raid was less political than anything else.

"Four hundred rather over-zealous male students raided URI's women dormitories last Monday night, shortly after President Kennedy announced that the United States will impose new regulations on Cuba.

The university's six women's dormitories were barraged by the students a few minutes after the end of the President's nationwide radio and television address on the Cuban crises.

"Although the students failed to gain entrance to any of the housing units, they caused quite a commotion. Spectators said personal articles of clothing were thrown from the dormitory windows

"Apparently some men felt that their college careers might be interrupted indefinitely by a tour of duty with the armed forces ... so they decided to have some fun while they still could."

BOSTON UNIVERSITY

BU is apparently trying to start the latest college fad ... a ping pong marathon! According to the Boston University News, one campus organization is employing this means to raise money for the United Fund. A goal of 60 hours has been set. The only breaks will come for fifteen minutes every four hours. If one of the entrants drops out, a substitute will be provided so that his opponent may continue and attempt to set a new world record in non-stop ping pong playing.

While the women students here at UVM are going to have to wrestle with their consciences as to whether or not to continue the present honor system, according to the Student Printz (University of Southern Mississippi, Hattiesburg, Miss.), the University of California will put the honor system in the classrooms of the Berkley institution soon. The system will be used in an experimental try only."

The following is an excerpt that very well might sum up the lengthy mass meeting of last Wednesday evening. They came from an editorial in the college paper of the University of California ...

"The concept of honor is separable from self-respect. This is specifically where the emphasis of the honor code lies with the individual's struggle within himself to do the proper thing, free of outside pressures. "The honor code will be ... difficult to maintain; most things which require maturity are...."

OVER LIGHTLY

by Joel Bosner

POLITICS AD HOMINIUM

Last Wednesday, a defeated man stood before the press of America gathered in Los Angeles to hear him. He was singing his swan song, its music was bitter.

Richard M. Nixon is a young, capable, experienced man, yet he is seemingly through in American politics.

I have long stood in awe of his career because his success was forged despite wide unpopularity. And this unpopularity is most interesting because it reveals much about politics in this country.

Nixon was disliked widely and personally by a large portion of the American electorate. The number of people who voted for him in 1960 is not so much a testimony to his popularity as it is to the lack of personal appeal of his opponent.

The reasons for this dislike, as I have said, were personal. Nixon gave people the distinct impression that he was trying to sell the country a used car. People felt they simply "couldn't trust Nixon."

LAWRENCE WELK BEFORE THE VOTERS

Probably the major reason for this is that Nixon was no politician. He simply didn't know how to play the game of politics on a personal level. He lacked a certain basic sophistication.

He spoke here during the 1960 presidential campaign. Most of us who heard him were not impressed.

We were not impressed when we heard Nixon praise Vermont's fine weather. We were not impressed when he told us how his mother bought chopped meat to stretch the family's food dollars. And we --- who had come to hear about the issues from the man who might have been President of the United States --- were not impressed by his chummy talk about cutting classes.

Few Californians, I am told, were impressed when Nixon made an impassioned, my-heart-is-in-my-hand, television plea to the voters three days before the gubernatorial election.

People have heard too much about shady politicians to be impressed by such Lawrence Welk-like appeals.

THE EARLY SEEDS OF MISTRUST

Nixon also lacked political foresight. He did not understand that early impressions the public forms of a candidate can rise up to haunt him. He began his public life with an attempt to identify himself as a potent anti-Communist. As counsel for the Internal Securities Committee, he was dogged in his pursuit of Alger Hiss --- then a government official --- who he thought was a Communist. Events proved him right about Hiss, but people were not favorably impressed. Most voters remember only the biting incisive Nixon cutting into the witnesses he had called before the Committee. The impression was not pleasant. Nixon seemed like a shyster accident lawyer.

He later entered big time politics with a fight to wrest a United States Senate seat from the capable and popular Helen G. Douglas. He fought a dirty fight, filled with smears and innuendos. He distributed a "fact sheet," printed on pink paper, which was designed to link Mrs. Douglas with all manner of sin, especially Communist affiliation (thus the pink paper.) Many voters have never forgiven Nixon for that Senate campaign.

THE PUBLIC REACTS

The fact is, whatever the reasons, people hate Nixon --- personally. They hate him as many hate or adore Kennedy, as many feel warmly toward Art Linkletter.

The reasons are personal and they have little to do with the qualifications of Richard M. Nixon for public office.

THE UNFORTUNATE RESULTS

The results of this sort of thing are unfortunate. Because of a dull public personality, Robert Taft never became President; because of a good one, we chose Warren Harding to guide this country. Neither man's popular image had much to do with his ability in office, but it was their popular images which decided their political fates.

I am frankly afraid. I am afraid because we are losing good men, and --- perhaps worse --- electing poor ones, for all the wrong reasons.

I am also afraid because the man who created the Winston cigarette image may someday elect our President.

A LOSS OF FAITH

And for these reasons, I am fast losing faith in the magic of the democratic processes to hit upon the best man. I am unconvinced that the people always know best. I am unsure that what is undemocratic must be abolished.

I do not plead for a dictatorship. I would much rather see a more thoughtful electorate. But I would wish to see a greater respect for those undemocratic institutions which save us from the majority. I would also like to see the idea of the sanctity of majority rule --- especially in those technical areas where the majority is ignorant --- deposed.

"MUTINY OF THE MIGHTY MISSISSIPPI"

"The mutinous waters of the 'Mighty Mississippi' ran high, Deluging the land and darkening the sky. For the devil of the 'Old Mississippi' churned up His murky brew of hate, To threaten a dark-skinned sailor aboard a godly ship-of-state.

"But sail on did she, that godly ship-of-state,

With a courageous captain guiding her fate ... sail on did she, by a course so straight and true, That the decide devil discerned There was nothing he could do, For the sails of truth and right-- with their everlasting might-- Were at the captain's side, Strong enough to subdue any tainted tide. So it was that the 'Mighty Mississippi' withdrew, And the sun smiled on the land with hope and freedom born anew."

Prof. Colburn Cuts Record

"I Went Stone Blind" has got nothing to do with a still or moon-shine.

Rather, this is the title of the second long-playing record by Professor Francis Colburn, chairman of UVM's Department of Art.

This past spring, Prof. Colburn's first album, "A Graduation Address from Upstate Vermont," was released. His newest is also by the same firm, Droll Yankees, Inc., of Providence, R.I.

In addition to such numbers as "My Father and His Stanley Steamer," "I Went Stone Blind," and "Dissertation on Store Teeth," the record includes assorted sound effects such as an Edison phonograph, the Stanley Steamer and "horse noises."

Another UVM faculty member is also connected with the record. Tom Dowe, director of the Experiment Station, has a monologue entitled "Brother Bill Doesn't Know Either."

Sigma Xi Presents Dr. Flanagan

The UVM chapter of the Society of Sigma Xi will present a lecture on "The Effects of Irradiation upon Solid State Reactions" Thursday, Nov. 15, at 8 p.m. in the auditorium of the Home Economics Building.

Speaker for the meeting, which is open to all interested persons, will be Dr. Ted B. Flanagan, assistant professor of chemistry at UVM, whose field of specialization is physical chemistry.

A graduate of the University of California with a Ph.D. from the University of Washington, Dr. Flanagan did post-doctoral research at Queen's University in North Ireland, and has served as an associate physicist at Brookhaven National Laboratory prior to joining the UVM faculty in 1961.

He is the author of a number of papers in the field of physical chemistry, including four which deal specifically with the effect of irradiation on solid state reactions.

Alumni House Visited

Into the clackety-clack world of typewriters, addressograph machines, and postage meters this reporter ventured to get the inside story on Alumnae House. After gingerly picking my way through carpenters, painters, boards, tools and other paraphernalia involved in current remodeling, I made my first stop, to the director of Alumnae office, Mr. Paul Mravlag. Mr. Mravlag said his most important function as director is "to translate the good will of alumnae into a tangible feeling towards their University; in plain words, money." Publications and mailing are the main methods of attaining funds. A basic alumnae mailing list of 17,000 and additional special lists of legislators, colleges, and high schools bring the annual postage budget to over $5,000. The nerve center of Alumnae Office, the Mail and Record Division, was a beehive of activity. Mr. Mravlag and his nine aides run across an occasional cog in the wheel, a current example being the postponement of the new gymnasium dedication. Post cards must be mailed immediately announcing the change of date to the thousands informed otherwise by a previous bulletin.

Alumnae office as a service organization plans interesting features for alumnae. It is also a co-ordinating point to keep alumnae in touch with one another and the University. To help accomplish this, there are 120 filing cabinets with folders containing the complete record of each alumna. "This is, perhaps, the only complete, permanent record a person has," said Mr. Mravlag. "But," he added, "our concern lies not only with the alumnae, but with the student now, cultivating him and making him realize that his tuition doesn't cover the cost of his education."

And with that gentle hint, this reporter continued the tour, progressing to the Public Relations Office. Lawrence E. VanBenthuyssen, director of Public Relations, defined his office as "the formal information office, here to serve all departments and groups at UVM, student as well as academic and administrative."

Publications, such as the "Alumnae Magazine," "Parents' Bulletin," and "Mail Bag", for faculty and staff, are a major part of Public Relations' Program. The student T.V. - Radio workshop co-operates in producing a weekly radio program carried by 18 stations. In addition, "Living and Learning" appears three times every month on WCAX. As an administrative service, Public Relations' staff of six serves both the external public and the internal aspects of the University, answering outside questions and helping student groups plan various functions. "Alumnae House is always delighted to serve," to quote both Mr. Mravlag and Mr. VanBenthuyssen.

Outing Club Helps Raise Ski Lodge

"Stars in the Snow," a full length, color ski film shot on the slopes of some of the world's greatest ski centers, has helped a ski lodge to rise in the hills of Vermont, eventually.

The film, produced by John Jay, was shown at 8:15 p.m. on Friday (Nov. 9) in Memorial Auditorium with Jay in attendance to narrate. The showing was presented by the Outing Club of the University of Vermont. Proceeds will be used towards the cost of construction of a ski lodge in Jeffersonville.

Terry Safford, president of the Outing Club, said the lodge will be located three miles north of Smuggler's Notch on Route 108 and that ground is expected to be broken in the spring of 1964.

The lodge will be an A frame, alpine type building, with eating and sleeping facilities for around 60. The lower floor will be 44 by 41 feet and will have sleeping quarters and two rooms for chaperones. The first floor will contain the dining and living rooms, the latter which will feature a central fireplace. A balcony will be used mainly for storage purposes. Benjamin Stein of Burlington is the architect of the lodge.

Jay's latest movie was filmed at many ski areas, including the world ski championships in Chamonix, France, as well as on top of Mt. Blanc, behind the Iron Curtain in Poland, and on the slopes of the Swiss Alps. More than six miles of original film were taken by Jay and he has taken the best 4000 feet for "Stars in the Snow."

Alpha Zeta Initiates Members

Eleven Vermonters were initiated into Alpha Zeta at UVM Wednesday evening.

Alpha Zeta is a national agricultural honorary.

At the same time that 11 undergraduates were being initiated, Dr. Alexander Gershoy, professor emeritus of botany and genetics, was awarded Centennial Honorary membership into Alpha Zeta for his outstanding contributions to crop science and agriculture. This marks only the second time in the 57-year history of the UVM chapter that it has awarded honorary membership. The other recipient was Sen. George Aiken.

New members initiated were Robert Hazelton, Londonderry, and Warren Wood, Woodstock, both seniors; Albert Stevens, Wells River, Lucian Zelazny, Brandon; Kenneth Burton, Middlebury; George Fraser, Norwich; Earl Stanley, Enosburg Falls; Frank Fisk, Wallingford; Edwin Walker, Cabot, and Darrell Simino, Orleans, all juniors.

Special centennial honorary membership was granted by the national chapter in conjunction with the 100th anniversary of the Land-Grant Act.

Dr. Gershoy is credited for the establishing of the Mansfield variety of trefoil, one of the most well known varieties. Trefoil is a legume-type plant that replenishes the nitrogen in the soil.

Mathematics And Skiing

Pressure Centroid

The position of the pressure centroid under running skis is much more forward of what people generally expect about five inches for running in soft snow as shown by distance AB in Fig. 2.

This figure also shows the center of gravity of the skier (C. G.) which is always exactly above the centroid P of the pressure diagram.

In other words, when the skier leans far forward, the pressure diagram becomes more condensed; and when he leans backward, it becomes more drawn out, or elongated.

For presentation in the illustration, an arbitrary angle of inclination of 5° is taken. The less packed the snow, the more forward this shift of centroid is. In other words, the "forward lean" should be much more pronounced in powder snow than on a hard packed surface.

Now, how are turns being made?

The lopsided pressure diagram is very important because it furnishes the key explanation to the turns. When a skier is running in a stable traversing position, his skis are pointing in the direction of travel and there is equilibrium, no turning moment, whether he leans forward or back. However, if he could turn his skis slightly askew to the direction of travel (in other words, they start slipping sideways), there is an immediate turning moment on the skis, which tries to turn the skis more askew due to the lopsided pressure diagram.

Action = Reaction

In Fig. 3, a skier is running in a straight traversing position up to A. The front of his body is facing downhill. However, as soon as he makes his body turn counterclockwise, his skis will immediately tend to turn clockwise (B) by the law of action = reaction. This clockwise turn of the skis is cumulative for their side-slippage immediately creates (by the moment of their frictional forces on the snow) a bigger clockwise turning moment. This is assisted by the edging of the skis (pressing right edges down for the clockwise turn).

The more the forward lean is, the more the pressure diagram becomes lopsided and the bigger the turning moment; the sharper the turn. The turn stops when the amount of kinetic energy of the straight-running skier is spent on lateral slippage of the skis, the displacement of an amount of snow (mogul) etc. (at C, Fig. 3). The faster the skier is running when the turn is started (the bigger his kinetic energy), the larger is his slippage area or his mogul or both.

The straight traversing run is resumed, and during this time, the skier prepares for the next downhill turn by again turning his body facing downhill and the entire above outlined procedure is repeated in the reverse.

Downhill Turns

How is a turn made from a straight downhill running position? To prepare for a counterclockwise turn (Fig. 4), the body is facing to the left (to the inside of the turn) up to A. Here his body is quickly turned clockwise and the skis turn in the other direction. They start their sideslippage and again, due to the lopsided pressure diagram, there is an increasing counterclockwise turning moment on the skis (at B, Fig. 4).

The turn stops (C) for the same reasons as explained above for the downhill turn.

The principles explained above apply equally well to uphill turns. The matter of weighing or unweighing of the skis has not been mentioned, but it is important in helping to turn the skis to initiate the further turning. For instance at B, Figs. 3 and 4, the skis are unweighted to help them turn askew from the direction of travel.

It is the lopsided pressure diagram together with body-counterrotation which is the main initiating force of all turns.

University Orchestra Presents Concert

The University of Vermont Orchestra will present its first concert of the season on Thursday evening at 8:30 in the Ira Allen Chapel.

Dr. Frank Lidlal, conductor and chairman of the department of music, will lead the orchestra in the performance of Haydn's "Symphony No. 102 in B Flat" and in "Roumanian Dances" by Bartok.

A special feature is also planned for the concert. George Green, a member of the music faculty, will perform in the dual role of composer-conductor when his selection, "Three Short Pieces for Chamber Orchestra" is performed.

Jane Perlis, a graduate student in music, will be featured as flute soloist in the Bach "Suite No. 2 in B Minor for Flute and Strings."

The final number will be Bach's "Brandenburg Concerto No. 1 in F." Soloists will be Green on the violin, Mrs. Green on oboe, and John Park, graduate hornist.

The concert is open to the public at no cost.

EAGLE SHIRTMAKERS PROUDLY ANNOUNCES A DACRON/COTTON OXFORD THAT WILL NOT PILL!

OH, given time a short-necked man with a heavy beard could pill any oxford cloth, they're that soft. But until just recently even Little Lord Fauntleroy could have pill a DACRON/cotton oxford cloth shirt with one curl tied behind him. Which is why we didn't put out any of them. ★ Sure you know what pill means; it's when the fabric gets roughed up into little pills. ★ Well, Du Pont has a brand new type DACRON that resists pilling. It came out about a year ago, but we waited until Greenwood Mills, the weavers who make our cotton oxfords produced a DACRON/cotton oxford they were proud of; a really luxuriant lofted oxford. And that brings us up to now. We are making Eagle Shirts of this new material in both a Tabsnap® collar and a button-down collar. At about $8.50.

★ Tabsnaps, you may recall, are Eagle tab collars that need no collar buttons. Our button-down collars also have a property highly prized by the toney cognoscenti: a sort of sloppy bulge. We used to call this "flare" until we noticed everybody else was too. Besides, it really isn't a flare, it's a sloppy bulge, but it's ours and we like it. ★ So if you want a drip-dry oxford shirt that won't pill perhaps you'd better drop a note to Miss Afflerbach (she says forget the footnote) and ask her where in your town you can find Eagle Shirts. This is because many fine stores prefer to put their own labels in our shirts; very flattering, but tough on Eagle eyed shoppers. Write her care of Eagle Shirtmakers, Quakertown, Pa.

*Du Pont's trademark for its polyester fiber. That wouldn't be a bad name for an Italian fashion consultant. Say, do you suppose we could get Miss Afflerbach to change her name to Toni Cognoscenti and...

order to make sense of the subject of Communism itself.

If it is true that students in certain curricula can afford to spend only one semester on social science, I think they would get a better balanced, if sketchy, view of the modern world and all its problems (including Communism) from History 12. This is what should elect, rather than a specialized course that lacks foundation. If more intensive work on Communism is desired, the proper line of attack is to secure more time for electives within the students' professional curricula, so that they can go on from History 12 to History 243 or some other advanced course.

Joan Baez Captivates Audience

by Sumner Silverman

The words "marvelous" and "terrific" are used so often that they tend to be meaningless, but I seem to find myself at a loss for better words to describe the Lane Series performance of Joan Baez. Although her repertoire consisted mainly of melancholy love songs, some of her songs had such varied themes, at war, cowboys and moonshiners.

The thing that sets Miss Baez apart from other female singers, is her clear soprano voice that she uses to hypnotize her audience. During her singing, there is no sound to be heard but hers; after her singing, there is a pause before her intranced audience applauds. Her actions are unemotional and detached, but her voice communicates emotion with a great deal of intensity. She keeps you waiting for her smiles but they are worth waiting for. On stage, she is completely poised and is as much at home with foreign songs as with spirituals.

Miss Baez accompanies herself on a Martin Guitar. She plays a flawless traditional which ranges from the simple, as in "Where Have All the Flowers Gone", to the complex, as in "Pretty Peggy-O". She is self-taught and her five years of playing makes it look too simple.

Backstage she is a warm outgoing person with an easy smile. It is an experience to speak with her. She does not consider herself an "entertainer" and dislikes being treated as one.

Miss Baez gets her material from records, books, other performers and people who send her songs. She likes to sing for college audiences and particularly enjoyed her Lane Series audience.

Traveling with Miss Baez were her mother, her manager and a representative from Vanguard Records. Her mother, also a charming person, said, although she and her husband enjoy music they have no show business background and their daughter's sudden success "was a shock" to them.

Miss Baez said she enjoys "Hillbilly" singers, the less known the better, and that she

COLLEGE OF MEDICINE HOLDS FACULTY RETREAT

Faculty members of the University of Vermont College of Medicine will gather at Woodstock this weekend (Nov. 16-18) for a faculty retreat.

Theme for the retreat will be The Setting for Learning; Incentives and Impediments.

The weekend sessions will open Friday evening at the Woodstock Inn, with Dr. George E. Miller, director of the Office of Research in Medical Education at the University of Illinois College of was influenced by no particular artist.

The songs the audience enjoyed most were: "Little Darling" - a take-off on the Rock-and-Roll song of the same name, "Pretty Peggy-O", "Silver Dagger", "Amazing Jace", which she sang unaccompanied, "Copper Kettle", a song about moonshiners, "Hush Little Baby", and "Joys of Love". The applause and the encores that she received indicated that the audience agrees that Joan Baez is a fine person and an accomplished performer.

Medicine, speaking on The Setting for Learning.

Miss Christine McGuire, assistant director of the same office at Illinois, will speak Saturday morning on The Evaluation of Learning. Following group discussions and luncheon, Dr. Nicholas Cotsanas, professor of medicine at the University of Illinois College of Medicine, will speak on the topic, Teacher and Learner. Group discussions will follow.

UVM President John T. Fey will speak on The Relationship of the College of Medicine to the University at a Saturday evening dinner meeting.

The retreat will close Sunday morning with a discussion session which will consider Consolidation of Ideas and Planning for the Future, and with a talk by Dr. Robert Slater, dean of the UVM College of Medicine, on The Student of Medicine.

The retreat represents one phase of a continuing curriculum study begun two years ago by the College of Medicine. It is supported by funds from the National Fund for Medical Education, and by the Century Club of the UVM Medical Alumni Association.

Pall Mall Presents - GIRL WATCHER'S GUIDE

HIGH-FLYING GYM-DANDY

CAMPUS TYPE IV

Few sights in all the world of girl watching are as breathtaking as the unexpected observation of a Gym-Dandy in midair maneuver. Plato might well have had the Gym-Dandy in mind when he wrote, "When a beautiful soul harmonizes with a beautiful form, and the two are cast in one mould, that will be the fairest of sights to him who has the eye to contemplate the vision."

Although the Gym-Dandy is a joy to behold even while tightening the laces of her sneakers, she must be seen in action to be fully appreciated. The same thing is true of a Pall Mall. It's a long, firm cigarette in a handsome package, but it must be tasted to be fully appreciated. Try Pall Mall and see.

HARRIERS END SEASON

The 1962 edition of the UVM cross country team closed out its regular season with a 27-28 victory over Bowdoin last Friday, on Bowdoin's 4.1 mile course. Harold Billings traversed the course in 19:14.8 to set a new course record. Tim Simpson, Chris Myrack, Steve Russell, and Steve Lozinski finished 3-5-7-10 respectively for UVM.

The Freshman team closed out its regular season, last Wednesday, with a 26-29 defeat at the hands of Paul Smiths' Junior College. Speedy Walt Stowell took first place for the Kittens with a time of 15:18, for the 2.7 mile course while Al Wentz and Bill Bower took the runner-up spots for Paul Smiths.

On Monday, Nov. 12, both the varsity and freshman teams participated in the New England meet at Boston, Mass. It was expected that 30 to 40 schools would be represented. Although UVM has several fine runners, the over all balance of the teams from Massachusetts and Connecticut would lead us to expect that UVM had a rough time.

Intramural Basketball

Entries must be handed in no later than 4:30 P.M., Monday, November 19th.

Times for practice sessions will not be posted until we move into the new facilities. It also means that the basketball schedule cannot be drawn up until we are assured of this date.

The old gym is not available for practice - this department no longer has any jurisdiction over the building.

THE LITTLE CHAPEL

UVM Dominates Sporting Opinions

by HOWIE GORNEY
(Former Sports Editor renders his Cynical review of the past season.)

INCHES AND IF'S

By this time, Bob Clifford has hung up his cleats and started shining up his golf clubs, anticipating with bated breath that bright sunny day, in spring when a football coach's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of pleasure before it heavily turns to thoughts of business. It is at this time that we armchair and grandstand quarterbacks reminisce on what happened and what might have been. I am reminded of the words of the immortal prophet, Socrates Alonzo Stagg, "football is a game of inches and if's."

"What if?" Two words that have an enormous connotation. What if that end from American International College had dropped the ball on that beautifully executed touchdown play? There he stood, lonely and forlorn in the end zone, with only a football for a companion, while the Cats stood idly by listening to the grunts and groans of a dismayed home crowd. What would have happened if that sticky-fingered young man had had fingers of oleomargarine? As I recall, we lost that contest 14-8; it is feasible, assuming a miscue on the six-point play in question, that we might have been the victors in our initial outing of the season. Such was not to be our fate.

Nevertheless, the undaunted Cats then ventured south to break all types of records against a hapless RPI eleven (?).

Resting on their laurels, our boys came back to do battle with their first Yankon foe, Maine. Here we face another "what if?" What if that slight and pudgy little halfback from Orono, his uniform all white and new from lack of play and/or experience had tripped after catching that look-in pass that left the Green and Gold flatfooted? The pass itself wasn't even enough to give the Black Bears a first down. Yet, that dastardly speedster fled down the gridiron to what must have been the first touchdown of his life. This was the crucial difference, for it sealed the verdict: sixty minutes of hard labor ending in Vermont's first Yankee Conference defeat, 9-6.

The Green and Gold's sojourn at Kingston, Rhode Island, was a pleasure to behold. At last the Cats had begun to click. There were no if's about this one — we did everything right to the tune of 21-12 and our initial tried and true Yankee Conference victory.

But, alas, Vermont's good fortune on foreign soil was to be short lived. Against a juggernaut of barbaric (and I use the term strongly) Wildcats from New Hampshire, the Cats proved no match. On the ground, in the air, the Durham Gang was too strong. About this game I can't be iffy; the animals from UNH subdued UVM, 19-6.

Eliminated from any possible Yankee Conference accolade, the Cats still had the State Title within their grasp. Their chances were enhanced by a handy 21-8 shellacking of a group of serious ROTC students. Here again the Green and Gold showed what it could do when the squad played well. There was no foreboding when the Cats left Norwich's Sabine Field that this was to be their last venture into the win column.

Home they came to the tune of a big brass band, banners, and rich alumni waving on high, a blinding snowstorm, and a team of muscle men recruited from all parts of lower New England and trained in the art of Knocking. What can I say about UMass? They looked like (should I utter this unspeakable blasphemy?) a "professional" team. Desire wasn't enough to overcome the Green Bay Packers of the Yankee Conference; they handed us defeat on rye, 34-6.

There was still some fat on the fire ready for the Panthers of Middlebury. Don't think for a moment that Coach Clifford didn't want an even-stein record and a state title under his belt in his primary outing as the Catamount mentor. Such was not to be the case, however. The "whammy boys" from downstate once again showed us their magical talents, 14-6. What if Burton had gotten that punt away or we hadn't fumbled on our first sustained march downfield to the Panther 37? The answers to these and other questions rest with the fates, but its nice food for thought.

Incidentally, after watching the hex thrown on the Cats at home this season, I have become a fatalist. I wish every student and alumnus would contribute just a dime so we could build an unjinxed stadium right next to our (I hope) unjinxed gym, or at least have the refreshment stands sell rabbits' feet and four leaf clovers at Centennial next year.

In summation, and barring all sarcasm, the Cats this season looked like a vastly improved ball club. One must expect miscues with so many adjustments being made. Moreover, one cannot doubt that some of the breaks handed our troops bordered on the supernatural. However, who would have expected Vermont, in its first real Yankee Conference season, to come so close to so much, and vacate the Yankon cellar for the first time in many a moon. Rest assured, no one in our new league will toy with The Green and Gold any more.

Incidentally, a suggestion for Coach Clifford; grab the gendarmes from Burns, suit them up, and put them in the defensive secondary. We couldn't lose if they cover opposing pass receivers in the same devoted, diligent, assiduous manner in which they covered our grandstands.

Statistics But Loses 14-6 Middlebury Maintains Their Mythical Dominance Over Cats; Wins 4th Straight

UVM walked off Centennial Field leading in almost every statistic in last Saturday's finale with the Panthers of Middlebury College. The Catamounts beat the Panthers in just about every category except one obvious part of the game — the score. The Middlebury eleven took advantage of every break and wound up winning the contest 14 to 6 and capturing the State Title for the seventh consecutive year.

The Panthers recovered three Vermont fumbles, intercepted three Cat aeriels and blocked a punt on their way to victory. It was just as Coach Clifford had ominously predicted. He cautioned the Catamounts before the game that "if" they lose, they will have defeated themselves for they were a better team than Middlebury. The final statistics prove that UVM was the better team, but it's the team that scores the most points that wins the game.

Vermont led in first downs, 10-7, rushing yardage, 124-78, passing yardage, 44-74, and a few other minor categories. The Cats also led in mistakes unfortunately, and proved the old football saying that states, "Football is a game of mistakes. The team that makes the least number of mistakes wins the game." It was this fact plus Middlebury's uncanny quality of capitalizing on UVM's miscues for touchdowns that enabled them to emerge the victors.

THE FIRST BREAK OF THE GAME

Middlebury kicked off to start the game and held the Catamounts in their own territory for most of the first quarter. The first break for the Panthers came when Vermont halfback Deane Kent bobbled a high pass from center and had to hurry his punt that traveled only 14-yards, to the UVM 36.

The Cats held from here and forced the Panthers to punt. The kick was caught on the 2-yard line by Kent, who ran it out to the 13. It seems that this 13 was unlucky for Vermont as three plays later, Middlebury center Dick Rapp broke through the line to bat down Kent's punt with a diving leap into the air. Panther end Gil Stanley fell on the loose football on the UVM 3-yard line. It took the Middies three plays to get the six-point gift, as fullback Paul Fava plunged into the end-zone for the only score of the half.

Ken Burton, Vermont's speedy halfback from Middlebury, had no qualms about running all over his home-town college as he gained 39-yards on nine carries. Burton ranks as perhaps the best running back in the Green Mountain State. Ken was unable to get that third block to free him for a really long gainer and perhaps a score.

The Catamount strategy for this most important State Series Game was to run many plays up the middle, instead of predominantly going around the ends as it had all season long. Of course, Vermont's bread and butter plays were end sweeps with a host of blockers in front of the ball-carrier (this play was known as the student body sweep.) It seemed as though Vermont was on its way after Burton raced 27 yards down to the Middlebury 37 on a double reverse.

VERMONT'S BEST LINEMEN

On the next play, quarterback Paul Harris fumbled and alert Panther guard Pete Kullberg recovered the ball. Kullberg was a thorn in the side of the UVM offensive attack all day, as proved to the crowd of Vermonsters that he ranks with Captain Dave Sequist as one of Vermont's outstanding linemen. Sequist was plagued with an injured ankle and was only able to see limited action in his last college football game. Dave was one of the Catamounts' steadiest performers as he consistently played tough, aggressive football all season long. Another UVM lineman who rates some praise is Jeff Harvey, who has been a valuable asset to Vermont's line this year. Although Jeff was usually out-weighted by his opponent, he was rarely out played. For Jeff, a native Vermonter from St. Albans, this was his last game also. Senior End Bill Burke, who hails from Middlebury, played a fine game against his home-town school. Bill was one of the best defensive ends in the state as he anchored his left end spot with solid play all season long. The other end position was held by Frank "Bo" Bolden. Bolden was a starter last year and a great help to this year's squad. Frank was at his best in Yankee Conference competition this year.

Other seniors who represented the University for the last time were center Gerry McGee, a three year man who was a fine defensive signal caller, Duane Barber, a guard who has helped the Catamounts with his spirited play during his three years as a varsity griddier, Mike Rosenbaum, a sure-fingered end who has helped the Cats during his three years, and the only seniors in the backfield, were co-captain Paul Harris and Frank Amato. Harris was bothered by a knee injury during the season but has led the Cats to many fine moments on the gridiron. Most notable of his accomplishments was his excellent performance against the Rams of Rhode Island as he not only ran the team well but blocked with the skill of his co-captain, Dave Sequist, as he cut down tacklers on end-sweeps. Amato, a 165 pound fullback, was one of the Catamounts' best all-around players pound for pound. Frank ran like a 200 pound fullback as he bulled his way for yardage and tackled men much bigger than himself with little difficulty.

WORSE THAN MEASLES

The second major break for Middlebury came when Kent missed a punt and Panther fullback Fava made a diving recovery on the UVM 12. The Catamount defense, sparked by the fine play of 230 pound sophomore guard, Dave Baker, held the Middies. The Cats, working from their own 10-yard line, were forced to punt. Middlebury took possession on the 44. It took eight plays and a 15-yard penalty for the Panthers to get to the UVM 25. From here it was the same old story that has plagued the Catamounts worse than measles all season long; pass defense. At least one can get measles only once, but Vermont has had a bad case of leaky pass protection that has resulted in losses no less than four times this year.

This time it struck as the defensive line was holding, as it has all season. After big Baker threw a Panther back for a 5-yard loss, quarterback Craig Stewart flipped a fourth down pass to Stanley for a first down on the UVM 10. On the next play Stewart threw to his big 210 pound end, Al Ross, for a touchdown. Stewart added two more points as he found Stanley free in the end zone with an aerial.

Both teams tried a little gambling. Vermont won on one attempt but eventually became the "big loser" of the day, as it lost the game. UVM took a chance on a fourth down and one-yard-to-go situation, on two different occasions. They were successful on one but lost on another, as the latter attempt stalled a Catamount drive at mid-field early in the second period. The Middlebury gamble set up the UVM score. The Panthers tried an on-side kick-off, but alert UVM tackle, Ted Jyzk, picked the ball out of the air and ran a few yards like a wild bull before a host of Panthers swarmed all over him. From the 48 the Cats marched 52 yards in 11 plays.

Al Brown, who played the best game of his college career, was the most effective UVM runner on this drive. Quarterback Chris Greer hit Burton with two short passes, after Brownie streaked 17-yards on an up-the-middle play, to set the Cats up on the 10. From here, Greer hit Brown with a flare pass on the one, where Richie Reynolds bucked over for Vermont's only score.

Middlebury has won or tied for the Vermont state crown seven years in a row. The win also gave Middlebury a 26-24 edge. There have been six ties in the series that dates back to 1897. Middlebury has beaten Vermont four straight and the Panthers have won six of its last seven games with UVM. Vermont ends its first season under Bob Clifford with a disappointing 3 and 5 record. In the final analysis Vermont won everything but the game, and if they had not made so many errors they might have won that too. The Catamounts were the better team but there seems to be what Coach Clifford has dubbed the "Middlebury Myth" that prevails every year when UVM meets their state rival. In Coach Clifford's words, "It's too bad we have to wait 365 days to disprove the Middlebury Myth."

Lane Series Presents Flamenco Guitarist

Carlos Montoya, renowned Classical and Flamenco guitarist, will entertain at the Blue Lane Series.

by Joan Klonsky

Subscribers to the Blue Lane Series have a rare treat in store for themselves on Wednesday evening, December 12, when Carlos Montoya, the famed Flamenco guitarist, will appear at Memorial Auditorium.

At the age of eight, Carlos began studying the guitar under the guidance of his mother, "La Tula", herself a most accomplished performer, and soon after he emerged as one of the foremost virtuosos of that instrument in the world. His ability attracted the attention of the leading Flamenco singers and dancers of his native Spain, all of whom soon demanded that "the incredible Montoya" be their accompanist.

In supplying the musical backgrounds for these top artists, Montoya expanded his repertoire and perfected his technique. "The only way to improve is by playing," he says, "It becomes easier to improvise. That is the secret of our music -- improvisation. And one must have the music in his heart before he can play it on the strings."

In 1954 he took a daring step in appearing as a solo artist in a full evening's program of Flamenco music, something that had never been done, simply because it was thought that a Flamenco guitarist could not sustain himself for an entire evening without the help of singers or dancers. His first concert was like every one he has since given -- a huge success. At his debut in New York's Town Hall, extra seats had to be installed on the stage to accommodate the overflow crowd, a seating arrangement that has become traditional at all of Montoya's invariably SRO concerts in New York and throughout the world.

Possessing an advanced technique, unique among Flamenco players, Montoya is always an innovator and, for that reason, always a tremendously exciting performer to hear. Although he never plays an arrangement of his own without adding something new, he has had many of his pieces published in an effort to capture at least some part of this wonderfully rich art form that heretofore had never been written down.

Like the true Flamenco performer that he is, Montoya creates as he goes along. The seventeen numbers he will play consist of all his own arrangements and original compositions, based on the Spanish Gypsy tradition. One of the numbers, "La Macarena", by Bernardino Bautista Monterde, is dedicated to the Virgen de la Macarena, the Patroness of Sevilla who is worshipped by bullfighters. One can hear this piece at the start of important bullfights in Mexico. Also included in the program will be a few of the many dance rhythms in which Flamenco music abounds such as "Bolero", "La Rosa" and "Farruca". And no doubt most familiar to all will be Ernesto Lecuona's original "Malaguena".

Chamber Arts Series Begins In Mid-January

by Joan Klonsky

The Lane Chamber Arts Series will begin its third consecutive season in mid-January, 1963. The series, varied and comprehensive, will encompass aspects of vocal music; chamber music, theatre and modern dance. The concerts will be presented in Ira Allen Chapel and Burlington High School Auditorium.

On January 12, Cornelia Otis Skinner, a distinguished actress of the American stage, will present in full costume a series of modern character sketches. McHenry Boatwright, the renowned baritone, will entertain his audience on February 9, with a program of arias and spirituals. The Budapest String Quartet, undoubtedly the finest ensemble of its kind, will perform on March 14. And on March 30, Martha Baird will lead the Dancemakers, a modern dance company which recently headlined the Boston Arts Festival.

Tickets go on sale immediately, by mail, at Bailey's Music Rooms and at the Lane Office, 142 Waterman. Unlike the tickets for Red and Blue series, there will be both reserved season tickets ($4.50) and tickets for single concerts ($1.50). A season ticket will not only save the purchaser 25% but will also guarantee a reserved seat in the center section of the auditorium.

Players Present "The Madwomen Of Chaillot"

On Thursday, December 13th, the University Players will present The Madwomen Of Chaillot by Jean Giraudoux. This extremely funny two-act comedy will be directed by Mr. Ed Feldner.

The Players in the cast will be: Dennis Murphy as the Sewerman; Berry Beckerman as the Ragpicker; John Sulton as the Prospector; Margie Slater as Irma; Marty Singer as the President; Raoult Malak as the Baron; Frank Decavalcante as the Broker; Joel Posner as the Doctor; Bill Kittell as the Policeman; Ron Morgan as the Sergeant; Bryant Reynolds as Pierre; Andrea Leyman as Constance; Ellen Spenser as Gabrielle; Maggie Fyles as Mme. Josephine; Norma Hines as the Flower Girl; and Ivan Karp as the Shoelace Peddler. Lee Owens is the stage manager.

The Countess, the play's most important character, will be played by Marian Moore. Marian, a junior, has worked with the Players since her freshman year. Now she has the difficult task of portraying a madwoman, the Madwoman, who speaks the truth, the whole truth and nothing but. She is mad, in the true sense of the word, only to the "enemies" of mankind, the filthy rich. To the poor, the servile and the humble of the world her actions are considered normal, her words are accepted as truths and her person is worshipped.

Judging only from performances at the rehearsals, The Madwoman Of Chaillot is bound to be a great success. Tickets may, not must, be reserved by calling Mr. Feldner or Mr. Ackley at ext. 262.

Harvard Dean New Education Commissioner

WASHINGTON (CPS) -- Harvard's Dean Francis Kennel has been chosen by the Kennedy administration to become the new U.S. Commissioner of Education.

Kappler's appointment to the vacant post ends a long search by the administration for a qualified person willing to take the position. The difficulty apparently has been that the job pays only $20,000 per year, and most leading men in the field are currently drawing a good deal more than that.

Mr. Keppel is 46 years old, a native of New York City, and a graduate of Harvard, where he has been dean of the College of Education since 1948. According to press reports, the new Commissioner will be given a relatively free hand in reshaping the bureaucracy of the Office of Education, a section of the mammoth Department of Health, Education, and Welfare. Outsiders (and a few insiders) have long complained that the Office is plagued by red tape and needs structural reforms.

The Office of Education is also under continual fire from the right and left, arguing respectively for less or more government participation in education. The Office is primarily responsible for outlining government

ROTC Forum Set Fey, Blanchard, Students To Appear On Panel

by Walt Meyer

For the first time in UVM's history there will be a meeting of minds on the issue of compulsory vs. voluntary ROTC at UVM.

The S.A. Central Research Committee has arranged a public forum on this issue, scheduled for Monday, December 10, Ira Allen Chapel, at 7:30 P.M. All freshmen and sophomores, and anyone else concerned with the problem should attend.

The forum will feature a panel of speakers representing all aspects of the problem. President Fey will speak for the administration, and as a member, ex officio, of the Board of Trustees. Colonel Blanchard, chairman of the Military Science Department, will speak for the department and the Army.

There will also be two students on the four-man panel. Sophomore Dan Newcomb will speak for himself as a student. Senior, Craig Brodie, will also speak as an Advanced ROTC cadet.

The program will start with the panel answering specific questions prepared by the committee, intended to clarify the basic issues. Then, if there are any questions by any panel members, they will be answered.

After the panel has finished, questions from the audience will be answered as well as possible.

Harvey Tauber, chairman of the Central Research Committee, who will moderate the panel, has said that the committee is completely neutral at this time, whatever the feelings of the individual members. The committee has seen a need to make the matter public and to clarify all the issues, and has arranged a forum for that purpose, as well as to try to bring about a solution to the problem.

The forum marks the beginning of a program to obtain this solution. The committee has other plans in the offering, but nothing definite at the moment.

Tauber urges all to attend, and that includes pro- as well as compulsory ROTC advocates.

participation in education in the country.

Dr. Sterling M. McMurrin, the retiring Commissioner, is returning to his teaching post at the University of Utah, Salt Lake. The Office of Education has more than 1,000 employees. Its appropriations for the last fiscal year totalled $579,790,000.

UVM Given Grant

UVM has been awarded a $12,530 grant by the National Science Foundation for support of the fourth annual Summer Research Program for High School Teachers in 1963. Prof. Howard M. Smith, Jr., coordinator of research, is in charge.

The second University Lecture of the year at UVM will be given at 8 p.m. Dec. 10 in the Waterman Student Lounge by Dan M. Lacy, managing director of the American Book Publishers Council. His subject is "Censorship and American Freedom Today."

President Fey Honored

Dr. John T. Fey, president of the University of Vermont, has been named to the Executive Committee of the Association of State Universities and Land-Grant Colleges.

Delegates to the Diamond Anniversary Convention of the Association met in Washington, D.C. the week of Nov. 12.

Other new members of the Executive Committee are from the University of Missouri, Oregon State, Texas A&M, the University of Arizona, and Iowa State.

UVM Professors, High School Teachers Collaborate Under Summer Research NSF Grant

UVM has been awarded a $12,350 grant by the National Science Foundation for support of the Summer Research Program for High School Teachers.

This marks the fourth year that UVM has received such a grant. The eight-week project will again be under the direction of Howard M. Smith Jr., Coordinator of Research.

Vermont is one of 37 colleges and universities awarded funds for the program. Prof. Smith said he was particularly pleased with this year's award by the Foundation because it includes funds for a sixth participant at the doctorate level.

Under the program, high school science teachers are invited to spend eight weeks at UVM, working with faculty members engaged in research. Each applicant selected conducts research in one of the areas of biological sciences, chemistry, engineering, mathematics, or physics.

In some instances, the participant is allowed to continue research started during the summer program upon returning to his high school.

Such is the case at UVM where two of last summer's five participants are finishing up their research at the high schools where they teach. The two are Joseph Camara of Taunton, Mass., and Lewis Whitcomb of North Adams, Mass.

Camara worked with Dr. Milton Potash, Department of Zoology, in a study of the diving beetles of Vermont. Camara collected 3000 specimens from 38 localities throughout the state and is now identifying the various specimens. He hopes to work for his Ph. D., using this past summer's project as his doctoral thesis.

Whitcomb spent his eight weeks with Dr. Donald Johnstone, chairman of the Department of Agricultural Biochemistry, examining the effect of different chemicals upon the production of amino acids by the algae Chlorella. He is completing his research at Drury High School in North Adams.

In all cases where research suitable for continuation away from campus is allowed, funds are supplied through the Foundation grant.

Other projects were carried on at UVM last summer by Paul Palmer, Jr., of Witherbee, N.Y., Joseph Jacintho, Jr., of New Bedford, Mass., and by Muriel Whalen of Burlington.

Palmer, working with Dr. Thomas Sproston, Jr., Department of Botany, isolated the pigment fisetin from the plant smoke bush.

Jacintho, teaming with Dr. Ted Flanagan, Department of Chemistry, observed the relationship between electrical resistance and the hydrogen content of palladium and palladium alloys.

Miss Whalen and Dr. Norman Slamecka, Department of Psychology, continued studies in learning and retention.

Those interested in applying for the Summer Research Program should contact Prof. Smith. Applicants should have the Master of Science degree or the equivalent and should be intending to continue in the teaching of science or mathematics.

AWNY Hosts UVM Seniors

"We are proud of the part advertising takes in molding man's life," said Mrs. Jean Wade Rindlaub, Vice-President and Director of Batten, Barton, Durstine, & Osborn, Inc., who acted as moderator for a panel discussion held during the sixth annual Advertising Career Conference in New York City on November 17.

Mrs. Rindlaub's opening words set the theme for the one-day conference, sponsored by AWPY Foundation, Inc., Advertising Women of New York. The purpose of the conference was to acquaint some 350 college women with the many phases and opportunities available to them in the rapidly-expanding field of advertising.

Six senior women, accompanied by UVM Placement Director, Douglas O. Hanau attended this conference, held at the Hotel Commodore. The six who attended were Betty Bergman, Sharon Comey, Barbara Driver, Rosemary Leltner, Ricky Means, and Elaine Stauber.

At a three-round panel discussion, the function of an advertising agency, the jobs available, and ways to get into the field were discussed. The panel was comprised of six women executives, all of whom are authorities in their respective fields.

Several points were stressed during this session, namely the importance of a firm command of the English language, summer job experience, and extra-curricular activities, such as an editorship of school publications.

Emphasis was also placed on having secretarial skills, such as typing, shorthand or speedwriting. The general consensus among the panel members was that the easiest and best way to secure a position in the field is "through the back door," as a secretary or clerk. A liberal arts background and a familiarity with one or more foreign languages was also stressed.

Disagreement arose only as to the importance of specialized and graduate training in obtaining and reaching success in the advertising field.

Following the general session was a series of thirty-minute buzz sessions conducted by two outstanding women in back of the five areas of advertising - copy, art, production; research; merchandising and promotion; media; and public relations and publicity. Each of these seminars included

FROSH DEBATERS WIN VARSITY TOURNEY

UVM's Lawrence Debate Club took first place at the Edmund Cortez Debate Tournament to capture the Yankee Conference Debate Championship, held at the University of New Hampshire, this past weekend. The University of Maine placed second.

Vermont sent four freshmen after this varsity title. The affirmative team of Norman Snow and Craig Nelson defeated the University of Massachusetts and the University of New Hampshire. Their only loss came against the University of Rhode Island.

UVM's negative team of David Waite and Jim Sanderson defeated the University of Maine and the University of Connecticut. Their sole loss was to the University of New Hampshire.

In addition to a fine team effort, individual honors went to Norman Snow as the best affirmative speaker in the tournament, and Jim Sanderson as the third highest negative speaker. Dr. Robert B. Huber, Chairman of the Department of Speech, was the coach on the trip.

In another weekend debate tourney at the University of Pittsburgh, a UVM varsity team compiled a 6-4 record in cross-examination debating. Vermont encountered some of the toughest competition it has met all year.

The affirmative unit of Betsy Lisman and Dan Newcomb defeated Johns Hopkins University, the University of Toronto and Southern Illinois University. The team lost to Western Michigan University and the University of West Virginia.

The Catamount's negative unit of Carmen Wessner and Lynn Baier defeated the University of Michigan, Colgate University and Ohio State University. The team lost to Pittsburgh University and the University of Alabama.

The University of Alabama won the over-all cup, with Pittsburgh University placing as the best affirmative team and Southern Illinois University scoring as the best negative team. Dr. Norman T. London of the Speech Department was the coach on the trip.

NASM Elects UVM To Membership

UVM was elected to Associate Membership in the National Association of Schools of Music on Friday, November 23, at the 38th Annual Meeting of the Association, Frank W. Lidlal, Chairman of the Department of Music represented the school at the meeting, which was held at the Netherland-Hilton Hotel in Cincinnati, Ohio.

The curricula which have been approved lead to the degrees Bachelor of Arts, Bachelor of Science in Music Education, Master of Arts, and Master of Arts in Teaching.

Membership of the Association has included 264 universities, colleges and conservatories in the United States. Nine new schools were admitted to membership at this meeting, and four schools were promoted from associate to full membership.

The NASM is designated by the National Commission on Accrediting as the responsible agency for the accreditation of music degree curricula. The work of the Association has an important bearing on the continual development of music in America.

Paul V. Mravlag

On behalf of the University, the CYNIC wishes to express its sympathies to the family and friends of the late Paul V. Mravlag, Director of Alumni Relations, who recently died as a result of an overdose of sleeping pills. Mravlag, a 1953 graduate of UVM assumed his post last August.

Evolution Of A "Rat Lab"

by Roberta Levy

In 1948, the first psychology laboratory at UVM was only a small room in East Hall. Dr. J.P. Chaplin, who made the mere idea of a psychology lab become a reality, stated that at that time its only activities were those coordinated with physiological psychology.

Then, after several years, the crowded one-room laboratory was moved to the upper portion of the Dental Hygiene Building. In 1959, with the help of a United States Public Health grant the converted carriage house behind the Alumni Building became the present psychology lab.

Part of the psychology lab is used for experiments performed on white rats. This explains why UVM's psychology lab is often dubbed with the amusing name of Rat Lab.

There are two classes of subjects used in experimental psychology, college sophomores and white rats, stated Dr. Chaplin, when he was asked why rats are used in the lab. Since college sophomores are not suitable for all the drugs, surgical experiments and starvation diets, white rats are therefore used. In addition "psychologists believe that certain processes such as learning, may be more easily understood as revealed in fundamental and simpler forms in animals. Now the psychology lab is not only used for work in physiological surgery, but also for research for senior honors programs and for masters degrees.

One graduate student is presently investigating the role of the cerebral cortex in maze learning. Another experiment has been conducted for a year by Dr. Chaplin himself. Animals are put under considerable strain to test the affects of psychological tensions on cardiovascular disease. It may prove whether or not tension causes heart disease.

The psychology lab is not only a "Rat Lab" but an integral and essential part of the work of the psychology department as a whole.

S.A. Meets

On Wednesday, November 28, the S.A. Senate held its first meeting after the Thanksgiving recess. The meeting was quite short, and the Senate acted on only two motions of any importance. First of all, W.U.S. was voted in as a standing committee. Then, after a rather heated debate, the Senate defeated a motion that would have required S.A. Senators to report all important S.A. happenings at regular meetings of the residences that they represent.

TODAY

Today on campus, the IFC in conjunction with the Placement Service, is sponsoring a Federal Career Day. The purpose of such a day is to acquaint students with various opportunities in the Federal Service. Mr. S. Bayness Andrews of the U.S. Civil Service Commission is talking with students on an informal basis.

During the day Mr. Andrews has been located on the ground floor of Waterman Building opposite the book store. A group meeting has been scheduled at 4:15 P.M. in Room 239 Waterman. It is hoped that as many students as possible, particularly those from the junior and sophomore classes will attend to hear Mr. Andrews discuss the various types of career opportunities in a number of agencies in the Federal Service. At this meeting, he will also discuss the Federal Service entrance exam and summer employment.

Dr. Huden Discusses Vermont Indians

Dr. John C. Huden
(Credit: Carr Studio)

Indian Groups in Vermont are discussed in an article by a UVM professor in the New Hampshire Archaeologist, a monthly publication.

Dr. John C. Huden, Director of Testing and professor of education, traces Indian groups from a time before 2000 B.C. through 1790 A.D. Of the first group, Pre-Algonkians (77B.C. to 2000 B.C.), Dr. Huden says they were pushed out of New England by the Old Algonkian (2000 B.C. to 1300 A.D.) stock. Pre-Algonkian sinkers and fish-lures have been unearthed in Hubbardton, polished slate knives at Swanton, and "white-tail ceremonial objects" in the Otter Creek region. Dr. Huden says that some of the best artifacts of Old Algonkian origin were discovered at Swanton in the 1870s and near Orwell in 1933-34. He believes that further archaeological research would reveal many other Old and Pre-Algonkian sites in Vermont.

The Recent Algonkians covered the period from 1200 A.D. to 1790 A.D. All these tribes or sub-groups spoke Algonkian dialects and could understand each other fairly well. As a rule, they hated the Iroquois because they had invaded from the south and split the Algonkians, leaving the Iroquois in possession of central New York and the St. Lawrence estuary.

Groups included under the classification of Recent Algonkians are the Abnaki, Ammonoosuck, Arisagunticooks, Coosuck, Kenebeki, Kikomkwak, Mahican (Mohicans), Mississiak, Nulheganock, Obom Sawin, Pennacook, Pocumtuck, and Squakeag. The Mohicans were found in the regions of Pownal, West Arlington, Back Bay, near Fair Haven; Lake Bomeseen, Lake Hortonia, at the mouth of the Winooski River; and along Missisquoi Bay.

The article is accompanied by a map which features a key for the Vermont location of the various groups.

The Museum of the American Indian is publishing Dr. Huden's new book, "Indian Place Names in New England", in about a week. This contains more than 5,000 surviving Indian place names together with translations. This is the most ambitious work of its kind ever to be published.

SEPT. 5, 1752, NEVER HAPPENED!...Nor did any date from Sept. 3 to 13, at least in England and the American Colonies. Why? The King decreed that these days would be skipped to correct a discrepancy between the Old English calendar and the newly adopted Gregorian calendar. This left puzzled Englishmen and colonists with one 19-day month and a 355-day year.

SWARTHMORE, Pa. (CPS) -- The Swarthmore chapter of Kappa Sigma fraternity announced Tuesday that its national organization had officially suspended the local, effective Nov. 7.

The national's reasoning was given as "attempting to involve other chapters in organizing to defy the national's basic principles, and failure to maintain standards of scholarship."

The Swarthmore college chapter attributed the suspension to its recent efforts "to change the unwritten discriminatory policy of the national fraternity." The local released a lengthy statement explaining its position to the Swarthmore Phoenix at the beginning of the week.

Spokesmen for the local "Pi" chapter said they had solicited support from other chapters of the fraternity for the removal of the "gentlemen's agreement" barring non-whites from membership in Kappa Sigma. Two letters were sent by the chapter to other chapters which they had reason to believe would be sympathetic to the move.

Personal visits were also made by members of the Pi chapter to other chapters in an effort to gain support for their position, they said. At a regional conclave of the fraternity held last April, Swarthmore Kappa Sigmas made efforts to engage other fraternity members in discussion of the subject.

The Swarthmore local said that at the conclave students present asked the national treasurer of the fraternity what the national's position was concerning the pledging of Jews and Negroes. He stated that Jewish members were "frowned upon" and "any chapter which bid a Negro would be expelled" they said. The Swarthmore chapter presently has three Jewish brothers, no non-whites.

At the national biennial conclave in 1961, the fraternity readmitted a chapter previously expelled for pledging an Oriental -- on condition that it would refrain from bidding non-whites in the future, a Swarthmore spokesman said. By the time of the convention, the Oriental had left school, they said. It was at this conclave that the Gentlemen's Agreement barring non-whites was reached, they added.

The Supreme Executive Council of the Kappa Sigma National placed the Swarthmore chapter on suspension. It has virtually absolute power between conclaves, according to the Swarthmore local. It consists of five alumni and one paid executive, they said.

In response to the charge of low scholarship as cause for suspension, the local said that it had in fact received warnings on the subject in past years, but last year received a letter commending it for improved academic standing. The local's collective grade average has risen over the past year.

The chapter said that it had been threatened with "social probation" earlier in the year by the national. They said they could find no reference to "social probation" in the national rules or constitution. They began to suspect that they might be suspended at that time, they said.

The only previous hint that they would be suspended was a visit of the District Grand Master last Spring, they related. The officer told the local at that time that he was aware of the chapter's attempts to change discriminatory policies and admonished them for such moves, spokesmen for the local said. After this visit, the local took no further action in regard to contacting other chapters, but continued plans to contact alumni and the college administration, they said.

The chapter will meet with its alumni on Nov. 18, to decide on a final course of action. The local chapter's statement, however, said "it seems apparent that Pi (the local) will permanently sever all ties with the Kappa Sigma national fraternity."

The national has 135 chapters, located primarily in the North and West. The fraternity originated in Virginia, and, according to the local chapter, retains strong Southern traditions. The local at Swarthmore has 22 members, plus pledges. Swarthmore is a highly-regarded, small-enrollment school with an impressive list of outstanding graduates. It is situated in a suburb of Philadelphia.

Editor's Scrapbook Revolution In Yemen

(Editor's note: The following is a guest editorial, written by Ahmed Ali El-Haddad, from Hugaria, Yemen, presently enrolled at UVM. His father was connected with the Judicial system of Yemen and is now advising the new revolutionary government.)

He has written a front page editorial for one of the largest papers in the area and the largest one in Yemen. The article was concerned with the legality of the revolution and was distinctly in favor of the new government. The article involved considerable personal risk for Ahmed since at that time it was rather questionable as to who would emerge victorious in the struggle for control, and a victory for the monarchists would have brought retribution upon those who expressed public approval of the revolution.

Ahmed has also appeared on television and radio in this country.

It must be noted that the views expressed in the following editorial are not necessarily those of the editors. It was, however, felt that the "Editor's Scrapbook" would be an appropriate place for a UVM Student with the aforementioned background to air his views on the subject matter discussed below.)

The Mideast is, at this time, in a state of almost open warfare. The war is between the old-time monarchists, like King Ibn Saud of Saudi Arabia, and the modern republicans, such as President Gamel Abdul Nasser of the United Arab Republic.

In one sense the United States is looked to as a neutral and influential power in this struggle. She is committed to the monarchists, but the republican forces are gaining victory while the monarch's power is declining.

The center of the battleground is now my country, Yemen. Yemen has managed to overthrow her tyrannical royal family and has established a democratic republic. But the monarchists in the Mideast are trying to set the royal family back on the throne. They are being opposed in this by the Arab republics.

The United States has taken a hand in the struggle. She has asked her allies, Saudi Arabia and Jordan, not to interfere with the Republic. If they agree to this I am certain that the new Republic, which has the support of the people, will survive. If they don't, much blood will be shed.

I think it is important that the United States continues to support the new Yemeni government. I think they should, in fact, take a firmer stand in opposition to the Monarchists. I feel she must do it because such a move would not only be politically wise, but morally important as well.

To fully understand why this is so we must first examine the old monarchy of the last king, called "Ahmed the Devil" by my people.

The late monarchy was typically medieval. It ruled by the myth of "Divine Right," and the king could do no wrong. Ahmed the Devil believed this so strongly that that he used to sign his name "Ahmed Allah": Ahmed the God.

Yemen never had a constitution, representative government, or even heard of an election. Furthermore, the words constitution, Democracy, and Freedom were meaningless under Ahmed the God. Speaking of freedom was considered a crime against the king's person, and the punishment was death for those who spoke of it. In 1948, and in 1955, hundreds of enlightened people who advocated constitutional government were beheaded in public. I watched, as many others did, while their bodies were left unburied in the public square for the vultures.

As for education in Yemen, there is not a single high school that measures up to the standard of the schools in other Arab countries. There are only three so-called high schools in the whole country.

The possession of books not approved by "the God" was forbidden, and only certain books were ever allowed to enter the country. These books either concerned religion; or they praised the royal family as protectors of the Faith (Islam) from such atheistic ideas as Freedom, constitutional rights, and social justice. I remember in 1960 when a citizen was caught selling books by Jean Jacques Rousseau and Montaigne about the "Social Contract" and the "Spirit of the Farms." He--as was expected--lost his head without a trial.

Letters To The Editor Chaplin Versus Coffee Shop

Editor: the CYNIC

Heartiest congratulations to those rugged individualists among the UVM fraternity of scholars who have so gallantly resisted Saga's attempts to perfume the Charles Winfield and Anna R. Waterman Memorial Coffee Shop into a dandified version of the tap rooms so beloved by generations of college students twenty-one and over.

The table cloths (designed, no doubt, to create the image of a Deutscherstube im Keller), the gentle reminders to empty one's slops into appropriate containers, those Brobdingnagian ash trays reminiscent of first class men's clubs--none has had the slightest effect. Any day, and virtually any hour, the lounge lizards and soda fountain queens hold court in their favorite corner of what appears from the foyer to be a hog wallow immediately after bombardment by heavy calibre siege artillery. There they cast loving looks over mountains of butt-sodden coffee containers, splintered stirrers, spilled sugar, well deployed cookie crumbs, crumbled cigarette packages, empty match folders, bits of old examination papers, and other such flotsam and jetsam of higher education. The atmosphere is so poisoned with tobacco smoke, it would fell a New York traffic cop in ten seconds. Irregularly, the strident screams of female banshees with clinker-timbered vocal cords and the agonized bleating of male "singers" of dubious virility (calling, I assume to aforesaid banshees) rebound from loud-speakers. These virulent mating cries are accompanied by pseudo music rendered by a jungle orchestra which sounds as if it is undergoing total destruction by nuclear explosion.

And yet, under these less than optimum conditions, romances flourish; professors are denounced as befits their unsatisfactory classroom techniques; the collapse of civilization is thoroughly aired; young minds develop into maturity.

Nothing Saga can do will stay these stalwart young from maintaining an atmosphere in keeping with their home backgrounds and vague yearnings for the good life, the cultured mein. And, if the benighted Sagaites should despair, let them take consolation from today's version of the old adage, to wit: "You can make a silk purse out of a sow's ear."

Kake Walk Legislation Increased

To: Editor, CYNIC:

Meeting in session on November 15, 1962, the Interfraternity Council, as sponsoring body of Kake Walk, augmented existing legislation concerning Kake Walk. The new provision consists of the following:

That: The Directors of Kake Walk shall be heretofore directed to confine participation in and limit conferring of awards for all events connected with Kake Walk to the sole exclusion of the Kake Walk Poster Contest, to Greek Letter social fraternities and sororities on the University of Vermont campus.

The Interfraternity Council requests all questions pertaining to this amendment be brought before that body when duly meeting in session.

Sincerely,

Thorstein Veblen, early in the present century, took obvious delight in pointing out the moral and spiritual shortcomings of that privileged minority among his contemporaries who were comfortably removed from "the sharp edge of economic necessity." In our own generation, John Kenneth Galbraith has popularized the notion that we are members of an "affluent society"; in the United States, no longer is it a privileged few who have escaped the fear of hunger, but rather the vast majority of our population. In the face of such headlong advance in the level of economic wellbeing, it is not astonishing that the evolution of a sense of values appropriate to changed conditions should be behind.

Rodney W. Eldridge, instructor in Economics, has been with the University since 1957. He left UVM in 1959, and returned to the faculty again in 1961.

The merits of public versus private expenditure, or the comparative marginal utilities of a dollar spent in the acquisition of a second family automobile and a dollar used to provide rice for a starving child in India are interesting and worthwhile topics for discussion, but the focus of this article is much more confined. The allocation of resources remains the central theme, but the arena of action is not the national economy; it is the University of Vermont.

As a native of Vermont, an alumnus of the University, and presently a member of the staff, the rapidly accumulating brick and mortar evidence of prosperity is a source of great personal satisfaction. The splendid new building housing our library pleases the esthetic senses and most comfortably accommodates those students and professors seeking a quiet place in which to pursue knowledge. The new building housing the male students, although perhaps not generating unalloyed enthusiasm among its residents, can surely be counted a valuable asset to the University. The eye is arrested by the truly impressive complex of physical education facilities nearing completion on the south campus. One imagines that this will quickly become a highlight of any guided tour of the campus, and justifiably so. Architecturally and functionally it appears to leave little to be desired. On the north campus, the partial destruction of East Hall to make way for a new engineering building is a most welcome sight. In short, there is ample evidence of progress to stir the pride of returning alumni.

It is probably a perversity of human nature, or at least a Veblen-que turn of mind, that inspires one to raise a question about our sense of values when contemplating these various projects in relationship to the over-all aims of the University. Allocation of resources is always a difficult problem, and when resources are rapidly expanding, the problem becomes even more acute. Economic theory tells us that this problem is correctly solved when the utility of the last unit of a good or service purchased by any one dollar is exactly equal to the utilities purchased by each and every other dollar expended at the margin. Unfortunately, the solution really begs the question, since to assess the utilities afforded by alternative goods and services requires the exercise of value judgment.

How does one distinguish excellence in a University? A logical starting point is to look at the quality of the output--the calibre of the graduates. Since a University is an institution of higher learning, is it not logical to suppose that highest priority should be given to acquiring a distinguished faculty capable of attracting a student body with a serious interest in learning? Good raw material, expertly processed by skilled workmen, should result in an excellent product. A close second in priority would be the tools of the trade; in this case books are probably the most valuable tools although for some of the disciplines encompassed within a university, various types of laboratory equipment might rank equally with books. Adequate housing for the productive process is of course an essential ingredient of a good product, but in the case of an educational institution, is it not substantially below the previously mentioned factors in order of priority? Given the choice between two universities, one with a distinguished faculty noted for scholarly activities and with an excellent library, but with a rather unattractive and

by Kim Boriskin

ROTC - YES OR NO?

What's that you say, Frosh? You got a complaint, Frosh? You say that compulsory ROTC is a big pain in the place where you sit while you complain? You say you would like to see it voluntary? Is that what's troubling you today, Frosh? Well, do something about it. How? Simple. There is a forum for everyone interested at the Ira Allen Chapel, Monday, December 10, at 7:30 P.M. (see the front page). The first thing you can do is get up off the place where ROTC gives you the pain and hie yourself to the chapel. If you don't, then don't complain when you have to take it again next year.

In the past there have been many impotent attempts to make ROTC voluntary. Last year there was a student's march on Waterman cafeteria, folk songs were sung, and a lot of space was given to them in the CYNIC. That was that, as far as anyone was concerned. The year before I wrote a letter challenging to action the authors of a column who said they deplored the business of everyone talking but nobody doing. Nothing happened there, either.

Both these attempts were wrong from the word go. Letters never get anything done. Demonstrations always antagonize the administration (anywhere), and harden the opposition. And in both cases there were only a few students who took matters into their own hands and ignored everyone else.

Now that is to be changed. The administration, the ROTC dept., and the students are getting together to discuss the matter, and it is to be done publicly. That is the only way to start anything.

There are also ways of continuing. Demonstrating is not one of them. (That remark was promoted by a person who told me that if there was any chance of success, there would be a demonstration.) If there is, that ends everything. It antagonizes the university, and all but kills any chance of success. Not only that, but if things get out of hand, the Central Research Committee may very well say the heck with them; let them have their ROTC compulsory. This is not to say that the committee is doing this to back the voluntary ROTC movement; they are doing it to bring a solution to the problem, and to get things rolling correctly. If things get too unruly, the committee will just assume that the students don't deserve to have the problem solved, one way or the other.

I, personally, am sick and tired of all the complaining that goes on. Everyone complains, but nobody does anything, whether the right thing or not. Whether it's cowardliness, or laziness, or most likely, equal amounts of both, it doesn't matter. What matters is that you could float Burlington on all the hot air wasted griping about ROTC.

Now, kiddies, you've got a chance to do something, and to do it right. If you're too scared to show your face, or if you're too lazy to get your rear end off a chair and into the chapel next Monday, then I have no pity whatever. Even if every male on campus attends, there might not be voluntary ROTC. There is no guarantee of winning. But if you don't get to the chapel, then there is a guarantee of losing.

The only way to have any chance at all is to be at the chapel on Monday. If you don't come, and the ROTC program remains compulsory, then you can thank only yourselves. You deserve it. That goes for the people who want ROTC to stay compulsory. You have a chance only if you have interest, but not otherwise. If the fight is lost because of apathy, then you have no right at all to complain if you weren't interested enough to come, and to make sure everyone else did, too. But tell me that you weren't there and you will earn nothing but well deserved contempt. And from your more interested, or less lazy or cowardly, brethren, you may earn some other deserts too, also well deserved.

Remember children, it's your ROTC, not mine any more. I've taken ROTC, helped organize the forum on the committee, and have gone out of my way in other ways. We don't have to help you, but we are helping, and expect at least some interest from both camps. Now get yourselves to that meeting, kiddies, OR ELSE!

SPRINGFIELD COLLEGE

The Springfield Student (Springfield College, Springfield, Mass.) which terms itself "The most controversial weekly in New England," recently carried an editorial noting Springfield's new retirement age for faculty. It seems that a spring uprising by the students played a role in the change of retirement age, which has been raised from 65 to 67.

"Under the new provisions, faculty members must now resign in the fiscal year during which they reach their sixty-seventh birthday. The previous rulings allowed for retention in post-retirement teaching posts."

The student concern in this controversial issue stems from a conviction that they do not feel "that age should be the criterion for retirement." Whether the new policy will tend to pacify them or not remains to be seen.

R.P.I.

According to the Rensselaer Polytechnic (R.P.I., Troy, N.Y.), an honor system that has the goals of "honesty and integrity" is being evolved on the R.P.I. campus. A "Student Proctoring Committee has been set up to act as a deterrent to all forms of cheating among students." The committee is made up of members of the academic honoraries who furnish the student proctors for freshman examinations.

"Student proctoring leads the way to an eventual honor system which will eliminate all proctors except one -- the student's conscience." Isn't the conscience really the basis of all honor systems???

ABILENE CHRISTIAN

The following is an extract from the Optimist (vs. the CYNIC???) (Abilene Christian, Abilene, Texas): "On a vocabulary test in one section of reading improvement, teacher Walter Frazier asked students to use the word 'quaff' in a sentence."

"One student, puzzled by the vagaries of the English language wrote: 'Quaff, Quaff, Quaff said the tongue-tied duck.'"

"In case you are also wondering, 'quaff' means 'to drink.'"

UNIVERSITY OF MIAMI

The following quote appeared in boldface in an ad that appeared in the Miami Hurricane (University of Miami, Miami, Florida), "Pound Book Sale" . . . and they weren't referring to Ezra Pound, either! The U. of Miami bookstore was featuring a one week sale that included books being sold at the ridiculous price of ten cents a pound! This pre-inventory sale included texts and reference books, as well as paperbacks. Other reference books were priced from fifty cents to $2.00. Any way you look at it, even fifty cents a pound is a bargain that Forest Hills can't match, but which this reporter would like to see our own progressive bookstore come close to!

NORTH TEXAS STATE UNIVERSITY

For those departments that employ the frequent use of objective tests (and we do have several), the advantage of having the results of this type of examination back within seconds, instead of weeks would make this type of a test a much more meaningful learning experience.

OVER LIGHTLY

by Joel Posner

"China: A New Weight Is Added to the Old Power Balance." It is always exciting to see a powerful country enter, for the first time, the World political stage. Traditional roles must be re-examined, delicate balances are overturned, and the World is never quite the same again.

This emergence is -- of course -- not always a welcome thing. Sometimes the nation, which has lain sleeping like the trolls of fairy-tale fame, comes forth with a terrifying bellow and a destructive step.

Such a nation was Soviet Russia; such a nation is Communist China.

CHINA STEPS FORWARD

China has long held her goals close to herself. She has long acted defensively, covertly, or merely verbally. She has seldom moved about the World, openly and aggressively pursuing her ends. But with the October twentieth attack on India, Peking has declared certain specific objectives and has stepped forcefully into the World political arena to win these objectives.

Among the long range goals China has set for herself, and has proclaimed by this attack, are two major ones. First, she hopes someday to win control of an aggressive Communist bloc. Second, she would like to establish herself as the leading light of the non-white Afro-Asian community.

There are two major powers which stand in the way of these two Chinese desires.

The first is Russia, which is now in control of the Communist bloc and which has been leading this bloc away from the "hard line" the Chinese wish to see taken.

The second major impediment to these goals in India. India has been assuming leadership of the neutral nations of Southeast Asia. Her economy has been flourishing and has been attracting favorable comment among the World's neutrals. (This is in direct contrast to the economic difficulties the Red Chinese have been having.) She has attained a respected place in World councils and is listened to by Neutral and Westerner alike. She has, in short, been the power in Asia that China would like to be.

AND SO THE ATTACK

China's attack had, I think, three basic aims (aside from the more obvious one of gaining strategically valuable territory.) First Peking hoped to turn the Communist bloc from a "soft" policy toward non-Communists. Second, she hoped to take a step toward wresting from the Soviets some control over the Eastern world. Third, she hoped to belittle India in the eyes of the neutrals.

One of the main objects of Russia's "Nice guy" policy has been India. By attacking India, China sought to drive her toward the West and away from Russia. This would take the wind out of the Soviets' "loft line" sails and, at the same time, stop Russian aid to India which is only helping Nehru outshine China economically.

Then too, the Chinese felt that a victory in India would put her in a better position in the Communist World. How Peking must have rejoiced at the Soviet backdown in Cuba. What better backdrop for a Chinese "hard line" victory than a Soviet "soft line" defeat.

Finally, China hoped to break India's prestige among the neutrals. Her attack would do this in three ways.

It would show India weaker, in a purely physical sense, than China. This has already had a visible effect. Nepal, Bhutan, and Sikkim -- three miniscule states which border on both China and India, and which have long been considered Indian protectorates -- have already begun making overtures toward the new king of the subcontinental mountain.

The Chinese also hope to force India from her neutralist "above-it-all" role. If they can drive her to the West for help, her prestige as the World's greatest Neutral will no longer exist.

Finally, the Chinese would like to force India to divert some of her capital to defense. Her economy has been growing too rapidly to suit China. She is becoming a showcase for Neutral nations in the area. China must see this stopped if she ever hopes to undercut India among the Neutrals.

THE WEIGHT IS ADDED

Whatever China's success in her ventures in India, one thing should be clear: China's passive days are over. She will not be satisfied with blundering speeches, nor will she be restrained by the moderate hand of the Soviet Union. We are going to have to face China as we had to face the Soviet Union in the days after the October Revolution. Unfortunately, we shall face her as ill prepared for the task today as we were when we finally faced the Russians in the twenties and thirties.

According to the Campus Chat (North Texas State University, Benton, Texas) a special portable computer is now being used in the education department with hopes of future expansion into other departments.

"The device, capable of grading 224 true-false questions or 90 multiple-choice questions" . . . in eleven and a half seconds . . . "as you prepare to leave the class . . . originally was bought to grade personality tests given student teachers."

WHITWORTH COLLEGE

Whether the following is a feature story or an editorial, it is difficult to discern, but for what it's worth, the following appeared in the Whitworthian (Whitworth College, Spokane, Washington) . . .

"Hi again, Kiddies. Joe College back. Boy, what an exciting weekend last. Mommy and Daddy took me to the Zoo. Have you been to the Zoo? Come with me to the Zoo. Fun, fun, fun!

"Look at the camel. It isn't very big. Daddy says it's strong. Too strong for me. 'Dad, why doesn't the camel have a filter?'"

"Look, see the giraffe. It is huge. My brother brings his girl to the Zoo. They see the giraffe. He says it is where you get the longest neck in town."

"Boy, what a big elephant. He's all gray. 'Why so ugly, elephant?' . . . 'Oh! That's what happens when you get involved in politics.'"

"What's that over there? It looks like a picture of a monkey. There's writing beneath it. What does it say?"

"Oh! Nothing unusual. Just a poster for ASWC elections."

"This is a savage. Color it red and white. Isn't it funny looking? Hey, what's it doing at the zoo? . . . 'Daddy why is the savage bald?'"

Aid Applications Available

Application forms for financial aid for the 1963-64 year are now at the printers, University of Vermont Director of Financial Aid, H. Reed Saunders, has announced.

University students who wish to apply for aid for the 1963-64 year are reminded to keep in mind the deadline application of May 1, 1963. Saunders said his office would announce when application forms are available from the printer.

He also said that the Financial Aid Office, 159 Waterman, has received a number of requests for aid for the coming spring semester - "in fact, the amount requested exceeds the amount available." He noted, however, that the Financial Aid Office would not close the door on applications for aid for the spring semester until Friday, Dec. 14.

Ariel

If you are anxious to obtain a copy of the 1962 Ariel there are still a few yearbooks left. You may purchase one for $4.85 by coming to the Ariel office, East Hall, on Tuesday, December 11th after 3:30 p.m.

The only time one may order a 1963 Ariel is at second semester registration. The 1963 book is published at $14.00 per copy, but students and faculty members may buy a copy for $5.00. Seniors get them free of charge.

Quality is the key to success at Western Electric

Admittedly, our standards are high at Western Electric. But engineering graduates who can meet them, and who decide to join us, will begin their careers at one of the best times in the history of the company. For plentiful opportunities await them in both engineering and management.

As we enter a new era of communications, Western Electric engineers are carrying forward assignments that affect the whole art of telephony from electronic devices to high-speed sound transmission. And, in the management category alone, several thousand supervisory jobs will be available to W.E. people within the next 10 years. Many of these new managers will come from the class of '62.

Now's the time for you to start thinking seriously about the general work area that interests you at Western Electric, the manufacturing and supply unit of the Bell Telephone System. Then when our representative comes to your campus, you'll be prepared to discuss career directions that will help make the interview profitable.

Mixes And Matches

by Sue Milman

The excitement of the past Thanksgiving Vacation will be heightened during the next few weeks, for much in the way of social events has been planned. AEPI has a most unique idea for their Winter Formal Weekend. Their escapade is taking the "Canadian Clubbers" to Montreal for the weekend to stay at the exclusive Queen Elizabeth Hotel, which is in the heart of the city. The weekend festivities will begin on Friday night with a party and Saturday afternoon with a dinner. After dinner, everyone will ride to Essex Junction and "highball" it to Montreal on a special evening train. The evening will be danced away and by morning the weary AEPIs, et al., will return by train. The thrilling weekend will draw to a close with a brunch at the house on Sunday.

The sisters of ADPI gave a baby shower for Margie Edwards Douglas. Congratulations and best of luck to the Douglasses and their new addition!

SAE was also the scene of excitement. SAE and Pi Phi held a very successful party after the Middlebury game. The Pi Phis were glad to see all their sorors from Middlebury and to entertain the girls and their dates at a supper party.

More mysterious adventure at the TEP house. El Tigre isn't feeling too well. At least Dawn and Fitzgerald are alright. And now a monkey? The Big A hasn't been heard from, but the boys have all heard from WEISSSSS! Has anyone seen Marty Wolf? Rumor has it that he has been smothered by Marlboro boxes at the Ape House. I wonder who has been smoking all those cigarettes?

The Thetas enjoyed playing hostesses to Dr. and Mrs. Perrine for dinner and dessert. Fun has certainly filled the house. The girls also entertained their neighbors, AGR, at a dessert hours.

POTPOURRI:

Congratulations to Sig Ep's Dave Farrow, '65, who was recently selected as Drum Major for the UVM Marching Band. The Sip Eps played host to ADPI at a dessert house before vacation. The brotherhood presented ADPI's Sharon Newton, '65, with a bouquet of roses and presented her in recognition of her recent pinning to Joe St. Onge, '64.

Congratulations are also due Bob Tank, '65, of Sigma Phi, who recently became pinned to Linda Clemmons of Middlebury. And best wishes to ATO's Mac Campbell, who recently pinned Donna Prescott of Vermont College and Charlie Sumner of ATO, who pinned Martha Mason of Gamma Phi Beta.

Two boys recently joined the brotherhood of Sigma Phi - congratulations to Fred Willis and Tim Hall. Congratulations to Dick Blanchard, Toby Altermak, Keith Gould, and Chester Bogacz, who are now wearing ATO pins and to Dan Calevro, who is sporting an ATO pledge pin. The boys of TEP welcome into their house Al Tolk, '65, as a pledge.

Wedding chimes will soon be ringing for many folks on the UVM campus. Best wishes to ADPI's Elaine Wright, '62, and Sigma Phi's Scott Johnson, '62, on their recent engagement. Congratulations also to Betsy Bashew, '64, of ADP, upon her engagement to Chuck Goudey, formally of UVM and now of Hartford Law School. Best of luck to Chester Boyacz of ATO and Mary Furgal of Munson, Mass.

The sorors of Alpha Chi would like to congratulate Janice Jackson and Carolyn Risley, who were chosen for Omicron Nu, the Home Economics Honorary.

Editors Note:

Congratulations to the author of "Mixes and Matches" for her job of "Matching." AEPI's Sue Milman, '64, was recently pinned to AEPI's Barry Marcus, '62.

UVM and Colby To Have Joint Concert

The University of Vermont band will journey to Colby College, in Waterville, Maine, in the near future for a joint concert with the Colby band. According to Herbert L. Schultz, professor of music, the purpose of the trip is "to give our people a chance to play under a little different direction, and to have a little different experience."

In a joint concert, where two bands unite to form one musical ensemble, each band strengthens the other. If one band lacks an unusual instrument, such as a bass clarinet, ideally, the other band will have it. Thus, a joint concert minimizes the effect of the weak sections of either band.

Last year saw the start of the Colby-UVM annual exchange concert when Colby came to Vermont for a long weekend. UVM band members will be housed in various Colby living units, and will eat on campus. From the full band of 55, those chosen for the concert are selected, first for ability, next for the need of their particular instrument, and finally for seniority.

Band is a one hour credit course at UVM, with rehearsals on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday, from 4:10 to 5:30. Schultz said, "The existence of band is twofold, as it is both a subject and a student activity, with a roster of student officers."

The actual concert date and program remain unsettled because of constant rehearsals for football games.

the resident string quartets of Kansas University and Ohio State. He has also made occasional concert appearances.

Green's program includes: Sanata in A Major, K. 526 - Mozart

Four Pieces, Op. 7 - Webern Sanata in G Major, Op. 78 - Brahms

Partita No. 3 in E Major - Bach Piece en Forme de Habenera - Ravel

Legende - Wieniawski Poeme - Chansson.

George Green, Assistant Professor of Music, will present a violin recital in Ira Allen Chapel at 8:30 on Thursday, December 6th. Green holds the degrees BM with Distinction and MM from the Eastman School of Music. He was a George Eastman scholar, majoring in composition and violin. Later he was awarded a full scholarship to the Berkshire Music Center (Tanglewood) for study with Aaron Copland.

His Prologue and Fugue for orchestra has been performed by the Los Angeles Philharmonic and was broadcast nationally over the Mutual Network by the Oklahoma City Symphony in 1959. The Three Pieces for Chamber Orchestra, which was performed November 15th by the UVM Symphony under the composer's direction, has been performed by several college orchestras. The university of Kansas Little Symphony broadcast Green's composition over WNYC, New York City. Other chamber, orchestral and vocal works have been heard on such campuses as Redlands, California, and University of Nebraska and in Berlin, Germany.

As a violinist Green has been a member of the first violin section of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra. Formerly, he played in

Legends Told At St. John Lectures

Robert St. John
(Credit: Sulton, S.P.S.)

After reading about the thousands of miles traveled and the pile of books on such fascinating topics as Africa and the Middle East, many faculty members and UVM students crammed into the Ira Allen Chapel, Wednesday night, November 28, to hear a discussion on "Explosive Africa" by Robert St. John, Mr. St. John, an imposing figure in his neatly cropped beard, proceeded for the next hour to entertain, amuse, confuse and befuddle everyone present, and managed to do everything in his power short of talking about "Explosive Africa."

Beginning with an amusing story concerning the confusion resulting from his arrival in Portland, Oregon on the same train as twenty orthodox Jewish rabbis (the lecture director, who was at the station to pick him up, knew only that Robert St. John had a beard) he went through a repertoire of anecdotes and tales equaled by few roadlecturers. After announcing that he would rapidly dispel from the minds of the audience all knowledge of Africa gleaned from the pages of Time Magazine, St. John warned that many in the audience would be angered during their "education" -- unfortunately no one experienced either anger or an educational evening. In all fairness to St. John and SCOPE, the organization which sponsored the lecture, it is not true that there was nothing to be learned from the lecture on "Explosive Africa." The lessons for the evening were (1) disgusting prejudice exists in the US and this hurts the US abroad, (2) a horrible situation exists in the Union of South Africa, apartheid, which is fostered by a very evil group of whites. Despite these shocking revelations, only a few members of the audience were brought to their feet and only one old woman in the third row fainted (reports were that she looked somewhat ill before the lecture).

After St. John was finished with "Explosive Africa" -- in reality many were still waiting for it to begin -- there was a question and answer period which proved to be as "educational" and amusing as the lecture itself.

The summation by St. John consisted of his five "action proposals". (Between the question and answer period and this summation St. John got lost for some 15 minutes in a highly amusing set of anecdotes concerning Mr. Ben Gurion of Israel and Mr. Nasser of the UAR. This might very well have been the high point of the evening.) His five proposals were (1) Eliminate stupid prejudice, (2) Learn enough about the strength of natural man -- St. Johnese for the Africans -- and the shortcomings of synthetic man -- that's us, (3) Remember that we in the U.S. live in a goldfish bowl and all the world is watching us, (4) Don't fall victim to the shallow idea that we in the U.S. have no right to interfere in the internal affairs of another country. At this point, St. John got so lost in an analogy regarding a neighbor who lashes her daughter, who is tied to a bedpost, and you can see all this because

CATS GO JAZZ

Last Sunday evening a jazz group, composed of members from the original Catamount band, played in the Marsh Hall Lounge. Their performance was excellent by any college standards. Contemporary jazz sounds were emphasized.

Working in Sunday's group were: Zoot Adelman - alto sax; John Goodard - trombone; Dick Lombard - piano; Bob Clark - bass; Bob Levis - drums; and Benny Becton - vocals.

This musical session marks the beginning of a new program being set up by the Men's Residence Hall's planning committee. This program is designed to provide more entertainment for the men in the Halls at the Halls, thus eliminating the typical "dorm life". Future jam sessions as well as dances will be organized more regularly. Soon the famed fraternity will no longer monopolize all of the fun on campus.

the window blind is up, that he completely forgot about point number 5. (Perhaps this comes with a return visit -- he certainly hinted enough times that he would love to be reinvented to deliver his Middle East Lecture)

Robert St. John is one of the most charming men to visit UVM in ages. His delivery is delightful and he has an amazing facility for conveying feeling and amusing an audience. The only problem is: What ever happened to "Explosive Africa."

Dr. Mead Speaks

Dr. Sedwick Mead, the director of a California rehabilitation center and a leading figure in neuromuscular research, spoke at UVM on Monday, Nov. 26.

Dr. Mead, who has been medical director of the California Rehabilitation Center since 1954, spoke at the UVM College of Medicine at noon. His appearance was sponsored by the Vermont Rehabilitation Center and the Division of Rehabilitation and by the department of epidemiology and community medicine.

Dr. Mead has done considerable research in seeking a means of bringing out function in people with a brain injury by using position sense (proprioceptive neuromuscular facilitation) to stimulate increased muscular action. Some of his findings are responsible for bringing about new types of treatment.

A native of Oklahoma, Dr. Mead was educated at Harvard College and the Harvard Medical School. From 1947 until 1954, he was department head of physical medicine at the Washington University (Mo.) School of Medicine.

He is a diplomate in the American Board of Physical Medicine and Rehabilitation; is a fellow in the American Academy of Physical Medicine and Rehabilitation, American Academy for Cerebral Palsy; is president of the Association of Rehabilitation Centers and Facilities; is the author of more than 40 articles and chapters on physiology, physical medicine, neurology, geriatrics, and rehabilitation; and is a member of the editorial board of the

Tauchert Crowned Queen

On Friday evening, November 30, our own Waterman cafeteria was transformed into a glittering ballroom as the site of The 64th Military Ball. From 9 P.M. to 1 A.M., some three hundred guests enjoyed a gala evening, dancing to the music of The Bob Adams Orchestra and idly chatting in the soft glow of candlelit tables.

The highlight of the evening came with the crowning of the Queen. In an impressive military ceremony, Miss Sally Tauchert, Class of '64, walked under a canopy of crossed swords to her throne, where she was crowned Queen of the Military Ball by Miss Martha Russell, Class of '63, last year's reigning Queen. Surrounding Miss Tauchert were her lovely ladies-in-waiting, who are Miss Patricia Middleton, Class of '65, Miss Janice Cole, Class of '64, and Miss Patricia Russell, Class of '65. The Queen will reign for the coming year and with her court will take part in several military functions, including the Military Review to be held this spring.

The Military Ball is an annual affair, co-sponsored by The Pershing Rifles and The Ethan Allen Rifles. Through their combined efforts, The 64th Military Ball was a rewarding tactical and strategic success.

Project Begun By Economics Honorary Society

by J. L. Durrell

What are you going to do when you graduate?

You have undoubtedly spent endless hours contemplating this very question. If all of your efforts have been fruitless, or nearly so, then you certainly need to realign your pattern of thought in some manner. This article may furnish the change that will make the difference. I'm not going to attempt any great dissertation on a plan that promises to plug in a formula with specific data and presto - the ideal career. Any person that does this fails to realize the complexity that a suitable answer to the question necessitates.

As a freshman, you must have or have had many doubts as to the continued pursuit of your chosen field. As an undergraduate, you will revise your goals more than once. Many students approach graduation still doubting their chosen occupation.

In an attempt to alleviate some of this doubt, the Commerce and Economics Honorary Society is initiating a career project for undergraduates. This project is directed at those students in the general field of Commerce and Economics. It will touch upon the fields of advertising, accounting, banking, insurance, industrial management, marketing, finance, personnel management, and investments. It is the Society's belief that an individual, choosing a field, can best learn if this is the proper field for him by direct contact with a successful person in the field. He can learn what to expect from the field and what the field will demand from him. By listening to successful persons in other areas, this individual can make a sound comparison. It will give him firm ground on which to base his final judgment. This series of presentations will consist of talks followed by discussion periods.

The first speaker to present himself on campus for this purpose has been chosen from the field of advertising. He is the president of the Newspaper Advertising Executives Association (an international organization of more than 2,000 members representing daily newspaper circulation of more than 55,000,000). He is J. Warren McClure, the current publisher of the Burlington Free Press. Mr. McClure has traveled over the entire country giving talks on the subject of advertising. His dynamic approach will make for interesting entertainment. He will speak Monday, December 10, 1962 at 8 P.M. in the Marsh-Tupper lounge.

Here is an opportunity to spend several worthwhile hours. If this does not happen to be your chosen career field, be sure to come. This talk will serve to clarify many questions in your mind. If this is your career field, you will come anyway, since you undoubtedly will have many questions to ask Mr. McClure about advertising.

Van Cliburn Lauded For Fine Performance

by Michael A. Baker

Van Cliburn, the Texas pianist who burst into international fame four years ago when he won the Tchaikowsky Competition in Moscow, performed in the University of Vermont Lane Series on Monday evening, December 3. Cliburn was born in Shreveport, La. When he was six, his family moved to Kilgore, Texas, where his father was purchasing agent for an oil company. His mother had been a talented pianist and student of Arthur Friedheim, famous pupil of Franz Liszt. Although Mrs. Cliburn's parents forbade a concert career to her, her son was able to reap the benefits of her years of practice and study. At the age of three, long before he could read words, Van began to read music. His mother was his teacher until he went to New York City in 1951 to study with Julliard's noted Mme. Rosina Lhevinne.

The boy played his first public concert at the age of four at Shreveport's Dodd College. At twelve he was the winner of a state wide young pianist's competition, playing Tchaikowsky's B-flat Concerto with the Houston Symphony. The same year he made his Carnegie Hall debut as winner of the National Music Festival Award. Other laurels came his way: a Julliard School Scholarship, the G.B. Dealey Award in Dallas, the Kosciuszko Foundation Chopin Award, a grant from the Olga Samaroff Foundation, and, upon his graduation from Julliard with highest honors, he received the Carl M. Roeder Memorial Award and the Frank Damrosch Scholarship. His most important victory came in 1954 when he won the coveted Levin-tritt Award, the most important American prize. The award carried with it appearances with the New York Philharmonic and other orchestras. His debut with the Philharmonic created a sensation.

Even though he was well known to the American musical world in 1958 when he went to Moscow, Van Cliburn was almost unknown to the great musical public. When front-page stories of the hysterical acclaim by the Russians began to appear, the Cliburn legend was born overnight in the public mind.

In the three years since, Cliburn has managed the incredibly difficult task of living up to his own legend. By his superb musicianship and the gracious and modest charm of his personality, he has become an artist of which this country can be exceedingly proud.

When Cliburn returned to the Soviet Union for the U.S. State Department last summer, the great Professor Neuhaus, teacher of Cilels and Richter, said, without reservations, "He is the real and brilliant successor to Rachmaninoff!" And Harold Schonberg, critic of the New York Times, wrote, "Cliburn stands revealed as a pianist whose potentialities have fused into a combination of uncommon virtuosity and musicianship!"

Perhaps the biggest "personality" to appear in the eight seasons of the Lane Series, it was apparent that Mr. Cliburn did not live up to his great expectations. Having heard Cliburn before and comparing the performances, it seemed as though it took him quite a while to warm up. Beethoven's Sonata in F Minor was played in a cold, calculated style. Yet as the concert continued, it appeared as though he had found the element obviously lacking in this first work. The second work of the evening was the Sonata No. 6 in A. Major by Prokofieff. Cliburn offered a prelude to this piece by explaining how the work was structured. Although the audience reaction to this modern work was not very enthusiastic, it was readily apparent that it was the most rigorous of the three he played.

The second part of the concert began with the Sonata in B Minor by Franz Liszt. This was probably the most enjoyable as well as melodic work of the evening. The liner notes for this work stated, "The form departs so radically from the classical tradition that, in essence, it appropriately might be called a symphonic poem." Cliburn did a masterful job on this and, of course, was well received.

But the evening didn't end there. The audience brought Mr. Cliburn back for three encores with, as it appeared, very little reluctance of the performer. The three included works were; Liszt's Transcription of Schumann's song Widmung, Chopin's Scherzo in C Minor, and finally Chopin's Etude in E.

Although Mr. Cliburn's overall performance was not one of his better ones, it did appear that after his initial work, the remaining ones did approach, with reservations, the dynamic and brilliant style of which his critics have written. Nevertheless, there was something lacking!

Medical services are very poor; and there are only three hospitals in the country. They are in the main cities of San'a Taiz and Hodaïda. There are twelve Italian doctors and two or three from other countries. They were supposed to care for 5,500,000 people, but, in fact, they spent most of their time attending the king and his unnumberable harem and slaves. Besides that, in 1959 the old king went to Italy for a medical visit that lasted three months. The expenditure for that period was estimated at $4,000,000. In 1961, his son, Al-Bada, paid for another visit to Italy, his daily expenditure being estimated at about 1,000,000 Lire.

The revolution of last September dethroned the king and proclaimed a republic. This revolution was the result of 14 years of sacrifices and bloodshed. It was the outcome of a long period of harshness and execution. The leader of the revolution, now President Abdullah Al-Salal, is a devoted nationalist and a patriotic leader. The revolution has no connection with any outside power. It was exclusively planned and exclusively executive by the Yemeni people. The UAR's involvement in the issue came later. It came after Yemen's national security was (and still is) threatened by Saud of Saudi Arabia and Hussein of Jordan, who are trying to crush the revolution and restore the monarchy.

The existence of the UAR's troops in Yemen is conditional. They will eventually be withdrawn, as soon as Saud and Hussein halt their aggression and discontinue their support of the royalists. It was very realistic and generous of President Kennedy to initiate his proposal calling upon Saud and Hussein to halt their military intervention in Yemen and upon UAR to withdraw its troops from Yemen. But Saud and Hussein, by implication, rejected the proposal. Saud's rejection of the proposal was a natural reaction. He is another medieval and barbaric ruler. The civilized world will never forget his crimes in 1955 when he executed 200 college graduates and officers because they demanded a constitutional government which would bring social justice.

Time magazine (Nov. 23) gives some indication of why Saud is opposed to the Yemen revolution. Time says, "Saud, apparently frightened by a Yemen-style coup, has for weeks slept each night in a different bedroom of his palace. He has put top military men under house arrest, is surrounded by 200 of Hussein's Jordanian guards, dressed in Saudi uniform, because he considers them more reliable than his Saudis. His Air Force has been grounded since Sept., when seven pilots defected to Egypt."

The aims of our revolution, and the infant republic, are to establish a modern democratic government, guided by a constitution and the principles of democracy, and to set up a representative government upon the free will of our people.

The U.S. has up to now taken the side of the monarchs, but the time has come when the U.S. must change her alliance with a group of reactionary, medieval rulers. I feel that it becomes a moral and political obligation for the U.S. to line up with the republicans, who truly represent the people. Morally, because the monarchs are uncivilized and rule with an absolutely free hand, resulting in absolute corruption. Politically, it is better for the U.S. not to risk her reputation as a democratic government and her prestige in that area by siding with the monarchs. But the most important thing is that the republicans are now gaining victory while the old monarchs are losing ground and are on the way out of the political scene.

What Yemen wants from the U.S. is immediate de jure recognition, and that Mr. Kennedy back his proposal up to prevent further bloodshed.

Room will be at 1 pm on Wednesday. Simpson Snack Bar will close Tuesday, and Marsh Snack Bar will close on Sunday, December 16.

DARTMOUTH LIBRARY RULES CHANGED

Dartmouth College's Baker Library has recently changed its rules on off-campus loans to rules similar to those in effect at UVM's Bailey Library.

In the past, the Dartmouth library required a deposit for use of books by those not connected with the college. Now even that arrangement will be withdrawn, according to the library. Books will be allowed off campus only on formal interlibrary loans.

The growing need for library books among Dartmouth's own students, and the problems of loss and damage to library materials, were given as the reasons for the new restrictions.

When UVM's Library Director Ben C. Bowman announced the restriction of Bailey Library borrowing, he gave very similar reasons for his decision.

UVM, it appears, is not alone.

austere campus; the other with a mediocre faculty and library but with impressive physical facilities, would not the student with superior intellectual capabilities and seriousness of purpose select the former?

If the foregoing analysis is correct, and if the University of Vermont has wisely allocated its resources in accordance with such an order of priority, one must conclude from an inspection of the new physical facilities adorning the campus that the University has reached a state of affluence. Looking particularly at the new physical education facilities and even recognizing that they will serve multiple purposes - the classroom and laboratory facilities for a new, or at least greatly expanded, discipline within the University, a plant in which to conduct physical education for all university students, a plant in which to house athletic programs, and as a recreational facility to be enjoyed by the entire University family and indeed the community - it is still difficult to view these uses, with the possible exception of the first, as high priority items. The conclusion follows, therefore, that all needs of anterior priority have been met.

In conclusion, it should be recognized that the task of allocation is not a straightforward one. Unfortunately, many of the funds at the disposal of the University carry restrictive provisions. The vagaries of financing opportunities are such that it is impossible for those charged with the responsibility of allocation to hold unerringly to a preconceived order of priorities. The problem really cannot be confined to the University, it is but a part of the larger problem of allocation faced by the economy as a whole.

Mr. Bigelow, the skipper of the Golden Rule, a 30-foot ketch, set sail with a crew of four for the Eniwetok proving grounds in 1958 to protest the continued use of nuclear weapons by any nation. His book, "The Voyage of the Golden Rule" (Doubleday, 1958) describes this voyage and its effects.

An architect and painter by profession, he is active on the national boards of SANE and the Fellowship of Reconciliation. He was on the executive committee of the New York office of the American Friends Service Committee and produced "Which Way The Wind," a docudrama presenting alternatives to violence, for the committee.

Mr. Bigelow, a member for the initial group of Freedom Riders in 1961, has an interest in civil rights as well as nuclear disarmament. He is now a member of the NAACP and CORE.

After receiving an A.B. degree from Harvard, he was a lieutenant commander in the United States Navy during World War II. After the war, he was housing commissioner for the state of Massachusetts.

The Burlington Meeting of Friends, in co-operation with Goddard College, is sponsoring Mr. Bigelow's talk at UVM. His visit to New England is part of a nation wide speaking tour under the sponsorship of the American Friends Service Committee.

SWEET-TOOTHED
CUPCAKE

CAMPUS TYPE IV

The natural habitat of the Cupcake is the Home Economics kitchen. She believes, as her mother did, that the way to a man's heart is through his stomach. While this viewpoint might be considered unsophisticated by many of today's more enlightened male students, none of them has ever been known to turn down a tin of her Fudge-Frosted Nut-Filled Brownies. She really has a way with a dish and, as you can see, she's quite a dish herself.

Just as the Cupcake has found the perfect recipe for Frosted Brownies, the makers of Pall Mall have found the perfect recipe for a delicious smoke. Taste Pall Mall's natural mildness and see what we mean.

Pall Mall's natural mildness

So smooth, so satisfying, so downright smokeable!

Cats Picked As "Dark Horse" Contenders

Ten Yankee Conference games and six state battles highlight the 23 game slate. Opponent's stock in the league rose greatly when it was found out that the leading scorer in Yankon play, Charlie Lee of Rhode Island, left school. Lee was expected to play for the Rams this season. Tough conference opponents include units from Massachusetts and Connecticut as well as Rhody.

In state play Vermont can expect plenty of trouble from Norwich and St. Michael's in what should be an exciting race.

The Catamounts will open their season Dec. 1 at Dartmouth. The Indians are the top non-conference foe on the Vermont schedule, but Brandeis will be rugged enough.

One tournament is on tap. On Jan. 1 and 2, the Cats travel to Wolfville, Nova Scotia for the Blue Nose Classic. Norwich finished second in this event last year.

Five And Three Or

The Season "In-verse"

Written and Given by John Coons at FIRST ANNUAL PRESIDENT'S FOOTBALL DINNER
Thursday, November 15, 1962

We are gathered here tonight for a definite reason
That is to say goodbye to the 1962 season
It didn't end exactly on a note that was right
But along the way - there were spots that were bright

Up to our win at Rhode Island - as a team we did progress
For some reason, after that game, we began to regress
But that is behind us, so forget it once and for all
And dedicate ourselves to nothing but progress next fall.

During the season there were strange noises in the training room
It was handsome Bob Grant was was trying to croon
He is a big leaguer with knife-fork-and tape
And because of his fine work-you all were kept in tip top shape.

Cy and Les-2 great coaches who were vital to us each and every day
Because of their hard work, really earned their pay
Along with Ralph, Fuzzy and Denny-who we think are real fine guys

Because of their fine work-we shout their praises to the skies.

Bob Clifford is one of the finest men that I know
Because of him, I came to this land of ice and snow
His work this season has been more than grand
And because of it-let's all rise and give him a hand.

David Sequist could always be counted to pour on the heat
His standard of play is a goal I wish all 11 men would meet
Paul Harris, a fine fellow, was the QB most of the way
At times made the coach happy-and at times-made him gray.

I have been on my feet long enough for this time
Thank goodness for that - for I am running out of rhyme
But before I sit down - there is something I want you to hear Listen closely - for I want to make my point crystal clear.

The 1962 football season ends here tonight
From where I stand, it didn't end too bright
To lose is a very bitter pill for me to take
So the following oath, I want you all, along with me, to take.

We will give Coach Clifford, each and every day
All that is needed to put UVM on a winning way
From me and you he must have our best
And he has what it takes to do the rest.

In order to play winning football-it can't be approached as a lark
For in order to run hard-tackle & block-it must come from your heart
So dedicate yourselves to play the game with a lot of hop
For football at UVM is headed to the top.

Future Looks Fuzzy For Coach Evans

The spotlight at the University of Vermont has moved from the Centennial Field to the hardwood of the new Patrick Gymnasium as the experienced basketball forces of John (Fuzzy) Evans prepare for their 23 game schedule.

The 1962-63 outlook is one of optimism as the entire starting team returns. Despite the problem of lacking height, the Cats have a good chance of moving into the first division of the Yankee Conference, battling Rhode Island and Massachusetts along with powerful Connecticut for this top berth.

Heading the list of veterans are Benny Becton, a Yankee Conference first team selection in 1961, and Dick Ader, who made the Yankon second team last season, along with seniors Jack Shabel and Captain John Stahler. The only underclassmen in the starting five is junior Dave Strassburg of Essex Junction.

Becton led the Vermont scorers last year with a 16.8 average. Shabel tallied 15.6 a game while Ader and Strassburg were also in double figures. Stahler was a key rebounder and improved his scoring in late season play. The varsity record was 12-12 last season, finishing fifth in the Yankee Conference and second in the state series.

Height is again the downfall of the Vermont squad. The tallest starters are Stahler and Strassburg at 6-3. Center Becton is 6-2, but jumps as if he were 6-8. Helping offset this disadvantage will be the great speed of the Green and Gold. Ader and Shabel give Evans an excellent back-court combination for the third straight season.

With no seniors on last year's team, there is plenty of depth on the bench. Dick Lawson, Chuck Glick and Bobby Nurse all are experienced veterans. Lawson has been hampered by a bad ankle in pre-season drills. Other veterans on the 1962 team are Karl Kieslich and Fred Willis.

There also will be help from two sophomores. Leading candidate will be Ralph D'Attilia, who led the frosh with an 18.7 scoring average last year.

THE SCHEDULE: Dec. 1, at Dartmouth; 7, at Maine; 8, at Maine; 11, New Hampshire; 13, at Norwich, Jan. 1-2, Blue Nose Classic at Wolfville, Nova Scotia; 4, Rhode Island; 5, Rhode Island; 8, Union; 9, at Middlebury; 11, at Connecticut; 12, at Massachusetts; Feb. 2, Connecticut; 6, St. Michael's; 9, at Brandeis; 13, Norwich; 15 at St. Michael's; 16, Massachusetts; 20, at New Hampshire; 27, Middlebury; March 1, at Clarkson; 2, at St. Lawrence.

UVM To Play First Really Home Game On Dec. 11

Cats Open With A Loss To Dartmouth; Becton Nets 20

Frosh Defeat Dartmouth

Sequist Rates ECAC All-East; Oelze Chosen '63 Grid Captain

The University of Vermont's basketball Catamounts threw a scare into Dartmouth before bowing to the Big Green in the second-half here Saturday night, 76-63.

"Basketball is a game of mistakes," said UVM coach Fuzzy Evans Sunday. "We made too many in the second half. This and the missing of many easy shots is what killed us."

Making their first appearance of the 1962-63 campaign, the Catamounts led by seven points at one point in the first half only to see Dartmouth come back to close the gap to one point at halftime, 33-32.

Benny Becton, showing the form which netted him over 20 points a game in his sophomore year, apparently shook his junior year jinx and paced the Cats through the first half with 12 points.

Dartmouth opened the second half fast and furiously and jumped to a 42-37 lead after five minutes. A minute later UVM had tied the score, but the Doggie Julian's Big Green pulled ahead 51-43 with about 10 minutes left and remained in the driver's seat from this point on.

UVM's hopes for a comeback were throttled by numerous violations and the failure to connect on many easy shots.

Steve Spahn and Sam Barton were the big men in Dartmouth's second-half drive. Spahn, Dartmouth top scorer of a year ago with 23 points per game, was held to a lone field goal in the first half but had a big second 20 minutes and ended the night with 20 points.

Barton notched all of his 13 points in the second half. Six-foot forward Davis Blaine had kept the Big Green in the game in the initial half. He closed with 20 points.

Playing supporting roles in the UVM cause were Jack Shabel and Dick Ader with 13 and 10 points, respectively. Ader was the Catamount playmaker.

Dartmouth connected on 27 of 61 attempts from the floor for 44 per cent while Vermont hit on 25 of 63 floor shots for 39 per cent. The story of the game was told at the foul line from where Dartmouth scored 22 while UVM only 13.

Next Friday and Saturday, the Catamounts travel to Orono, Maine where they will take on the University of Maine Bears in a Yankee Conference double-header.

Catamount Clippings

By Ray Bello

"DO YOU REMEMBER..."

With the coldness of Vermont's winter approaching, and the sports spotlight being focused on the round ball sport, the heroics of the past football campaign are rapidly fading into oblivion. All that remains of the 1962 football season is several reels of film and many memories. The season was summarized in the last editorial and again in the poem written by Assistant Coach "Ralph Waldo" Coons. So to cite any one spectacular play would be superfluous. It might sound like a Marlboro Cigarette commercial. "Do you remember back on such and such, when you, so and so, ran 98 yards for a touchdown..."

OH CAPTAINS, OUR CAPTAINS

But not to be forgotten is the spirited play of sophomore center George Oelze, that earned him the position of captain of next year's football team. Neither must the play of this year's co-captain, Dave Sequist, be forgotten. Dave was a fine leader and, besides being one of the roughest linemen in New England, was one of the most amiable team men, on and off the gridiron, in the United States.

Now that the basketball season is under way, note the qualities of Captain John Stahler and last year's captain, Benny Becton. Both men are leaders in their own right. Stahler may not be as prolific a scorer as teammate Becton, but John is a valuable asset to the team because of his all-around ability and his leadership on the court. Becton, an All-Conference choice as a sophomore, is one of the "coolest" operators on the hardwoods. Benny rarely gets really excited and plays a cool-headed brand of basketball and usually emerges as UVM's top scorer.

As in every college sport, Saturday's (or any other day of the week's) hero is soon forgotten and his memory becomes pages in scrapbooks and yearbooks. Unless he becomes Sunday's check winner by becoming a professional athlete, which a very small percentage of college athletes do. This is the natural evolution of any athlete; to become famous and then to be forgotten. But the lessons he learned by striving for perfection, achieving self-satisfaction through physical conditioning and accepting defeat, will prove invaluable as he endeavors to be a success in life. As Paul Dietzel, coach of the Army football team, said on one of his many locker room posters, "You can learn more character on the two yard-line than you can anywhere in life." Of course, this applies only to football, but many other similar lessons can be learned from other sports.

by Richard B. Racoon.

Last Saturday night, UVM's Frosh beat the Dartmouth Yearlings 71-68 in the preliminary to the varsity game at Hanover, New Hampshire.

From the very beginning of the game, it was UVM, as they took a four point lead, never to fall behind. Sparked by the big 6 ft. 5 in., Milt Goggans, and shifty Bob Hillas, the Kittens stayed in the lead and went on to win.

The Kittens were never behind in the first half. Goggans, of Hoboken, New Jersey, scored 14 points in the first half and was helped by Marty Engel of Lakewood, N.J., and Steve Ross of Orange, Conn. Milt did a tremendous job of limiting Dartmouth to just one shot at the basket every time they had the ball. At the half, the Kittens were on the long end of a 41-38 score.

At the start of the second half, a poised Dartmouth team came back to even the count. Then Bob Hillas, of Union City, New Jersey, caught fire. Before Dartmouth knew what happened, they were down six. From that point on, Dartmouth never came closer.

In the second half, the game was carried along by the backcourt. Ken Spalter, of Brooklyn, New York, netted 8 of his 14 points. Lane Higgs of Barre, Vermont took over and put in all of his nine markers.

Steve Ross ended the game with a total of 6 points, Milt Goggans 14, Bob Hillas 17, Ken Spalter 14, Lane Higgs 9, and Marty Engel 11. High man of the game was Dartmouth's Lernsford with 28 points.

SKI TEAM SKETCHES

by Prent Phelps

Last Wednesday, the team held an equipment sale open to the public. As a good college racer uses only the best in equipment, there were many good values available to the recreational skier. Besides putting some money into the pockets of the individual members, the sale gave the student body a chance to meet their ski team... Coach Stewart is planning to hold a race camp for team members during Christmas vacation. The camp will last for five days and will concentrate solely on the nordic events. As some of you remember, UVM was weakest in that field last year, which cost us many points in the carnivals... There is a good chance that UVM will host the NCAA Alpine Championships next year at Stowe, giving added recognition to the school... The forty freshmen who went out for the team in early fall have dropped to only a handful now training with the team. Hope to see more spirit when the snow begins to fall... Those training with the team have been running cross-country races regularly with Captain Rick Hubbard finishing consistently in first place... Coach Stewart has been looking into our chances of hosting a carnival and has been battling 1,000 so far; more on this next week.

Open House

There will be an open house at the new gym and field house this Sunday, December 9, from 1:30 to 3:30. It is open to all and all are welcome to attend.

Next year's captain,
George Oelze.

Sophomore center George Oelze has been named the captain of the 1963 football team. He was chosen by his teammates in a vote that was taken after the season's disappointing finale with Middlebury College.

Oelze, a 180 pound defensive specialist, comes from Union City, New Jersey where he attended Union Hill High School. He was an All-County guard and as a senior, he was a co-captain at the Union City school.

Here at Vermont he has proved himself to be a valuable asset to the team. Last year he was named honorary captain of the undefeated Freshman team. This past season, Coach Clifford converted the versatile Oelze from guard to center, where he broke into the starting line-up early in the season and improved with every game.

Oelze excelled on defense. He was the defensive signal caller and time after time displayed tactical ingenuity by setting the strong Catamount defense in perfect position to stymie the opponents. His best performance was against the University of Rhode Island. He was in on 25 tackles that day as the whole team followed his example and played its best game and upset the Rams 21-12 for Vermont's first Yankee Conference win since 1956.

Oelze is a student in the College of Arts and Sciences, majoring in economics. He plans to become an accountant. Personally, George does not look like the typical burly lineman. He gives the impression of being a mild mannered, studious college student, which he is. But when George puts on his football uniform, he becomes a veritable terror. Look for George to lead the Catamounts to many victories on the gridiron next season.

Hockey Team

Hockey came to the University of Vermont on November 27, when 57 candidates for the soon-to-be-formed UVM hockey team tested their blades on the new rink in the Gutterson field house. From this original number, since cut to 32 by Coach Bill Ruffer formerly connected with Michigan Tech University, will come the squad of 18 players. Coach Ruffer plans to keep two goalies and 16 skaters, probably two sets of defensemen, three forward lines, and three alternate skaters.

The club will play an informal schedule this season in preparation for a full slate of games during the 1963-64 campaign. This year, UVM will scrimmage the Dartmouth, Norwich, and Middlebury freshman teams and hold a full-fledged game to be played over the Wake Week-end with a semi-professional squad from Hanover, N.H.

After ironing out a few loose ends, Coach Ruffer seemed generally pleased with his boys, among which there are many fine prospects, and is looking forward to a successful opening season.

This year's co-captain,
Dave Sequist.

Vermont's 1962 football captain, Dave Sequist of East Hartford, Conn., has been named as a first team tackle on the ECAC College Division North All East team.

Sequist, a senior lineman for the Catamounts, and Rhode Island's fine guard Chuck Scarpula were the only Yankee Conference players named to the team.

Sequist made the team on the basis of weekly performances filed with the ECAC. A player was awarded three points for each weekly selection and one point for each weekly nomination. Sequist was selected to the first team after a sterling performance in the Norwich game and was nominated on numerous occasions during the campaign.

The Vermont captain was a steady performer all season for the Green and Gold. Sequist was outstanding in all the Vermont wins and his defensive play was a big factor in the near upset of Maine.

Vermont head coach Bob Clifford has an extra special interest in the tackle selections. In addition to Sequist, tackle Dick Bonalewicz of Colby was named for the second straight year. Clifford coached the Mules in 1961.

Pete Schindler, an AIC halfback who was named on the Vermont all opponent team, was also a first team selection by the ECAC. In the major college all star selections, Jerry Whelchel was in good company in being picked as one of three outstanding sophomores for the season. The Massachusetts quarterback, also on the Vermont opponent team, was picked for the honor with Archie Roberts of Columbia and Roger Staubach, the Navy field admiral who sank the Army for the fourth straight year.

Rifle Team

The University of Vermont varsity rifle team now has a 3-0 record after defeating Dartmouth College on Saturday.

The Vermont team shot a hot 1410 against the Dartmouth team's 1361. The 1410 score is the highest team score in the New England College Rifle League to date this season and boosted the shoulder to shoulder average of Vermont to 1400.

Next week UVM fires against St. Michael's College at the Vermont range.

UVM scores: Seth Pillsbury 284, Steve Salma 282, Al Farrington 282, Dave Haurick 282 and Rick Hubbard 280.

Dartmouth scores: John Fischer 281, John Hosmer 276, R. Choy 269, Ron Chavey 268 and K. Shore 267.

Gym Classes

Uniforms for physical education classes may be purchased in the central supply room in the new gym on Monday, December 10, and in the bookstore thereafter.

All students enrolled in physical education classes are assigned on Wednesday, December 12, in the new gym with your uniforms.

The Vermont Cynic

ROTC Forum Called "Flop" Future Of Committee Program Doubtful Lack Of Student Interest Cited

On Monday, December 10, at Ira Allen Chapel, there was an open forum on the subject of compulsory vs. voluntary ROTC at UVM. It was, according to Harvey Tauber, chairman of the S.A. Central Research Committee, "a colossal flop."

The Forum's panel consisted of President Fey, Colonel Blanchard, Advanced ROTC Cadet Craig Brodie, and sophomore Dan Newcomb. After answering prepared questions designed to clarify the basic issues, the panel took questions from the floor.

The prepared questions were designed to answer such questions as what the reasons for an ROTC program were, why it was compulsory at UVM, and why it was felt that the program was not accomplishing what it should.

President Fey said that he felt that Military Science gave the individual a chance to learn about vital aspects of national security, and to give him a basis upon which to base his decisions about National security, a subject that is very important in today's United States. He stated that this should be part of every person's education, just as a certain amount of mathematics and science is required for a well educated person.

Colonel Blanchard pointed out that many of the Advanced cadets, including the best students very often, would ordinarily not have taken ROTC at all, and that the basic course gave them a chance to reconsider. The Army thereby gained a greater base of material to choose officer trainees from, and got many superior students in the process.

He also explained that ROTC provided about twice as many R.A. Second Lieutenants as West Point each year.

Craig Brodie pointed out that Col. Blanchard had exactly described his own case. He had taken his first year of ROTC with an unchangeable negative attitude. However, he said that once he gave the Army a chance he found that he had been wrong. As a further illustration of Colonel Blanchard's argument, it should be pointed out that Brodie has won the Distinguished Military Student award.

Dan Newcomb said that he was not against military training per se, but that he was definitely opposed to the course as it was now constituted. He said that because everybody has to take the course, it has to be geared to the median student, who may very often be the poorer student. He argued that if the course were voluntary the average student would probably be of a higher quality, and the classes could accomplish more. The poorer student who found the going too hard could then drop out of the course, leaving a still better level of student, rather than be compelled to continue, to the loss of everyone.

In expanding on his description of the forum, Tauber said he estimated that not more than 100 or so students attended the panel discussion. He said that it showed an unbelievable lack of interest in a solution to the problem, possibly the most annoying, year in and year out, on the campus.

Tauber, who moderated the panel, felt that most of the people who came learned something from the panel, despite the question from one student about what the panel was supposed to accomplish. It was apparent, Tauber stated, that most of the people attending did not know what the basic issues were, and that they came away with a better idea of the problem.

He said that it was clear that the few students who did come were there to see the compulsory ROTC program "beaten to a pulp." However, they were to be sadly disappointed by the outcome. The forum was for the sole purpose of presenting and clarifying the problem, and to solve it in the best possible manner, and not to destroy the compulsory program, he said.

The Central Research Committee, Tauber said, was very disappointed with the turnout. The committee is now probably going to just drop the whole project. Before any solution could be found or attempted, the students had to demonstrate their interest in the problem, and that they were not just complaining because they needed something to complain about. Instead, he felt that they had demonstrated just the opposite, and that the committee, in view of this, does not feel that it is worthwhile doing the work for and apathetic and unresponsive student body.

He said that the committee will still evaluate the questionnaires that were handed out at the meeting, and may still decide to go on and try to solve the problem, but that such a course was highly unlikely.

In conclusion, Tauber thanked all the committee members who put in what turned out to be wasted time and effort. He also thanked the students who were interested enough to come for attending, and pointed out that they can blame their lazy classmates if nothing comes of the forum.

Arena Theater Spotlights "Comic Spectacular"

Giraudoux's "Madwoman of Chaillot" is soon to be presented. Above, the cast rehearse attired fully for the performance. (Credit: M. Stater, S.P.S.)

At last the University Players are going to present that comical spectacular The Madwoman of Chaillot by Jean Giraudoux. Not since the great Rashomon has a play of such high quality been attempted.

What is it about, you ask. Well, it's about a madwoman who is not really mad at all. It's about presidents and barons and prospectors and thousand franc notes and gold bricks. It's about pimps and legs of lamb and magic doors and spiritual voices and imaginary dogs and love. It's about the destruction of everything evil in the world. It's about kindness and truth. It's about reality. "It is really quite simple."

Who is in it? None other than the original UVM Madwoman of Chaillot cast. That is: Barry Beckerman as the Ragpicker; John Sulton as the Prospector; Margie Slater as Irma; Marty Singer as the President; Raoul Malak as the Baron; Frank Decavalcante as the Broker; Joel Posner as the Doctor; Jim Adams as the Waiter; Bill Kittell as the Policeman; Ron Morgan as the Sergeant; Bryant Reynolds as Pierre; Andrea Layman as Constance; Ellen Spenser as Gabrielle; Maggie Fyles as Josephine; Norma Hines as the Flower Girl; Ivan Karp as the Shoelace Peddler; Robin Shore as the Deaf Mute; Dave Cheney as the Doorman; Terry Down as the Sewer man; and Heidi Mocek and Linda Joseph as the ladies.

Where will it be held? In the Arena Theater at 8:00 PM on the 13th, 14th and 15th of December. Why not come?

New Book Suggests Solution To Problem Of Crowded Classrooms

(CPS) -- A beguiling new book by novelist Paul Goodman, "The Community of Scholars" (Random House, $3.95), suggests a radical solution to the problem of overcrowded classrooms and IBM education on the overadministered American campus.

Goodman proposes that a group of professors, perhaps as few as ten, secede from their universities, rent a large apartment or small building in a city, and invite 100-150 students to join them in "scholarly association." There would be no administration, no bureaucracy, no long registration lines, no departments to shuttle students between, little paper work outside of classes, and research would be done at the public library. The local YMCA would suffice as a gym, and the whole group would live together in the great tradition of the Renaissance universities.

Goodman feels that his universities, besides overturning established academic procedure, would be fountains of new social ideas for the society. "As an anarchist," he says, "I feel that our association of scholars, like any other association that does real work, has an independent voice in the common council of society and is duty bound to tell them off when they behave like fools."

Book Fair Offers Xmas Gift Ideas

by Mary Ellen O'Brien

The annual University Book Store Fair was held Wednesday, December 5th through Saturday, December 8th.

The Fair's main objective, according to George E. Piper, Director of Purchasing, was to provide "a cultural art type of fair, exhibiting unique Christmas gifts, for the students to select from, as studies leave them with little shopping time."

The Fair consisted primarily of imported items, such as glassware from Holland and sculpture from Africa. Piper felt that this year's sculptured pieces were "especially good." Copies of such renowned works as, "The Kiss," and "Praying Hands" were available at great savings.

Other items among the Fair's greatly enlarged inventory were art prints, brush strokes, records, Christmas cards, and books. The Fair's extensive book display brought to the attention of the student body, new publications in many fields. Children's literature, art books, cooking guides, and sports books were prevalent. A free picture framing service was also available.

The Roy L. Patrick Gymnasium at the University of Vermont was officially opened Tuesday night as the Catamounts beat Yankee Conference rival New Hampshire in the first intercollegiate event.

The idea for a book store fair came with Piper when he came to Vermont. Last February, when pieces for this year's fair were first purchased, the idea of adapting the art to the college curriculum was a guiding principle. For instance, the 1961 Fair dealt chiefly with African works, in conjunction with a series of African lectures being held on campus at that time. Next year, Piper would hope to engage an author or an artist, thus lending scope to the Fair.

If loaded on a single train, it would take 12,216 freight cars, stretching 127 1/4 miles, to haul the 733,000,000 lbs. of U.S. farm abundance CARE will deliver overseas during fiscal year 1962-63. Contributions to the CARE Food Crusade, New York 16, N.Y., help send this aid to hungry people.

to be staged in the new three million athletic plant.

Taking part in the pre-game festivities were William Freeman, architect of the building; Pat Franchi, president of Franchi Construction Co.; Frank Free, chairman, Department of Administration for the state, and Dr. John T. Fey, president of UVM. Robert and John Patrick, sons of the man for whom the gym is named, tossed up the opening ball.

The gymnasium is one of the most modern in the east. Every seat in the gym is a good one as there are no obstructions. The grandstands will seat 4400.

A player was added to the Vermont roster for this home opener. Sophomore Jim Brennan, second leading scorer on the frosh last season. Coach Evans feels that Brennan can help the Cats who lack bench strength.

The starting lineup for the Cats is set with the same veteran quintet of last year. The guards are seniors Dick Ader and Jack Shabel. Both are good shooters and playmakers. At the forward slots are Dave Strassburg and John Stahler, both 6-3. Although small as far as forwards go, both can rebound well. Center and high scorer Benny Becton is the key to the Vermont attack. The Cats are tough to beat when Becton is having a good night.

Music Department Purchases Harpsichord For Instruction

There's a new sound in the Department of Music.

The new sound filling the airways these days emits from a harpsichord just purchased by the department.

Dr. Frank Lidrat, chairman of the department, said that the instrument will make it possible to offer specific instruction in the use and technique of the harpsichord.

Made of European walnut, the harpsichord weighs only about 100 pounds, covers four octaves plus four keys, has an upper and a lower set of strings, and has four stops to create four different and distinct sounds.

The first concert featuring the harpsichord will be in April during a faculty recital.

Debaters Close Fall Season With Team, Individual Honors

University of Vermont debaters closed out the fall semester debate schedule over the weekend by bringing home a stack of hardware from a tournament at Wake Forest College, Winston-Salem, North Carolina.

Partners Gilbert Tornabene and William Germain went undefeated by winning eight matches. Elaine Zak of Burlington and Mike Cronin of Richmond won seven out of eight matches.

The scores brought UVM best affirmative and best negative team trophies, and Tornabene won a cup as highest ranking debater of the four-man division. Germain tied for second place.

All UVM debaters received certificates of excellence.

Tornabene and Germain defeated Old Dominion, Davidson

University, University of Virginia, American University, Navy, Dartmouth and two Wake Forest teams.

Miss Zak and Cronin defeated Duke, University of Richmond, Holy Cross, Dartmouth, two Wayne State University teams and Georgetown University, and lost to St. Joseph's.

Dr. Robert B. Huber, chairman of UVM's speech department, accompanied the students as coach.

Four novice speakers also went to St. Anselm's, Manchester, New Hampshire, and each team won one and lost two. The debaters were Steve Adler, David Waite, Cynthia Clark and Terry Fiske.

Coach was John C. Travis of the UVM speech department.

Awards Honor Dorm Residents For Scholarship

Four Vermonters were among seven UVM students who were honored for scholarship Wednesday night at a banquet.

The dinner recognized scholarship in the men's resident halls for the past semester.

The men's resident hall council plaque (for the student with the highest average who resided in Chittenden, Buckham, Wills, or Converse Hall) went to Peter Slayton of Montpelier. The men's resident hall assembly plaque (for the resident in Marsh, Tupper or Austin Hall with the top average) was awarded to Phillip Mahoney of Springfield.

Slayton is a sophomore in the College of Arts and Science, while Mahoney is a senior, also in Arts and Sciences. Both are pre-med majors.

Also honored for having the best average in their particular living unit were John Clark, Atherton, Cal. (Marsh Hall); John Quesnel, Montpelier (Tupper Hall); Richard Peloquin, Holyoke, Mass. (Chittenden Hall); John Martin, Wenham, Mass. (Converse Hall); and James Gallo, Rutland (Wills Hall). All are Dean's List students.

Dr. Paul Evans, professor emeritus of history at UVM, was the main speaker at the dinner while Ken Nalibow, Woodstock, a junior and past president of the men's resident hall assembly, was toastmaster.

AT PRATT & WHITNEY AIRCRAFT...

YOUR EYES CAN BE ON THE STARS BUT YOUR FEET MUST BE ON THE GROUND

The glamour and excitement of space age programs often obscure a fundamental fact. It is simply that farsightedness must be coupled with sound, practical, down-to-earth engineering if goals are to be attained. This is the philosophy upon which Pratt & Whitney Aircraft's position as a world leader in flight propulsion systems has been built.

Almost four decades of solid engineering achievement at Pratt & Whitney Aircraft can be credited to management's conviction that basic and applied research is essential to healthy progress. In addition to concentrated research and development efforts on advanced gas turbine and rocket engines, new and exciting effects are being explored in every field of aerospace, marine and industrial power application.

The challenge of the future is indicated by current programs. Presently Pratt & Whitney Aircraft is exploring the areas of technical knowledge in magnetohydrodynamics . . . thermionic and thermoelectric conversions . . . hypersonic propulsion . . . fuel cells and nuclear power.

If you have interests in common with us, if you look to the future but desire to take a down-to-earth approach to get there, investigate career opportunities at Pratt & Whitney Aircraft.

To help move tomorrow closer to today, we continually seek ambitious young engineers and scientists. Your degree? It can be a B.S., M.S. or Ph.D. in: MECHANICAL • AERONAUTICAL • ELECTRICAL • CHEMICAL and NUCLEAR ENGINEERING • PHYSICS • CHEMISTRY • METALLURGY • CERAMICS • MATHEMATICS • ENGINEERING SCIENCE or APPLIED MECHANICS. The field still broadens. The challenge grows greater. And a future of recognition and advancement may be here for you.

For further information regarding an engineering career at Pratt & Whitney Aircraft, consult your college placement officer or write to Mr. William L. Stoner, Engineering Department, Pratt & Whitney Aircraft, East Hartford 8, Connecticut.

Kennard Precedes Meredith At Miss In Segregation Fight

James H. Meredith was not the first Negro to seek admission to an all-white, state university in Mississippi. CLYDE KENNARD, A NATIVE OF HATTIESBURG, MISSISSIPPI, HAD TRIED EARLIER TO ENTER THE UNIVERSITY OF SOUTHERN MISSISSIPPI. MEREDITH MADE IT AND TODAY ATTENDS CLASSES IN OXFORD; KENNARD IS SERVING A SEVEN-YEAR SENTENCE AT PARCHMAN PENITENTIARY, 67 MILES TO THE SOUTHWEST.

Kennard had studied at the University of Chicago for three years, but in 1955 he returned home to support his mother and disabled father on their small farm, a 15-minute drive from the University of Southern Mississippi. Kennard hoped to continue his education there. He first applied for admission in 1958, whereupon he was summoned to Jackson, the state capital, for a meeting with the then Governor J.P. Coleman and University President W.D. McCain. Kennard was told that if he withdrew his application he could select any college in America which would accept him, and the State of Mississippi would pay his expenses. He refused. Governor Coleman then asked Kennard to withhold his application until after the elections. He did.

The next fall, 1959, Kennard formally applied for admission. After a brief interview with President McCain, attended by the chief investigator for the state's segregation - enforcing Sovereignty Commission, he was rejected on the ground of "deficiencies and irregularities" in his application. From the interview, Kennard returned to his parked car and was met by two waiting constables and arrested for reckless driving. Questioned at the police station, Kennard was suddenly confronted with five pints of whiskey, claimed to have been found in a search of his car. Illegal possession of liquor was added to the charges. A Justice of the Peace found Kennard guilty; he was fined $600 and costs; an appeal was later denied.

After the 1959 application had been rejected, Governor Coleman is reported to have said that, "If Clyde did, reapplying, there'd be no way of holding him out, because his record was sufficient. There'd be no alternative but to close (the school)". That proved unnecessary.

On September 25, 1960, the Forrest County Cooperative Warehouse was burglarized of five sacks of chicken feed, valued at $5 each. An illiterate 19-year-old Negro, Johnny Lee Roberts, confessed to the theft. As witness for the state, he claimed that the burglary had been instigated and planned by Kennard. He attributed to Kennard knowledge of the warehouse and the watchman's schedule that Roberts' own testimony later showed Kennard never possessed. Roberts received a five-year probation sentence. But on his testimony Kennard was convicted of being an accessory to burglary and sentenced to seven years.

In a year and a half, James Meredith may receive his degree from the University of Mississippi. Clyde Kennard, however, will never receive a degree from any university in Mississippi, for state law prohibits anyone convicted of a felony from enrolling in a state institution. Kennard's reward will be another five years in Parchman Penitentiary.

AEC Grants $5700 To Physics Department

Prof. Albert D. Crowell, left, chairman of the Physics department, and Prof. Edward L. Foley look over equipment for new lab. (Credit: Eldred, Audio Visual)

An Atomic Energy Commission grant of $5700 is making possible establishment of a modern nuclear physics laboratory for seniors and graduate students in physics, chemistry and mathematics at UVM.

The grant, one of several which is helping to enrich the teaching and research programs in the physics department, has been used to purchase laboratory equipment which permits students to undertake research and perform experiments making use of radioactive materials and techniques.

Prof. Albert D. Crowell, chairman of the Department of Physics, said that equipment made possible by the AEC grant included a neutron howitzer, radiation analyzer, and scintillation and neutron detectors.

The equipment is being installed in a laboratory in the Williams Science Hall on the Vermont campus. It is expected to be ready for use by seniors and graduate students next semester. The neutron howitzer will make it possible for students to study the neutron, and to produce radioactive elements as needed in research or experimentation.

The laboratory also will permit students to become skilled in modern techniques of using radioactive materials, Dr. Crowell said.

The department of physics is one of UVM's oldest academic departments. Today, the department offers 16 courses for undergraduates and graduate students, including a course in general physics for students who wish to elect physics to meet their requirement for completion of a laboratory science course.

Faculty members in the department are currently engaged in a number of sponsored and unsponsored research activities. Research grants currently held by the department include a grant of $31,000 from the U.S. Public Health Service, $19,000 from the National Science Foundation, $33,000 from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, and $30,000 from the U.S. Air Force.

In addition to this research support, the department is also receiving support for its educational programs, including $8,250 from the National Science Foundation for support of its undergraduate research participation program.

The physics department shares with the department of chemistry a $24,600 NSF grant to be used for purchase of equipment for undergraduate instruction; and also shares with the departments of chemistry, botany and zoology a $40,000 grant from the Research Corporation given to assist in the development of Ph.D. programs in these departments.

Crowell notes an increasing interest on the part of entering students in physics, and says "the future for physics majors is indeed bright. Not only is there the excitement of participating in an area of rapidly expanding knowledge, but the demand for physicists is marked by the rapid development of technology in the years since World War II."

Further, he states, today's need for scientists is so great that excellent scholarship and fellowship opportunities await the qualified undergraduate who would like to continue work toward a graduate degree in physics.

Ten Faculty Members Take Sabbaticals In '63

Sabbatical leaves for the 1963-64 academic year were awarded to 10 University of Vermont faculty members by the Board of Trustees Saturday (Dec. 8).

Granted leaves for the fall semester (Sept.-Feb.) of 1963-64 were:

Samuel N. Bogorad, chairman, department of English; Andrew E. Nuquist, chairman, department of political science; Ippocrates Pappoutsakis, professor of music and Fred H. Taylor, professor of botany.

Second semester leaves (Feb.-June) were granted to:

John H. Kent, chairman, department of classics; Esther L. Knowles, associate professor of home economics and John F. Lochhead, professor of zoology.

Other leaves awarded were to Fred W. Dunihue, professor of anatomy, one year; Winfield B. Durrell, associate professor of animal pathology, Feb., 1964 to July 1964; and Arnold H. Schein, associate professor of biochemistry, Sept. 1963 to June 1964.

DECK THE HALLS

When you think of Christmas gifts you naturally think of Marlboro cigarettes, leading seller in flip-top box in all fifty states—and if we annex Wales, in all fifty-one—and if we annex Lapland—in all fifty-two. This talk about annexing Wales and Lapland is, incidentally, not just idle speculation. Great Britain wants to trade Wales to the United States for a desert. Great Britain needs a desert desperately on account of the tourist trade. Tourists are always coming up to the Prime Minister or the Lord Privy Seal or like that and saying, "I'm not knocking your country, mind you. It's very quaint and picturesque, etc. what with Buckingham Palace and Bovril and Scotland Yard, etc., but where's your desert?" (Before I forget, let me point out that Scotland Yard, Britain's plain-clothes police branch, was named after Wally Scotland and Fred Yard who invented plain clothes. The American plain-clothes force is called the FBI after Frank B. Inchcliff, who invented fingerprints. Before Mr. Inchcliff's invention, everybody's fingers were absolutely glassy smooth. This, as you may imagine, played hob with the identification of newborn babies in hospitals. From 1791 until 1904 no American parent ever brought home the right baby from the hospital. This later became known as the Black Tom Explosion.)

But I digress. England, I was saying, wants to trade Wales for a desert. Sweden wants to trade Lapland for Frank B. Inchcliff. The reason is that Swedes to this day still don't have fingerprints. As a result, identification of babies in Swedish hospitals is so haphazard that Swedes flatly refuse to bring their babies home. There are, at present, nearly a half-billion unclaimed babies in Swedish hospitals—some of them well over eighty years old.

But I digress. We were speaking of Christmas gifts which naturally put us in mind of Marlboro cigarettes. What could be more welcome at Christmas time than Marlboro's flavor, Marlboro's soft pack, Marlboro's flip-top box? What indeed would be more welcome at any time of year—winter or summer, rain or shine, night or day? Any time, any season, when you light a Marlboro you can always be certain that you will get the same mild, flavorful, completely comfortable smoke.

There are, of course, other things you can give for Christmas besides Marlboro cigarettes. If, for example, you are looking for something to give a music lover, let me call to your attention a revolutionary new development in phonographs—the Low-fi phonograph. The Low-fi, product of years of patient research, has so little fidelity to the record you put on it that if, for instance, you put "Stardust" on the turntable, "Melancholy Baby" will come out. This is an especially welcome gift for people who have grown tired of "Stardust."

Merry Christmas to all and to all a good night.

The makers of Marlboro cigarettes, who take pleasure in bringing you this column throughout the school year, wish to join old Max in extending greetings of the Season.

Editor's Scrapbook

What To Do With Used Books?

In the inevitable succession of events, Christmas, New Year's, and Finals will pass along leaving the prospect of the spring semester in everyone's view.

And somewhere along this chain the student is faced with the problem of buying new books for his courses. The prices a student pays for new books at the University Book Store are outrageous.

Of course, the student can always buy used books. Or can he? Certainly, used books must exist, but where are they? Apparently, students are extremely reluctant to let them go at the ridiculous price the bookstore offers for them. One could probably sell them to a scrap-paper dealer and get the same amount of money. And so the used books for sale at the bookstore are few in number. Even the mark-up on those books available is ridiculous. The bookstore has been getting away with a good deal for a long time, and this nonsense must come to a halt.

Students who refuse to allow their books to go for such a meager price, attempt to make private sales on their own, or for some strange reason simply hoard the books, year after year adding another semester's worth to the pile.

There is a way to beat this vicious circle, to step off the merry-go-round, and have things work out to the benefit of each and every student. There is a tried and true system, with which no major fault can be found, if the Student Association is willing to organize that which is to be proposed, and the administration realizes the problem and provides the facilities to insure the success of the system.

The specifics would have to be ironed out, but below is the general plan:

Each student desiring to sell a used book makes an estimate of how much he thinks the book is worth. He then brings this book to an S.A. used bookstore, where he fills out a form including his name, address, telephone number, name of book, and price he wishes to obtain for the book. He then receives a receipt for said book, and walks out of the store. He only knows at this point that he will either receive the price he has requested for his book or it will remain on the shelves, not to be sold at all. If it is not sold, it is either because there is no demand for the book anymore, or it was overpriced. A suggested price list relative to the condition of his book has been provided for as a general guide. (The form, he has filled out, is glued into the book.)

He is told to come back after a specified amount of time to present his receipt and collect either the money or his book once again.

Now the buyer: A potential buyer walks into the store, looks at a selection of books of the same type with a varying price range and in different conditions, chooses one suitable to his tastes and pocketbook, and presents the book to a cashier. The money is deposited by the cashier, and the form previously filled out by the seller is removed and placed on file. (When the seller returns to collect his money, this file is consulted to see price paid, etc.)

The S.A. bookstore takes a certain minimal percentage to cover handling costs. (The seller, of course, very quickly learns to adjust the price of the book to include this percentage which does, in a sense, raise the price of the book slightly.)

Everybody is happy this way. The seller gets what he wants for the book or doesn't sell it because it is overpriced. The buyer gets a good "deal" and a wide selection of books. And S.A. even stands to make a possible profit. Only one unhappy "person" - the University Book Store.

The CYNIC would like very much to see some action taken in this direction, particularly before the forthcoming semester, and before the Student Union is opened, since its facilities might be used. It will take very little effort to get such an organization rolling, but it must be initiated somewhere. S.A. - we are waiting.

Dateline: College

NORWICH

According to the Gujdon (Norwich University, Northfield, Vermont) twelve cadets have been chosen so far in Norwich's attempt to select a team for the College Bowl. The Norwich team, scheduled to appear on February 24 will be the first Vermont college to appear on the nationally-famous show. Selection of panel members came as a result of a test given to approximately 30 cadets were recommended by both faculty and students on the basis of academic and general knowledge. Practice sessions are held for an hour twice a week, and include mock programs, complete with a light and buzzer system.

Good luck to Norwich... wish we were entering, too!

BOSTON COLLEGE

A recent speaker at Boston College offered advice to seniors and other undergraduates regarding the problem of entrance to graduate school. He advised that selection of undergraduate courses should be made with an eye toward the graduate school requirements in the student's major field.

He has recommended concentration on at least one foreign language. "A statistics course is helpful in almost any major, especially in the sciences."

"As usual, marks are most important. Admission to graduate school is made in the fall of senior years, earlier if one is a scholarship applicant. In either case, the decision is based on the marks of the first three years. If they are on the upgrade, much of the ill effect of an occasional C or D is taken away."

Since there doesn't seem to be a central information bureau (or CIA, if you prefer!) on graduate schools on this campus, it is hoped that these few hints might give you just a slight insight into the intellect of a admission officers of grad schools.

UNIVERSITY OF HAWAII

The University Hatchet (George Washington University, Washington, D.C.) brings of news from Hawaii...

"That boys need mothering was obviously the philosophy behind the University of Hawaii's hiring of a female 'dorm mother' for a male dormitory. The boys hung the revolting innovation in effigy, poor dear. They never told her about such wickedness when she went to the dorm mother school. 'Hogle go home,' was the cryptic note left near Mrs. Hogle's alter ego. (Foolish boys, next year they were planning to hire Jayne Mansfield)." - Men of Chittenden, Buckham and Wills take note!

The Yellow Jacket (AIC, Springfield, Mass.) has supplied us with the following few entries.

Kennedy to Krushchev:
"Dear Nicki,
"How are things in Moscow? I hear it's been raining there. Say, I hear you're coming to the States. Why don't you bring the wife along, Jackie's dying to meet her. They have a lot in common, being first ladies and all. We could have a great time. We could talk about Cuba, India and things and let them talk about clothes, hairdos and things of that sort. Why don't you plan on it."

"The reason I'm writing is this Cuban bit, I mean I'm happy you pulled it now. It'll sure help the elections and all, but I still don't know if I quite swing with the idea. You know, missiles in Cuba, kinda touchy, Jackie was worried about your being in firing range of Washington. It would sure mess up one of her White House parties. Well, you know how she feels about things like that. I mean how would it look to have parties in the White House fallout shelter, I mean, also, if Washington ever got harmed... well, where would we play football? Pretty soon the whole family will be working here."

"Well I've got to sign off. Got to put Caroline to bed. Say 'hello' to the little woman. Best of luck on the ninth anniversary of your most recent five year plan. See you soon."

"Love, Jack."

Mao Tse Tsung to Castro

"Hi Fidel,
"Very sorry to hear about your problems. Too bad you're not over here, we're having a swell time. I'd like you to know that we over here back you all the way and we have some aid for you two million soldiers (without uniforms or guns). All you have to do is pick them up. Sorry we can't send you a bomb or two but we won't be able to for a couple of months - sorry."

"This thing with India is really great - you'll love it. We're playing war - boosting our prestige and solving our population problem all at the same time. We thought for a while there that we'd have to legalize adultery, but not so."

"Again you have my sympathy, and if you really want some fun come on over. I'll give you a hundred thousand men and you can lead them - just like your revolution. I'm sure you'll get used to the weather."

"Have fun and good luck,
"Mao"

Letters To The Editor

Dear Mr. Lewis & Kake walk
Directors:

Point Proven!!!

In The Word of November 26, a campus Independent stated that the ambitions of the men's residence in providing their own social activities and the imminent opening of the new student center have been cause for panic among fraternity members. This particular Independent opined that the fraternities feared the breaking of their social monopoly on the UVM campus.

At the time this statement was made, it was purely opinion. As of the December 6 issue of The CYNIC, this opinion was proven fact. Ironically enough, the proof was provided by IFC. To quote the CYNIC:

"The Directors of Kake Walk shall be heretofore directed to confine participation in and limit conferring of awards for all events connected with Kake Walk to the sole exclusion of the Kake Walk Poster Contest, to Greek Letter social fraternities and sororities on the University of Vermont campus."

Apparently word reached officials of the IFC that the residence halls were interested in competing in the snow sculptures and the Walking. Apparently the fraternities fear the competition of socially self-sufficient residence halls. To protect themselves, the fraternities have gone to the extent of socially ostracizing all independents as regards Kake Walk, the social event of the year. Such action by the fraternities had an adverse effect on us as a freshman.

Of course if the IFC has a different reason for the above mentioned actions, we will wait to be corrected.

Sincerely,
James Sanderson, Class of '66

Thinking Out Loud

Post Script On ROTC

It has been pointed out by several people that the ending "OR ELSE!" was rather corny, and that last week's column was corny, in other ways, in spots. That is nothing new to me.

When I wrote last week's column, I made it corny and melodramatic in some places intentionally, as rhetorical device. I assumed that most of my readers would be intelligent enough to see that it was done that way on purpose; it certainly was too obvious to be serious. As I say, I assumed a certain amount of intelligence on the part of the reader. I guess I was wrong.

Around Again We Go

This being the last CYNIC before the Christmas vacation, it is more or less appropriate to say something upon the subject. Reminders of this season I don't need; the local Chamber of Commerce and the Greater Burlington-Church Street Black Market have been letting us know, in no uncertain terms, that Christmas is coming ever since the beginning of November, and there were hints even before that. So it is plain that The Season is here again.

I suppose everyone will welcome the vacation. All the New Yorkers will catch up on their drinking, and all the girls will catch up on staying out past 11:30. The local merchants will mourn the season, since all of the rich consumers at UVM will not be around to fill Church Street's collective pocket any longer. Early in December you see the store owners walking around with the pupils of their eyes distorted into dollar-signs; as the vacation approaches, their aspects always become sort of gloomy.

Everyone will waste valuable money a little too much, and on a little too many. Nobody even knows why they give gifts, but they give nonetheless. (Okay, so you know about the three kings bringing the gold, frankincense, and myrrh. But why did they even give these gifts? (And no verbatim quotes from the Bible, please. All you get from the words themselves is a story.) Why, for that matter, do we ever give presents? But the merchants make whopping profits, so at least we know that gift-giving is 100% patriotic and American. And isn't God, after all, as American as, say, apple pie?

But on the whole we will all have fun and forget about a lot of our troubles. Those who manage to commit suicide and/or murder on our highways might not, but the rest will. (I just wonder how many of the budding intellectuals here at UVM will engage in that new game: Kill-em-Off. That's the one where everyone puts a dollar or so in a pool and tries to guess how many people will help keep down the population explosion by the end of the holiday. If one has a sick turn of mind I suppose it can be a fascinating game.)

I leave you with two finds of mine. The first came from a record, and is here reprinted for the edification of all. The second is an actual, unretouched, untampered with, photograph that was taken in front of a Post Office. If you don't see what makes it a classic comment on our times immediately, look at the ad for the Marines closely, then at the Navy poster.

A Christmas Carol

by Tom Lehrer

Christmas time is here, by golly;
Disapproval would be folly;
Deck the halls with hunks of holly;
Fill the cups and don't "say when."

Kill the turkeys, ducks and chickens;
Mix the punch, drag out the Dickens.
Even though the prospect sickens,
Brother, here we go again.

At Christmas time you can't get sore,
Your fellow man you must adore;
There's time to rob him all the more,
The other three hundred and sixty-four.

Relations, sparing no expense'll,
Send some useless old utensil,
Or a matching pen and pencil;
Just the thing I need -- how nice.

It doesn't matter how sincere it is,
Or how heart-felt the spirit;
Sentiment will not endear it;
What's important is -- the price.

Hark! Now Herald Tribune sings,
Advertising wondrous things;
God rest ye merry merchants, may,
Ye make the Yuletide pay.
Angels we have heard on high,
Tell us to go out, and buy.

So let the raucous sleigh bells jingle;
Hail our dear old friend, Kriss Kringle,
Driving his reindeer across the sky;

Research Replaces Summer Vacation For UVM Professor

It is a long way from Point Barrow, Alaska to Burlington, but there is a direct relation between the two places and it involves research being conducted by a UVM professor.

During the regular academic year, Dr. Warren O. Essler is busy with his many activities at UVM, including being chairman of the Department of Electrical Engineering. When summer arrives, Dr. Essler heads for the northwest. For the past two summers, he has gone to Alaska, where he and two colleagues from the University of Iowa have conducted experiments to measure the normal heart rate and temperature of animals native to the Arctic area.

"Part of our research is sponsored by the Office of Naval Research and part by the Arctic Aeromedical Lab. We are attempting to observe normal diurnal rhythm (a 24-hour cycle, as opposed to 12) in animal, in conditions native to their habitat. By implanting transmitters in the animals and then placing the animals in a large cage, we can observe them in their daily habits."

An antenna is placed around the cage to pick up the heart and temperature signals from the animals. The signals are in turn relayed to a lab that may be as much as 200 feet from the cage. Dr. Essler says that this way the animal's behavior isn't affected by the presence of human beings or by having to wire the animal.

The sponsoring agencies are interested in the problems of survival and stress that humans would face in the event of, say, a plane crash in the Arctic, and Dr. Essler hopes to be able to supply some of the answers through his experiments with Arctic foxes, snowshoe rabbits, marmots, porcupines, and reindeer.

A transmitter is less than two inches in length and it is implanted into the body cavity or in some muscle mass via a simple operation. The battery which supplies the power for the transmitter may last up to nine months, and some of the animals used in the experiment have been brought back to the University of Iowa, where research has been continued throughout the year.

Among the findings so far, Dr. Essler says, are that the resting heart rate in animals is somewhat lower than any listings in text books.

Dr. Essler is currently at work on developing a small telemetry system to measure blood pressure, respiration, and pH of body fluids, as well as heart rate and temperature.

What is "summer" like in Point Barrow, the most northern part of the United States? Well, for one thing, there is 24 hours of daylight. The temperature may go as high as 50 or 55 and last year on the Fourth of July there were snow flurries.

This is where one Uvm professor spends his "summer vacation."

New Group To Assist Lane Series

Fifteen members have been named to the Advisory Committee of the Lane Series at the University of Vermont.

The Committee is composed of five faculty members, five students, and five townspeople. In addition, the President and Dean of Administration are ex-officio members. Nominations for membership are made by the Working Committee of the Lane Series, are for a one-year term, and members are appointed by the president of the University.

Generally, the Advisory Committee meets with the Working Committee at least twice each year with an informal agenda aimed at providing an opportunity for the Advisory Committee to suggest ideas, offer criticisms, evaluate the current series, and to make recommendations.

Newly appointed members for 1962-63 are: Townspeople -- Mrs. Ethan A.H. Sims, Mrs. Ippocrates Pappoutsakis, Bruce Butterfield, Frank Goldstein, and William Hobart.

Faculty -- Miss Betty Bandel, department of English; Miss Norma Albert, department of women's physical education; Morris Simon, department of political science; Charles Braun, Dean of the Graduate College, and Richard Janson, director of the Fleming Museum.

Students -- Robert Kelmowitz, Middletown, N.Y.; Cathy Craig, Ridgewood, N.J.; Helen Lytle, Thomaston, Conn.; Don Kerr, Burlington, and Maurice Singer, Larchmont, N.Y.

Ex-Officio Members are Dr. John T. Fey and Dean Lyman S. Rowell.

It was largely a result of suggestions by the Advisory Committee that the Lane Chamber Arts Series was inaugurated in 1961. This series brought to three the number in the overall Lane Series. The major series was started in 1955-56, the Summer Series in 1956-57, and the Chamber Arts in 1961.

Because the original Lane Series proved so popular (in 1958 nearly twice as many ticket application were received as could be filled), the main series was divided into a Red and a Blue series. Since then the two have been presented annually.

Mixes And Matches

Cupid has certainly been shooting his arrows and captivating the hearts of many folks on the UVM campus. Congratulations to AEPhi's Sue Oshlag, '63, who recently became engaged to Ed Pinals, '63, of Wharton, and to Sandy Likosky, '64, also of AEPhi, and Dick Jackel, '62, of AEPhi. Wedding bells are also in the air for Gamma Phi's Anne Parker, '62, and Ron Fey, '62, of Delta Psi. Best wishes to ATO's Dick Angey, '63, who was married on Sunday to Alice Wilkins, '64.

Congratulations to Al Mintz, vice-president of AEPI, '64, who was recently pinned to Ronnie Parks of New York. Best wishes also to the following pinmates: AEPhi's Ellen Witte, '64, to Joel Treewater of Buffalo Dent

School; Phi Sigma Delta's Jimmy Rosenbaum to Susan Corden of Scarsdale; '63; Fred Gabbe to Joan Tumpowsky of Scarsdale; AGR's Robert Bassett, '65, to Sharon Crawford of Ballston Spa, New York; Tri Delta's Sue Huber to Dan Noble of Sigma Nu; Lambda Iota's Doug Clark to Cecilia Gormley of Manhattan and Alan Shaw to Rella Buzzell of Mary Fletcher School of Nursing; Acacia's Harvey Waterhouse to Gloria Yandow of Burlington, Carl Eells to Martha Robinson of Alpha Chi, and John Metagard to Elizabeth Bierman of Mt. Holyoke.

AEPI's also had the pleasure of entertaining Dean Patzer and his wife at a dinner party. Much excitement at ADPI - rumor has reached ADPI that the Theta Chi's are having trouble with their lights. Perhaps it was the "mad bulb snatcher" at work again. Welcome back to ADPI house, Mrs. Pace.

Mr. Spees was the dinner guest at the ADPI house last week. The evening certainly was an enjoyable one for everyone. Congratulations to ADPI's Margie Edwards Douglas and Theta Chi's Bill Douglas, who are the proud parents of a nine pound, ten ounce baby boy.

ATO is having their annual Christmas Party on December 14 for the underprivileged of Burlington.

Congratulations to Gamma

Last Thursday evening "The Lettermen" were entertained by the brothers of AEPI after their performance at Memorial. The Board Of Trustees Revises Financial Aid Requirements

In a move aimed at making financial aid available to more well-qualified students, the Board of Trustees voted to lower the grade requirements necessary to qualify for Wilbur Fund scholarships.

To receive Wilbur Fund help in the past, an entering freshman had to have an 86 high school average minimum, and had to achieve an 82, 84, and 86 average respectively as a UVM sophomore, junior, and senior. Under the new plan approved by the Board, an entering student still must have the 86 high school average but now will be required to achieve averages of 78, 80, and 82 in his sophomore, junior, and senior years. These are minimum requirements, and do not automatically qualify a student for aid; if a student does not meet these standards, however, he is automatically disqualified.

UVM President, John T. Fey, said that even with the change, a student eligible to receive Wilbur Fund aid will, in effect, still have to rank in the upper fourth of his class.

In other actions, the Board voted to accept the state audit of the University for the past fiscal year in lieu of a university audit. Authorization was given for the Lane Series to repeat its Red and Blue Series division for 1963-64 and for a Lane Summer Series in 1963. The Board also authorized collection of the senior class fee as part of the spring billing in order to facilitate collection of the fee through the comptroller's office for the senior class.

The Board authorized permission for the University to enter into a contract with Mary Fletcher Hospital for a Clinical Research Center.

Accepting recommendations made in a survey, the Board gave its approval for the establishment in certain areas of the University of fallout shelters. The Federal Government will stock the shelters with dried foods and water and signs will be erected to direct the way to the shelters.

Dr. Lacy Reviews

"Censorship And Freedom"

by Roberta Levy

On Monday evening, Dec. 10, Dr. Dan M. Lacy, the managing director of the American Book Publisher's Council, lectured on "Censorship and American Freedom Today." This was the second lecture of the University Lecture Series, held in Waterman Student Lounge.

Dr. Lacy, now associated with the organization devoted to the preservation and extension of the freedom to read, held positions of assistant archivist of the United States, deputy chief assistant of the Library of Congress, has received the Department of States Superior Service Medal, and has lectured extensively.

Lacy first presented the history of censorship in the United States and then described its present status and characteristics.

Censorship began with the invention of the printing press, when it was possible for people to come into contact with "subversive" views. Licensing of books and laws of libel were weapons of the state. At the time of the 17th and 18th century, when printing was tightly controlled, the "greater truth the greater the libel." Of course, the first amendment of the Bill of Rights guaranteed the people the freedom of speech and of the press. Throughout our history this freedom, the fundamental cornerstone of democracy, has been limited. Propaganda of all sorts has been barred from distribution and it was not until the 1950's that the courts actually ruled on freedom of the press, defining it.

There are still narrow limitations on complete political freedom of the press and there is definitely a major loophole concerning censorship of obscene literature. A man may say and publish anything he wishes, but he is liable to suit if his information is part of a criminal act. This is a very narrow limitation. The gov't can actually intervene only by making restrictions on imports that pass thru the Post Office or customs, that of anarchist propaganda or obscene publications. Any writer making a serious effort to create literature is protected by the constitution, even if his literature possesses some treatment of sex. A work must therefore be hard-core pornography, complete with pictures, sold surreptitiously and published outside of open normal methods permits author not to be protected by the constitution.

Motion picture censorship is practically on the same level as that of literature. Government intervention because of obscenity or political content is very little. We are more free, on a whole, of censorship than we ever were and are more free than any other country.

Today the complex problem of censorship exists because standing between the writer or speaker and the audience is the mass mechanized media of communication. No longer is the freedom of speech dependent on the ability to utter, but on the ability that one has concerning the access. The elaborate mechanisms of modern communication, the magazines, the press, commercial, broadcasts and films.

It is the problem of the citizen, for he is responding to an image of the world that has been depicted by this mass media of communication. He is dependent upon a "second hand repetitive picture of the world," a "fable agreed upon" by these mechanisms of communication.

Therefore the government, federal, local and state, have to set the basic patterns under which the mass media may operate. The government operates broadcasting, directly supplies information by operating school and library systems. The heaviest obligation lies on the government because it is the principle source of first hand information. The government must aim to execute proper judgment in sharing this information with the people. It must have confidence in its people in order to share its information.

But, just as the government must execute good judgment, the people must have confidence in what the government says. The first amendment is no longer adequate in dealing with complex problems of censorship. The individual who treasures his freedom must make censorship his problem by desiring to tolerate all sides of situations, by reading and questioning views different from his own. Censorship is no longer the problem of the policeman but the problem of the individual. "The government can only be as wise as the people allow it to be."

Lacy ended his excellent lecture with a question and answer session.

Renowned Actress To Begin Lane Chamber Art Series

Cornelia Otis Skinner and the Budapest String Quartet will head UVM's third season of the Lane Chamber Arts Series.

Since its inception in 1961, the Chamber Arts Series has sought to present a varied and comprehensive series in the areas of the theater, vocal music, chamber music, and modern dance.

The first artist to appear will be Cornelia Otis Skinner on Jan. 12. One of the most distinguished actresses of the American stage, Miss Skinner will present her series of inimitable modern character sketches in full costume.

On Feb. 9, McHenry Boatwright, a baritone, will perform in a program of arias and spirituals.

The Budapest String Quartet, hailed as the finest ensemble of its kind in the world, will appear on March 14.

A modern dance company, the Dancemakers, led by Martha Baird, will conclude the 1963 series on March 30. Miss Baird has studied with Merce Cunningham, Martha Graham, and La Meri. The group was recently headlined in the Boston Arts Festival.

All performances except the last will be in Ira Allen Chapel. The Dancemakers are booked for the Burlington High School Auditorium. Curtain time for each performance is at 8:30.

Unlike the regular Lane Series which is strictly a subscription series, season or individual tickets may be obtained for the Chamber Arts Series and applications are now being accepted.

What kind of man handles a business challenge best?

A board chairman talks about tomorrow's executives...

The Bell System has always sought men who could keep telephone service constantly improving. Men with exceptional engineering talent, men with equally outstanding managerial potential. Such men are widely sought on college campuses across the United States. And with the future of communications unfolding so rapidly, the search has intensified.

But still there is the old question to be answered, "What kind of man handles a business challenge best?" A midwestern college audience recently heard these comments in a talk by A.T.&T. Board Chairman, Frederick R. Kappel.

"...We took the records of 17,000 college men in the business who could fairly be compared with each other, and, examining their records, sought the answer to the question: 'To what extent does success in college predict success in the Bell System?'"

"...The results..."

"...The single most reliable predictive indicator of a college graduate's success in the Bell System is his rank in his graduating class."

"A far greater proportion of high-ranking than low-ranking students have qualified for the large responsibilities.... While a relationship does exist between college quality and salary, rank in class is more significant."

"...What about extracurricular achievement?... Men who were campus leaders reached our top salary third in slightly greater proportion than those who were not. But it is only real campus achievement that seems to have any significance. Mere participation in extracurricular goings-on does not..."

"...What we have here, as I said before, are some hints—rather strong hints—about where to spend the most time looking for the men we do want, the men with intelligence plus those other attributes that give you the feel, the sense, the reasonable confidence that they will make things move and move well.... They want to excel and they are determined to work at it..."

"...Business should aspire to greatness, and search diligently for men who will make and keep it great..."

Cats Christen Patrick Gym With A 78-73 Win

Catamount Clippings

By Ray Bello

THE RACCOON, remnant of the roarin' Twenties urges his fore-runners of the screamin' Sixties to keep his spirit alive.

YEA TEAM.....YEA

During the roarin' Twenties there may not have been much spirit legally flowing on the nation's campuses, but there was an abundance of school spirit that warmed the hearts of the undergrads. This was the era of the Charleston and the Cake Walk, of bathtub gin and speakeasies, of flappers and raccoon coats, and of sayings like, "23-ski-doo" and "poop-poop-a-do", all of which have become extinct, especially the raccoon benny (coat) although a few rare specimens do occasionally appear at stadiums and gyms.

There is always a lot of talk about lack of spirit here at Vermont. Every year there seems to be more talking about it than shouting at games, which inadvertently leads to apathy and poor school spirit. The past football seasons are perfect examples. In the past few years here at UVM our team has not been the type of team that one would like to have shouted for, but even so, if more had exercised their vocal cords more the team might have won more games or at any rate they would have felt worse when they did lose.

Well, what are we going to do about our spirit during the basketball season, especially when our cagers need our support. The following comments are being written based on past performance and even before the Catamounts first home game in their new home. As we see it, this first game will pack the new Patrick Gymnasium with cheering UVMers. But after that the attendance will tail off and the spirited backing will also subside. We hope we are proven drastically wrong.

FRATERNITY MEN OF UVM UNITE

A definite step in the direction of preserving and perpetuating school spirit would be to have all fraternities sit in their own little area of the stands to cheer. They do anyway. Why not organize this inevitable situation? This would create a healthy, new competition between the various houses on campus.

Out-cheering the house along side of yours would not be the only result of this apportioning. The increase in overall spirit and campus color will result from this seating arrangement. Frats could bring house flags and placards, or whatever, and display spirit, school and house spirit.

INDEPENDENTS, TOO

If independent groups feel left out, they should organize their own cheering sections. After all, the independents are the largest in numbers and have been one of the most organized groups on campus this past fall. The Leftovers, a group of dorm dwellers, won the all-campus touch football championship this year. This was the first time a non-fraternity team won that honor in the past generation.

For the benefit of any co-eds who get this far into the sports page, it would be nice if you could come to the games and scream for the team. Even if you are with a date. Maybe he'll start screaming, too. Anyway, it's been said that there are a lot of "screamers" on campus so why don't you come to the games and display your talent. Let's try to bring back some of the spirit that prevailed during the roarin' Twenties and perhaps our generation, at least at UVM, will become known as the screamin' Sixties.

Hockey Team Set To Play

by Martin Hackel

With the hockey season well under way, Coach Bill Ruffer has been pleased with the enthusiasm shown by the turnout for the hockey team and the many students that come to watch the team practice. The final squad of 20 has been chosen from the original 60 that tried out. It won't be long before the club will begin outside scrimmages with other schools.

Coach Ruffer, a native of Hamden, Conn., brings to UVM from Michigan Tech, a style of play which he feels will mould the Catamounts into a good solid hockey club. This style is key-noted by position play, hustle, and conditioning. The mentor believes that a fair team can by playing a good position play type of game hold its own with a team of superior ability. This means always, being at the right place at the right time.

The main goal of this year's team will be to mold a team that will be worthy of representing the University next year in regular collegiate play. This will be accomplished by some scrimmages with northern New England colleges and a game with the Dartmouth Storm-Kings on Kake Walk.

Although it is still early in the season some possible line combinations and defensive tandems are emerging. The three goalies, Mickey Steinberg, Bob and Tony Russo, will have much time to prove their capabilities under fire. Warde Kenny from Hartford, Conn., a hard-hitting duckster appears to be leading a burly group of defensemen. Some names to watch for here are Bob Cooke, a product of Cushing Academy, Dave Davin of Pittsburgh, Pa., and Mike Scheldt of Buffalo, New York. Paul Barrett (Mt. Hermon Academy), George Cook (Deerfield Academy), Cabot Lyman (St. George's School), Marshall Stevenson (Lawrence Academy), and Tim Davis are some prep school grads now freshmen who have shown much potential.

New Jersey is well represented with Kenny Sausville, Artie Garvin, Lane Morrison and Jack Storm. Al Kemmel and George Noyes, two Connecticut boys; John Parsons from Maine; and Mike Moore, the lone Vermonter on the squad, round out a team that is looking forward to a very successful year.

No longer will UVM Hockey fans have to travel to Montreal or Middlebury to see some "good" hockey.

Maine Downs UVM Twice

by B. Zaccaro

Last Saturday afternoon, the Bears of the University of Maine took a close one from the Catamounts of the University of Vermont, by a score of 74-71 after beating UVM the night before by the score of 86-73.

In the Yankee Conference clash, Vermont's Benny Becton played one of the finest games of his college career contributing 27 points to his team's efforts. Benny also set an unofficial Catamount record for rebounds by pulling down 29. The star center has been showing great ability this year and is sure to regain his All-Yankee Conference team rating.

The Catamounts kept up with the Bears in the first half with Becton and Shabel doing the scoring. At half time it was all tied up at 38. Vermont might have won had they done better from the foul line, hitting only nine of 18 attempts. The Catamounts committed 10 more fouls than the Bears, which also made a big difference.

What Makes Benny Jump

Benny leaps high to literally take the ball off the backboard. This is why Becton stands head and shoulders above the Cats in rebounding.

The title of Mr. Big on the UVM Basketball team must go to none other than Benny Becton. Ben wouldn't say where he got the drive for his fantastic play, but one can suspect a secret ingredient, a natural ability to jump. Becton's jumps into the upper ionosphere rate him the top rebounder and scorer on the squad.

Besides starring with the Evans quintet, Ben is the featured vocalist with the Dick Lombard Quintet, a group that has played several times in the new men's dorms. Benny also plays a cool jazz piano and has his own show on WRUV. Ben composed his own jazz blues song called, "Buzz me, Baby".

He is a sociology major and a psychology minor. His post college career is yet undecided, but one suspects Ben will excel in any field he chooses be it writing, advertising, or perhaps probasketball. For the time being, however, Ben rules out continuing in basketball after graduation.

UVM To Start Indoor Track

For the first time in its history, the University of Vermont will carry an indoor track and field program. The varsity and freshman competition became a reality with the completion of the Gutterson Field House.

The Catamounts have scheduled four meets for the 1963 season with two of the contests to be held at the Vermont home track.

Coach Archie Post will issue the call for varsity and freshman candidates on Jan. 3 at 4:30. The indoor track season will enable Vermont cindersmen to get into top shape for the spring outdoor season.

Vermont will open its season March 2 against Bates at the Gutterson Field House. On March 9, the Cats will travel to Schenectady, N.Y., for the Annual Union College invitational meet. After a March 16 date at Bowdoin, Vermont will host Union in a dual meet to close the season on March 23rd.

The frosh will compete in the Bates meet and in limited events at Union. There is also the possibility of some additional freshman competition against state high schools.

UVM Tops UNH For 1st YC Win

Shabel Gets 23

Perfect example of Becton's ability to out-jump taller opponents. 6-5 UNH center Dave Ball is out-leaped by 6-2 Becton on the opening toss of Vermont's first really home game.

The Catamounts of Coach John Fuzzy Evans initiated their new home at the Roy L. Patrick Gym Tuesday night with a 78-73 victory over the Wildcats of the University of New Hampshire. The game was played before an estimated gathering of nearly 4,000 first nighters.

There was a short opening ceremony before the game in which President Fey received the keys to the building from architect William Freeman, thus officially opening the gym. Governor F. Ray Keyser, UVM Athletic Director J. Ed Donnelly, UNH Athletic Director Carl Lundholm and Pat Franchi, contractor for the structure, were also in attendance.

The game action saw the Cats behind only once, on the opening basket scored by the Wildcats. After that Benny Becton tied the score with a leaping one-hander and Dick Ader tapped in a two pointer to put the Cats in the lead to stay.

Although UVM never fell behind, the Wildcats kept clawing at our lead. With Becton and driving Jack Shabel doing most of the scoring in the first half, New Hampshire pawed their way to within one basket of the Cats. They lowered the score to 31-29 with five minutes left in the half. From this point Becton, Shabel and Captain John Stahler scored in order to put the Cats out of reach again at 37-29. The half ended with Fuzzy's boys ahead at 39-32.

In the second half, Vermont's 1-2-2 zone kept the Wildcats shooting from the outside. With UNH failure to rip the cords of the brand new baskets, Becton and Stahler cleared the boards consistently. Benny grabbed 17 rebounds and Stahler picked off 12.

Shabel was the games high scorer. He hit at a hot 58 percent from the floor and connected on 3 of 4 free throws for a 23 point output. Shabel also played a good floor game as he consistently hustled.

Sophomore Ralph D'Altilla played a fine game in a reserve role. He hit on 5 of 12 attempts and ended the game with 14 points. Chuck Glick also, helped the Cats with his accurate shooting. Glick hit on 3 out of 4 attempts and scored 8. Becton added 12 while Alde chipped in with 10 to carry the bulk of the scoring.

The Cats meet the Cadets of Norwich tonight in a State Series clash at Northfield. The Cats next game will be in the Blue Nose Tournament in Nova Scotia on December 27.

Cornelia Otis Skinner Stars This Saturday In Chamber Arts Series

by Joan Klonsky

For the first performance of its third consecutive season, the Lane Chamber Arts Series will host the great humorist and versatile actress, Cornelia Otis Skinner, on Saturday, January 12, at 8:30 P.M. in Ira Allen Chapel.

Miss Skinner will present, in monodrama, a repertory of five character sketches: "A Box of Powder," "Hotel Porch," "Genealogy," "The Yearly American Invasion," and "Being Presented." Generally speaking, the comedienne manifests keen perception and insight through her satirization of prevailing mores; she makes us see the funny side of life and people in particular human situations. In "The Yearly American Invasion" for example, we are shown a kaleidoscope of American tourists visiting Paris.

But "monologue" or "monodrama" are inadequate words for describing the theatrical medium that Miss Skinner has made so entirely her own. In fact, the English language lacks an expression to precisely describe her art. Expressing her distinctive artistry perhaps most aptly are the words of one critic who called her "the greatest single attraction of the American theatre."

Her performances, as those who have seen them know, are not recitations but complete dramatic productions written by the actress herself and rehearsed, costumed and produced with all the care of a conventional play. As Miss Skinner says, "I have always tried to keep the monologues as professional as possible; to make them theatre, not platform appearances."

In these solo character sketches or full-length solo dramas, there is an unseen cast of supporting people ranging from one to twenty in number. But to Miss Skinner, these invisible characters are real, possessing distinct physical and emotional characteristics. "Because they are invisible to the audience in a corporeal sense doesn't mean that they aren't real, flesh and blood men and women to me," Miss Skinner observes. "I see them and know them every bit as well as I do my personal friends in private life... Every one of their speeches and stage movements is written out and rehearsed. I can watch them and listen to them and speak lines to them as intelligently as I would to a 'regular' actor. It isn't really much different, except for the attempt to create greater visual illusion, than playing a realistic scene on a stage telephone—with only an imaginary caller at the other end of the line."

New York, London and Dublin were the sites of one of her most ambitious efforts in monodrama: "Paris, '90." This dramatic and musical solo revue Walter Kerr, critic of the New York Herald Tribune, called "a full scale production of the enchanting gas-lit world of last century Paris," in Cornelia Otis Skinner, renowned dramatist and author, will open Chamber Arts Series.

"Paris, '90" Miss Skinner sang songs expressly written for her by Kay Swift, and recreated in her performance the various women—mostly entertainers of the bal-musettes and cabarets—portrayed in the posters and canvasses of Toulouse-Lautrec.

But Cornelia Otis Skinner has established great fame as well in more conventional drama on Broadway. She had appeared in Lillian Hellman's The Searching Wind, in a revival of Oscar Wilde's Lady Windermere's Fan and Shaw's Major Barbara. Her most recent Broadway engagement was The Pleasure of His Company, in which she co-starred with Cyril Ritchard.

Huber Authors Book On Argumentation

Because a UVM professor decided to take matters into his own hands, a new textbook is just off the presses.

Dr. Robert Huber, chairman of the Department of Speech, is the author of the book, Influencing Through Argument.

Huber says he has attempted to develop a "line of argument" by translating the "test of evidence, the tests of reasoning, and the methods by which fallacies can be revealed into language readily available to the student speaker."

"Furthermore," says Huber, "the structuralizing of the types of reasoning available in a proposition of policy may help the student, not only in his analysis, but in the building of stronger speeches. Thus, the purpose of this book is to aid the student, not only in discovering and understanding the theory of argumentation, but also in knowing where the forms of reasoning are used in speeches and how to make effective use of the various lines of argument."

Dr. Huber says he became discouraged in teaching classes in argumentation because there was not a textbook that dealt with "how to do it" rather than just offering theory. So he decided to write his own book.

Borrowing from a method suggested in Aristotle's "Rhetoric,"

The University of Vermont will increase its residence hall rates $45 per year effective September, 1963.

University President John T. Fey said that the Board of Trustees had approved the increase "reluctantly" but out of necessity to make student residence halls totally self-sustaining in terms of cost of maintenance and amortization of bonds and interest.

Dr. Fey said that failure to increase rents to self-sustaining levels would make it impossible for the University to proceed with commitments to build two additional residence hall units for women students planned for completion by September of 1964.

Dr. Fey said the two additional women's residence halls will be

Aside from her acting career, Miss Skinner has distinguished herself as one of the nation's most popular authors. Among her most famous contributions are The Ape in Me (a best-seller), Family Circle and Our Hearts were Young and Gay.

Tickets for her Saturday evening performance are as yet available and may be purchased at the Lane Series Office in Waterman, Bailey's Music Rooms, or at the door. The cost is $1.50 per single ticket or, at a savings of 25%, $4.50 for a reserved season ticket.

Dr. Robert B. Huber, chairman of the Speech Department, is also coach of the debating team.

Huber set out to remedy the problem. He offers an outline of each chapter at the beginning then gives exercises and suggested additional readings at the end.

In spite of the fact that it is just being printed this week, the 392-page book has already been adopted by the speech department of the University of Buffalo. The book is published by the David McKay Co., Inc. of New York.

Although not aimed at debate, it would seem that Prof. Huber is certainly well qualified to discuss the topic of his book. As director of the UVM debate program, Dr. Huber has seen his teams compile one of the outstanding records in the United States, and Vermont has missed qualifying for the national championship only three times since its inception in the late 1940's.

Board Of Trustees Approves Increase In Dorm Rent Rates

necessary if the University is to meet its responsibility to the increased numbers of students who will be seeking college entrance in 1964 and 1965.

He said the enrollment situation has traditionally been more severely limited for women applicants than for men, and noted that this situation may not be expected to improve unless colleges and universities direct special efforts toward its improvement.

He noted that the University of Vermont accepts every qualified resident of the State of Vermont who makes application by March 1. Second priority is given to alumni sons and daughters from outside Vermont and to residents of other New England states enrolling in special cooperative programs; after that, to all qualified non-residents.

Even though UVM's non-resident enrollment has traditionally been larger than is normally the case for state universities (presently it is about 50 percent of the total), Dr. Fey said the University of Vermont annually "must turn away" several hundred well-qualified residents from other states, including many women applicants who rank in the top ten of their high school graduating class.

The $45 residence hall rate increase will send current rates from $290 per person for a multiple room and $335 for a single room to $335 and $380 respectively effective Sept., 1963.

Dr. Cook, Chem Chairman, Elected To Fill New Post Named Dean Of Faculties

Dr. Clinton D. Cook, chairman of the Department of Chemistry, has been chosen to fill the newly-created post of Dean of Faculties.

Dr. Cook, professor of Chemistry at UVM, will become UVM's first Dean of Faculties effective Feb. 1, it was announced by President John T. Fey, who said creation of the position was one of the major recommendations of the recently-completed University-wide self-study.

In the post, Dr. Cook will be primarily concerned with the development of the academic program of the University, according to President Fey. He will work with the deans of the various University colleges, will serve as a member of the advisory University Council, will attend faculty meetings as the President's representative, and will be responsible for faculty recruitment.

Dr. Cook, a St. Johnsbury, Vt., native, is a 1938 graduate of St. Johnsbury Academy. He earned the B.S. from MIT, the M.S. from the University of Vermont, and the Ph.D. from Ohio State University.

He first joined the Vermont faculty as an instructor in 1946 and taught at Ohio State and served the General Electric Co. as a supervising chemist prior to re-joining the UVM faculty as assistant professor of chemistry in 1952.

In 1960, he was appointed chairman of the department. At the University he has served on a number of committees, including "almost continuous" service on the library committee. From 1956-60, he was chairman of the Pre-Medical Advisory Committee. He has also served as a member of the executive committee of the Graduate College, and of the special committee which established planning for development of Ph.D. programs at UVM.

He has contributed about 20 publications to scholarly jour-

(Credit: Audio Visual: H. Eldred) als, and last spring was a lecturer in the American Chemical Society Lecture Program in the Midwest.

Dr. Cook is married to the former Alice Fisher of Lyndonville. He and Mrs. Cook and their five children make their home in Burlington.

Attention!

Because of claimed faculty needs, the Dean of Administration's office has restricted the parking lot between the old gymnasium and Morrill Hall to faculty use only.

Until this past summer, students had been allowed to use part of the Dairy Science parking lot, but the space in that lot became limited, and the lot had to be restricted. To compensate the students for this loss, they were allowed to use one line of the Morrill Hall parking lot.

Now, however, students are no longer allowed to use the lot, and will be fined for doing so.

Public, Private Colleges Expand To Meet Enrollment

(JOINT OFFICE OF INSTITUTIONAL RESEARCH)

In an effort to prepare for increasing college enrollments, publicly controlled institutions spent $404 million for construction and rehabilitation projects in fiscal 1958-59. Privately controlled institutions spent $222 million in the same period.

In addition, for the period 1960 to 1965, public institutions are planning a 45 percent expansion in instructional facilities and a 57 percent expansion in housing accommodations as compared with 36 percent and 46 percent for private institutions. A comparison of the data from public and private institutions indicates that the public institutions in 1960-61 were operating more nearly to capacity.

These figures are gleaned from three recent U.S. Office of Education publications: Progress in the Construction of Higher Education Facilities, Student Accommodations in Instructional Facilities; and Student Accommodations in Residential Facilities.

Despite these efforts to expand, however, the U.S. Office of Education points out that even if the planned growth rate of 41 percent (for public and private institutions combined) is realized, the accommodations may still be inadequate. Recent projections forecast an increase in opening fall enrollment of 44 percent in the five-year period.

Close to 1,500 institutions reported spending $585 million on new construction and $41 million for rehabilitation in 1958-59. This compares with $251 million spent in 1951-52, indicating that expenditures for new building more than trebled during the period under survey. The construction study pointed out that cyclical recessions had twice interrupted the accelerating trend and added that the rate of acceleration in construction "was not sufficient to provide for the facilities needs of enrollment growth plus obsolescence."

The cost per square foot of all new construction in publicly controlled institutions was $18.-40, while privately controlled schools spent $20.30 per square foot. Publicly controlled institutions leaned most heavily on government sources for funds for instructional, research and general facilities, with 68.2 percent of the funds for such construction coming from state, local and federal government, with state government supplying 63.4 percent of the total. Private institutions, on the other hand, relied largely on gifts and grants for funds for these facilities, to the extent of 61 percent.

Private institutions, more than their public counterparts, relied on the federal government for housing funds in the 1958-59 period. Twenty-six percent of the private schools' funds for construction of all types came from Housing and Home Finance Agency revenue bonds, compared with 22.6 percent of the public institutions' funds in this area.

The study found a trend toward greater use of revenue bonds for residential and auxiliary construction by both types of institutions, while at the same time using less gift and grant funds as a source.

Veterans Receive Special Training

The enactment of P.L. 87-815, October 15, 1962, makes vocational rehabilitation training available for the first time to veterans who incurred a disability as a result of service in the armed forces during any period of service covered by the Universal Military Training and Service Act. The periods of service included are (1) July 26, 1947 to June 26, 1950, and (2) February 1, 1955 to the present. If you are receiving compensation from the government because of a disability incurred during either of these periods, you may apply for vocational rehabilitation by obtaining VA Form 22-1900 at any Veterans Administration office and sending it to the Veterans Administration at One Beacon Street, Boston, Massachusetts.

Applicants will be provided vocational counseling to ascertain what training they may need to overcome any handicapping effects of their disabilities, and to assist them in making a choice of a future occupation. The Veterans Administration will pay for books and tuition and a subsistence allowance during the period of training which may be needed for this purpose. Training will not be provided under this Act for veterans whose disabilities are rated at less than 30% unless they show clearly that the disability causes a pronounced employment handicap.

Lucey To Teach In Puerto Rico

A UVM associate professor of pediatrics has been invited to participate in a special program at the University of Puerto Rico Medical School.

Dr. Jerold F. Lucey, who is also chief of pediatrics at DeGoesbriand Hospital, has been invited to be Visiting Associate Professor of Pediatrics at the Puerto Rico school in January.

The program is sponsored by the university and the National Institutes of Health. It was established to allow medical scientists to serve as visiting professors at the medical school while they are working at the Puerto Rican Center for Research in Primate Biology. Scientists appointed are engaged in studies aimed at determining the causes of cerebral palsy and mental retardation.

Dr. Lucey is the first American to be honored under this program. Previous appointments were to a doctor in England and another in Chile.

Dr. Lucey has previously carried out research work with newborn monkeys in the Laboratory of Perinatal Physiology, San Juan, Puerto Rico and has held an appointment as a special consultant to the National Institute of Neurologic Diseases and Blindness.

European Student Foundation Provides For Work In Europe

More job opportunities in Europe this summer . . . Work this summer in the forests of Germany, on construction in Austria, on farms in Germany, Sweden and Denmark, on road construction in Norway.

Well there are these jobs available as well as jobs in Ireland, Switzerland, England, France, Italy, and Holland are open by the consent of the governments of these countries to American university students coming to Europe the summer of 1963.

For 4 years students made their way across the Atlantic to take part in the actual life of the people of these countries. The success of this project has caused a great deal of enthusiastic interest and support both in America and Europe.

This year, the program has been expanded to include many more students and jobs. Already, many students have made application for 1963 summer jobs. American-European Student Foundation (a nonprofit organization) is offering these jobs to students for Germany, Scandinavia, England, Austria, Switzerland, France, Italy, and Spain. The jobs consist of forestry work, child care work (females only), farm work, hotel work (limited number available), construction work, and some other more specialized jobs requiring more specialized training.

The purpose of this program is to afford the student an opportunity to get into real living contact with the people and customs of Europe. In this way, a concrete effort can be made to learn something of the culture of Europe. In return for his or her work, the student will receive his or her room and board, plus a wage. However, students should keep in mind that they will be working on the European economy and wages will naturally be scaled accordingly. The working conditions (hours, safety, regulations, legal protection, work permits) will be strictly controlled by the labor ministries of the countries involved.

In most cases, the employers have requested especially for American students. Hence, they are particularly interested in the student and want to make the work as interesting as possible.

They are all informed of the intent of the program, and will help the student all they can in deriving the most from his trip to Europe.

We have now transferred our Placement Service to Florence in Italy. Please write for further information and application forms to: American-European Student Foundation, Placement Service, Via Santorre Santarosa 23, Florence, Italy.

Art Authority, Waterhouse To Visit, Speak at UVM

Above is a portrait of Dorothea, Countess of Kildare, painted by the English artist Joseph M. Wright who lived from 1625 - 1700.

Professor Ellis K. Waterhouse of the University of Birmingham, England, and the foremost authority of English painting, will speak on "British Portrait Painting, 1750-1840," at the Fleming Museum this Friday evening at 8:00 P.M.

While visiting the campus, he will also speak on Elizabethan painting and sculpture on WCAX television Saturday at 4:00 P.M. in connection with the University sponsored Shakespeare series, "The Age of Kings."

Professor Waterhouse is presently visiting professor at Williams College where he holds a chair in the History of Art established by the famed Sterling and Francine Clark Institute of Art in Williamstown. A director of the BURLINGTON MAGAZINE he is also the author of PAINTING IN BRITAIN 1530-1590, in the Pelican series in the History of Art.

While the University can feel fortunate to see a celebrated art historian on its campus, the pleasure will not be all one-sided. Professor Waterhouse is interested in the Museum's English Portraits which, besides Romney and Joseph Wright of Derby, include two artists rare in American collections: Thomas Hudson and Joseph Michael Wright.

The 18th century Hudson was the teacher of several of the artists about whom Professor Waterhouse will speak. The Hudson portrait in the Museum is one of the finest by that artist in this country. Despite the attractiveness of Wright's "Lady Sitters" and his importance in 17th century English painting, few of his portraits appear in any American Collection.

The Museum lecture is open to the campus and should be of particular interest to students and faculty in English Literature and History—one of the reasons Professor Waterhouse chose the subject he did.

Reading Center Offers Courses

Registration is now open for developmental reading courses during the Spring Semester. Sections will meet for two hours per week in the Reading Center.

From The President:

"In followup to recent discussion in the University Senate, a committee has now been appointed to study the total organization of the University in an exploration of the possibility of the establishment of a single undergraduate University College with such attendant professional schools or divisions as are now represented in the existing structure of the University.

To implement the study, I have asked the following staff members to serve on the Committee: Dean George V. Kidder, Dean Edd R. McKee, Dean Lyman S. Rowell, Betty M. Boller, Clinton D. Cook, Albert D. Crowell, Katherine Davis, Charles G. Doll, Thomas W. Dowe, Warren D. Essler, Edwin C. Greif, William H. Macmillan, Herbert C. McArthur, Milton J. Nadworny, Milton Potash, S. Alexander Rippa, William R. Ruffer, J. Anthony Samenfink, Edwin C. Schneider, N. James Schoonmaker, Thomas J. Sproston, Jr., Lawrence E. Van Benthuyssen.

"It is my expectation that the Committee will find it necessary to involve many faculty colleagues in the study, both formally through the establishment of sub-committees, and informally; and the dean of each academic college is being asked to appoint a committee of five or six members to consider the inter-relationship of their professional school(s) and University College."

Aliens Must File Reports

Bernard E. Steen, District Director of the Immigration and Naturalization Service announced today that all non-citizens must report their addresses during the month of January 1963, under a provision of the 1952 Immigration and Nationality Act.

He stated that all non-citizens, except those in diplomatic status and foreign representatives of International Organizations of which the United States is a member, such as the United Nations, are required to file an address report form I-53 during the month of January 1963 at any United States Post Office or Immigration Service Office.

He added that any alien who willfully violates the alien address report requirement of the law may be fined up to $200.00, imprisoned for 30 days, and deported.

In addition, resident aliens who are not in the United States during January must report their address to this Service within 10 days after their return.

The parent or legal guardian of an alien child under 14 years of age must file the address report form for such a child in order to comply with the law.

Any non-citizen who is ill should send a friend or relative to obtain the card for him, and have him return it to the clerk after it has been completed by the alien.

The District Director said that address report cards will be available at all United States Post Offices and Immigration Service Offices, beginning January 1, 1963.

Jim Newman Previews Highlights Of '63 Kake Walk

by Janet Hadda

Talking about the 1963 Kake Walk Weekend, Jim Newman, Production Director, said, "Just about everything we are doing this year has been substantially enlarged". The reasons behind this statement are numerous.

Most of the Kake Walk events will be held in the new gymnasium, which will increase the seating capacity from 400 persons a night at Memorial Auditorium, to 2400 persons a night. This way, it is likely that all students and a good percentage of the faculty and staff who wish to go will be able to do so. The gym will be dedicated during the Kake Walk Weekend.

The carnival actually begins with Pops Night (which will be held at Memorial Auditorium). First there is a penny carnival, sponsored by the Women's Recreation Association, then the actual "Pops Night" begins. Each fraternity and sorority that wishes to participate puts on a skit, and a candidate for Kake Walk King or Queen is presented during the course of the skit. This is the beginning of the King and Queen Campaign. During the coffee shop skits (held this year in Southwick, because of stage facilities) the candidates are presented again. In order to emphasize this year's campaign it has been lengthened from three days to ten days. According to Jim Newman, "We have increased the length of the campaign from three to ten days to create more interest in it and we also have given them more freedom as to how they can handle the campaign."

One of the major changes made is that there has been more money allotted to relieve the burden of the sororities and fraternities of putting on a campaign. Also, there will be limited radio and television advertisements.

The highlight of the Kake Walk Week-end is generally considered the Walking and the presentation of awards. (The judges will be members of the faculty.) The Kake Walk Committee is trying to enforce the Kake Walk rules more strongly this year in order to insure that the teams actually do Kake Walking, instead of just an acrobatic dance; lately, they have been doing more stunts than actual Kake Walking. There will be a banquet and a dance for the Kake Walkers.

This year, instead of the usual Kake Walk basketball game, there will be a Hockey Game against Dartmouth College.

Snow Sculptures are an integral part of every Kake Walk. The theme is usually tied in with Kake Walk or something related to the UVM campus.

The Kake Walk committee has been very active lately to make the carnival even more exciting than ever before. The directors are: Neil Adams (Sigma Phi Epsilon), Publicity; Frank Amato (Sigma Alpha Epsilon), Finance; Jim Newman (Sigma Phi), Production; Bill Cullen (Delta Psi), Associate Director. There are four assistant directors: Fred Weisberg (Phi Sigma Delta), King and Queen Campaign and Walking; Jim Richardsen (Theta Chi), Skits; Dave Maichuck (Phi Delta Theta), Publicity; and Carl Bells (Acacia), Finance.

The Kake Walk advisors are: Chief Advisor, Dr. Milton J. Nadworny of the Economics Department, who is returning to the post after an absence of several years; Gordon Patterson (Assistant Treasurer), Financial Advisor; and Dr. Marston of the English Department, second advisor.

As a parting remark, Jim Newman is quoted as saying about Kake Walk, "With the new facility and the enlarged program, it should be the best Kake Walk ever presented at the University of Vermont."

Rules For KW Poster Contest

The Kake Walk Directors have announced the rules for the Poster Contest of the Sixty-Sixth Annual Kake Walk. They are as follows:

Posters are to conform to the measurements of 14 inches wide and 22 inches long. They are to consist of no more than three colors, and in this case black and white are considered colors. They must be original and be constructed so as to leave adequate space for pertinent information such as where Kake Walk is held and at what time.

Posters must contain the words "66th (either written or in numerals) Kake Walk, University of Vermont."

Posters will not be accepted with personal or fraternity names or initials anywhere on the poster. The name and address of the artist should be attached on a separate piece of paper.

The poster contest is open to individuals representing fraternities or sororities as well as all members of the University. An individual may submit as many entries as desired. The posters will be judged on their artistic merit and ingenuity.

All entries are to be wrapped and submitted to the Kake Walk Office in Billings Student Center, and slid under the door. The deadline for submitting posters is February 4, 1963 at 5:00 P.M. No posters will be accepted after that time.

Editor's Scrapbook Parking Problems

Like any other university, UVM has certain very annoying problems. Some, such as liquor or compulsory ROTC, never seem to get either much better or much worse. There is one, however, that is becoming more acute as UVM expands and as the student body grows, and will soon become intolerable: where to park your car.

As UVM grows parking spaces become scarcer, simply because more students means more cars. The situation was not helped any when the big lot in front of East Hall was abandoned to make way for the new engineering building, and has just been made still worse, since students are no longer allowed to park in the lot between the old gym and Morrill Hall (see story on front page). Creating a parking lot, albeit a small one compared to the one taken away, behind Ira Allen Chapel gave some relief - until the inevitable happened: the big "Yellow Permits Only" sign appeared.

There are several partial solutions, none of which, in all probability, will be adopted. One solution would be to ban cars altogether, or to allow them only to certain students, such as seniors or Dean's List students. Another would be to build a garage building, such as one finds in New York and other cities where the situation is becoming disastrous, and to charge a uniform fee for its use by both students and faculty. A third is to use the current parking facilities and to charge a nominal fee which would allow one to park anywhere. But there is still another way that the situation could be partially alleviated.

The largest parking lot on campus is located behind the Waterman Building. It is so large, in fact, that there are always several unoccupied spaces. The CYNIC decided to see how many.

Appearing below is a record of the results as of Monday, January 7. To save you the trouble, the average is 35.0 unoccupied parking spaces. Leaving out the counts of 60, 44, and 20 (for reasons to be discussed), the average is 34.0.

In order to get the best results, the counting was done when it was most likely that the lot would be nearly full -- i.e., when most teachers would have classes and the administration would be at work. That way the number of empty spaces would be minimal. To achieve this same end, whenever there was a doubt as to how many empty places there were (snow covers the yellow stripes), the lowest number was counted, and the space left out completely if it looked as if a car might not fit. Visitor parking places were not counted at all.

Because of the snow covering the yellow dividing lines, an abnormally high number of cars were parked in two spaces. That tended to reduce the number of empty spaces still further.

It would falsify the results if the 60 and 44 were averaged in, since these were at lunch time, when there would naturally be less cars in the lot. Similarly, when the count of 20 was taken, a Pratt & Whitney display truck was occupying eight or nine places. Since this is an odd occurrence, the 20 should be disregarded.

Notice how consistent the results are: with the above considerations, the high is 37, and the low is 30.

What is the University doing with these spaces? Absolutely nothing. Something could be done with them, however, and it could be done overnight, with no expense on the part of the University.

Why not set aside some of this wasted space for the students? It would be easy enough to give the students 15 or 20 spaces. They needn't be given to all students (though that might be better), but to Dean's List students, or to seniors, or the officers of students organizations.

There are drawbacks, of course. Careless students might overflow into the restricted areas. But for that there is a Campus Security Force, and they could earn their pay by keeping a close watch to see that the overflow didn't happen. Or professors and administration might park in the student area (yellow permits can park anywhere, including student parking areas); some might even do it intentionally, just to prevent the students from getting this parking space.

The parking situation at UVM is getting steadily worse, and nothing is being done to solve the problem. (If recent happenings are any indication, it would almost seem that there is a conscious effort to make things worse.) While allowing students to park in the Waterman lot is by no means a solution, it should certainly relieve the situation to a certain extent.

Letters To The Editor

To The Editor:

If any student wishes information about the United States Army Reserve program, he is welcome to contact me about membership in the local unit, the 5th Howitzer Battalion. Under this program, a man volunteers for six months' active duty, then fulfills his obligation by paid participation in weekly training sessions and two-week summer camps.

Herbert McArthur,
Department of English

To The Editor:

It is interesting to note that our beautiful new gym, like many other things on this campus, appears to have been built for everyone but the students. I am, of course, referring to the article which appeared in the last CYNIC concerning the use of the hockey rink by the students. The schedule allows the student the use of the rink for only six hours on each weekend, yet it allows the public ten hours. This would not be so bad if the UVM students were allowed to use the rink during the public hours, but if we wish to do so, we must pay the same fee as the public plus $15 a semester for the privilege of using the gym!

This is a puzzle which I would like resolved. If the administration is planning to make the student body pay $15 for theoretical use of the gym and then charge us a fee when we actually want to use it, let them do away with the $15 fee. After all, why must we pay twice to use our own facilities and, at the same time, watch the public use these same facilities for a longer time and at a lesser expense?

It appears that the administration, like our beloved Book Store and UVM Store, are again planning to take advantage of the student body. I am almost afraid to think what it will cost us to use the swimming pool once it is open for public use.

Negroes Denied Entry At Alabama U

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (CPA)--The University of Alabama last week apparently ended for the year, the hopes of three Negroes to attend the all-white institution.

The school suddenly announced that admissions for the coming semester were closed, and only completed applications would be processed.

Included in the "uncompleted" applications were those of three Negroes.

The university told the press that the school's president, Frank A. Rose, issued the order to the admissions office effective last Friday. It was indicated that no more freshmen applications for the coming semester will be accepted at all.

The announcement marked the fourth consecutive semester that applications have been closed in advance of public notice.

Crowell Co-Authors Reference Work

A UVM physics professor has co-authored a book that examines the major developments in physical adsorption since 1930.

Dr. Albert D. Crowell, chairman of the Department of Physics, and Dr. D.M. Young of Dow Chemical of Canada, are co-authors of the book Physical Adsorption of Gases. The book, published in England, is designed as a reference book for those engaged in advanced work in the field.

Adsorption is the adhesion of gas molecules onto the surface of a solid. When the forces are analogous to the forces which cause condensation, it is called physical adsorption and this is the area covered in Crowell and Young's book.

"We examined a vast amount of published papers and tried to produce a synthesis of the major theories and the supporting evidence," says Dr. Crowell.

Crowell and Young first met when both were at Amherst College, the former as an instructor in the physics department, the latter in post-doctoral research in chemistry. The book consumed about four years of their time.

Nota Bene

Those who have not ordered their 1963 Ariel may still do so at second semester registration. This will be the last opportunity because of printing deadlines.

The Lost and Found, formerly in the office of the Coordinator (now Director) of Student Activities, is now located in the Information Office, 103 Waterman Building, where it has been all semester. It will stay in the Information Office until Billings Student Center is opened, at which time a new location will be announced.

The following action is reported as a result of a recent meeting of Director of Student Activities Emil R. Spees with the Student Personnel Deans and the Dean of Administration:

As a special exception to the regulations as printed and distributed as part of the University Date Book, the following provisions shall apply for the weekend of February 22-25, 1963.

The closing hours for approved social events may be extended to not later than 1:30 on nights of Thursday, February 21, Friday, February 22, and Saturday, February 23.

Groups planning activities must submit their request forms no later than 3:00 p.m., Tuesday, February 12!

Other than the above exceptions, all regulations for social events and student conduct will be as defined in the Green Pages.

Public skating for adults will be on Wednesdays and Saturdays at 7 p.m. and on Sundays at 3:30 p.m. Family public skating (adults and children) hours are Saturdays at 10 a.m. and Sundays at 1 p.m.

Skating hours for UVM students and staff are Fridays, Sundays, and Mondays at 7 p.m. and on Saturday afternoons at 1:30. Admittance at these times will be by ID card only.

All fraternities or other groups wishing to practice for intramural hockey must submit a list of players, plus the name of the competing unit to the athletic department, Tuesday evenings have been reserved for practice. If only one team is assigned per hour, the entire rink may be used.

THINKING OUT LOUD

Post Script on Posters

You didn't need the picture of the recruiting posters I had printed just before Christmas. They were on display, side by side, at the Post Office, right here in Burlington.

The News on Strike

In a sense, we are lucky to be living in Burlington at the moment; or at least we are not unlucky enough to be living in New York City. Here we have a local newspaper to read. It is not a good one by any means, but at least there is a modicum of news in it, and they carry "Peanuts."

On the other hand, New York City has to get its news from trash like the New York Inquirer and other such weekly specialists in gore and scandal, a few out-of-town papers, and the new Brooklyn Eagle. (The Eagle, I hear, is doing so well that only one or two more weeks of strike, which seems likely, might establish it firmly enough to become New York's eighth daily paper of any merit at all. The old Eagle, by the way, was one of New York's oldest continuously printing papers until it closed about 10 years ago, also because of union trouble.)

Everybody, by now, knows the story of the strike. Or do they? What they know, in fact, is only what they have read in the papers, assuming the New Yorkers have been bothering to read papers. But the newspapers have not been doing a very good job of reporting, either to make the union look worse, or because of sheer negligence or incompetence.

According to all the papers I've managed to get my hands on, the striking union acted against all seven New York City daily newspapers. According to an article in an excellent Greenwich Village weekly, the Village Voice, this past weekend, the union struck only four of the seven. The three others (the N.Y. Post, Herald-Tribune, and Daily Mirror), four hours after the strike officially began, locked out all their employees. (A Long Island paper also participated in the lockout, and one other N.Y. paper limited its printing only its Nassau and Suffolk County (the two suburban counties) edition.) The union did not strike the three papers because the papers had indicated, in at least two of the cases, that a long strike might cause them to fold. Also, the union was benovolent enough to feel that the city deserved some news if it was not going to get what it was accustomed to. I'm not quite sure what kind of news the city would get from the Mirror (another Hearst sheet), the Post (they've taken to gossip columns and fighting shadows these past few years), or the Herald-Tribune (a little paper with a Times complex), but the union apparently felt that the city could be satisfied by feeding it flies.

I realize that big businessmen and newspapers publishers often have strange standards of ethics, but why should two papers in supposed financial danger participate in a lockout, since it could only hurt them? Their reasons were that it would show the union a solid front, and that it would throw a scare into the union. Both were to put the union into a poor bargaining position. It didn't work. The union wasn't scared to begin with, and now has the support of the AFL-CIO Central Trades and Labor Council, which is a great psychological boost if nothing else.

Why don't the three papers in the lockout go back to printing again? The union still hasn't struck these three, so all they have to do is open their doors again. For unity and bargaining strength? What good is unity or strength when you're out of business?

And why wasn't it reported that there was a lockout on as well as a strike? Are the publishers trying to protect the good name of their fellow publishers, and cast a bad light on the unions at the same time? Or is it just that they didn't know of the lockout? If not, why not? Or have they just stuck it away on page 18, where nobody will see the news? It all boils down to either politics—dirty politics—or incompetence. Either way, it doesn't speak too well for our free and puissant Fourth Estate, does it?

Please don't think that I'm taking the side of the unions in this case; I'm trying not to take any sides, now that I know of the lockout. Before that, when I thought it was a simple strike, I was violently opposed to the action taken by the unions. It was sickening to contemplate what a union could do to a great city like New York. Now, however, the whole situation looks different. I still do not like the union's action, but it does not justify a lockout by any means.

The union is still, it seems to me, the prime villain in this case. The union's demand for an increase of $10.55 the first year and $8.45 the second year seems outrageous. First, it is too big a raise too fast. Why doesn't the union stretch it over four or five years instead? If they must have a $19 increase, why so fast? Second, the current weekly base rate is $141. That is a minimum, not an average. Does that mean that all the striking typographers are making only $141? I could be wrong, but I doubt that they are.

The union was very generous (so says the union) in coming down to a 35-hour week from their original demand of 30 hours. They also wanted a fourth week of vacation and four more days of sick leave (they now have one day, so the last is a fair demand) per year.

Then there is the automation-featherbedding issue. The current contracts all call for any material coming in on matrices to be hand-set, and then for proofs to be printed from this hand-set print. All this work is then thrown in the trash basket. The publishers want this nonsense stopped; the union wants it continued.

Combining all the union's demands, they become grossly unfair, if not downright outrageous. The publishers have made offers that seem equitable, but the union refuses to listen. While the publishers are certainly far from innocent, the union must bear most of the blame for the deplorable situation in New York City.

Still, there are the two questions that I would like answered; why the lockout if the papers are in danger of folding (Or is that some more fiction?); and why no news of the lockout, since it puts everything in an entirely different light? These are questions that should be answered, because the implications, and they are many, are not at all good.

Montoya's Concert

On Wednesday, December 12, 1962, the George Bishop Lane Artists Series presented Carlos Montoya. Montoya, regarded by many as the world's greatest Flamenco guitarist, presented an awe inspiring program, displaying fantastic technical skill.

Not so curiously, the program seemed to lack a musical quality.

This is nothing new; it seems to happen at just about every concert at Memorial Auditorium. I can't believe it is the fault of the artists so much as that of the acoustics. It is a shame we must hear such great artists under such adverse conditions. We miss much of their greatness, but there appears to be no alternative. Consequently, at this point, I refrain from criticizing Montoya for the lack of "music". I suspect that under more favorable conditions we'd have had a more musical evening.

Montoya presented a program of seventeen pieces, all of which were highly interesting and difficult to play. However most of the fourteen pieces credited to Montoya seemed to lack continuity when compared to the three credited to other composers.

The three encores were highly enjoyable, especially with the addition of Montoya's commentary. The Spanish bagpipe piece was unusual and educational (I didn't know the Spanish played bagpipes) and further displayed the versatility of his guitar. As for the St. Louis Blues, flamenco style, it was a riot, and nothing short of fantastic.

In all, it was an excellent concert. Should I ever again have the chance to see Montoya, you may rest assured I will not miss it.

Vermonters Spark Debate Contests

Homegrown talent is helping pace UVM to another outstanding debate season.

During the first semester, Vermont took part in 11 tournaments and three round robins, winning 101 out of 149 decision debates.

Leading roles in the success of the Lawrence Debate Club have been played by senior Bill Germain of Burlington; juniors Mike Cronin of Richmond and Elaine Zak of Burlington; and freshmen Norman Snow of Burlington, Jim Sanderson of East Burke, and Dave Waite of Springfield.

Germain and Gil Tornabene of Weston, Mass., posted the top records with 23 victories and only six losses apiece. Tornabene is president of the Lawrence Debate Club. The pair was undefeated in the Wake Forest tournament and the Vermont round robin.

Cronin and Zak talked their way to victory in 19 to 27 debates. Snow lost only five of 18 debates, Sanderson only four of 16, and Waite six of 19.

Craig Nelson, also a freshman, from Greenville, Maine, won nine of his 13 debates.

In tournament competition, Vermont won the Yankee Conference championship and the Wake Forest tournament, and placed second in tournaments at Middlebury and Brandeis. In the Vermont Invitational, in which no champion is determined, the host school copped the verdict in 29 of 40 attempts.

The freshman forces placed second in novice events held at Hamilton College and Dartmouth.

UVM is coached by Dr. Robert Huber, chairman of the Department of Speech, and by Norman London and John Travis, also of the Speech Department.

Vermont debate teams have failed to qualify for the national championship only three times since competition was started 15 years ago and from all indications 1963 will be no different from the past.

UVM Produces Plays Of Shakespeare On Radio

"An Age of Kings", a 15-week series of the history plays of William Shakespeare, is being presented by UVM with the cooperation of WCAX-TV on Saturdays at 4 P.M. on Channel 3. It began Jan. 5.

The dramatic series was produced by the British Broadcasting Corporation and has received the acclaim of drama and television critics, educators and viewers on both sides of the Atlantic.

The Peabody Award-winning series will comprise eight of Shakespeare's 10 histories in "one continuous pageant." Each film in the series will be supplemented by introductory discussions by UVM faculty representing several academic departments. Each program will run 90 minutes.

President John T. Fey introduced the first program Jan. 5. Prof. Jane Wamboldt of the University's Department of Speech hosts each program.

Sponsoring the series is the University's Evening Division. WCAX-TV is providing time as well as production staff and facilities for the series, which has won acclaim from critics, educators and viewers.

The opening program in the series presented Acts one, two and three of Richard II, with an introductory discussion of the period of history leading up to the Shakespeare plays by Prof. Paul D. Evans of the Department of History. The rest of the schedule follows:

Jan. 12: The Deposing of a King, acts four and five of Richard II.

Jan. 19: Rebellion from the North, Henry IV, Part One, acts one and two.

Jan. 26: The Road to Shrewsbury, acts three, four and five of Henry IV, Part One.

Feb. 2: The New Conspiracy, Henry IV, Part Two, acts one and two.

Feb. 9: Uneasy Lies the Head, acts three, four and five of Henry IV, Part Two.

Feb. 16: Signs of War, Henry V, acts one, two and three.

Feb. 23: The Band of Brothers, Henry V, acts four and five.

Mar. 2: The Red Rose and the White, Henry VI, Part One.

Mar. 9: The Fall of a Protector, Henry VI, Part Two, acts one, two and three.

Mar. 16: The Rabble from Kent, Henry VI, Part Two, acts three, four and five.

Mar. 23: The Morning's War, Henry VI, Part Three, acts one, two and three.

Vermont Is A Winter Carnival

by Prentice Phelps

Is a winter ski carnival in store for UVM this year? The answer to this question lies in the hands of the Kake Walk Directors. There has been much talk about adding ski races to the list of events planned for this festive occasion.

Since the beginning of the school year, Coach Stewart has been working towards this goal. He has obtained the go-ahead from both the President and the Dean, and now has left the final decision up to Neil Adams, Frank Amato, and Jim Newman, who are this year's Kake Walk directors. The decision which they must make is not a difficult one. However, these men seem to be taking all too much time with their answer.

The Directors were handed this plan way before Christmas vacation, and we are still waiting for their decision. The only inconvenience that the adding of these races would bring would be the changing of the schedule of events. I suggest that this minor restriction could be overlooked when the added excitement that these races will bring is taken into consideration.

Races Here

The team is planning to hold a tri-way meet with St. Michael's College and McGill University on the 28th and 29th of this month. The alpine events will be held at Jeffersonville while the jump will take place at St. Mike's. The cross-country will be held here. This would be an excellent time to see your team in action.

Handball

The Athletic Department has announced an open intramural doubles tournament in handball and a singles tournament in squash. Any person interested in participating in the open tournament should register between Monday, February 4, and Friday, February 8.

Catamount Clippings

By Ray Bello

"IS THE GYM UPSTAIRS?"

Have you seen tire tracks on the walk leading to the Bailey Library? Well, they were not put there by a work crew or by a group of angry students who planned to storm the Library with their car, as you might suspect. They were put there by the University of Rhode Island basketball team's bus.

It seems that in their anxiety to see the Catamounts' new gym, URI was content to deem the first new building they saw a gym. As their bus rounded the corner on Main Street, heading out towards Williston Road, the driver must have caught sight of our new library and thought it to be the new gym, which isn't such a bad mistake. So he pulled into the parking lot opposite Morrill Hall and continued toward the library, which he thought was the Patrick Gym. After hesitating at the foot of the walk, where there are iron poles spaced just far apart enough to let a bus through, the bus rambled up the walk. It stopped in front of our beautiful library that looks like a gym and let the team's manager out to find out where the team was to dress. As he ran up the stairs, right past the sign that says "Bailey Memorial Library," he must have thought to himself, "What are all these books doing here? The gym must be upstairs."

Here is a hypothetical afterthought, just in passing, of course. If the Rams' bus driver mistook the library for the gym, he probably would have thought the gym to be the Burlington Municipal Airport if he saw it first. It isn't hard to mistake the new field house for an airplane hanger. As it turned out, it might have been better if the Rams had not found the gym at all. They handed the Cats two Yankee Conference losses and out-classed the Cats on their home court.

Although it is still a month before the University of Vermont ski team takes to the slopes for winter carnivals, the parka clad Catamounts have been working out since school opened in September.

The early stages of the season found the team doing a great deal of running and calisthenics. With snow on the ground, the Cats have been practicing jumping and alpine at the ski area behind Centennial Field and across country at Jericho.

Jake Stewart, a graduate student, is head coach, assisted by Harold Greig of the physical education department.

A nordic training camp was held here during Christmas recess.

Stewart says that the team should be improved over last year because of the early start and conditioning program. Experience will also be a big factor in Vermont's chances for success. The nordic events pose somewhat of a question mark while the Cats seem very strong in the alpine events.

Members of the team and hometown are: Co-captain Rick Hubbard, Middlebury; Co-captain Tom Clark, Readfield, Maine; Ken Austin, Woodstock; Charles Baraw, Stowe; Rod Carnie, Beaver Falls, N.Y.; Dave Christenson, Plainfield; Jim Dwinell, Montpelier.

Indoor Track Men Needed

To UVM Men:

In the past issue of the CYNIC (and on the bulletin boards in Patrick Gymnasium) before Christmas recess, we issued the call for all track and field candidates to report to the Coach, in the new field house, at 4:30 P.M., January 3. Remember, we are committed to an Indoor Track schedule of at least four varsity meets, and one or more freshman meets.

At that first meeting on January 3rd, twenty-three varsity men and fourteen freshman candidates appeared and were checked in. (No frosh weight throwers appeared.)

For the varsity, this number represents between one-third and one-fifth of the potential varsity track material in college. As for the freshmen, this number might be between one-seventh and one-tenth the listed track potential in the freshman class.

As Head Coach of Track at UVM, I would like to point out to the student body in general, and to the potential track men in particular, that (1) we now have indoor track facilities of the finest, suited to both training and competition; (2) facilities do not make a track team--only manpower can make a team; (3) We have an Indoor Track Schedule; (4) we cannot do justice to this schedule if the manpower does not turn out and work; (5) this, and the next two or three years, will be test years--the years which will determine the future of Indoor Track and Field at Vermont. Remember--"hip-service" wins neither battles nor fair lady. If you want this program, check in and get busy! March 2 is the first meet, and March 2 will come up very fast!!

The University of Vermont Catamounts suffered two defeats at the hands of the Rams of the University of Rhode Island last week. The Catamounts bounced back on Saturday afternoon to within 9 points of a victory, 90-81, after being trounced the night before.

The two sparkplugs of the team were Benny Becton and Jack Shabel, scoring 19 and 17 points respectively. The Cats, led by these men, were nip 'n tuck with the Rams right down to the final minutes. With two minutes to go, the Cats were only seven points behind.

The two stars of URI, Charlie Lee, scoring 22, and Steve Chubb, scoring 21, led the Rams to their fourth Yankee victory with no losses. Although the Cats now stand at 1-4 in Conference play, they received a morale boost from Saturday's game.

JACK SHABEL - played one of the best games of his college career against Rhode Island Saturday afternoon. He scored 17 points and set up many other baskets.

Vermont Wins Bluenose

Over the vacation, while most students were at home, the UVM Basketball team traveled to Halifax, Nova Scotia, to partake in the Blue Nose Classic Tournament.

In the first night of competition the Cats thoroughly demolished St. Francis Xavier of Antigonish, Nova Scotia, by a score of 110-55. Tournament records were broken by Ralph D'Altilla for the most points in one half, 20, and for the most points scored in the game, 29. Another record was a team high, and Jack Shabel tied still another with eight assists in the game. Other scoring for the Cats was Shabel with 18, Strassburg, 12, Stahler, Ader and Kieslich, all with 10.

The second game brought on more excitement, as UVM, in double overtime, beat MIT by a score of 78-70 to take the Tourney final.

Becton and Shabel closed up an eight point gap to tie the game at 61-61 in regulation time. They fought to a 65-65 tie in the first overtime. John Stahler, scoring 8 points in the second overtime, aided his team to victory.

Benny Becton and Jack Shabel were selected for the All-Tourney Team, while Bill Eagleson of MIT won the most valuable player award.

INTRAMURAL BASKETBALL

by Martin Wolf

Intramural basketball has reached the halfway point as finals loom over the horizon. Current standings show Sigma Phi Epsilon leading League "A", with a 3-0 record. Sig Ep defeated Phi Delta Theta, Phi Sigma Delta and Acacia. League "B" is being paced by Sigma Alpha Epsilon, also sporting a 3-0 record. Sae trounced Theta Chi and Alpha Gamma Rho and squeezed by Kappa Sigma, 43-39.

In the Dorm-Independent leagues, the "C" group lead is being shared by the Leftovers and Converse, both with 3-0 records. League "D" is currently in the firm possession of the Sixtyniners, who have an impressive 4-0 record.

A new schedule for the remaining games has been issued. Copies are available from the athletic department, located in the Patrick Gymnasium. The all-campus championship between the winners of the A-B and C-D contests is currently scheduled for Feb. 12.

BILLY MITCHELL

THE MANLY ARTS

"Come Josephine in my flying machine..." expressed the devil-may-care attitude of the post World War I days of aviation. While Billy Mitchell was fighting for a beefed-up Air Force, his fellow veterans were barnstorming around the country. Their outfits were as flippant as their songs—half cavalry outfit, half business suit and a silk scarf flying in the breeze.

We're for Billy. To us he epitomizes a man of conviction and wherewithal. (Not that all of us should take to the airways in Piper cubs, but for Billy, in the early 1920's, he did what he had to, and with style!)

We at Stevens have a couple of convictions that we've been pretty fussy about for the last 150 years. (1) Men. Imaginative, thinking, ambitious men... the lifeline of our 35,000 employees, and (2) Diversification.

From the fabrics you see in the pages of Vogue and Esquire to the astronaut's parachute fabric...from fiber glass draperies to new disposable surgical gowns...fabrics born of oil and heat...if there's a need, we will fill it. Our suggestion: if you're interested in sales, get all the details from the Stevens representative, Daniel Denham, who'll be on on campus February 19th.

McHenry Boatwright

Chapel, he will present a program of songs, operatic arias and spirituals. Mr. Boatwright, the only solo male vocalist on any Lane Series this season, was lauded by Alfred Frankenstein of the San Francisco Chronicle as "the most lavishly gifted personality since Ezio Pinza."

A featured number on the program is the Credo from Verdi's "Othello". In this aria, the wicked Iago, who has been scheming the destruction of Othello and Desdemona, sings the praises of the cruel god who has inspired his villainy. Some of the other famed artists whose works will be represented are Handel, Bach, Caldara, Schumann, Strauss, Ravel and Aaron Copland. Martin Smith will accompany Mr. Boatwright except when the artists sing spirituals for which, distinctively, he will accompany himself.

Educated at the New England Conservatory of Music, Mr. Boatwright made his professional debut in 1958 with Eugene Ormandy and the Philadelphia Orchestra in six performances of the Beethoven Ninth. Shortly afterwards came his operatic debut with the New England Opera Theatre. It was in 1960 on the Opera Gala broadcast that he sang under Leonard Bernstein and the New York Philharmonic in Boito's "Mephistopheles".

Since then he has toured extensively, and been widely acclaimed in Japan, the Far East and Europe. During the 1962-63 season Mr. Boatwright appeared at Carnegie Hall, the Carter Barron Amphitheatre in Washington, the Robin Hood Dell, and with the Kansas City Philharmonic, the Cleveland Orchestra and the New York Philharmonic. On January 29 he sang at Carnegie Hall with Alfred Wallenstein conducting the Symphony of the Air, in Handel's "Acis and Galatea". Performing with him were Russell Oberlin, John McCollum and Victoria de los Angeles.

On Saturday evening, Mr. Henry Boatwright will be making his second appearance in a Lane concert. In the summer of 1957 he sang in the Chapel with a vocal group from Boston called the "Portraits of Broadway" and was acclaimed then as "a glorious baritone... a singer with a great future."

Tickets are as yet available at the new Lane Office (48 Waterman) at the cost of $1.50 per ticket.

Victor Borge To Entertain At Memorial Auditorium

by Joan Klonsky

In Memorial Auditorium on February 28 at 8:30 P.M., the Lane Series will present as an extra attraction, the gifted humorist and pianist, Victor Borge. For eight years the Lane Committee has been trying to contract the highly demanded Borge for the Red or Blue Series, and has finally been successful.

Mr. Borge's 2 1/2 hour one-man-show, titled "Comedy in Music", has embarked upon its eleventh year. Critics have always acclaimed his universal appeal to people of all ages and from all walks of life; he is not a sick comedian or a slap-stick buffoon—simply the funniest entertainer in the world. As an assistant to Mr. Borge is Leonid Hambro, formerly orchestral pianist with the New York Philharmonic Orchestra.

Delighting audiences throughout the world, in theatres, auditoriums, stadiums (such as the Cotton Bowl and Soldier's Field), high school gyms, from Copenhagen to Cincinnati, and Glasgow to Chicago, Borge's "Comedy in Music" has grossed at the box office and with five television shows, over $18,000,000! Last summer, when Borge played one week at the Greek Theatre in Los Angeles, he broke his own record in establishing a new box office gross of $108,700 for the week. While in Los Angeles his competition was "My Fair Lady", "Bye, Bye Birdie", the Moiseyev Ballet and the Hollywood Bowl Concerts, all of which he outgrossed.

Between touring, television specials and personal appearances, Borge has found time to be National Chairman of Care Public Relations service committee and National Chairman of the Musicians' Aid Society, a group dedicated to helping fellow performers. He is an Honorary Member of the Class of 1961 at the University of Connecticut, having raised over $30,000 for the Victor Borge Scholarship Fund.

In 1963 Borge will tour Japan, Hong Kong, New Zealand, Australia, Thailand, India, Italy, Germany, Denmark, Sweden and England, completely circling the globe, and already sixty-five one-nighters have been booked in the United States.

Victor Borge's appearance is not part of any series and is therefore open to everyone. Ticket sales have begun and, under Lane auspices, are non-profit, so prices will be kept as low as possible, ($4, $3.50, $3, $2). For the benefit of UVM students, a special block of tickets has been set aside and may be purchased in Room 48, Waterman.

Players Hold Auditions

by Maurice Singer

Music, Dance, and Drama will be combined to present a fine arts musical comedy on March 21, 22, 23, 24.

This year's production, "THE FANTASTICKS," currently in its fourth year on the off-Broadway stage, is a parody about love written by Tom Jones and Harvey L. Schmidt.

Auditions will be held in the Arena Theatre Friday, Feb. 8th, at 3:00 P.M. and 8:00 P.M., and Sunday, Feb. 10th, at 2:30 P.M. Scripts are on Reserve at the Bailey Library and the Music Dept.

Victor Borge, renowned comic pianist, will perform for Burlington audience.

Dr. Essler To Become Dean Of Technology

The Chairman of the Department of Electrical Engineering at the University of Vermont has been chosen to succeed Edd R. McKee as Dean of the University's College of Technology when Dean McKee retires this June. Warren O. Essler has served as professor and chairman of the electrical engineering department in the College of Technology at Vermont since September of 1961.

Dean McKee has been affiliated with the University of Vermont since 1934 when he joined the faculty. He was named Dean of the College of Technology when it was newly-reorganized in 1946. Like Dean McKee, Dr. Essler is a native of Iowa, where he received the B.S., M.S. and the Ph.D., the latter in electrical engineering and physiology, from the University of Iowa.

Prior to joining the Vermont faculty, he taught at South Dakota State College. In 1958, he was a National Science Faculty Fellow at Iowa State University, and in 1959 a National Institute of Health Fellow at the University of Iowa.

He served from 1954-55 as an electrical engineer for the Collins Radio Company.

Dr. Essler is a member of the Committee on Electrical Techniques in Biology and Medicine of the Institute for Electrical and Electronic Engineers, a consultant to the Vermont Technical College at Randolph, and a member of a number of professional and honorary societies, including the Biophysical Society, the American Society for the Advancement of Science, the American Society for Engineering Education, the Institute of Radio Engineers, Tau Beta Pi, Sigma Tau and Eta Kappa Nu.

He has contributed numerous papers to professional journals. Dr. Essler is married, the father of three children and makes his home in South Burlington.

His appointment as Dean of the College of Technology is effective July 1, 1963.

Kake Walk Jazz Concert Features Ahmad Jamal, The Clancy Brothers, And The Chris Barber Dixieland Jazz Band

Ahmad Jamal, a top jazz artist, is to lead Kake Walk. The Clancy Brothers and Tommy Makem will present the vocal portion of the concert.

A third feature is the Chris Barber Dixieland Jazz Band.

This year's Jazz Concert offers entertainment which will appeal to the musical tastes of almost everyone. Featured this year will be Ahmad Jamal, The Clancy Brothers and Tommy Makem, and the Chris Barber Dixieland Jazz Band.

The Ahmad Jamal trio, with Jamal displaying his "potful of technique and interesting interludes," has a distinctive sound that has caught the fancy of dedicated modern jazz fans as well as "newcomer."

"Co-ordinated chords" is what Jamal calls his sound. It is a perfect blend of bass drum, cymbal, bass viol and left hand on the piano, hitting a chord simultaneously. Jamal plays the piano with immense understanding. His musical wit shows itself almost as often as his sheer manual dexterity.
